"The drought and the falling off in the milk supply are raising serious apprehensions in the minds of Cheshire dairy farmers respecting the season's make of cheese. One thing may be distinctly confessed, and that is, that the rains have come too late to save Cheshire farmers a loss of 30 per cent. in the quantity usually made by them. Where artificial food has not been used to supplement grazing, cows have gone off milk altogether—an experience, I should say, absolutely unique in the history of Cheshire dairy farming. But, what is still worse, the quality of the milk has been so poor that only two-thirds of an average of cheese can be manufactured from it. In fact, this has been the most dismal summer experienced in the annals of dairy farming, for pastures now are quite baked up, and, even if warm rains continue, it will be a fortnight before there will be any grass worth speaking of. With an expected scarcity of Cheshire cheese there was a great activity to be noted among the large number of buyers present, and prices rose several shillings per cwt. all round. Fine Cheshire was quoted at 65s. @ 70s., good Cheshire at 50s. @ 63s., and common and Welsh dairies at 45s. @ 50s. per cwt."

Drill.

At a recent meeting of the officers of the 57th Battalion it was agreed that drill should be resumed at once, Tuesday, 6th of September, being fixed upon as the day for the first regular drill. The companies will meet on each Tuesday evening from that time till the inspection day, which will be late this fall.

Per S.S. Norwegian.

Direct importations for cash from the manufacturers in Dundee, Scotland, made especially for Sheppard—Peterborough's Great Cheapside, will cause a panic in prices this fall. Carpets are a marvel of cheapness. The wide pure wool Flannel at 20 cents would be cheap at 30 cents, you can save money on any purchase, go straight to Sheppard for good goods cheap. To the Ladies.

Miss E. Delaney has spent the last three weeks in personally selecting her fall and winter stock from Toronto and Montreal markets. Besides her large stock of Millinery, Mantles and Fancy Dry Goods, she has given special attention to her ladies' underwear department, having purchased a complete stock in that line. Customers may be assured of getting none but the latest designs at lowest prices. 3d52

At the Butts.

A number of riflemen went to the butts on Thursday afternoon and held a practice match. The scores at the different ranges, as recorded by Mr. M. Giroux, are as follows:—

	yds. 200	yds. 400	yds. 500	yds. 600	Total
Geo. Hall	14	14	14	8	50
G. W. Fitzgerald	19	14	20	17	73
D. Belleghem	16	11	15	12	54
F. Scrimmeger	14	11	17	8	50
Campbell	—	5	13	7	25
T. Rutherford	—	11	2	6	19

Mr. Fitzgerald's score is a very high one—73 out of the possible 100.

TURNBULL has just received an Immense Shipment of Fall Dress Goods. The Value and Styles are right. Inspection Invited.

The Nicholls Hospital.

The number of patients in the hospital for the month ending August 31st, 1887, was 6. The diseases were as follows:—Spinal disease, 1; pertostitis, 1; typhoid fever, 1; malaria, 1. Patients admitted in August, 6; discharged cured, 8; improved, 2; unimproved, 1. Number of deaths, 3; cause, anasarca, 1; meningitis after typhoid, 1. Total number of patients treated during month, 12; from Peterborough, 8; from Ashburnham, 2; from country, 2. Pay, 8; free, 4. Dr. Kincaid attending physician for August. Drs. THE PARAGON PICNIC.

ANNUAL PLEASURE PARTY OF THE ENNISMORE PARISH.

A Day of Recreation—A Large Gathering of People—Athletic Exercises and Other Amusements.

Annually the people of the Ennismore parish have a picnic, and each year it attracts a large number from the town and surrounding country. The picnic for this year was held on Thursday, Sept. 1st, in the Chemong Lake Park. There was a very good attendance, there being about a thousand people present, but had the weather not been so threatening there would have been many more, perhaps another thousand.

The clergy were well represented. The Rev. Father Keilty, of Ennismore, was there, looking after everything and helping the people to enjoy themselves. Other clergymen present were the Revs. Father Conway, Peterborough, Father Fayolle, Peterborough, Father McElvay, Fenelon Falls, and Father O'Brien, Peterborough. Other prominent gentlemen present were, Mr. James Stevenson, M. P., Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., Mr. John Moloney, Reeve of Douro, and Mr. Crough, Reeve of Ennismore. The number in attendance from the town was large, the road in the evening, when the people were returning, presenting the appearance of one long procession of vehicles.

The principal amusements were dancing baseball and athletic exercises. The occupied the usual place and, as usual, the orchestra was kept busy furnishing music for the many couples who "tripped the light fantastic toe." The orchestra, led by Prof. Doucet and Mr. F. W. Miller, was an excellent one and supplied music of an excellent quality.

BASEBALL

A game of baseball was played by teams representing Peterborough and Ennismore. The Peterborough team, as was to be expected, won the most runs, but the Ennismore boys played very well. The teams were composed as follows:—

ENNISMORE.		PETERBOROUGH.
M. Flaherty	Catcher	F. Billings
M. Hickey	Pitcher	J. Fitzgerald
M. Collins	1st Base	W. Metherat
J. Sullivan	2nd Base	J. Landy
P. Kennedy	3rd Base	H. Galley
D. Kennedy	Short Stop	K. Kincaid
P. Connors	Left Field	A. Moore
T. Connors	Centre Field	P. Fitzgerald
L. Connors	Right Field	J. McKim

Mr. H. Long acted as umpire satisfactorily. Three innings were played with the following result:—

Peterborough	5 4 0—9
Ennismore	2 0 2—4

SPORTS.

The athletic sports were well carried out, except that the cheering at the platform where the speeches were made and the rain cut off some events. The prize winners were as follows:—

STANDING LONG JUMP—Three entries. John F. Sullivan 1st, and M. C. Collins 2nd.

RUNNING HOP, STEP AND JUMP—Three entries. M. C. Collins 1st (43 ft.) and John F. Sullivan 2nd.

RUNNING LONG JUMP—Four entries. M. C. Collins 1st and John F. Sullivan 2nd.

100 YARDS RACE—Arch. Moore 1st and D. Miller 2nd.

PUTTING HEAVY WEIGHT—Six entries. D. Kennedy 1st and B. Scully 2nd.

WATCH CONTEST AND SPEECHES.

When the competition for the gold watch ended and the result was about to be announced the crowd gathered around the platform. Soon Mr. J. R. Stratton, M. P. P., announced that the $20 gold piece went to Mr. Glover, of Toronto. Mr. Jas. Stevenson, M. P., announced that the gold watch had been won by Miss Hickson, of Ennismore. The sums collected by the two young ladies in this competition were, Miss Hickson, $256.75; Miss McDonald, $234 70; total, $491.45. Mr. Stevenson suggested that, as each of the young ladies had done so well, a gold watch should also be presented to Miss McDonald. Father Kielty seconded the suggestion with $10, and immediately $70 was contributed for that purpose.

Father KIELTY said that the efforts of the young ladies had done much for the library. He was thankful to his friends for being present. One good result of these gatherings was that Catholics and Protestants mingled together as friends, as they should do, believing in the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.

Three cheers were given for the members for the Riding, Messrs. Stevenson and Stratton, and were followed by three cheers for Father Kielty.

Mr. STEVENSON thanked the people for their kindness. He also thanked them for the way they had received him last winter when he was canvassing at the time of the Parliamentary campaign. As he had stated in Peterborough, he could not have been better received than he was by the people of Ennismore. He was pleased to be with them on this occasion, and hoped that in another year they would meet again.

Mr. STRATTON said that he was pleased to be present. If Mr. Steverson had reason to thank them he (Mr. Stratton) had reason to doubly and trebly thank them for the votes they had given him. He hoped he would merit their confidence. He said he was glad to see them, young and old, enjoying themselves, and again thanked them for the support they had given him.

THE DINING TABLES.

The dinner served by the ladies of Ennismore is always a feature of the picnics. The tables were in charge of committees of ladies from the five different wards of the township. There were edibles in abundance, and the people expressed themselves as being more than satisfied with the quality.

At about six o'clock in the evening a sprinkle of rain hastened the departure of the people, and soon after they had all dispersed.

POLICE COURT.

SCOTT ACT.

FRIDAY, Sept.—A plea of guilty was entered in the Scott Act case, Cochrane vs. Daly, and a fine of $50 and costs was imposed.

HIS WORSHIP'S CABBAGES.

Jas. Job was charged by P. C. Adams with allowing his cow to run at large.

He did not know which way to plead. He had pasture for the cow, but lately there was no grass in the field and he let her on the street with the little girl to mind her. He did not know it was wrong or he wouldn't have let the cow out.

His WORSHIP.—Would you think it wrong if you saw your cow tramping over a piece of ground just raked up and seeded and eating another man's cabbage plants?

DEFENDANT.—I would Sir; and if the neighbor would come to me I'd pay the damage.

His WORSHIP.—The neighbor has no right to go and tell you. He should let the law punish you.

DEFENDANT.—Well, it's a poor neighbor that wouldn't tell me about it before going to law.

His WORSHIP.—It's a poor neighbor that'll let his cow eat other men's cabbages.

Here the defendant turned around and addressed a man with long red whiskers: "Was the cow in your garden?" The man in whiskers replied that the cow had been there. "Well, I think you might have told me about it. I'd've told you quick enough."

His WORSHIP said that it was himself that caused this information to be laid. He saw the defendant's cow running at large all the time, with no one to watch her, and he was determined that the defendant's cow should not eat his cabbage. A fine of $2 and costs was imposed.

THE HORSE DICKER.

Just before the Court adjourned "Alec." McDonald came up stairs. Alec. wore a black eye. This was a sign that there was going to be a specialty between acts in the drama, "The Horse Dicker; or, Who's Going to get There?"

"Do you want to lay a complaint?" enquired His Worship.

"Yes," said Alec.

"Against whom?"

"Cummins," was the laconic reply.

"What for?"

"For jumpin' onto me last night."

"Jumping on you! Did he strike you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, why can't you say that? Monday morning at 10 o'clock."

Mr. Cummins will therefore appear in the role of defendant to answer to the charge of having struck, beaten and ill-treated Alec. McDonald.

ASHBURNHAM.

COUNCIL MEETING.

The Council met on Monday the 29th August, members all present.

After routine a by-law was passed to provide for levying the rates and taxes for County, Village and School purposes for the year, viz:—Rate for County and Village 11¼ mills on the dollar, rate for Public School 3½ mills on the dollar, rate for Separate School 4 eight-tenth mills on the dollar.

Several accounts were passed and ordered to be paid.

On motion of Mr. ANDERSON, seconded by Mr. WAND,—The Reeve and Mr. Calcutt were appointed a committee to arrange the account for use of Fire engine between the village and Peterborough.

YOUNG Men! you can save $4 on $20 by ordering your Scotch Tweed Suits at TURNBULL'S for $16.

Pen Art.

Mr. Bannell Sawyer, Principal of the Peterborough Business College, shipped, this afternoon, for the Toronto exhibition, four specimens of pen art, of which one was the picture of progress, shown and admired at the recent Horticultural Society's exhibition. It is an elaborate piece of work, all done with a steel pen, showing the progress of Canada, especially since Confederation. Mr. Sawyer completed the arduous task in one hundred and seventy-eight hours, and the work is valued at $175. It should certainly win a prize.

A Drawing Room.

A drawing room was held at the Hazle Brae Home on Thursday evening, at which a large number of prominent citizens were present. During the evening Dr. Barnardo gave an outline of the work done in Canada in finding the homeless boys and girls comfortable homes, and also gave a brief sketch of the method of working. Short addresses were delivered by the Rev. E. F. Torrance, Rev. J. C. Wilson, Gen. Haultain and others. Vocal and instrumental music was given, and the evening was passed most pleasantly.

FIRE IN MONTREAL.

It is Believed the Insurance Will Fully Cover the Loss.

MONTREAL, Sept. 2.—Early this afternoon a fire broke out in the store occupied by the Wanzer Lamp Company and spread with great rapidity into the adjoining store, occupied by G. W. Prowse, and up the ventilator into the premises of Beckett Bros., printers. Those on the upper flats had a close call for their lives. The smoke was stifling. The flames had communicated to a stairway leading from the shop below, effectually cutting off their exit in this direction, while the smoke was rolling up in so dense a volume in front as to render escape by the windows and along the ledge into the adjoining building both difficult and dangerous. Beckett Bros.' loss is complete. Mr. Beckett was alone at home and had a very narrow escape. Mr. Prowse is insured for $25,000, the building for $10,000, $5,000 in the North British, $5,000 in the Royal Canadian, and $5,000 in the Western Assurance. The stock is insured for $20,000 in the following companies: North British, Royal Canadian, Western Commercial Union and Phœnix. Only half an hour before Mr. Prowse had taken an additional insurance of $5,000 in the Royal Canadian.

Beckett Bros. are insured for $6,000 in the London and $3,000 in the Norwich Insurance Companies.

E. R. Lundy, of the lamp store, is insured for $3 000 each in the Western, Lancashire and Quebec Assurance; damage mostly by water.

GREAT FIRE AT AMHERST.

Atchison & Moffatt's Bussiness Block Destroyed—Heavy Losses.

HALIFAX, N.S., Sept. 2.—Atchison, Moffatt & Co.'s business block in Amherst, valued at $16,000, was totally destroyed by fire early this morning, with nearly all the contents, involving great loss to a number of occupants. A number of other buildings caught fire several times, but the flames were extinguished. The block was insured for $8,200. The other losers and insurance are: Moffatt & Smith, general merchants, stock worth $30,000; insurance, $50,000. Mrs. Douglass, milliner, stock worth $2,000; partially insured; Arthur Moffatt, grocer, stock $4,000, insured $1,000; W. J. Moran, dry goods and groceries, stock $12,000, insurance, $3,500; Amherst Boot and Shoe Co., retail store, stock $8,000, insurance $2,000; J. S. Hickman, grocer, insurance $5,000. The orgin of the fire is unknown. Thos. Ritchie, who was working on the roof of the Lamy Hotel, fell to the ground and sustained serious injuries.

AGAINST COMMERCIAL UNION.

The Lincoln Farmer's Institute Opposed to the Scheme.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Sept. 2.—The Farmers' Institute of Lincoln County held a meeting at St. Catharines yesterday and passed the following resolution: "That in the opinion of this meeting commercial union which means a discriminating tariff against Great Britain, should not be adopted, but that reciprocity would meet all the requirements of the country." The question of fruit raising entered largely into the discussion, most of those present being interested in that industry, and fearing the lowering tendency of the influx of early fruits from the more southern fruit districts of the United States.

THE LONDON BANK.

Ex-President Taylor Arrested and Taken to Gaol.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 2.—Henry Taylor, ex-President of the Bank of London in Canada and President of the Ontario Investment Association of London, was arrested at his house this afternoon on a capias issued by Judge Davis, at the instance of R. M. Meredith. Mr. Taylor was lodged in jail to-night.

There are various causes assigned for Taylor's arrest, the one generally accepted being that funds entrusted to him for investment by Mr. Meredith were not invested, but still there is a strong feeling that the real cause is being suppressed.

VIENNA, Sept. 2.—The Political Correspondance asserts that Prince Bismarck has agreed to mediate with the Bulgarian Government in favour of Gen. Ernworth's mission.

THE PARADIS CASE.

The Forged Check is not Produced and the Charge Fails.

OTTAWA, Sept. 2.—The celebeated Paradis forgery case was settled in Aylmer to-day by the dismissal of the case by the magistrate. It will be remembered that when Hon. Mr. McShane was examined last week he promised that if he could find the check, the endorsation on which it was charged Father Paradis had forged, he would send it to the court. To-day a check was produced, but Mr. Foran, counsel for the prosecution, declared it was not the check in question. The check produced, he said, was for works in the Township of Egan, while the check required was for works in the Township of Aumond. Mr. McShane had not fulfilled his agreement to send the check to him (Foran) or the court.

Mr. Ayler contended that the check produced was the one referred to in Trembly's evidence, and as it did not bear out the charge the case against Father Paradis fell to the ground.

Mr. Foran said there was another check referred to in Trembly's evidence, and it had not been produced.

After a long discussion by the lawyers, the magistrates decided that no forgery had been proved, as no forged check had been produced, and therefore dismissed the case.

SECRETARY BAYARD

Interviewed Regarding the New Fishery Commission.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Sept. 2.—In conversation yesterday Secretary Bayard said it was inconceivable to him that the diverse interpretations of the treaty of 1818, which itself related back to the final treaty of peace of 1783, should have been allowed to remain so long unsettled. The treaty of 1871 originated in the proposition of Canada to settle the fisheries dispute with the United States. Mr. Fish being then Secretary of State, agreed to the proposition, provided the Alabama claims were also included. Canada was anxious about the fisheries, the United States about the Alabama claims. Two or three commissions were incorporated with the treaty of 1871. There was the Geneva tribunal, the Halifax commission and the commission provided for by the treaty of 1854 to mark the bounds, etc., which had been recognized in the treaty of 1871 but had never been acted upon. Both sides got more than they wanted under the treaty of 1871. The United States received more than it was entitled to for the Alabama claims, and Canada certainly received much more than justice in the Halifax award. But, strange to say, the original fisheries question, which called out the treaty, were left untouched. So soon as the temporary fishery clauses of that treaty were denounced, as they were by the United States, and expired by consequent limitation, the whole matter was left in as bad a shape as before. It was impossible to overstate the importance of this question. It had several times brought the relations between the two countries into the most critical condition. Here was Canada, with 4,000 miles of frontier on our flank, and with constant commercial exchanges between the countries, and this question still unsettled!

A fact which had to be taken into consideration was the rapid strides which Canada was making towards independence. She had the right to collect her own revenues, even to the extent of imposing a tariff on the products of the mother country. She paid her own debts, negotiated her own loans, punished her own criminals and in all respects was a practically autonomous government until it came to the extra territorial position of dependence on Great Britain. Canada and the United States were the sole parties in interested in the fishery question. Great Britain had little or no concern with it, but whenever the United States tried to reach a satisfactory understanding with Canada it found itself dealing with an irresponsible Government, and there was nothing more unsatisfactory than to deal with a person having no responsibility. Secretary Bayard reiterates his gratification at the aspect now given to the proceedings. Two sides of the triangle which had hitherto baffled negotiations, had been knocked into one and the United States could now deal with Canada and Great Britain at one and the same time. He expressed great confidence that the result would be a settlement which would be honorable and satisfactory to Great Britain and the United States.

Drowned in the Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Sept. 2.—Mr. James Walsh, of the Public Works Department, was accidentally drowned at Gatineau Point, opposite the city, about 10 o'clock to-night. He and two friends were crossing the Ottawa River to the city when the boat, which was old and leaky, sunk. The three were thrown into the water. Walsh sank before assistance could reach him, but his two companions, St. George and Demerault, were saved. Walsh's body had not been recovered up to a late hour to-night.

The Bucket Shops

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—The Western Union Telegraph Company, in conformity with the demands of the officials of the regular Board of Trade, has at last withdrawn its wires from the floor of the open Board of Trade, thereby cutting off that concern from all telegraphic communication with the regular Board. In spite of this the open Board disclaim any intention of quitting the business.

Quiet Again.

KEY WEST, Fla., Sept. 2.—Advices from Havana show that the excitement which has reigned there for the past week has subsided. The turbulent element on becoming convinced that the Captain-General proposed to remain master of the situation desisted and everybody now applauds the firmness and determination of Gen. Marin.

A Yacht Run Down.

CASTINE, Me., Sept. 2.—The yact owned by Judge H. C. Goodenow, of Bangor, was run down and sunk by the steamer City of Richmond, in Castine Harbor, yesterday afternoon. Charles Shepherd was drowned. The other occupants of the yacht were saved.

BOBCAYGEON.

DRIVE.—Another drive of logs is passing through the slide. It is in charge of P. Maher and belongs to J. M. Irwin. There are somewhere about eighteen thousand logs, of a good average, and were cut on the Canadian Land Company property, in Eyre. The run is the longest in the district, coming from the height of land, and will occupy nearly five months.

REGATTA.—The Lindsay Canoe Club held a regatta at Sturgeon Point on Wednesday, and a number of our sailors competed. There was a scarcity of wind, which had a depressing effect on the sailing races. Messrs. F. Holloran and H. Dowding won the double paddling race, Mr. McMillan the tournament. Mr. McCachan the double bladed paddling race, and Mr. P. Holloran took the skiff race.

CAMP MEETING.—The religious camp meeting is in progress in the park. Services are held at 7 a. m. and 2.30 p. m., and 7p. m. The intervals are filled in with fishing and recreative refreshment. On Sunday there was a constant relay of services that kept the exercises going from early morn till about 10 at night. There was a considerable gathering of attendants and holiday makers, both by road and water, and the care of horses and demand for dinners, kept the hotels busy. The camp grounds are lit at night by fires on raised cabooses, like the sacrificial altars of old, and have a very pretty effect among the trees. The night services appear to be popular, particularly with the young people. Opinion is somewhat divided as to the beneficial effects of these meetings, but the good results will no doubt be more appreciable in the course of time. The camp will continue till some day next week.—Independent.

ENNISMORE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

FIRE.—On Tuesday afternoon the dwelling house of Mr. James Cadigan, lot 3, con 8, with all its contents and a considerable sum of money was burned to the ground. Although the neighbors arrived as quickly as possible after seeing the fire it was found impossible to save anything, and it was with great difficulty they succeeded in saving the other buildings. No insurance.

Indians And Money.

Rather a good Indian story comes from the Piegan Reserve. It is a well-known fact that an Indian generally expects pay for anything in the way of work which he condescends to undertake. He even wants to be paid for working for himself. If he weeds his own garden he demands payment for it, and we expect to hear that the noble red man has refused to eat his meals unless a sufficient inducement is offered for the exertion. He may even demand pay from the cattlemen for saving them the trouble of converting their steers into beef. But here is the story: A good healthy-looking Indian came to the Agency with an axe to grind (not the kind politicians have). Mr. Ede, who is in charge of the Agency, volunteered to hold the axe, while the Indian was to do the turning. The job was finally finished, and as the Indian took his axe, he demanded 50 cents for turning the handle. Mr. Ede thereupon presented a contra account, and informed the Indian that he wanted a dollar for holding the axe. The Indian took in the situation and finding that the transaction left him 50 cents in debt, he concluded that he did not want any pay for turning the handle, and went back to reflect on the wickedness of the white man.—McLeod Gazette.

THE FISHERIES COMMISSION.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—In the House of Commons this afternoon Sir James Fergusson stated that the terms to be offered by the British Fisheries Commission in the coming conference at Washington had not yet been decided upon. The points raised in connection with the Alaska fisheries would be included in the matters to be discussed. Sir Lionel Sackville West, the British minister at Washington, would be the second member of the commission. The third would be a Canadian.

Difference with the Landlady.

"Hello, Charley, what are you doing; moving?" asked a young man of another whom he met with a big valise in his hand.

"I've just commenced my vacation."

"Your vacation?"

"Yes. I'm vacating at the request of my landlady."—Washington Critic.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—Mr. Richard Cox, M. P. for East Clare, writes to the papers that he will address his constituents at Ballycoree on Sunday, notwithstanding the fact that the Government has proclaimed the meeting.

BELGIAN FISHERIES DISPUTE.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—The dispute between England and Belgium over the fisheries question is assuming a serious phase. The Government is now inclined to resent the treatment to which English fishermen have been subjected by the Belgians, and will insist upon their receiving fair play preliminary to any official measures of a more drastic character to secure what are held to be the rights of the English fishermen in the waters of the North Sea, alleged to be controlled by Belgium. Sir Edward Birkbeck, member of Parliament for East Norfolk, will undertake, unofficially, to obtain redress by the British fishermen by resorting to methods of arbitration, and has some hope of success. Should he fail, however, the matter will be adjusted to the satisfaction of England at least, through the persuasive power of English men-of-war.

THE CROWN PRINCE'S HEALTH.

BERLIN, Sept. 2.—Dr. Wegner, the Crown Prince's body physician, agrees with Dr. Mackenzie's opinion regarding the Crown Prince's malady. The Crown Prince has lately made good progress towards recovery. His general health is excellent, but he still suffers from hoarseness, as on several parts of the larynx there has existed for some months past a tendency towards congestion. Since the last cauterization of the Prince's throat no fresh developments of the swelling previously existent has occurred, but its return is not impossible. This would retard the Prince's recovery, although not in itself appearing serious. The avoidance of cold damp air will for some time be the most important prophylactic measure.

THE POPE AND IRELAND.

DUBLIN, Sept. 2.—The Papal envoy, in reply to an address presented to him by the people of Tipperary, said: "The Pope loves Ireland, knows her sufferings and feels the deepest sympathy with her people. He sent me to tell you of his love and sympathy, and, moreover, that he intends to do a great and real good for Ireland. When he raises his voice the potentates of the earth will listen reverently, because his voice is never raised but in truth and justice. He will do all in his power for the future prosperity of Ireland."

COMMERCIAL ANNEXATION.

WE publish with considerable reluctance Mr. Cluxton's letter on "Commercial Union and Annexation." In the first place we are reluctant to give any currency to erroneous statements which are not really the words of Mr. Cluxton, but of those who are deluding him, because he is too honest and truthful himself to fathom their duplicity. In the second place we are sorry to see Mr. Cluxton expose himself to be again placarded, as he has been, in their press before the face of all Canada and the United States as one of the asserted Annexationists of Peterborough.

We will point out some of the points as to which he has been led astray by his misplaced confidence in the agitators for commercial and political annexation.

The Irish famine of 1847 was most lamentable, and we trust there will never be a repetition of such a calamity. But such a disaster may befall any people who rely solely upon tilling the ground, and not upon other industries also, if exceptional weather or blight destroys their crops. We will not now discuss the causes of the people of Ireland relying solely upon the land, or the remedies which we hope will be applied, but we beg to point out that the Annexationists aim at exposing us to similar risk by ruining our other industries, and restricting us to tillage for the maintenance of foreigners, while they grow rich by manufacturing for us.

As to the history of reciprocity, Mr. Cluxton has evidently read it through the glasses of the Annexationists. The distress in Canada in 1847 was chiefly due to Great Britain depriving Canada and other colonies of protection in her markets, which she threw open to the world, and to the repeal of the navigation laws. The annexation manifesto in Montreal (which was not signed by "the leading men of the city") was not the result of commercial depression but of dissatisfaction at the compensation said to be voted to Quebec rebels, just as at the beginning of the American Revolution one of the chief grievances was the passing of the Quebec Act with its special privileges, and just as now the Mail and other Annexationists are advocating Annexation because they say the United States would refuse to recognise the rights secured to Quebec. Prosperity did not succeed with reciprocity to commercial depression in 1854, for prosperity came in 1852, when for one indication there was a surplus of about a million. The main reason of the prosperity was not reciprocity, but the Crimean war, when the great grain producing countries of Europe were fighting each other and we were supplying the shortage, wheat in England then being at its highest figure for the half century. To show that such was the cause, in 1857 when there was still reciprocity, but not war, there was again severe depression in Canada. In 1859 came a measure of protection and with it renewed prosperity. Then in 1861 came the great civil war, when our neighbours were fighting or making warlike supplies, leaving us to grow rich by feeding them at high prices, and any horse with four legs could be sold to their horse dealers who trooped in. They were too busy also to interfere with our industries which continued to flourish.

The prosperity of Canada was not due to reciprocity but to these great wars. It began even before reciprocity, when we began to feed at war prices armies fighting in Europe and the people whom they were not supplying as usual. Depression came to us, notwithstanding reciprocity, between the Crimean and Civil wars. Prosperity came again when our neighbours took to fighting and paid us handsomely for supplying them. If people will again go to war and pay as bountifully for supplies we will again coin money with or without reciprocity. Our prosperity was no more due to reciprocity than to the ladies' crinolines, though both existed at that time and the argument is just as strong for one being the cause as the other. The great wars were the cause.

But even if the old restricted reciprocity had produced all these good effects, it does not follow that unrestricted reciprocity, would be beneficial. The prosperity for a portion of the period was due partly to the war prices we obtained and partly to our stimulated industries. The agitators for Annexation boast (in the States) that they would supplant our manufacturers who would be ruined while our farmers would lose their valuable home custom.

It is not only a commercial but it is primarily a political matter. It is engineered on the other side by political wire pullers to embarrass President Cleveland. It is engineered here by political wire pullers to embarrass Sir John Macdonald.

They have deluded a few, a very few, honest men in Canada who have not taken the trouble to compare their falsehoods here with their boasts across the St. Lawrence. For instance Mr. Cluxton would not repeat their false statements when speaking in Canada that they do not aim at political annexation, if he knew, what is the fact, that when speaking in the United States they declare they mean Political as well as Commercial Annexation. Even in Canada one of their organs claims that Canada is only to have a similar position to that of the Duchy of Brunswick in the German Empire. Nor would Mr. Cluxton repeat their false pretence that they would add 60,000,000 to our customers if he knew what is the fact that in the United States they declare that their object is to close the British markets to us, to supersede our factories and to compel us to buy our manufactured goods from them supplying them in return with raw materials to manufacture. And we are asked to give up our best external market on the strength of the mere empty phrase that we would secure a free market from 60,000,000 of people at our very doors, when the bulk of this population is less accessible than Liverpool and they have a larger surplus of our chief products than we have.

If Mr. Cluxton instead of relying upon the falacious statements of these agitators in Canada, were to compare their words here with their very different utterences in the United States he would be shocked at their shameless duplicity, would be no longer hoodwinked by them and would refuse to follow them in their efforts to destroy our Dominion, to disintegrate our Empire, to pull down our old flag in order to replace it with the Stars and Stripes.

COMMERCIAL UNION AND ANNEXATION.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—1847 was a most disastrous year in England, Ireland and America. The commercial panic in England was intensified by the collapse of the railway mania of the previous year, when many thousands in all classes of the community were hopelessly ruined.

This was the year of the great famine in Ireland—the saddest of all the sad years that Ireland had experienced, and she has known many sad years. Tens of thousands of the suffering people died of famine and the plague—the fever arising from starvation. In the beginning of August, 1846, the people went to bed hopeful, as the potatoe crop promised an abundant yield. When they rose in the morning they saw a white, dry fog rising from the ground, which emitted a disagreeable odour. In a single night, throughout the whole country, the entire crop was destroyed, and there was one wide waste of putrifying vegetation Nearly 500,000 people left the country during the first five months of 1847 for Liverpool, Glasgow and America. There was a good crop of oats, but they were shipped to England; they had to be sold to pay the rent.

In Canada we had a trying time. The depression was the worst the country had passed through, and many business men succumbed to the storm.

In the United States, owing to the greater resources in that country, the ship of commerce soon righted, and with cleared decks, sails set, and favoring winds, sailed on prosperously for another ten years. Hamlets grew into towns and towns into cities, and the whole country was soon basking in the sunshine of prosperity.

In Canada the blow was so severe that it took a longer time to recover, and the depression continuing, the people began to draw comparisons between the two countries, and these were unfavorable to Canada. Then we first heard the cry of Annexation, and this cry became louder and was heard all over the land, until it culminated, in 1849, in the issue of the great Annexation manifesto in Montreal, signed by the leading men of the city, when the movement gained force and spread over the whole country.

In 1854, and this is the point I wish to submit to your readers, we got the Reciprocity Treaty, when the American markets were opened to our lumber, fish, wheat, flour, butter, wool and other products, which were admitted into the United States free of duty, and for which we found ready sale at good prices. Then the impetus was given, and Canada bounded into prosperity. The people became contented with their condition and the Annexation cry was killed as dead as a mackerel. If this was the effect of partial Reciprocity, from 1854 to 1866, what might we expect would be the result of Unrestricted Reciprocity? With Commercial Union we could have all that the States could give us by Political Union, and no sound reason can be given why Canada should desire Annexation. All the advantages that could be obtained by Political Union would be gained by Commercial Union.

Are there not murmurs in the air at the present time? Is not the question of Annexation discussed in the Maritime Provinces, the North-West, and to some extent in Ontario? Commercial Union would hush up these discussions and put a final stop to the cry for Annexation.

Is not the cry of "Commercial Annexationists "a weak argument? Does it not express a fear that Canadians would be so charmed with Commercial Union that they would hanker after Political Union? If the United States are willing to give us unrestricted reciprocity there is no fear as to Canada's willingness to accept it. The question of Commercial Union is purely a commercial matter, and should be discussed calmly and dispassionately upon its merits. It has no political bearing in either country. But if politics should unfortunately be drawn into the discussion and it is made a party question, the party that opposes it will go to the wall.

In this vital question every man should FIRST consider his own interest, the interest of his wife and children, and the welfare of his adopted country. And if, after careful thought, he thinks that Commercial Union would best promote those interests; he should do all in his power to secure it, leaving sentiment out of the question.

It appears to me to be anomalous that, while the rest of the world is seeking new channels of trade and wider areas for commerce, and, in some cases; engaging in destructive wars to secure them, there should be persons found in this country who would refuse to accept a free market of sixty millions of people, of a wealthy and prosperous nation lying at our very doors.

Yours truly,
W. CLUXTON.

METHUEN.

BEAR KILLED.—A bear was killed near the camping ground of the editor of this paper and party, in the township of Methuen, Peterborough County, on Monday last, the slayer being Mr. Aaron Post, a resident of that settlement. The animal was a very large one, and had a beautiful glossy coat. He was shot on what is known as "Old Sam's Lake," a little sheet of water that is not often frequented. Mr. Post was paddling quietely along in a canoe when he heard a noise in the bushes near him, and raising his rifle in readiness for action, he soon got sight of the bear, and killed him with one ball.—Campbellford Herald.

TO KEEP COOL AND WELL.

VIEWS OF DR. CYRUS EDSON, CHIEF INSPECTOR OF FOOD.

What an Official of the New York Sanitary Bureau Writes About Keeping One's Self in First Class Physical Condition.

The causes of sunstroke, which attacks so many persons during the summer, are prolonged exposure to dry heat, nervous exhaustion, breathing contaminated air and a sudden rise in temperature after a long spell of dry heat. The Pagan notion that the stroke came through the eye is not true.

As these are the causes, the preventatives would be to keep one's self in the most healthy condition possible; to avoid all kinds of excess, to be loosely and lightly clad, to keep the system up to its highest and best pitch. Anything that would tend to debilitate or run down a man would put him in a condition to be sunstruck. Sunstroke, like almost any other disease, selects the weak and debilitated. It is one of the factors that operate to produce the survival of the fittest. The history of people who have been sunstruck shows them to have been debilitated from disease, or to have been improperly nourished; persons whose systems were not supplied with sufficient fuel to properly maintain them, or whose digestive organs were deranged by the use of impure and unwholesome food.

The person who adulterates food or sells contaminated food aims a deadly blow this time of the year at the innocent consumer of his wares.

Breathing impure air is also a factor that may contribute to produce sunstroke. People who overtax their systems by too close attention to work or who use alcoholic beverages too freely are "tempting Providence." I have seen cases where the effect of prolonged exposure to heat has first manifested itself in the middle of the night. Where people have lived in a malarial atmosphere I have seen cases of mild sunstroke followed by intermittent fever.

It is best to wear dark clothing in the summer. The black absorbs heat when it is in the sun's rays. On the other hand, the heat will pass out through the black textures rapidly, so that the radiation of the heat, from the body would be much freer in a person clothed in black than white. This statement is forcibly illustrated by the white coats of animals who live in the Arctic regions. They are clothed that way for the reason that the color holds the bodily heat and does not allow it to radiate as rapidly as black.

Thin flannel shirts are good for summer wear, and it is best to wear them next to the skin.

As a preventive of sunstroke there is nothing like recreation. The meaning of this word is very suggestive; it means to re-create, the creating anew of the system, so to speak. We know that there are certain germs in the air that produce disease. Experiments of the most interesting nature have recently been conducted in Paris. It has been noticed that when the air, taken at a certain point at the edge of the city, was from the country, it was practically free from these little germs known as bacteria, but when the air was taken from the city, there were millions of germs found in it. When persons are taken with summer complaint they are benefited by a change to a purer atmosphere. They are taken from where the bacteria thrive to the back country where there are practically no bacteria.

The proper thing is to take recreation where the air is pure. People should make frequent trips from the city and disinfect their systems by breathing pure air. Yachting is an excellent form of recreation. Nothing is so good for a man whose brain is overworked as to go to the theatre. That is a good mode of recreation that will relieve brain congestion and recreate him better than any other thing, but it should be avoided during summer on account of the heat. In hot weather we should bathe in the open air.

Too much perspiration is bad; nightsweats debilitate. The accumulation of heat in the system is like the accumulation of heat in a steam boiler. We know that water will store up heat under steam pressure until the critical point is reached, when it suddenly vaporizes and there is an explosion. It is the same with the system; the heat accumulates until the critical point is reached and there is an explosion in the shape of sunstroke.

People eat too much meat in summer. If Americans ate more vegetables and fruit during summer it would be better for them.

Lemonade is a good drink for hot weather, but, taken in excess, it has a scorbutic effect. The first effect of alcoholic drinks is to cause a rise in temperature. The blood vessels of the brain are congested, the heart is stimulated. The secondary effect is to lower the temperature slightly. But you never find alcohol used in moderation. People who use it invariably use it to excess. When taken to excess, nothing could be used that would produce sunstroke or heat exhaustion quicker. Lager beer and ale open the pores and cause perspiration. These drinks are not as bad as whisky, because alcohol is the deleterious ingredient; and of course substances that contain more of it are more deleterious.

The best and the most wholesome drink is cold water. It should be freely used, and should be cooled by keeping it on the ice, and not by putting ice in it. A few bottles placed in the refrigerator every morning would be sufficient to supply the family during the day.

An excellent practice for those in cities where soda water fountains are numerous is to occasionally make use of that beverage. Soda taken when thirst calls for it is healthful and refreshing. The flavored syrups sold at these fountains should never be taken in hot weather, as they are very heating.—Dr. Cyrus Edson in The Epoch.

MIRAGE.

As shipwrecked mariner by waves o'erborne,
Chilled and benumbed by blast and lashing spray,
Slow sinking from the blessed light of day
Gives up the struggle, strength and life outworn;
Yet as he yields him helpless and forlorn,
Stern fate, remorseful, gives one parting ray
Of hope; the long sought headlands far and gray
Rise on his dying sight with light of morn;

So life, relenting, gives one moment grand
To him who walks bereavement's lonely beach;
The tender pressure of a gentle hand,
The ecstasy of voice and look and speech;
One rapturous glimpse of love's celestial land
Whose fading shores his feet may never reach.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

Sunning, having swallowed his toast, informed us that his father never rode in London. "And I mustn't ride with mother when he's there," he added, pointing a greasy forefinger at Beauchamp.

"Eh?—what?—who?" ejaculated Lord Staines, pricking up his ears.

And Sunning did not mend matters by continuing, in his lisping, childish treble, "Before he came there was another genkleman, but I think he's gone away now. Mother says not to ride with her when there's a genkleman."

"Would he be so very much in your way?" asked Lady Mildred, turning to Beauchamp, with just the faintest touch of disdain in her voice.

"Not the least in the world," answered the young man. "I am very sorry if I have prevented Lady Bracknell from taking him out, and the next time—if there is a next time—I'll make a point of requesting the favor of his company. But really, I don't ride with Lady Bracknell very often."

"Evely day," said the relentless Sunning emphatically.

This was a little embarrassing, but Beauchamp, though young, was a man of experience, and his serenity was not easily disturbed. "You don't mean to say so?" he exclaimed. "I'm very much ashamed of myself, and I'll apologize to Lady Bracknell the next time I see her. But that is just the sort of stupid thing that I'm always doing. She good naturedly asked me to ride with her one day, and I suppose I must have kept on going ever since from force of habit. I'll tie a knot in my pocket handkerchief at once, so that I may remember to forget to go to-morrow."

I don't know whether he was only anxious to stifle suspicion, or whether he still contemplated the possibility of an ultimate union with Lady Mildred; but he made great efforts to be agreeable to her during the next quarter of an hour, and when he took his leave Lord Staines, who had evidently been alarmed for a moment, seemed to be quite reassured.

Jim, after we had left the house together, informed me casually that he considered the manners and customs of savages very superior upon the whole to those of so called civilized Christians, but declined to enter more fully into the subject when invited to do so. "It doesn't matter; only that's my opinion," he said.

I am not acquainted with the customs of savages, except by hearsay; but our own, I freely admit, might be improved upon. One very tiresome custom, which, I fear, has become almost epidemic among us of late, is that of entertaining long suffering spectators with tableaux vivants. Beauchamp had the honor of figuring in the only tableau of the evening which his hostess proposed to grace personally; that, namely, in which her ladyship, as Andromeda, with her beautiful bare arms chained above her head and her bronze hair rippling down over her shoulders, was rescued from destruction by a very Saxon looking Perseus. I ventured to suggest that Bracknell might represent the monster, but this was considered to be a proposition of doubtful taste, and as no one else volunteered to undertake that ungrateful part, we had an appalling creature constructed out of inanimate materials for the occasion.

If only it had been permissible to make use of an inanimate Perseus into the bargain, I should have been spared much mental wear and tear and a grievous waste of time; for Beauchamp declared that he was physically incapable of standing on one leg for sixty consecutive seconds, and it was obvious that unless he stood upon one leg he would spoil the whole thing. I had to put him through a complete course of gymnastics, and even then it was only by the most diligent punching and kneading that I could force him into an attitude which was not positively grotesque. Whenever I left his side he, so to speak, tumbled to pieces instantly. However, in the long run we achieved as near an approach to success as could be expected, and when the representation came off this tableau was received with tremendous applause. I imagine that the majority of the spectators were lost in admiration of Andromeda's arms and shoulders and had no eyes for poor Perseus, who wabbled perceptibly.

Nevertheless, there were found persons to notice and remark upon Perseus too, if not exactly to admire him; and it chanced that, on the fall of the curtain, I was standing within ear shot of one of these. She was an elderly lady, blessed with three marriageable daughters, and in that capacity naturally opposed to the goings on of unscrupulous young matrons, such as Lady Bracknell.

"It really is a little too bad," she said to her neighbor, "and I wonder that Lord Bracknell allows it. Of course we know that he is not over particular, and, as far as that goes, I dare say his own manner of life doesn't give him the right to be so, but I should have thought that even he would have seen how outrageous this kind of thing is, considering that Mr. Beauchamp is as good as engaged to his sister. Under the circumstances it's almost indecent."

I was having a little inward laugh at the "almost" in the above outburst of virtuous indignation when I became aware that some one besides myself had overheard it. Leaning against the wall behind me was Bracknell, who had not thought it necessary to be at home in time to receive his wife's guests, but had now come in, probably from his club. From the scowl upon his brow I concluded that he had been losing money; from the brightness of his eyes I feared that he had been drinking; and from the murderous glance which he shot at the dowager whose speech I have quoted I gathered that her unvarnished strictures were not agreeable to him. He muttered a word or two under his breath and turned away, leaving me in some doubt as to whether he was incensed against his wife or against her critic. But very shortly afterward all uncertainty as to that point was removed from my mind.

I had been invited to remain for a quiet supper after the departure of the general company. Beauchamp and a few others, who had been similarly favored, had already gone down to the dining room, and I was lingering on the deserted stage with the fair Andromeda, when Bracknell suddenly entered and strode toward us. He either did not notice my presence or was indifferent to it.

"Hilda," he said, "you'll oblige me by dropping this; it has gone far enough. You think yourself very clever, no doubt; but it strikes me that you are in danger of being a little too clever, for once."

She turned slowly and surveyed him with calm contempt. "Had you better not go to bed?" she asked. "Perhaps you may be in a state to explain yourself in the morning."

Bracknell had the family temper, and I thought for a moment that he was going to treat us to a display of it; but possibly he may have learned by experience that storming at his wife was a thankless task.

"I am sober enough now," he returned quietly, "to tell you that I don't choose to have Mildred's marriage put a stop to for your gratification. How long, do you flatter yourself, that that young fool is going to trot about after you like a lap dog? Till this time next year? And what do you suppose will happen when you begin to bore him? You do begin to bore people after a certain time, I can assure you."

"I dare say that is quite true," replied Hilda, meekly; "you ought to know. Of course, I will obey you to the best of my ability; but I am afraid I can no more force Mr. Beauchamp to marry your sister than I can prevent you from insulting me before a third person."

At this juncture the third person executed a strategic movement in the direction of the door. But Bracknell intercepted me.

"You needn't withdraw, Maynard," said he, with a short laugh. "I've nothing more to say, and now we may as well go down and have some supper. I don't often interfere with her ladyship's little games, but I believe she knows that when I do she must give them up."

I observed, however, a slight smile upon her ladyship's lips, which convinced me that in this instance she had no intention at all of giving up her little game.

Sir John Macdonald is expected to visit Toronto in the course of a few days. He has no intention of going to England at present.

Right now is the time to use a good Blood Purifying Medicine. Lose no time in getting a bottle of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It will do you good. Sold by all druggists. 50c.

The Crown Prince is still in London, as the weather being severe, Dr. Mackenzie fears that the Waldenses' atmosphere would affect his throat injuriously.

The Northern Railway freight sheds at Collingwood, with five loaded and two empty box cars and a large quantity of grain, were destroyed by fire on Thursday. The total loss is estimated at about $25,000.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills, Salts, &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists.

It is anticipated that the cost of the proposed change in rifles used by the Canadian militia, which was urged on the Minister of Militia by a delegation of riflemen, will be an insuperable obstacle to the desired reform. The change would cost at least half a million dollars.

Give them a Chance.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1887.

THE OLD CHARIOT ROLLS

BIG GUNS OF THE SALVATION ARMY IN TOWN.

Meeting in the Opera House in the Evening—Commissioner Coomb's Address—Wm. Gooderham on the Army.

The great "heterogenous and conglomeration" meeting in connection with the Salvation Army Anniversary, was held in the Opera House on Friday evening.

The full complement of officers and soldiers, representing the whole district, and the numerous visitors, formed a procession at half past seven o'clock. The procession was the biggest ever formed here. It was led by the Lindsay brass band and through the ranks transparencies were carried.

When the procession arrived at the Opera House it was almost filled, and a few minutes afterward it was jammed, gallery and all.

The officers and soldiers, as many as could get a seat, occupied the platform. Coombs was a central figure. Around him were Major Bailley, Major Glover, D. O. Spooner, and Adjutants Bolton, McHardy, Sweetman, Van Allen, and numerous lesser lights.

Commissioner Coombs opened the meeting by shouting "Fire a Volley," and the house was made to shake with the response. Capt. Simcoe, of Quebec, led in prayer. Capt. Bryant, the "Sweet Soloist" sang a salvation song. 'He Promised He Never Would Leave Me." She sang with a cornet obligato and the choruses were led by Trumpeter Harry.

COMMISSIONER COOMBS—All of you that are glad that you're never left alone say "Amen."

CHORUS—Amen!!!

No, never, never alone,
No, never, never alone;
He promised He never would leave me—
No, never alone.

COMMISSIONER COOMBS then spoke as follows:—I am glad to be with you to-night. Holy Ann sometimes says that she will not die to please the Devil. I feel a good deal like that myself. I never felt more like living, to be the terror of evil doers. God Almighty has continually upheld me He upholds me with the right hand of His righteousness, and because he is at my right hand I shall not be moved. I am happy to say to you that the Salvation Army is still marching on. (Shouts of hallelujah.) Never, I think, in all its history was the mighty army of the Living God going faster than it is travelling to-night. (Glory.) And Jesus Christ shall reign throughout the length and breadth of the land, and God Almighty is going to help the Salvation Army to do more valiantly for Him. I am glad not only that God blesses us mightily in Ontario, not only that God blesses us mightily in Newfoundland—where the Devil seems to have got a great number of the people right under his own hand. Oh, the darkness there; there are thousands in as thick darkness as they are in Quebec—I am glad that God is blessing us in Newfoundland, where the Devil seems to have great sway; but I am glad that He is blessing us in the Maritime Provisces, in Manitoba, the Northwest Territories, British Columbia, where the army chariot rolls, and last, but not least, in the Province of Quebec, the greater part of which is given up to absolute idolatry. Thank God, even there, the Salvation Army is marching along! My comrades to the left hand of me here will tell you how the war goes down there. Let me tell you, my dear comrades, after careful consideration and investigation, the Army has struck in the ancient capital the greatest stronghold of hell that can be produced this side of the pit. Rome! Rome is nothing to be compared with it. Rome has blessed us mightily by God's grace, and scores are praying for mercy every week. There are not buildings large enough to contain the people. And in France too, the mighty work of saving men is going on. Here where the people have got disgusted with religion that has prevailed, and have thrown it off altogether because it would not satisfy them, the Salvation Army is renewing them into a religion of living power, away from forms and cermonies, away from images. It is the living Christ in the heart that makes a man new. (Glory to God.) In France we are making good citizens of the people and sending them on the way to Heaven. He concluded by saying that there was more need of work in Quebec than anywhere. He exampled the opposition the Salvation Army received from people in Quebec by producing a large stone, leting it fall on the stage floor, and saying that this was the kind of missiles that were used to prevent the Salvation Army for doing what it proposed doing. He wanted to raise $1,000 to train 20 lasses to go to Quebec.

An adopted son of Mr. Wm. Gooderham sang a song intitled "In Spite of the Devil I am nicely saved."

Capt. CHAPPEWAN, of Quebec, spoke in French being intrepreted by Capt Simcoe, relating the scenes that had occurred in the streets and barracks of that place.

Commissioner COOMBS said that on Monay they put in a barracks in Quebec 365 light. of glass which these dear people had broken with stones and other missiles.

Mr. Mm. GOODERHAM spoke briefly arguing that the Salvation Army was carrying out the command to "Go into the highways and hedges and compell the people to come," and Chrest's last message "Go unto all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." He said that all through the ages since that message was given there had been faithful people to give up their lives to God's service, but none were faithful more than the Salvation Army. He knew as much about the Army as anybody, he knew the work they were doing, and it was a great work. He gave some statistics as to the progress of the Army, and recited several instances of what was being done by the Army in the city of Toronto.

Capt. SIMCOE, of Quebec, gave an account of some of her experience, among which was the mobbing of the Army on Crown Hill.

Capt. POPLE urged the people to contribute liberally to aid in the cost of training twenty new officers that were to go to Quebec.

Lieut. Bryant sang another solo and Holy Ann addressed the audience in a vigorous manner.

The meeting closed in the usual manner.

TURNBULL'S first shipment of Boy's Suits and Overcoats is now opened out. They are Special Value.

Miss White Fishing.

The New Westminste. Daily Columbian says:—"During her stay at Harrison, Hot Springs, Miss White, daughter of the Hon. Thos. White, accomplished a feat worthy of record, namely, that of successfully landing the largest trout captured at Harrison Lake this year. Miss White hooked the fish from off the bridge at the western end of the hotel and took it from the water with all the dexterity of an old fisherman. The trout was a beauty, measuring over 2 feet in length. The fair angler received the praises of all present, and future visitors to the Springs will, no doubt, be often regaled with the story of Miss White's clever capture of the monster trout."

Peterborough Slandered.

The Lindsay Post adopts and republishes the falsehoods of the Detroit News reporter misrepresenting many of our citizens and the community generally as being in favour of Commercial Union or Annexation, though the Post should be aware of the repudiation by gentlemen thus slandered of the unpatriotic views attributed to them. Our Mayor and member of Parliament is described as throwing up his hands for Commercial Union, though Mr. Stevenson is opposed to it and has so declared himself as a member of the Toronto Board of Trade. Misrepresentation seems to be the favorite weapon of these agitators.

To the Ladies.

Miss R. Delaney has spent the last three weeks in personally selecting her fall and winter stock from Toronto and Montreal markets. Besides her large stock of Millinery, Mantles and Fancy Dry Goods, she has given special attention to her ladies' underwear department, having purchased a complete stock in that line. Customers may be assured of getting none but the latest designs at lowest prices. 3-152

Personal.

Mr. C. B. Routley has returned home after having spent a week along the Rideau Canal duck shooting. The party were successful in landing some fine fish.

The Rev. R. Macknight, B. A., has accepted a unanimous call advanced by the congregation of Dunneville, Ont., and it is probable that the ordination and induction will take place on September 27th. Dunneville is a growing town in the Hamilton Presbytery. Mr. Macknight's friends in Peterborough will be pleased to learn of his success.

An Invention.

Mr. Geo. W. Ranney is at present preparing plans and specifications of an invention, the property of Mr. Elias Lowry, Millbrook, for presentation at the patent office. The invention consists in the means of reducing the power required to drive a self-binding reaper. The small driving wheel on ordinary self-binders is replaced by a large driving wheel, thus decreasing the draught required. The advantage of the large wheel is apparent; the grain is passed through it instead of over, which saves the elevation, which must be done in the case of small wheels. Mr. Lowry is going to take his machine to the Toronto Exhibition.

OPENED out at TURNBULL'S an Immense Range of Fall Mantle Cloths. Every Lady should see them.

Mistaken.

The Belleville Intelligencer says:—"Peterborough is evidently jealous of the prominence that the Bay of Quinte District Exhibition has attained. The papers of that town never refer to it. It is big enough to get along without their assistance." The Intelligencer has made a double mistake. The REVIEW has published the dates of the Bay of Quinte exhibition more than once, and keeps them standing among the announcements of the local and district exhibitions. If the Belleville exhibition managers want any extra announcement made regarding their fair the REVIEW will be happy to furnish them with its advertising rates.

TO HARNESS NIAGARA.

An Inventor's Scheme to Unite the Great Water Power.

BUFFALO, Sept. 3.—The inventor of a harness for the power of Niagara river has almost got his grasp on a fortune of £92,500. If he hasn't that much money in his inside pocket he certainly has a contract which, if carried out, will put it there. J.F. Kerns, of this city, has sold the right of his invention in Erie and Niagara counties, which includes the whole of the Niagara river frontage, to the Niagara river Motor company, capital stock, $250,000.

"Several members of the Cleveland Electric Motor Company have been here a number of times," said Mr. Kerns, "and appear to be greatly interested in my motor. They have been with us when we tried it in the river, and seem to be delighted with it. Their notion is that the motor is to be utilized for the generation of electricity. The men with whom I am dealing say they will build two big dynamos down by the river bank, and send the electricity all over the city on wires. Remember," said he, "I have sold only two counties. There are plenty of other streams where the motor can be used, and if I can find a suitable one near New York I can cover that island with electric motive power and then I have got a bonanza." He says all the old mill wrights to whom he has shown it approve of the scheme.

The model is, in brief, a platform a foot and a half wide, and nearly as long again, with three upright bearings set so that by stretching an endless chain about them an irregular triangle is formed. This chain is furnished with flat paddles that stand out from it to catch the current, which is by means of dams or walls thrown against its longest side. Hinges permit the paddles to feather back against the chain on the return side. One of the wheels around which the chain runs is furnished with a pully, which gives off the power to a belt that goes ashore. "It is the intention," said the inventor, "to make a machine 100 feet long, with steel blades 10 feet high and having 8 feet sweep. This with guiding walls masonry built in Portland cement, will cost, it is thought, $12,000. There will be little trouble from ice, as the machine will be 8 feet below the surface of the water."

DASHING THROUGH FLAMES.

A Grand Trunk Train Runs a Gauntlet of Fire.

MONTREAL, Sept. 3.—E. Frank Moseley's tannery on the canal bank, St. Henri, was between 9 and 10 o'clock to-day burned to the ground. A strong north wind was blowing, and the buildings all being of wood, in little more than half an hour their destruction was complete. The flames were terrific in their fury, and shot up into a great hight. A sudden gust of wind came and they were carried completely over the track of the G. T. R., igniting the semaphore and other wood work of the drawbridge. A passenger on the Central Vermont train said there was great excitement on board when the fire was sighted and this became increased when it became doubtful whether the train would be run through as the blaze and the heat were so great. However, a rapid dash was made, but the heat was so intense that even on the cars with the windows closed it had a scorching feeling. The engineer and fireman had to seek shelter under the sides of the cab, and even then they were slightly scorched. The heat cracked one of the car windows in the smoker.

Another Costly Blaze.

MONTREAL, Sept. 4.—Still another has to be added to the long list of big fires. About 11 o'clock last night the firemen were called out to a fire which had broken out in the premises of Thompson & Co., wholesale hardware merchants, on St. Sulpice street. In a short time the flames had completely enveloped the upper flats of the building and spread to the adjoining premises of W. Darling & Co., hardware merchants. The burning building was situated immediately adjacent to Notre Dame Cathedral, which at one time was in serious danger. The firemen, however, succeeded in confining the flames to the upper flats of the hardware premises, and after an hour's hard fight it was got under control. The upper flats of both Messrs. Darling's and Thompson's premises were completely destroyed, and the other flats were badly damaged by water. The total loss is estimated at from $80,000 to $100,000, which it is stated is fully covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is unknown.

DISAPPOINTED BURGLARS.

Several Places Ransacked in Clarksburg—Only One Dollar Secured.

CLARKSBURG, Sept. 3.—Last night the safe of the Northern railroad station was blown open by burglars and the drawers and desks ransacked, but nothing obtained. Then they tried Andrews' oatmeal mill, but were again disappointed. They forced open the door of the Beaver Valley Banking Company and ransacked every drawer, but did not touch the safe. They lastly burst open the door of Hartman's drug store, where they got about one dollar in silver, breaking the locks on his office desks and scattering his private papers. They declined to take two bills on a bank that had failed. They then held a picnic at the soda water fountain as the only consolation for their fruitless labours, left their tools and decamped.

THE DEPARTMENT TO BLAME.

For the Present Serious Indian Troubles in Colorado.

DENVER, Col., Sept. 3.—A despatch from Meeker, September 2, says: "Indian Agents Byrnes arrived from the agency yesterday afternoon. He states that a battle began just as he commenced paying the Uncompahgres their annuity money. Couriers commenced to rush in and a string of them were flying between the agency and Colorow's camp. He kept on paying the men, thus keeping the Indians good natured at the agency. He says the Indians have not found out yet that several Utes were killed, and at present they think they have only lost a papose. Though Several of their friends are missing they are supposed to be safe. The exact boundary line of the reservation has never been accurately established, though the Indian department has paid for the service of erecting monuments to the eastern boundary. According to the agent's statement the Indian department is to blame for this trouble."

AFFAIRS IN HAWAII.

Canvassing for the Election—Nominees for the New Parliament.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 3.—The steamship Alameda, from Sydney, Australia, having touched at Honolulu on August 27th, arrived here at noon to-day. Affairs in the Hawaiian Kingdom continue to remain tranquil. An active political canvass is being made for the election under the new constitution, which will take place on September 12. The nominees for the new House of Nobles and House of Representatives are nearly all Americans or Englishmen. A banquet was given by the Honolulu Rifles at their armoury on August 25, to which the King was invited, but sent his regrets. In the speeches made at the banquet the American and English rulers were toasted with speeches, but the health of the King did not bring any response.

The Hawaiian ambassadors have returned from Samoa, and report that the German naval squadron had sailed from Sydney for the island, and the belief was prevalent that the German flag would be raised, despite any action by the conference in progress at Washington.

A DUALIN EXPLOSION.

Many Lives Saved by a Watch Being Five Minutes Fast.

A terrible accident happened at Wilbur at noon on Saturday last when about 225lbs. of dualin exploded, blowing the house in which it was stored to atoms and giving many of the neighboring dwelling houses a shaking up. Fortunately no lives were lost, but one young man named Dunn was struck on the leg by a flying timber as he was coming out of the mine, which broke his leg in two places. The unfortunate man is a young Scotchman, unmarried, about two years out. Medical aid was summoned from Sharbot Lake, and he was made as comfortable as possible and subsequently sent to the hospital in Kingston. It is thought by some that amputation will be necessary. The explosion is supposed to have been caused by a spark from a lamp, as the foreman had gone into the house where the explosive is kept with his lamp lighted about 15 minutes before the report was heard. The hands had all (with the exception of the injured man) left the mine five minutes earlier than usual. The engineer's watch luckily happened to be that much fast, and had it not been for this probably a more serious report would have been made.—Kingston News.

THE ENNIS MEETING.

Ten Thousand Persons Present—The Assemblage Dispersed.

DUBLIN, Sept. 4.—Ten thousand persons assembled to-day at Ennis to attend the meeting of the Irish National League. The police last night took possession of the hill of Ballycoree, where it was intended to hold the meeting. At 2 o'clock the procession, enlivened by twelve bands of music, and including Messrs. Timothy Sullivan, Dillon, Cox, Sheehy, Wm. O'Brien and Philip Stanhope, all members of the House of Commons, and several priests, moved towards Ballycoree hill, the approaches to which were guarded by soldiers and police. The procession finding its further progress barred halted in a field, and Messrs. Sullivan, Stanhope and O'Brien made speeches from their carriages. A troop of hussars, headed by Col. Turner, divisional magistrate, rode up to where the procession had halted and Col. Turner ordered the meeting to disperse within five minutes. Mr. Stanhope handed Col Turner a copy of the resolution adopted by the meeting, claiming Home Rule, declaring adherence to Mr. Parnell, thanking the Liberal Party, pledging resistance to the proclamation of the League and denouncing land grabbing. Mr. Stanhope declared that the proceedings of the meeting were legal, and that if a collision occurred between the people and the troops, he would hold Col. Turner responsible. Col. Turner replied that he was bound to execute his orders. After a parley the procession returned to Ennis and Mr. O'Brien addressed the crowd in O'Connell square. The soldiers and police again appearing, the procession passed on to a hotel, which the leaders entered, and the crowd then dispersed quietly.

PORT HOPE.

KILLED ON THE TRACK.—On Saturday morning as a freight train was coming into Newtonville station at 10.40, the engineer noticed a man sitting on the track. He whistled for brakes and reversed his engine but was unable to stop the train before the man was struck, and the engine, tender and two cars had passed over his legs, cutting them both off below the knees. When the train men picked him up, they found it was George Oliver, the night switchman, who lives on the side of the track about half a mile west of the station. He was on his way home, and it is supposed, sat down on the track and fell asleep. An engine was immediately dispatched to Port Hope for surgeons, but before they arrived the man had breathed his last. He leaves a widow and four young children to mourn his untimely end.—Guide.

FENELON FALLS.

THE ONTARIO.—The Pulp Mill Company lately purchased the steamer Ontario, which was brought to the Falls last Tuesday night, and next afternoon was got through the lower lock into the upper one, where she is undergoing some repairs. In order to get her under the bridge over the locks it was necessary to take down the pilot house, upper cabin and smoke-stack, and to remove the support under the centre of the bridge, which was replaced as soon as she had passed. The Ontario is about 75 feet long and 20 feet wide, and she has a double engine of 40 horse power. She is old and dilapidated, but her machinery is said to be good, and the intention is to build a new boat and place it therein, when the present one is past service.—Gazette.

Sixteen Men Lost.

ST. PIERRE, Sept. 3.—The schooner St. Pierre was capsized in the gale of August 26 on the banks, and her crew of 16 men are supposed to have been lost.

Teachers' Appeals.

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 3.—The Central committee of examiners are engaged in considering about 200 appeals lodged by candidates in the recent teachers' examination.

One Hundred and Twenty-six.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 3.—A railway man of this city says that from statements made by employees of the Toledo, Peoria and Western Railroad who worked at the Chatsworth wreck, he is convinced that 126 lives were lost by that accident.

The Grand Trunk Railway.

MONTREAL, Sept. 3.—J. L. Forget & Co., stock brokers, yesterday received a cablegram from London stating that the G.T.R. directors had declared a semi-annual dividend of two per cent. upon their first preference stock. The net earnings for July were £158,000, and for the six months £553,354. These are the largest earnings of the road for the last five years. The stock advanced two points yesterday.

A Big Railway Bridge.

HAMILTON, Ont., Sept. 3.—A great iron swing bridge for the Niagara Central Railway, at Thorold, is under construction by the Hamilton Bridge and Tool Company. The bridge is nearly completed and most of the material is already on the ground. It is 307 feet long, and will be the second in length in Canada. The bridge at Burlington piers, the product of the same works, is 371 feet long.

The Seized Canadian Sealers.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—The department of state is informed by the United States consul at Victoria, B.C., that Mr. Drake of the firm of Drake, Jackson & Helmehan, barristers, left there last week for Alaska by direction of Hon. Mr. White, Canadian minister of the interior. The firm referred to are the solicitors for the Dominion Government in the province. It is presumed Mr. Drake's mission is directly connected with the seizure of the British sealing vessels in Alaskan waters.

An Embarrassing Resemblance.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Sept. 3.—Lieut. H. T. Smith-Dorrien, Royal Navy, a retired member of the Army and Navy Club of London, now residing at the Horsefoot Farm, Kissimmee, Fla., was arrested here yesterday on suspicion that he was J. E. Merwin, wanted at Glenn Falls, N. Y., on a charge of having embezzled $6,000 from the National Express Company. Lieut. Dorrien tallied exactly with Pinkerton's photograph and description of Merwin, even to a scar on the cheek and missing tooth. A scar on the left foot was missing, but the police would not release the swell looking club-man until Pinkerton telegraphed that Mervin had been arrested elsewhere.

An Exchange of Courtesies.

QUEBEC, Sept. 3.—The harbor now presents the unusual spectacle of five war vessels anchored in it, three British, the Bellerophon, Tourmaline and Canada, and two French, Le Bouvet and La Minerve. The English frigates exchanged no salutes with the Citadel, but as each vessel passed the King's bastion it lowered its flag as a salute to the Governor-General's flag on Cape Diamond. Just before the Bellerophon came to anchor, and as she approached the French flagship, the latter's band struck up "God Save the Queen." Scarcely had the strains of the national anthem died away, when, amid cheers from the crowds on the river front, the Bellerophon's band appeared on deck and returned the compliment by playing the "Marseillaise."

LIKE THE GERMAN ANNEXATION.

The same tariff could be made applicable to both countries. Then the customs collected could be equitably divided between the two Governments upon some fair basis, probably upon the basis of population, as it was done in the German Zollverein. This done, it would matter not where the foreign goods were landed, whether in Canada or the States. They would have to pay the same duty; American producers and workingmen would be protected against undue competition from Europe, and commercial intercourse between Canada and this country would be as free as it is now between the States of the Union.—Buffalo Commercial Advertiser.

LATEST CABLE NEWS.

NOT FAIR EXCHANGE.

Canadian farmers are said to favor the scheme because they expect by it to get better prices for horses, lambs, and barley, etc., while no account is taken of the fierce competition to which they would be subjected in oats, corn, lard, etc., of the fact that the cattle trade with England would be imperilled, and worst of all, that their home market would be destroyed.—Kingston News.

THE IRISH ESTIMATES.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—After six and a half hours of discussion in the House of Commons last evening the vote for the expenses of Criminal prosecution in Ireland was passed. In the debate on the vote for the land law expenses Mr. Balfour denied that the sub-commissioners had been appointed on party or religious grounds. This and other votes were finally adopted.

CHAMBERLAIN COMING.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—Hon. Jos. Chamberlain expects to sail for America about the end of October. He will stay a few days in New York before going to Washington.

AMERICANS IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—London Life estimates the number of American visitors to England this year at 90,000. It places the average expenditure of each American tourist there at £100, resulting in a benefit to English tradespeople of over $4,000,000.

THE CHAIRMAN REFUSED.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—Votes of money for the Irish Government were under debate in the Commons last evening when the Parnellites discussed the administration of law in Ireland until Smith appealed to the chairman to stop the debate. The chairman replied that he had no power to do so; he could only appeal to the members themselves. This was received with loud cheers by the Parnellites who taunted Mr. Smith upon his inability to apply the cloture and said he would have to bring his 200 members to London.

THE TRANSCONTINENTAL MAIL.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—It is understood that Sir Charles Tupper, at the request of the Canadian government, had an interview with Mr. Raikes, the postmaster general, with reference to the notice recently issued regarding the letters to China and Japan superscribed "via Vancouver." It appears that in consequence of the steamships being cargo vessels, their sailings are irregular and the advertised dates are not always adhered to. Letters sent in accordance with the notice are therefore liable to delay, which would bring discredit on the all Canadian route. The result of the interview is that the notice will be modified, and letters will be superscribed "via Montreal," instead of Vancouver, so that they can be forwarded via. San Francisco if the Canadian steamer is delayed.

TAKEN FOR SPIES.

TOULOUSE, Sept. 3.—A Belgian officer and an American doctor taking notes on the ambulance system were arrested yesterday on suspicion of being spies.

THINKING OF WAR.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—It is stated that in an interview with the president of the Swiss confederation, M. Rouvier, the French premier, made a proposition relative to Swiss occupation of neutralized Savoy in the event of war between France and Italy.

MR. GLADSTONE'S REPLY.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—Mr. Gladstone has written a reply to the Duke of Argyle's recent attack. He says:—"The Duke of Argyle is an old friend whose attacks I prefer bearing silently. I do not excuse tyranny, but I wish to have the National League dealt with legally and not by the arbitrary decision of the Viceroy or Chief Secretary for Ireland."

CENTRAL ASIA.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—Central Asian affairs need constant attention. Russia plainly says that should Abdur Rahman, Ameer of Afghanistan, die or be upset, the protocols of the Afghan frontier commision just completed will be destroyed, as the obligation of England to Afghanistan remains valid only so long as the present Ameer continues to reign. The Russian concentration on the northern frontier of Afghanistan aims at the occupation of Herat, and such a step by Russia will force the British Government to occupy Candahar and Cabul. A considerable force of English troops has been concentrated on the Afghan frontier, in preparation for such a contingency, and the question whether there are not parts of Central Asia in which there is no room for two powers at the same time will then have to be decided.

SKIRMISHING.

CALCUTTA, Sept. 4.—Cabul advices say skirmishes have occurred between the Russian and the people of Herat, at Killai-Calambtoi, near Zulfikar.

FOUNDERED.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—The ship Fais of Bedar, of Glasgow, bound from Hamburg to Calcutta, with a cargo of salt, foundered off Yarmouth, the cargo having shifted. Five of the crew were rescued and twenty-four drowned, most of whom were Germans and Swedes.

BULGARIAN SITUATION.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—The formation of the Bulgarian Ministry is taken here as Bulgarian's answer to Turkey's consent to Gen. Ernorth's mission. It is the strongest government that could possibly be formed, Stambuloff and Mutkuroff being two of the most popular men in Bulgaria. The new departure is probably equivalent to an intention to resist by force any attempt to depose Prince Ferdinand and substituate a Russianized regency. The signs, however are that Russia has practically the unlimited support of Germany, and the prospects of a Russo-German alliance is increased by Prince Bismarck's offer to secure an interview between the Czar and Emperor William. Should this alliance be consummated Austria would practically be abandoned and the submission of Bulgaria be assured

Exploring the Far North.

VICTORIA, B.C., Sept. 3.—A letter has been received from Dr. Dawson exploring party at the head of the Pelly River, a tributary of the Yukon, dated 29th July. The party were then in excellent health and spirits. The Indians who accompanied the party to that point from Wrangel had been sent back. It is the doctor's intention to push on with a party he selected in Victoria. He expected to reach Wrangle on the return trip about the 1st of October.

The Daily Review

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER, 5, 1887.

TWO DIFFERENT THINGS.

In a laboured attempt to misrepresent the Hon. Thos. White and the administration of which he is a member, the Toronto Mail quotes him as saying after the election in Winnipeg:—

"There will be trade enough in Manitoba and the Northwest for both the Canadian Pacific and the Grand Trunk railways, if the latter should find entrance here."

This very quotation shows the dishonesty of the Mail and other advocates of disruption. We believe that Mr. White truly represented the feeling of the majority of the people of Ontario, when he favored the admission of the Grand Trunk to the Northwest at an early date. We can speak for ourselves that when such was the desire expressed by the people of Winnipeg, the REVIEW advocated it more than once in its editorial columns. But it became a different question when the agitators in Winnipeg dropt the mask and frankly owned that they were not seeking a competitive route by a Canadian road to the markets and ports of eastern Canada, but that their object was to use the lines, the seaports and the markets of a foreign country, severing themselves as far as possible from the rest of Canada. It was not likely that any one who had any respect for honesty or for the law could favour an unconstitutional attempt to secure such unpatriotic objects. They naturally have the support of all the disappointed adventurers, who having failed to secure the confidence of the people of Canada, are ready for any revolution that might give a chance for them to rise to the top.

If, as some say, the Grand Trunk is really interested in this attempt to force a way in defiance of law or the rights of property to the international boundary, it has made a blunder in placing unnecessary obstacles in its own way, by keeping in the background and masking itself beside men who are wildly shouting that they are ready to break faith with their own fellow countrymen if foreigners can offer them sufficient inducements to do so.

THE PEOPLE SUPREME.

THE Witness is quite right in supposing us to mean that there is in Canada a power superior to Parliament. That power is the people of Canada. In certain matters they exercise their power through their chosen representatives in Parliament, from whom they can withdraw their confidence if they see fit. In certain other matters they exercise their power through their chosen representatives in the Aministration, whom they can also remove if they see fit. Our Constitution provides that as to the veto power, they shall exercise it for the benefit of the whole Dominion, through their representatives in the Administration as advisers of the Governor-General. This is our Constitution. Does the Witness wish to change it? It would gain nothing in the Manitoba railway case by transferring the power to Parliament, for the House of Commons as well as the Administration pronounced against allowing the Province of Manitoba to nullify the general policy of the Dominion.

When Sir John Macdonald speaking in Parliament, to Parliament, about a measure then before Parliament, said "we," the only reasonable interpretation is that he included with himself the other members of Parliament, and spoke of that body, especially as any other construction would involve a manifest absurdity. To force another and unnatural meaning upon the word, in order to make political capital out of the unwarrantable assumption, is to use a silly and despicable quibble. No doubt the Witness is right in assuming that when Sir John says "we" to a delegation to the Ministry, he means the Ministry, and when he says "we" welcoming a guest to his residence, he means the family. So when he says "we" in the House, and speaking of what the House could do, he must have meant the House by "we." Why cannot the Witness be honest? It knows that what it pretends to think was Sir John's meaning would make him deny to the Administration a veto power which he, Mr. Blake and every Minister of Justice of Canada has exercised as our Constitution provides.

"THE Dundas Banner is the only paper in Ontario that has not had the courage to express an opinion for or against Commercial Union.—Hamilton Spectator."

The Spectator is not often mistaken, but in this case it has made a slip. There is at least one other paper in the Province that has not expressed an opinion on the subject. Perhaps it holds "precisely the same opinion as the leader of the party, Mr. Laurier."

THE ANNEXATION MOVEMENT.

Some Statements of the United States Press—Annexation the Aim.

BECOME A STATE.

By Commercial Union United States tariff regulations will be extended to include Canada.—Europe will be shut out, and so far as all practical trade relations are concerned, Canada would become a State of the American union.—Buffalo Commercial.

GOOD FOR THEIR TRADES.

Erastus Wiman and Ben Butterworth will perhaps find it easy to convince the people of Detroit and Buffalo that Commercial Union is a good thing, but the proper field for their labors is in Canada. It takes a good deal of time and trouble to convince Canadians of anything.—Buffalo News.

ANNEXIONISTS AT FAULT.

In fine, it does not seem to the Times that Mr. Wiman has succeeded in showing how to overcome the practical difficulties in the way of consummating the kind of Commercial Union proposed; and Professor Goldwin Smith, who also spoke at the meeting, did not succeed any better. Neither of them explains how the kind of Commercial Union they advocate is compatible with the maintenance of the existing political status of the two countries.—Chicago Times.

WHAT IT MEANS.

Notwithstanding the benefit Canada would derive by throwing open her resources to development by American enterprise and American capital, the fact still remains that Commercial Union will involve a discrimination against England in favor of this country. Canadian customs duties will have to be made identical with our own and subject to change as ours change.—Buffalo News.

SPONTANIETY OF COMMERCIAL UNION.

In an address at Winnipeg on Commercial Union Prof. Goldwin Smith referred to the movement in Ontario as being "one of almost perfect spontaniety." It was so spontaneous that after it had been hatched in New York and Ohio it was found necessary to introduce it in Ontario with parades, brass bands, picnics, highly-colored despatches via Mr. Wiman's telegraph line, thousands of circulars posted in New York, and the tooting of a couple of indifferent lawyers ambitious to become notorious.—Chicago Canadian-American.

WHAT THEY EXPECT.

Since the Canadians show so much favor to the project of Commercial Union, it seems reasonable to assume that the idea of Political Union will soon cease to be obnoxious to them.—Buffalo Courier.

WHAT TO EXPECT.

It should not be forgotten that this proposition also implies a complete surrender by the Dominion Parliament to the American Congress of all control over the principal source of the Dominion's revenue—the tariff. Whatever it may please the American Congress to do regarding the tariff, that the Dominion Government must forthwith accept. Our Congress would have even more power over the Dominion tariff under this arrangement than it would in the event of political union, because the people of the Dominion would have neither vote nor voice in Washington under the proposed Commercial Union, while they would have both under political union. Not only would our Congress prescribe and change at pleasure all the tariff taxes exacted from the people of Canada, but our executive officers and our courts would make all the rulings and decisions affecting rates for the Domion as well as for the United States.—Chicago Times.

THEIR CHEAP SUGAR.

The Hamilton Times essays too much when it tries to prove that under unlimited reciprocity with the United States the Canadians would be enabled to get their sugar for about one-half the price now paid. The Canadian rate for granulated sugar is seven cents per pound, which is precisely the retail rate in Buffalo and most other American cities. As a matter of fact, the necessaries of life bring no higher price here than in Canada, judging from the market reports and prices current.—Buffalo Courier.

IT MEANS NOTHING ELSE.

Mr. Butterworth scorns the idea that commercial union means political union. It means nothing else. Free trade with Canada and protection against the rest of the world, would be a constant source of squabbles worse than the fishery disputes. Free trade with Canada will not succeed until we are living under the same government with the Canadians or have adopted free trade with the world. That is why commerce should not be as free between Canada and New York as between New York and Pennsylvania. We want no commercial union without political union.—Syracuse Standard.

MR. WIMAN'S VIEWS.

The Tories are in control of the government and the keeping up of a close British connection in one of the prime articles of their faith. Between that and their dread of political annexation to the United States, they will find it very hard to adopt Mr. Wiman's views.—Buffalo News.

ELOQUENT EDITORIAL SILENCE.

The editorial silence the Toronto journalistic supporters of Commercial Union have observed regarding Mr. Wiman's Detroit speech is most eloquent.—Montreal Gazette.

SNEAKING OUT.

Mr. Bunting kept pretty well in the background at the Detroit meeting, while his American associates were inviting the Michiganders to cross the river and gobble up Canada's great wealth. More significant still, Mr. Bunting's paper erased his name from the list of those present to applaud the insults offered Canada as a country ready to sell her birthright for less than a mess of pottage—for a mess of promises. Mr. Bunting does well to be ashamed of the dirty work in which he is engaged, but he would do much better were he to sever an alliance which constrains him, erstwhile a fierce loyalist, to perform the sneak act as he performed it in Detroit.—Toronto World.

THE SCHEME EXPLAINED.

It is well to give the Commercial Annexationists rope enough. Do that and they will soon hang themselves. Mr. Fuller has demonstrated that Commercial Annexation would deprive the Ontario farmer of his home market for wheat and beef; Mr. Wiman says it would make Canada tributary to the United States; Mr. Smith believes "annexation is best for both countries and sure to come." And now what do the people of Canada think of the scheme as explained by its chief apostles?—Hamilton Spectator.

THE QUEEN'S BOOK.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—Life states that the book upon which the Queen is now engaged is a work embracing the leading experiences and events of her life. It will make a three volume publication. Life further suggests that Princess Beatrice could and may write a book of great interest, giving her spiritualistic experiences. It asserts that the Princess is a devout believer in spiritualism and has certain mediumistic powers.

MY WIFE'S OLD MARRIAGE RING.

The following lines were suggested to my mind while looking at my wife's hand, when I beheld her marrage ring worn to a mere skeleton:—

Dear wife, does sight deceive me thus, or is it really so?
Is that the ring I gave to you thirty-six years ago?
When youth's fresh bloom was on our cheeks, no furrows on our brow?
Like that gold ring we too have changed, we are old and wrinkled now.
My locks were then a raven black, but yours were fair and bright;
Now yours are mixed with silvery gray, and mine are nearly white.
Our change in looks don't touch my heart with half as sharp a sting
As when I look at your left hand and worn out marriage ring.

That day I placed that marriage ring upon your youthful hand,
It was not slender, weak nor light, but heavy, strong and grand;
I little thought that pledge of love would wear so quick away,
Till I beheld that skeleton upon your hand to-day
It never could have worn so slim with idleness or ease,
In turning over music leaves or on piano keys;
Nor sitting with your folded hands in easy chair to swing,
The assidious work as farmer's wife has worn that marriage ring.

Don't fret about that old ring, wife, though it should break in two,
The hand that wears it toiled enough to buy one more for you.
If it keeps whole until you die, friends weeping round you stand,
Its value will not tempt them much to take it from your hand.
Since first you wore that marriage ring long years have come and gone,
Hardships and toil you daily shared, both joy and sorrows known;
United love, the source from whence true happiness can spring,
Shed sunshine round your life while you have worn that marriage ring.

That ring was but the product of the rock, earth, skill and art,
Had I been false to you it would no joy or peace impart,
For faithless, disappointed love you would find no relief,
Each time you looked at it would but intensify your grief.
A ring more precious formed of love, not weak nor worn away,
Entwines around our hearts as strong as on our wedding day.
It cheers our hearts and bears our thoughts fresh back on fancy's wing,
To that blessed hour I gave to you that new, now worn out, ring.

While wearing out that ring your trials were neither few nor small,
Contentment, love and health combined, you triumphed over all.
At work or pleasure, joy or grief, supreme affection reigned,
Meanwhile that good, health-giving God our union has sustained.
Creator and Preserver kind, thou Giver of life and breath,
United Thou hast spared us long, divide us not at death,
If but Thy will, instead of one, let death two summons bring,
And lay us quietly side by side, with her old marriage ring.

PUNISHMENT FOR BRIBERY.

An Assemblyman of the Empire State Thinks Confiscation the Right Thing.

Assemblyman McCarthy, of Syracuse, who is a manufacturer, has given law a practical study, and has ideas on that subject which are frequently expressed forcibly in groups where puplic affairs are discussed.

In talking about the Sharp trial Mr. McCarthy said: "There is a growing conviction in my mind that the punishment for bribery is inadequate in that it does not seize the plunder. Now, take Jacob Sharp as an example. His accumulation of wealth at his age could have only one object—to leave a big property for his family. He was willing to run the risk of a year or two in prison and a small fine to insure them a great fortune. Even if he serves his time in prison the money will be theirs and his. There will be no special public condemnation of them. The public will hardly regard them as disgraced by the old man's imprisonment. But, suppose the law provided that for such a crime all his plunder and all his property should be confiscated. Do you think he would then make any attempt to bribe anybody? Not much. There would be a risk he would not care to incur. While I was abroad a few years ago I was told of a family of Americans living in Belgium in affluence. The father held an important financial trust. He deliberately stole $250,000 under circumstances that made the maximum punishment for his crime a year's imprisonment in the penitentiary. He was willing to serve that length of time to make such a provision for his family for life. Of course, in such cases if the money can be identified it can be recovered. But a shrewd rascal will take care of that. So I think confiscation would be about the right thing."

Another man told of a case that had come to his knowledge. A firm had a bookkeeper embezzle $3,000. He had been working for $750 a year. He was sentenced to two years' imprisonment. The firm offered to petition for his pardon if he would restore the money. The man told them he thought $1,500 a year was better than $750, even if he was obliged to spend the time in prison, and refused their offer.—New York Tribune.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

CHAPTER X.

For some little time after the evening of the tableaux I did not happen to meet the Bracknells, so that I could not judge from personal observation how far Hilda had obeyed her husband's commands and dropped Beauchamp, but divers rumors which reached me pointed to the conclusion that she had not dropped that foolish youth at all; nor indeed had I supposed for one moment that she intended doing so. Jim, who had returned to London after a flying visit to Elmhurst, amused me by an account of a remonstrance which he had felt it his duty to address to Lady Bracknell and of the manner in which his intervention had been received.

"Lord Staines doesn't see it," he said confidentially, "but between ourselves, it's as certain as anything can be that she is doing her best to prevent Beauchamp from proposing to Lady Mildred."

I expressed much surprise and congratulated Jim upon his insight into the crafty ways of feminine diplomacy; to which he replied modestly that he believed he was about as wide awake as most men nowadays. "One can't mix long in London society without having one's eyes opened," he explained; "and, as you know, I have good cause to distrust Hilda."

He paused, sighed, and then resumed: "I don't want other people to suffer through her as I have suffered. I thought she might perhaps be disposed to admit that she owed me some trifling favor, by way of reparation for the past; so I called upon her the other day and appealed to her to leave Beauchamp alone. It seemed to me that one admirer more or less could make very little difference to her, and I couldn't suppose that she had any deliberate intention of making Lady Mildred unhappy. At least that's what I said to her."

"Are you so sure," I inquired, "that the loss of Beauchamp will make Lady Mildred unhappy?"

"Oh, yes, I'm afraid so—that is, I believe so," he answered. "From different things that she has said to me I feel pretty sure that she would accept him if he proposed to her; and after all why shouldn't she? I don't myself think him particularly attractive, but he is a good-natured fellow, and he isn't bad looking, and—well, I suppose there would be nothing very extraordinary in any girl's falling in love with him. So, as I tell you, I made my appeal to Hilda; and I wish I hadn't, for it didn't succeed. She began by denying that she had led Beauchamp on, giving me to understand that he was infatuated about her and that she really couldn't help it. Then, when I persisted that she could put a stop to his infatuation very easily if she chose, she got angry and said that I, at any rate, ought not to object if Beauchamp proved faithless. I asked her what she meant—because really I didn't know—whereupon she calmly accused me in so many words of being in love with Lady Mildred myself!"

"How insolent!" I exclaimed. "And how palpably untrue and absurd!"

"Well, yes," Jim agreed, "I think it was rather insolent, and of course it was untrue. I don't know about the absurdity of it; but what does seem to me absurd is that friendship between a man and a woman should be considered impossible. Like a fool as I am, I said so to Lady Bracknell; and she immediately turned round upon me and asked why she wasn't to be allowed to make a friend of Beauchamp. That rather shut me up. All I could say was that I didn't believe she cared two straws about Beauchamp's friendship; whereupon she retorted that she didn't believe in my disinterested friendship for Lady Mildred. So the dispute ended in a draw."

It was about this time that I received a letter from home, informing me that "good Mr. Turner" was about to pay a visit to the metropolis; and closely following upon the heels of this announcement came good Mr. Turner himself to call upon me, it being very evident that he had been commissioned to inspect and report upon my humble abode by my mother, who has an ineradicable conviction that, when absent from her, I never attempt to make myself comfortable. Mr. Turner, urbane and patronizing as of old, dropped in while I was sitting over a late breakfast and was kind enough to join me in that repast. He remarked that they had given him nothing but eggs at his hotel, and eggs he was unable so much as to look at, owing to chronic derangement of the liver.

"I am staying at a hotel," he went on to say. "Dear Hilda thought it best that I should not go to her. She has reasons, you understand—good and sufficient reasons."

I said I was quite sure of that; and indeed the reasons in question did not strike me as being of a recondite character.

But Mr. Turner thought it necessary to give his version of them. "Bracknell," he continued, "is, I am persuaded, both kind hearted and well meaning and would not hurt my feelings for the world; but his habitual companions are—well, not precisely congenial to me, and he has contracted, from associating with them, a tendency to use words and expressions which, though possibly uttered in what I may almost call an innocent spirit, are such as I might find it my duty as a clergyman to protest against. Dear Hilda thinks—and I quite agree with her—that all risk of unpleasantness should be avoided, and therefore she has kindly secured rooms for me in a very well conducted hotel. I must remember, however, to tell them that eggs disagree with me."

Now I knew very well that Bracknell might use language fit to make a bargee's hair stand on end before the Rev. Simeon would dare to uplift his voice in rebuke; but I said, with strict adherence to the truth, that I had no doubt he would find himself more comfortable in his present quarters than in Wilton place; and he presently remarked, sighing a little, that the only thing he regretted was being cut off from the society of his grandson.

"Had I been under the same roof with Sunning," he added, rather pathetically, "we could have amused ourselves together without getting into anybody's way; but I dare say they will let him come and see me when it can be managed."

Poor old Turner's adoration of his grandson was quite upon a level with that of Lord Staines, and the little fellow was fond of him too, although their natures were so unlike.

After Mr. Turner had conferred a few words of patronizing encouragement upon me (he had a great disdain, tempered by benevolence, for dwellers in Grub street), and after he had ambled away with his umbrella under his arm, I began to feel very sorry for him in his loneliness, and it occurred to me that I should be doing an act of true Christian charity by giving him and the other grandfather a day's outing with their common descendant. And, being in such an amiable mood, I thought I might combine this good deed with the bestowal of a certain amount of harmless pleasure upon two other persons, as well as a fairly earned holiday upon myself. So, having concocted my scheme, I imparted it to Jim in the course of the day, and he jumped at it with enthusiasm. We had already agreed to revisit Eton together some time before the close of the season, but to me belongs all the credit of the happy suggestion that Lord Staines, Lady Mildred, Sunning and Mr. Turner should be added to our party. Jim represented that he was particularly anxious to carry out this plan, because it would cheer up Lord Staines, who had been looking tired and worried of late, and of course that may have been his motive. But he disagreed with me quite sharply when I said that it would be kind to take the old gentleman off Lady Mildred's hands for a day, and leave her to enjoy her liberty in London.

"She wouldn't enjoy it at all," he declared; "it would be about the last thing in the world that she would be likely to enjoy. Besides, I don't believe old Staines would go without her. Now, I do hope you won't put forward that idea, Harry; because if you do, the whole thing is certain to fall through."

So I said that, in that case, I wouldn't put it forward; and as both Lady Mildred and her father received our proposition favorably, it only remained for us to beg leave of absence for Sunning and let Mr. Turner know of the treat that was in store for him. The Bracknells we did not ask; because, for one thing, they would certainly have declined, and also (which was, perhaps, more to the purpose) because we didn't want them.

We all went down from Paddington together in a saloon carriage, Lord Staines as brisk as a bee, Mr. Turner benignly complacent, Sunning dividing his attentions with strict impartiality between his two grandfathers, so as to avoid making either of them jealous, and Lady Mildred and Jim conversing quietly in a corner.

We reached our destination pretty early in the afternoon; and since it was such beautiful, hot summer weather that no old gentleman could possibly be the worse for being taken out upon the river, we droye straight to the Brocas. There we hired a roomy craft, into which we packed our party. Lady Mildred undertook to steer; Lord Staines and Mr. Turner were made comfortable with cushions on either side of her; Sunning, after binding himself by a solemn promise not to jump about, was permitted to crawl into the bows, where he lay flat upon his stomach, as good as gold, the whole time; and Jim taking the stroke oar, we pulled them all up to Surly.

I don't know what Jim may have thought about it, but I confess that to me the distance appeared to have enormously increased since the days of my boyhood. However, we took a good long rest, which some of us—two of us, I believe—employed in strolling away across the grass, while the others sat still and enjoyed the peace and quietness of it all, after the turmoil of London; and then in the cool of the evening we dropped leisurely down stream toward Eton once more.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there was a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Templars Picnic.

The I. O. of Good Templars of Bridgenorth, will hold their annual picnic to Boyds' Picnic Grounds, Bobcaygeon, on Tuesday, Sept. 6th, per steamer Beaubeoge, with the barge Paloma attached. The steamer will leave Bridgenorth at 7.30, arriving at Bobcaygeon at 10.30. Fvery facility will be afforded for the enjoyment of excursionists. Tickets 35c and 25c.

New Elevator.

The new elevator building in connection with Meldrum, Davidson & Co's flour mills has been completed and the Union Jack is flying from the staff erected from the cupolo. It is ninety-five feet high to the top of the cupolo, and its capacity is 60,000 bushels. It is very strongly constructed, being built of plank, ten inches wide laid flat ways one on the other, and nailed firmly into a solid mass. The machinery is now being placed in position and the new addition will be ready for use in a few days.

MEN'S long kip boots at 10 per cent. below regular prices at KIDD'S.

Shooting.

The representatives of Peterborough in the Dominion rifle matches have returned to town well satisfied with their scores. Three marksmen went down and brought home five prizes. Lieut. Hill and Pte. Bell won one each and Pte. Cameron won three, $28 in all. The latter made a very good record. Besides winning these prizes he came within an ace of being in the Wimbleton sixty. Had he done as well at the 600 yard range as at the others he would have been in with a high place. At the 400 yard range only one was ahead of him on the first day's shooting. Between smoke, caused by contiguous bush fires, and a strong wind, it was almost impossible to make a good score on the second day.

Presentation.

The Orillia Packet says:—"Mr. Wm. Kane, who has been with Mr. Mulcahy six years, is about leaving to engage in business at Peterborough. On Wednesday evening, Mr. Mulcahy and the employees of the California Store, presented Mr. Kane with a gold watch chain and seal. He is a punctual and capable business man, retiring but friendly, and has been very popular here. Mr. Kane will doubtless prove a useful citizen of the Plate Glass city, and add one more to the successful Orillians abroad. This is the third in succession who has left the California Store to begin business on their own account." Mr. Kane is well known in Peterborough, but the Packet is mistaken in saying that he is coming here to reside. He will remain in Orillia, entering into business there.

NEW HOSPITAL BUILDING.

A Handsome and Commodious Structure on Paper.

The plans for the new Nicholls Hospital building have been completed by Mr. Blackwell, architect, and are at his office. Tenders will soon be called for when the plans will be open for inspection.

Owing to the present building being unfitted for a hospital, the Board determined on selling the present property and building a new place. The site selected was the "McDonald" property, George street, north. The building will be erected in accordance with the present plans if the contract price is not too high.

The plans show a fine two and a half story building of composite style of architecture. The foundation, which appears above the ground a few inches, will be of quarry stone. The building will be of red brick. The main building is 103 feet long and 43 feet wide. It is divided by a tower which runs up the centre, and the equipoise is maintained by two ornamental dormer windows of large size at each end of the front elevation. The roof is steep pitched, but the material to be used is not yet decided upon.

The wing running in the rear is 56 feet long. The front entrance is attained by passing across a verandah, shadowed by one over head. The vestibule leads to a hall 14 feet wide. On the left side of the hall the matron's office is situated. It leads to a parlor, ball room being 10x16. To the right hand, when passing down the hall is a commodious waiting room, equal in size, almost, to the two rooms on the opposite side. There are two wards on this flat, one at each end, capable of containing six beds each. Coming back to the hall and taking a few steps down, a wide corridor, running from one end of the main building to the other, intersects the hall. Right and left of this corridor from the hall, and on the right side, there are two sets of bath rooms, etc., one for each ward, a waiting room and a dispensary, to which there is a separate entrance from the side. Proceeding down the hall, which runs from the vestibule across the main building and down the rear wing, ninety-nine feet in length altogether, the main staircase is the first thing met with after crossing the corridor. To the right are two dining rooms, one for nurses and one for patients. The continuation of the wing on this flat is divided off into two pantries, two kitchens, coal house, lamp closet, laundry and a disinfecting room.

The second flat is divided off into wards, three private and three public, one of the latter being a maternity ward. On this flat there are also an operating room, situated over the dispensary, and several sets of bath rooms.

The third flat is used for nurses' and servants' bedrooms and for store rooms.

TURNBULL has imported a heavy stock o Winter Mantles. Don't fail to see them.

POLICE COURT.

THE SPECIALTY ACT

MONDAY, Sept. 5.—"Alec" McDonald has had his pound of flesh. He has got square with "Bill" Cummings—in fact a little more than square. First of all, at the time of the scene on Hunter street, "Alec" blackened Cummings' eyes. The latter had "Alec" before the court and had him assessed $5, counting costs and all. On Thursday night Cummings blackened "Alec's" eyes and "Alec" had him up this morning. When the defendant appeared he pleaded guilty in a dignified manner.

The MAGISTRATE remarked that this thing was going too far. Both of them knew the position they were in, and if another case like this came before him he would see that it was the last. He would impose a fine of $5 with $2 costs.

The present standing of the case is as follows:—"Alec" wears a black eye and been assessed $5 by the court; Cummings is just getting over the effect of black eyes and sundry bruises and has been assed $7 by the Court; "Alec" has the horse.

Cummings, when interrogated by some of his friends as to the last affray, says that though he was a Christian he could stand it no longer. McDonald, he says, came around to the Salvation Army barracks and started to provoke him, when he went out and gave him a thrashing.

These two have now become public characters and a description of each will be of interest. Wm. Cummings is a low set man of about twenty-five. He sports a light sandy moustache and wears a navy blue suit and a straw hat. He dosen't like lawyers (who are on the opposite side) for they bother him so much. All he wants is his own (soon afterward) as is evidenced from the expert manner in which he extracted the horse from the stable.

"Alec." is a bright looking youth, but he seems to have sized up his opponent rather on the short side. This conclusion is arrived at by the observance of ecchymosis that lurked around "Alec's" left eye when he arrived in court the other morning. He is not likely to say again that he doesn't need assistance to lay out Cummings. There is a good deal of pluck and determination about him, and if the other fellow gets the best of him he'll have to be an early riser.

For Delicate, Sickly Children.

Scott's Emulsion is unequalled. See what Dr. C. A. Black, of Amherst, N. S. says: "I have been acquainted with Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, with hypophosphites, for years, and considered it one of the finest preparations now before the public. Its pleasant flavor makes it the great favorite for children, and I do highly recommend it for all wasting diseases of children and adults. Put up in 50c and $1 size.

IN A DEBTOR'S CELL.

The Ex-President of the London Bank—Efforts to Set Aside the Capias.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—Mr. Henry Taylor was placed in the debtors' cell in the county gaol at 5 o'clock yesterday evening. The directors of the Ontario Investment Association say that under Mr. Taylor's explanations the audit of the complicated accounts of the Association were progressing favorably and the balance would soon be reached, but his incarceration will set the whole affair into confusion again. Mr. Labatt, of the Ontario Investment Association, says that he and the other directors have done all in their power to secure Mr. Taylor's freedom. Interested lawyers believe that the capias cannot be set aside in London. Some of them hold that the court or judge that issues the capias has not the jurisdiction to set it aside. In the event of the capias being set aside other proceedings may be taken. Mr. Purdon, Mr. Taylor's solicitor, intends making application on Monday morning for a summons to compel the plaintiff to state upon what authority his affidavit for a writ of capias was based. The probability is that before long the inner working of the Ontario Investment Associaton will come boldly to the front, and that not fewer that four citizens will be mixed up in it. Mr. Taylor received quite a number of visitors during Saturday evening and took the situation as cooly as possible. He also received quite a few visitors to day, but was occupied most of the afternoon with Mr. Neiles, the assignee.

CANALS AND RAILWAYS.

The Advantages of Water Communication Recognized.

Comparing the canal to the railway, Mr. Adirondack Murray has come to the conclusion that our future commerce, as it swells in vastness, must be conducted by water facilities not by steam, and that this country must within a hundred years be noted for its water courses and canals as the great highways, along which slowly and cheaply the vast commerce of our teeming millions must be moved. He was set to thinking on this subject by observing a barge, in the Chambly canal, bearing 220,000 feet of sawn lumber. There were sixteen such barges with similar freight, a total of 2,880,000 feet, which could not be carried on land by less than 280 railway cars and a power of ten engines. Each barge was drawn along the canal by two horses. The contrast is striking, and seems to open a new view of the possibilities of our great water route; though canals may not achieve all that Mr. Murray's imagination has pictured.—Monetary Times.

A Lively Volcano.

Izalco, the most active and most attractive of the volcanoes of Central America, never harms anybody. There is a church at its base, its buttressed walls quite eighteen feet thick. It has withstood the rockings and racket of daily quakes through 180 years. The explosions occur at intervals of from three to fifteen minutes, with occasional lapses of from five to six hours. Then the country has ague fits, and San Salvador is shakey, and the prescribed path of earthquakes, which is about 25 miles wide, is "rattled." This, too, is the width of the coal beds along this route of earthquakes. Beneath the coal is the river of oil that is on fire at Izalco. There coal, oil and a stream of water meet. Each explosion of the mountain emits two columns, one of black smoke from the burning oil, the other of white steam from Rio Caliente, which runs out from beneath the mountain. The water is so hot that it peeled the hair off a mule's leg that crossed it. Not only these clouds of smoke and steam are emitted, but great stones, ashes, and vast volumes of lava, but they mostly fall back into the crater.

The farmers of Upper Leitchfield, on the Pontiac and Pacific Junction Railway, threatened to tear up the track and wreck the trains unless prompt settlement is made by the company for right of way, wood contracts and other transactions in which they consider themselves unjustly treated.

BUFFALO BILL'S BIG COWBOY.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—A question will be asked in the House of Commons concerning the severe sentence of six months' imprisonment with hard labor recently passed upon Buffalo Bill's giant cowboy who knocked down the policeman who arrested him for disorderly conduct. A great effort is being made to secure his pardon. St. Stephen's Review publishes a number of letters appealing from the unusual severity of the sentence.

OH, kid, kid, Kidd! why are boots so cheap at your shop?

ALWAYS OPPOSITION.

In yesterday's London Advertiser appeared two editorial articles in the same column. The first article favors Commercial Union, which, it has been explained by Mr. Wiman and other pushers of that scheme, means that Canada shall adopt the United States tariff, which is very much nigher than our own. The second article raves against protection as it mildly exists in Canada, and proves to the Advertiser's satisfaction that a protective tariff is a very bad and wicked thing. Funny paper, the Advertiser.—Hamilton Spectator.

OPENED out at Turnbull's, dozens of beautiful Mantles, suitable for children of all ages.

RESULT OF THE C. P. R.

One of the most important results of the opening of the C. P. R. is the increased consumption of Canadian made articles instead of the American and English goods which previously had this market almost, if not entirely, to themselves.—Vancouver News-Advertiser.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

The attendance at the Collegiate Institute was 164 on Monday, the largest that it has ever been. The Principal and his staff held a night session on Monday evening to decide upon promotions. They adjourned at half past ten o'clock, after being in session three hours and a half. The result of their deliberations was made known to the pupils this morning. Some were put forward and some were put back. The Institute promises to do excellent work this term.

Imperial Federation League.

The Peterborough Branch of the Imperia Federation League will hold its first meeting after the summer recess on Thursday evening, Sept. 8th, at 8 o'clock, in the Foresters' Hall, George street, opposite the Golden Lion. The subject of our tariff policy is to be discussed. The notices contain an invitation to intending members and those who are in accord with the objects of the League. There should be a full attendance of members and their friends. 3d57

Bishop Dowling at Fort Arthur.

The Port Arthur Sentinel of Sept. 2nd says:—"Right. Rev. Thos. Joseph Dowling, D. D., Bishop of Peterborough, accompanied by his secretary, Rev. P. Rudkins, arrived in Fort Arthur this morning on the Alberta and will remain a few days. This is his lordship's first visit to this part of the diocese since his appointment some eight months ago." In another paragraph the same paper says:—"The sacrament of confirmation will be administered in St. Andrew's church on Sunday morning next by his lordship the bishop of Peterborough. It is expected that his lordship will be presented with an address by the congregation. The musical service will be of a high order. This afternoon his lordship visited the schools and hospital here. He will visit Fort William before leaving, for the purpose of blessing Father Baxter's new church and visiting the Indian Mission."

THE GREAT ENGLISH POET.

Return of the August Personage to Peterborough.

Early this morning, when the bright sunbeams struggled through the heavy mists, when the first signs of stir appeared on the thoroughfares of the town, and when the little roosters were blowing their shrill clarions, the Great English Poet, Mr. J. Dickson Morgan, stepped off the morning train at the Canadian Pacific Railway station. He looked around to see if any of his friends were out to meet him, and was delighted to find that, though he had not given the slightest inkling of his return to Peterborough, there were two persons there to greet him.

Mr. Morgan says he is much pleased with the town. As to his future he is rather vague. He is at present waiting for a cablegram from the old country. If it is of sufficient pecuniary importance he intends to go into the show business. He is of opinion that the good people of Peterborough are sadly catered for in this respect.

In regard to his health he is in first-rate condition, the only ailment he suffers from being a strain on the left thumb, the result, he says, of hitting a man with the left instead of with the right hand.

He says that the Examiner gave him a very favorable notice, but the Morning Times used him barbarously. He will, he says, supply the Examiner with poetry for a trifle.

He regards the following dedicatory verses as his finest production. The second last verse, he says, sounds rather as if he was bragging, but he explains this by saying that a man must blow his own horn now a-days.

His poem is as follows:—

For nearly eight long months I've been Absent from this fair land;
But many a happy day I've seen
On that far English strand.

I left my home to roam again
To Peterborough town,
And so I crossed the sullen main
In my academic gown.

"My academic gown," 'tis fun;
I have no college gown,
But still you shall see sun
Lit our splendid town.

Hail Peterborough, once again!
And peace to all my friends;
Pray welcome me from o'er the main,
Good luck my act attends.

I gave one look to England's shores,
One lingering, sad good-bye;
Open to me Canada's doors,
Nor ask the reason why.

I am the poet, great and good,
My name you know full well;
I ramble in the field and wood;
I come with you to dwell.

A couple of verses comes in the manuscript here which Mr. Morgan does not like. He simply run the pen through them It then goes on:

Thinking of my former visit,
My breast swells with true emotion,
Knowing my particular merit,
I've crossed the playful ocean.

When in England I had letters,
From a lord who sent me money,
Though I do respect my betters,
Yet I like the well earned honey.

"Well earned honey" dollars gotten
From my friends in Peterborough,
Money money, buys the cotton,
And I do the business thorough.

I can act, can sing, recite,
Lecture, love and be polite,
Humorous letters quickly indite,
Place my name in black and white.

Over the sea! the deep blue sea,
Thither I go with grateful heart,
Coming to Peterborough to thee
Cupid hath smote me with his dart.

It is reported that Councillor Stenson, who supplied the poet with a railway ticket for New York last spring is after his scalp. Mr. Morgan would do well to mollify him with a few verses.

RUSSO-TURKISH COMMISSION.

What the Premier of Bulgaria Says Regarding It.

SOFIA, Sept. 5.—M. Stambuloff, the Prime Minister, in an interview regarding the proposal of Russia to have a joint Russo-Turkish Commission visit Bulgaria and arrange her affairs, says that if General Ernroth and Arten Effendi came as private persons they would be admitted into Bulgaria, but not otherwise. Bulgaria was alive to Russia's objects, and would repel any interference in her internal affairs by any power whatever. If Russia liked to send General Enroth to Bulgaria as her diplomatic agent that would be different. Both he and Arten Effendi would be courteously received as duly accredited diplomats.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 5.—The Porte has learned that the Austrian Government is strenously trying to arrange for Prince Ferdinand's withdrawal from Bulgaria.

TERRIBLE BUSH FIRES.

A Tract One Mile in Length Burned Over, Near Loughborough Lake.

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 5.—On Wednesday last fire raged over a tract of land one mile in width on the north side of Loughborough Lake. Forests and fields in its course were laid waste, and fear was entertained by the residents that their houses and barns would become a prey to the flames. The fire is supposed to have been started by boys while fishing a week ago last Sunday. A correspondent says it was the most terrific blaze he ever witnessed. People living in Battersea went over to assist in checking it. They found it sweeping over the farms of Messrs. Teeples, Hebron, Carson, Bills, Campion, Hunter, Convery, Sleith, and several others. In many places the ground was bare and cleared of everything. A great amount of damage was done before it was checked. The rain of yesterday had the effect of checking it. In Mr. Holmes' place, near Spectacle Lake, the fire caught a large number of big elm trees, and they caused a great illumination. Hundreds of birds and squirrels were killed, and a number of porcupines, seeing their danger, climbed the elm trees, and were burned while in their branches.

FIRE IN A THEATRE.

One Hundred and Thirty Persons Burned to Death—Terrible Scenes.

LONDON, Sept, 5.—The Theatre Royal, Exeter, took fire this evening during a performance of "Romany Rye." The occupants of the pit, after an awful struggle, escaped, but many of them were greatly injured. There was only one exit from the gallery, and the rush there was a terrific scene. Scores were trodden under foot and suffocated. A fire escape was brought to a window, and many inside were rescued. Sixty corpses have been removed. The injured survivors were sent to a hospital. The mortality is estimated at 100.

The Theatre Royal was built after the latest designs and was elaborately fitted, being considered one of the prettiest in the kingdom. There was a full house to-night and everything was all right until the end of the third act at half past ten, when a drop scene fell, and in a moment the whole stage was a mass of fire. A wild panic ensued. The occupants of the stalls, pits and dress circle escaped after the dreadful crushing, many being badly bruised. The actors and actresses were in their dressing rooms when the fire began, and all escaped. The fire originated in the flies and spread rapidly, filling the theatre with a dense smoke. The occupants of the upper circle and gallery rushed to the windows and screamed frantically. Many jumped from the window and were injured. Others were rescued with ladders. The fire blazed fiercely, lighting up the whole city. People were soon flocking to the scene in thousands, inquiring for friends.

The scene outside the theatre when the fire broke out was an awful one. Some men implored the audience to be cool, but it was impossible to check the frantic rush. The theatre hose was brought into use in a few minutes, but the water had little effect on the flames. The actors and actresses were taken from the windows with the aid of ladders. They lost everything except what they wore at the time. Up to the present 130 bodies have been recovered. They are almost unrecognizable. Thirty injured survivors have been taken to the hospitals. The fire burned through the night and the search for the bodies proceds slowly. In many cases every shred of clothing is burned off, and the bodies look black and raw. There are various reports as to the origin of the fire. It is only certain that the flames broke out in the scene shifters' department. Those who escaped say that the special exist was promptly opened.

Two hundred pairs of kid boots, and more than half of the Kidd's lide, left yet at R. J. KIDD'S boot and shoe store.

Open to All.

Tue race for the hotel-keepers purse of $200, to take place at the Central Exhibition, is open to both trotters and pacers. The purse is divided into $100 for first place, $60 for second, and $40 for third. Entries must be made with the Secretary by October 1st. An entrance fee of ten per cent. will be charged. d57

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth It relieves the little suffers at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for Diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind

LABOR CONGRESS.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—At a Trades Union Congress at Swansea a resolution condemning the Government for suppressing public meetings in Ireland was passed by 85 to 7.

DEATH OF AN EVICTED WOMAN.

DUBLIN, Sept. 5.—Mrs. Maloney, a bedridden woman who was evicted at Herbertstown on Wednesday last, died on Saturday. All the shopkeepers in Bruff closed their shutters out of respect for deceased. An inquest will be held.

KAISAR AND CZAR.

BERLIN, Sept. 5.—One of the Emperor William's reasons for abandoning his Konigsberg journey was to reserve his strength for his meeting with the Czar at Stettin on the 12th inst. In case the weather is propitious, the Emperor will accompany the German squadron to meet the Czar and the Russian squadron off Swinewendl.

THE SUEZ CANAL.

PARIS, Sept. 5.—The Temps says M. Waddington, the French Ambassador at London, has delivered to Lord Salisbury France's reply to the latest British proposals regarding the neutralization of the Suez Canal. The reply amounts practically to the acceptance of an agreement with England. Only a few details remain to be settled. The entente includes an understanding relative to the New Hebrides.

The Knights of Labor.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—A Philadelphia despatch says: There has been a marked change of front in the attitude of General Master Workman Powderly towards the Trades Unions and the opponents of the present administration of the Knights of Labor since the recent elections of delegates to the Minneapolis Convention, when anti-administration men were chozen by nearly all of the more powerful districts assemblies throughout the country. It is said Mr. Powderly is trying to throw the blame for the condition of the order on the members of the board, and has made overtures of peace to the prominent leaders of the Opposition.

Collapse of a Strike.

St. Louis, Sept. 5.—The Great stove moulders' strike, which began in this city last March spreading over the entire country, and was kept up here by the aid of the International Moulders' Union long after it succumbed elsewhere, has finally collapsed.

The Thistle.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Capt. Barr, of the Thistle, has finished all his arrangements for the trial races, and the yatch is at her anchorage off Thompkinsville.

IS IT SIR RICHARD?

We would not attach the slighest credit to any statement by the Detroit News fabricator as to Sir Richard Cartwright's opinions, but as Sir Richard's political friends seem to accept the report as true it is possible that this mendacious reporter may for once have blundered upon the truth. If so Sir Richard, who looks upon Canadian manufacturers as robbers, must have changed his views greatly to advocate the acceptance from the United States of a still higher tariff and therefore still more outrageous robbery. He cannot plead that under Commercial Annexation we would pay no duty on United States manufactures, for by his theory whether any duty is paid or not the manufacturer robs the consumer to the amount of the duty—a duty even if not paid is in his parlance "a tax." Then again we can hardly recognise the old Sir Richard in the remark that "Great Britain does not benefit much from Canada now, since high tariffs have been put on against her." Surely Sir Richard cannot have forgotten that (according to him) it is the Canadian consumer not the British manufacturer who pays the duty, and her exports to us have not only increased, but mostly in high priced luxuries on which there is the greatest profit. Again the statement attributed to him that "the loss of revenue will be met by direct taxation" will be rather startling to the Canadian farmers.

Is this our old Sir Richard or is it a mere figment of the Detroit fiction writer? We would think the latter but that it is accepted as true by Sir Richard's friends and is tacitly admitted by himself. Can anyone give us more light on this subject as to which we feel considerably interested?

TRUE LOYALTY.

Those who believe in maintaining or drawing closer the bonds between Canada and the rest of the Empire are constantly sneered at by those who are advocating annexation, a Zollverein or fads of that nature, as being "loyal to the Mother Country." The object is to convey the impression that those who value the British Empire are not good Canadians, but are ready to prefer the interests of Great Britain to those of Canada. This is a false charge. Those who decline to cut adrift from the rest of the Empire, prefering even closer connection, are more truly loyal to Canada than those who are always trying to take her from under the old flag. Our loyalty is to the Empire of which our Dominion forms an important part, and we are no more especially loyal to England, Ireland, Scotland or the Isle of Man than we expect them to be loyal to us. We would have every portion of the Empire loyal to itself and to every other part, the duty being reciprocal and common to all. This idea of a comprehensive empire by no means prevents a Canadian from a warmer regard for Canada or devotion to its special interests. Those who wish to carry us out of the Empire and to make us tributary to a foreign nation, are those who are really disloyal not only to the British Empire but to Canada herself.

THE ROTTEN EGG PARTY.

The Toronto Globe and its friends are triumphing because at a picnic at Morris, Manitoba, the Conservative speakers absented themselves because they had warning that the "patriots" would turn out in force with rotten eggs, and "Ed. McKeown, the slugger, appeared on the scene and took the part of the Province." Then the friends of the slugger, of the rotten eggers and of the Toronto Globe, had it all their own way, could call those who respected the law "blasphemous liars," "demagogues" who led people "by the snout" and "whipped curs," and in fact triumphed after their nature. We obtain our information from the Toronto Globe, which is in ecstasies over the triumph of its friends and associates.

PICKETT'S CHARGE.

EXTRACTS FROM THE ACCOUNT GIVEN BY GEN. DEVEREAUX.

How the Nineteenth Massachusetts and the Tammany Regiment Behaved in One of the Most Trying Contests of the War—At the Apex.

Suddenly a single gun from the enemy's lines broke the oppressive stillness. It was plainly a signal. No sooner had its report roused the attention than every gun on Seminary ridge opened in one grand salvo with concentric fire on Gibbon's division. The shot from that signal gun struck Lieut. Sherman S. Robinson, of the Nineteenth Massachusetts, cutting his body nearly in two, killing him instantly. From this time on for two hours the roaring of the cannon and bursting of shells from both sides was so incessant that the ear could not distinguish individual explosions. It was one grand raging clash of ceaseless sound.

The firing of cannon ceased almost as suddenly as it began, and Pickett's splendid division moved out to cross the interval between the two low lying ridges occupied by the opposing armies, on that magnificent charge which has extorted the admiration, unqualified, of their foes, must be ever memorable in history, and which won the position aimed for, but could not hold it. The story of this grand effort has been many times repeated, and I shall limit myself to the relation of what occurred after Pickett had crossed the Emmetsburg pike and came sweeping up the slope, still carrying everything before him as if borne forward by all ruling fate. The knoll bearing the historic Little Oak grove slopes off well toward the south and east. From the left of my line (two detached regiments of Hall's brigade) Col. Mallon and myself had a view which compassed a good deal of the ground even directly in front of that elevation.

Standing there, looking on the grand array of that majestic charge, was it mere impulse that stirred me to move forward my men nearer yet to that "Single Line of Blue?" Or was it prompting from a higher source that determined the action? One can only tell when all secrets are unveiled. However, it was done. Plain it was that we could not escape some part of the tragedy to follow. It might be a desperate one, and what was the material upon which reliance must be placed to meet and perform the duty? The Nineteenth Massachusetts had been trained from the start in a discipline as stern as that of Cromwell's "Ironsides." Nevertheless, it had never come within the range of my experience to know a body of troops where mutual confidence of officers and men existed in higher degree.

Today the Nineteenth Massachusetts has with it the Forty-second New York, Tammany's contribution to the country's cause. In them was all the traditional fun and fight, Paddy's heritage, which centuries of oppression cannot rob him of nor repress. They were in excellent condition under the firm rule of Mallon.

Col. Mallon and myself could view the whole scene, standing up as we were, and were probably the only persons close enough readily to distinguish all which occurred, and so entirely free from personal participation as to be able intelligently to judge it. We see that Webb cannot firmly hold his men against the shock of that fierce charge, though he may throw himself with reckless courage in front to face the storm, and beg, threaten and command. Hall's right, overlapped, has to sag back with sullen fury, swaying to the rear from the pressure, but swaying forward again like ocean surges against a rock. This creates disorder, heightened by the men of Harrow's brigade surging also in that direction, apparently without orders or concert, but guided by some instinct of hurrying to the rescue. Everything was in confusion, regimental organization was lost, ranks were eight or ten deep, pushing, swaying, struggling, refusing to yield, but almost impotent for good. A great gap yawns immediately between Webb and Hall. The entire width of the Oak grove and for some distance to the right is stripped of defense on our line. Every gun on our front there is silenced. Woodruff, Cushing, Brown, Rorty and every other commissioned officer, almost without exception, of the respective batteries, is dead or disabled and Gibbon badly wounded. Was this devoted Second corps, whose proud boast it was that it "never lost a gun or a color," to succumb at last?

"Mallon, we must move." Just then a headlong rush of horses' feet, spurred to the utmost, came up the hollow behind from the direction of the Baltimore pike. I turned. There, looking the very embodiment of the god of war, rode Hancock, the "Superb." I shouted as he nearly trampled on my men, still lying down and as yet unseen by him. He threw his horse on his haunches. "See," I cried, "their colors; they have broken through. Let me get in there." His characteristic answer fitted time and place, and he shot like an arrow past my left toward Hall's struggling lines, receiving in a few seconds the wound that swept him from his saddle and so nearly cost him his life. Meanwhile Mallon, springing from my side, was instantly with his men, and both regiments on the double quick moved side by side to fill that fearful gap.

The two lines came together with a shock which stopped both and caused a slight rebound. For several minutes they faced and fired into each other at a distance (which I carefully measured after the fight) a little short of fifteen paces. Everything seemed trembling in the balance. Whichever side could get a motion forward must surely win. Gen. Alexander S. Webb I couldn't see. Just then I felt rather than saw Hall, as he appeared at my side. "We are steady now," he said. "Sure; but we must move," I replied. At the instant a man broke through my lines and thrust a rebel battle flag into my hand. He never said a word and darted back. It was Corporal Joseph H. De Castro, one of my color bearers. He had knocked down a color bearer in the enemy's line with the staff of the Massachusetts state colors, seized the falling flag and dashed with it to me. Mallon had by this time wrapped round the right of the grove a little. The opposing lines were standing as if rooted, dealing death into each other, how long it is impossible to say with exactness. There they stood and wouldn't move.

All of a sudden a strange, resistless impulse seemed to urge the Union men. I can compare it only to a Titan's stride. Our lines seemed to actually leap forward. There was at once an indescribable rush of thick, hurrying scenes. I held the blunted apex of the re-entering angle, which was the appearance made by our lines. A yell. A shout. My line seemed to open as if by magic. It was not flight, however. A flood of unarmed, defenseless men poured through. They almost ran over me. The remnant of Pickett's gallant men abandon that nearly invincible charge, and Gettysburg translated reads, "A Nation Saved."—Magazine of American History.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

We dined together at the old Christopher and drank to the memory of former friends in the best chamber that that establishment could produce. Probably the memory of Lord Staines' school friends was cherished only by a very small band of survivors, but the old man ran over their names and their exploits, one by one, relating the merry life that he had led with them and the astounding breaches of discipline of which they had been guilty, until at length Mr. Turner, taking heart of grace, ventured to doubt whether the doings described would have been tolerated by any head master worthy of his high and responsible post.

"My dear fellow," said Lord Staines, with superb contempt, "what do you know about it? Head master indeed! But of course you don't understand Eton traditions. You were educated at Harrow, or some such place, weren't you?"

But Mr. Turner was flushed with wine, and did not choose to be sat upon. "Harrovians may be poor sort of creatures in your opinion, Lord Staines," he returned; "but at any rate we can generally show an eleven good enough to beat yours at cricket." Which was an extremely rude thing to say, besides being very false.

I don't know whether the harmony of the evening might not have been seriously interfered with by this unexpected onslaught of the lamb upon the lion, had not Jim jumped up, saying that if we were going to take a look round Eton we really ought not to lose any more time. Obviously, a single vehicle could not contain us all; so Jim and Lady Mildred walked on ahead, while the rest of us packed ourselves into a fly and were driven as far as the entrance of the school yard. Here Lord Staines insisted upon getting out, and managed, with the help of my arm and his stick, to hobble for some distance across the flag stones which have been worn smooth by the passing feet of so many generations. Mr. Turner and Sunning wandered away, it was getting late and close upon lock up time, so that we had the place to ourselves.

The old man, who was leaning upon my arm, paused and looked about him a little wistfully.

"I recollect," he said, "coming down here one election Saturday. It was just before Bracknell left; and you and Leigh were leaving at the same time, you know. I walked back from Upper Club with Bracknell, and I remember that we stopped and talked for a moment just about the very spot where we are standing now. He told me he had backed my horse, Jupiter Tonans, by Thunderer, for the Leger, and I warned him that he had better hedge, because, as I dare say you are aware, Thunderers never stay; and sure enough, Jupiter Tonans finished third. I thought at the time that he would have stood a little more preparation—but no matter. Well, you know, Maynard, I suspect that what applies to horses applies pretty much to ourselves. One hears a good deal about education and training, and example, and this, that, and the other; but when all's said and done, it's breeding that has the last word. Like father, like son. I have been reckless and extravagant all my life; he has followed in my footsteps, and the upshot of it is that we're both deuced nearly ruined now."

I said I was very sorry to hear it.

Lord Staines shook his head. "Bracknell ought to have married money. I always told him so. He chose to marry the parson's daughter, and it caused a coolness between us, as you will remember. I could have overlooked his imprudence and disobedience; but, you see, I didn't think he had behaved well in the matter—no; I didn't think he had behaved well."

"It doesn't much signify now," I remarked.

"Not much now, perhaps; but it was hard upon poor Leigh at the time, and he felt it more than I should have expected. He was speaking to me about it not long since. He is a good fellow, that; I wish he had a little more money. I looked at him and Mildred this afternoon, and I thought to myself, 'I wish he had a little more money!' Only fancy, you know."

"I suppose he hasn't nearly enough money?" I hazarded.

"Oh, Lord bless your soul, no!" answered Lord Staines. "Nothing like it!—nothing like it! No—she will have to marry Beauchamp; and, indeed, she might do worse. Come, Maynard, we'll go on and get into the carriage again; we haven't much more than time to catch the train."

So we moved slowly away to Weston's Yard, where the fly was waiting for us, and where the other members of our small party were already assembled. Jim climbed up on to the box and we were driven away to the station, Sunning falling asleep before half the distance had been accomplished, and none of us talking much. It was natural that we should be a little tired and disinclined for conversation on the return journey. I myself, I believe, had a nap in the corner of the saloon carriage, and even if I had been awake I could not have scrutinized the countenances of my fellow travelers in that dim light; but when we alighted in the full glare of Paddington station, I could not help noticing how pale Jim was, and that Lady Mildred's eyes were suspiciously red.

Lord Staines shook hands with me on the platform. "Good night, Maynard," he said, "good night, and thank you for giving us all a very happy day."

Poor old fellow! I think it was the last happy day of his life. His life is over now, and I suppose one cannot say that it was a well spent one; yet, who knows the truth about any man's life? Perhaps, when all secrets are revealed, it may be found that some of those whose statues look down upon us in public places, and whose names are recorded in history, have a less favorable account to show than this old nobleman, who was worldly and a spendthrift, who was of little use to the community at large, who took no active part in politics, who excelled in nothing except, to a limited extent, in the breeding of race horses; but who never, to my knowledge, was guilty of an ungenerous or dishonorable action, and who, as it seemed to me, gave away more than he received, both in the way of money and affection. He was by no means a show specimen of the order to which he belonged, but he possessed some of its good qualities. The coming democracy will doubtless be able to exhibit all these to the world, combined with others into the bargain, and, in the meantime, I regret to say that I have more than once heard Lord Staines spoken of as a standing argument for the abolition of hereditary legislators.

CHAPTER XI.

I felt tolerably sure that I should not have to wait long before receiving a visit and a full confession from Jim. When, however, he duly presented himself at my chambers, his avowal did not prove to be in all respects what I had anticipated.

"Harry, old fellow," he began, after he had cast himself down upon my sofa and had assumed a most woe begone air, "I've lost my self respect."

"I shall be very pleased to assist you in looking about for it," I replied cheerfully, "and I dare say, between us, we shall manage to discover it again. It was mislaid, I presume, somewhere in Windsor or Eton on the afternoon or evening of the 20th instant?"

He nodded. "Well, yes; I suppose so. At any rate, I wasn't quite certain of the loss until then. Of course, with your sharp eyes, you saw long ago how matters were going with me; but I give you my honor that I didn't. Not that it would have made any difference if I had; for one can't help these things. If you had asked me, any time during the last six years, whether I could ever love another woman as I loved the one whom I was once so nearly marrying, I should have laughed at you. Yet that is what has happened to me; and I confess that it makes me feel a little uneasy and ashamed."

I could not see why a man who has remained faithful all his life to a woman who has deceived him and thrown him over should have any particular right to respect himself for being such a dolt, and I said so; but Jim observed that I didn't seem quite to catch his meaning.

"I owe nothing to Hilda," he said, "and it stands to reason that if one has been jilted, one is free. It isn't to her that I have been untrue; it's to myself. I'm too stupid to explain myself; but six years is a longish time, you know, and to find myself madly in love again, after having been quite positive for six years that that was the one sensation which I never could possibly experience a second time, is a little upsetting. It makes me feel that I am not the man I took myself for, and also that I have been a most stupendous fool."

"You have indeed, my dear fellow," I agreed, with ready sympathy.

"Yes, because, now that I look back upon it all, I am convinced that I never was really in love with Hilda. I thought I was, but it seems to have been a gigantic mistake from first to last; and what sort of opinion can one have of anybody who can make such mistakes as that?"

"Be comforted," I replied; "your case is not without numerous precedents, and so far as you have stated it, it seems to me to be one for plenary absolution. At the same time, if you are so very anxious to frame an indictment against yourself, I think that might be managed without going so far afield. I don't blame you for falling in love with Lady Mildred, for that you couldn't help; but, since you must know as well as I do that you can't marry her, it might perhaps have been a little more considerate not to tell her that you loved her."

FROM ALL OVER.

Acting on the advice of his physicians, Emperor William has abandoned his proposed journey of Konigsberg to meet the Czar.

The Government telegraph line between Battleford and Edmonton, N. W. T., has been completed and through communication to the former place effected.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

TAXES IN THE BIG TOWN

Less Than Half the Rate Called for by Neighbors.

PETERBOROUGH'S PROSPERITY

CAN PAY ALL DEBTS AND HAVE A $167,000 TO THE GOOD.

A Hint to Other Places—The Council Jubilant Over the Low Rate—The Finance Minister's Budget Speech—Councillor McNeil and the Fire Department.

A regular meeting of the Town Council was held on Monday evening. There were present:—Councillors Douglass, Moore, Kendry, Menzies, Yelland, Kelly, McNaughton, Davidson, Hartley and Stenson.

In the absence of the Mayor Councillor Kendry was elected to the chair.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The following communications were read:—

Mrs. E. Cookson and 12 others asking for a sidewalk and gas lamp.—Street and Bridge Committee.

From Wm. Keneally making application for billiard license, and asking half years rebate as half the year is expired.—Granted, with one on the same conditions for Martin Connors.

ACCOUNTS.

The following accounts were presented:—

J. P. Hurley, Railway Tickets	2 40
P. Heffernan, Repairing snowploughs	7 65
Nichols Hospital, for three months	145 39

The accounts were referred to the Finance Committee excepting that of R. H. Adams.

The Mayor entered the Chamber and Councillor Kendry proffered the chair.

Communications were read in continuation as follows:—

From the Fire Underwriters' Association, stating that Peterborough had been placed in Class B. insurance rating, and hoping that the town would always maintain the present standing of the Fire Department.—Received.

From Jas. Stratton and 80 others, asking for a drinking fountain supplied with pure water for public use.—Received.

From Mr. E. B. Edwards, giving his opinion in the matter of the action impending against the town at the instance of Mr. Snowden.—Received.

From J. Stewart, applying for a position on the police force.—Committee on Appointments.

From the Horticultural Society, tendering their thanks to the Council for the donation given toward erecting the electric light tower in the Horticultural Gardens.—Received.

FINANCE.

Councillor DAVIDSON read the following report:—

To the Mayor and Councillors of the Town of Peterborough,

GENTLEMEN,—Your Finance Committee beg leave to report and recommend the payment of the following accounts:—

Councillor DAVIDSON, as Finance Minister, was the first to comment on the town's condition. The low rate was a subject of congratulation to all. He referred to the higher rate last year, but charged that to the loss of license money, and not to any mismanagement on the part of the Council. It would also be remembered that too much money was raised, a surplus of $3,000 being carried over. The rate was reduced this year by three mills, which was quite an item. He then proceeded to check over the expenditure items, showing where savings had been made, and how far the Council were responsible for increases. It was customary for the Council to get the blame for a high rate of taxation, though the Council controlled only about half of the expenditure. Take the town rate controlled by the Council: last year it was $24,150. This year it was $15,700. The interest account would this year be $200, when it was $700 last year, and if it were not for the peculiar way in which the Simcoe Street bridge was being built, the contractor being paid as he went along, the interest account would be almost nil. The Nicholls Hospital demand was lighter, this not being controlled by the Council. He referred to the saving effected by retiring debentures drawing seven per cent., and floating new ones at 5 per cent. The Collegiate Institute expense was not controlled by the Council, neither the Public School expense, and the hydrant account was not controlled by the Council, the vote of the people settling that business. The cost of elections, too, was not controlled by the Council. He commented at length upon the Fire Department. The expense in this Department was not up to that of last year, counting the revenue obtained from Ashburnham and the amount of work done by corporation teams on the streets. The Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, Councillor McNeil, not being present to speak for himself, he would take the liberty to say a few words on the efficiency of the Department. He thought Councillor McNeil deserving of the greatest credit for bringing the Department to such a high state of efficiency. He had also succeeded in placing the town in Class B. rating. This meant a saving of at least $2,000 a year to the town—almost enough to run the whole Fire Department. Speaking for the firm he belonged to, McKee & Davidson, it would be a saving to them of $30 a year. As soon as the Class B. was announced they had dropped $2,000 insurance. Councillor McNeil deserved great credit for the way in which he managed this. After starting he never rested till he had accomplished his object. He complimented the Treasurer upon his managing the Town finances 9 months out of the year without having to pay interest. The Nicholls Hospital account was $500 less than that of last year. He was glad to say that Mrs. Nicholls with great magnanimity had increased the endowment by $15,000, and had advanced that sum for the building of a new hospital building. As it was now arranged the present building was unsuitable. It was not up the requirements asked by Government, and could not draw a Government grant. When the new building was completed the Hospital would draw $600 a year of Government money. He thought $14,000 a large amout for the running expenses of the Collegiate Institute and Public Schools, and if the trustees were directly responsible to the people he thought they would be a little less lavish.

The MAYOR (Chairman of the Board of Education),—Two thousand of that is interest on debentures.

Councillor DAVIDSON,—No.

The MAYOR,—Twelve thousand is all we asked for.

Councillor KENDRY confirmed this.

The MAYOR explained that the large amount asked for this year was due to the demands made by the Educational Department. They were threatened with the suspension of the Government grant if they did not comply with the demands of the Department to stock the library, the laboratory and incur other expenses.

Councillor DAVIDSON, continuing, discussed the Street and Bridge account. It was due to having a competent Inspector that the amount was reduced, while the town was still growing fast. He could say too that the streets and bridges were a credit to the town. They recognised Inspector Pope's ability by giving him a full years' salary for nine months work. The Street and Bridge account was large, but it necessarily must be, considering the stretch of sidewalks and streets, and the fact that thirteen bridges across the creek, as well as the black bridge, had to be kept in order, and that the town had to pay its proportion to keep up the Ashburnham and Locks bridges. Five or six of the creek bridges would have to be built anew this year. He summed up by stating that out of the entire levy of $61,328, the Council controlled $25,810, so that even in case of a high rate being struck the Council were not altogether to blame. But the rate this year was such as to give the utmost satisfaction to all. He thereupon presented a statement showing the assets and liabilities of the town as follows:

ASSETS.

Midland R'y 1st mortgage bonds	$57,200 00
Interest	3,432 00
Debentures held by Commissioners	41,000 00
Cash in hand	9,554 00
Market Block and Market	53,000 00
Fire Hall, hose tower and stable	4,000 00

Fire Engine, Hose waggon, etc.	6,500 00
Nicholls Hospital	15,000 00
Endowment of same	15,000 00
	$352,986 00

LIABILITIES.

Municipal Loan Fund	$72,000 00
School Debentures	27,500 00
General Town Debentures	84,000 00
	$185,500 00
Assets	$352,986 00
Liabilities	185,500 00
Balance	$167,486 00

He proceeded to state that, leaving out the assets altogether, the indebtedness of the town was very small, about 5 per cent. of the assessed value. Toronto's indebtedness was 10 per cent. of the assessed value, while neighboring towns could not compare with Peterborough at all. Some of them were not even in a position to pay interest on their borrowed money. He moved the first reading of the by-law to authorize the levying of rates.

In the Committee of the Whole, at the second reading, others offered remarks.

Councillor MOORE, after congratulating Councillor Davidson and the Council on the very low rate they had asked for, he went on to say that the fact that the reduction of $9,000 had been made in the controllable expenditure amply showed that the Council was practising economy. Among the items he authorized was the street and bridge account, $1,000 less than that of last year, and $2,000 less than that of the year before last. It afforded him great gratification to see also that the streets were better kept now than ever they had been, notwithstanding that the cost of keeping them in good order was reduced. This state of things was due in a large measure to their competent Inspector, Mr. Pope. The extra assessor this year, the unfavorable decision of the arbitrators in the matter of administration of justice, had each added considerably to the expenditure. He was glad therefore considering necessary increased demands from other sources, that the Chairman of the Finance committee could announce such a low rate. It was a matter of sincere congratulation. As far as the town's financial standing was concerned it was far ahead of any he knew of—indeed he believed it was ahead of any in Canada. All of the town's around, Cobourg, Port Hope and Lindsay, had tax rates ranging from twenty to twenty-six mills on the dollar. He believed that Peterborough was the cheapest place to live in there was anywhere. It was most desirable, at any rate, from the point of low taxes. As far as schools were concerned they could hardly pay too much for efficient schools and they could hardly pay too little for inefficient schools. If the standing taken by the Peterborough boys was a criterion the schools were doing good work. Several of them during the last two years had taken high places. He referred to the public parks and said that their value was not underestimated. Once more he congratulated the Chairman of the Finance Committee on his splendid showing.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON congratulated Councillors Davidson, Moore, the Mayor, and other members of the Finance Committee on their bringing forward such an announcement. Every member had worked hard of late to present the Council with this statement. He compared the rate with that of Lindsay, showing that Peterborough's tax was less than half.

The MAYOR made a lengthy speech, going over a good deal of the ground covered by Councillors Moore and Davidson. He resented the award given by the arbitrators as to the administration of justice, gaol repairs, etc. A large amount of money had been spent on the gaol and the town was called on to pay its share without having one word to say as to how this money should be spent. It was the law, of course, but he thought it a very unfair law. He had been speaking to some members of the County Council about it and if ever a similar thing was done he was satisfied that the town would have a voice for the asking. Referring to the Nicholls Hospital, he said that a new building was about to be built, which would be a credit to the town, and which would cost them less to maintain on account of its being capable of drawing a Government grant. The Hospital would be a credit to the town and to the good lady who kindly gave so much towards it. He did not think her kindness was appreciated as it should be. Coming to the rate of taxation, he said that, in comparison with Lindsay, Port Hope and other places it was extremely low. In those places property was assessed away above its value. In Lindsay he had a piece of property assessed for $3,000 when he had offered to sell it over and over again for $2,600. In Port Hope a piece of property was assessed for $600 for which he could not get $400. As everybody knew the property in Peterborough was not assessed up to its value, except the poor man's little piece of property. He did not know how to get over this. The assessors knew exactly what the poor man's lot was worth, while men with large incomes often got off light. Unless these men came out and told the assessor honestly that they weren't assessed enough he didn't know how to cure the evil. He considered Councillor Davidson's valuation of town property quite within the mark. He compared the market block with other property and urged the commissioners when they received the Midland Railway money to buy the property out or compel the leaseholders to pay a higher rental. The South reserve lands question was, he thought, going to be settled without costing the town much. Mr. Hall had made application for half an acre, which he said he would fill in, and Mr. Carnegie was going to fill in a half acre. This would be a nucleus for others. He took great pride in speaking of the parks and laid great stress upon the importance of making the town attractive. Toronto had made great progress in that direction. Peterborough was near Toronto and effort would have to be made to prevent trade going there. So far as he observed there was not much Peterborough trade going to Toronto. Of course there was some, and always would be some as long as the Scott Act was in force here, (Laughter.) He repeated his statement about the school system, and stated that greater expenditure would have to be made very soon to provide the required accommodation. He announced that the commissioners would clear off the whole of the Municipal Loan Fund indebtedness, $73,000, in 1893. He thought Peterborough would be the only town in Canada to do it.

The first clause was passed.

At the reading of the 5th clause Councillor Moore moved, seconded by Councillor Douglass—That one per cent. per annum be added to the taxes paid after 1st December, no less than one month's interest to be charged in any case and that a broken month be counted as a full month.

The motion was supported and attacked by various Councillors. The discussion lasted for upwards of an hour. It was rejected.

Councillor MOORE said that he would ask for the yeas and nays at the third reading.

On the third reading the yeas and nays were called for. All the Councillors recorded their votes except Councillor McNaughton, who had gone out. On coming in Councillor Moore taunted him with having shirked the vote. He called on the Mayor to compel Councillor McNaughton to vote.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON said he could not be compelled to vote, and he defied the Mayor or the Clerk to compel him to vote.

The motion was lost on the following division:—

YEAS—Councillors Moore, Douglass and Yelland.

NAYS — Councillors Kendry, Hartley, Kelly, Menzies, Stenson and Davidson.

VARIOUS MATTERS.

The Town Engineer was instructed to strike the grade on Argyle and Sunnyside streets. The Street Inspector was instructed to put down sidewalks on Sherbrooke, Aylmer, Brock and George streets. A street in Auburn was named Lisburn street Mr. Stratton's petition in reference to a public fountain was referred to the Property Committee. The Clerk was instructed to issue his check in favor of Mr. Cummings, for Mr. Beavais' taxes.

The Council adjourned at five minutes to twelve o'clock to meet in three weeks.

The Kabo Corset, warranted to wear a year without breaking, is sold only at Turnbull's, the Headquarters for all New and Improved Corsets.

Not up in Fractions.

"What'll the rate be this year?" enquired a councillor on Monday night before the "honorable body" went into session. "Twelve and five-tenth mills," was the reply. "Why can't they make it the even 12½? They're always sticking on those odd fractions."

OUR EXHIBITION NUMBER.

THE issuing of an Exhibition Edition of the REVIEW last year was attended with so much advantage to the interests sought to be advanced thereby that we have decided to repeat the issue this year and to solicit the support and assistance of our business men in rendering it even more conducive to the advancement of our common interests than that of last year. By the list of Exhibitions at which we propose to distribute it judiciously, not throw it in the mud or in fence corners, it will be seen that they are even more advantageously timed and located for our purpose than those of last year, and that we may reasonably anticipate much greater advantage from the present issue than was derived from its predecessor. If it be true, as we believe it is, that one customer at home is worth two abroad, then the present occasion affords an unusually favourable opportunity for our business men of every kind bringing their business under the notice of the people of not only our own County, but of the Townships adjacent thereto, and of placing before them the many advantages they can obtain by buying their supplies in Peterborough. To the people of such townships as those of Cavan, Manvers, and Emily, Peterborough offers many advantages at the present time, still these advantages are not such as to enable us to lay on our oars with regard to their trade. Many towns quite as advantageously situated for a certain trade have lost it, by being too sure of it, and by pursuing the same "economical" policy as that which enables the pushing and active man to outstrip competitors who had all the advantages of an established business and ample capital at the beginning of the race. Let us remember that "Eternal Vigilance" is no less the price of business success than of liberty, and act accordingly.

GERMANY AND RUSSIA.

The Peace Policy of Germany Disturbed by Bulgaria.

BERLIN, Sept. 6.—The North German Gazette, in an inspired article, on the relations between Germany and Russia, says: "The duty imposed by Germany's policy in the interest of the Empire and its dignity is to maintain peace as long as it is compatible with honor. The starting point of an endeavor in this direction is found only on the ground covered by treaties. The circumstance that the otherwise successful peace policy of the German Government has for three summers past been disturbed by Bulgaria and its princes is not calculated to attract the good will of German politicians towards that principality. It accords with the interests of the peace-loving and no less straightforward German nation that Germany should, in the Councils of Europe, throw her whole weight into the scale in order to have Europe commend peace to ambitious Bulgarian princes and ministers, who are inclined to set the continent in a blaze. Germany holds firmly to the treaties which have been broken by the princes of Coburg and Battenberg, not for the sake of pleasing the other powers, but out of regard for her own signature, for the peace of Europe was placed at state through the Coburg Orleans enterprise. There is not even the semblance of an excuse for that enterprise, and it is only to be explained on the understanding that the Coburger is the executor of an exclusively Orleanist policy."

YANKEE ADMISSION.

The Maine Fisheries ruined and the Canadian Threatened.

A correspondent writes to the New York Sun as follows.—The poorer fisherman claims that the larger vessels have driven all the fish from the coast of Maine and now seek to devastate the Canadian shore. Ten years ago mackerel could be seen anywhere on the Maine coast, and now it is seldom that a school is seen once in a month. Porgies are entirely driven off. It is said that the large seiners destroy and throw overboard about two-thirds of their catch. These shore fishermen probably represent more capital, taken as a whole, than the companies and seiners, owned in Portland and the other seaport cities. For some time past they have been organizing, and have written letters to various public men. One was sent to the State Department setting forth their grievances, and asking that the retaliation measure be not enforced, or, in other words, endorsing the Canadian three mile limit policy. Various letters were sent to the President expressing the same desires and recommendations. They claim to be the means of the non-enforcement of the Retaliation Act.

ANOTHER PROTEST

Against the Proclamation of the Irish National League.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—The heavy rain which prevailed yesterday caused the great Liberal demonstration of sympathy with Ireland to protest against the proclamation of the League, held at the Alexandria Palace, to be much smaller than it otherwise would have been. Still the attendance was large, and whatever may have been lacking to the success of the meeting in numbers was most certainly supplied in enthusiasm. Resolutions of purport similar to those adopted at Ennis yesterday were passed by vociferous acclamation, and the speeches were earnestly and loudly applauded. Letters of regret were read from Mr. Gladstone, Sir George Otto Trevelyan, Lord Ripon and others, each of whom, while explaining their unavoidable absence, expressed the deepest sympathy with the objects of the meeting and condemnation of the Government's action. Mr. Waud, late Secretary of the Liberal-Unionist organization, but recently returned to the Liberal party, expressed unreservedly his conviction that the withdrawal of the Irish assemblage from Ballycoree hill yesterday, at the bidding of Colonel Turner, was wholly unsatisfactory to the English Radicals, who had hoped for a serious collision between the people and the military in order that the question whether the right of free speech in Ireland is denied by the Government might be settled immediately. He admitted that the tactics of the leaders of the meeting were both wise and humane, but could not think otherwise than that their action had merely deferred the worse possibilities without securing any compensating advantage. A collision between the people and the authorities growing out of the unprovoked interference of the latter with the dearest of human rights was sure to occur sooner or later, and in his judgment the sooner it came the better. Mr. Waud's utterances were heartily applauded.

AFTER THE FOXES.

A Gallant Quartette make Havoc at Cow Island.

The first fox hunt got up by the sports of Peterborough took place at Cow Island, down the river, on Tuesday. Early in the morning the fox-hunters gathered their kit together and, armed to the teeth, with the hounds giving tongue freely, they marched to the Wolfe street wharf and boarded the Golden Eye. The dogs were loaded, lines pulled, and the boat moved out to take the party to slaughter the slaughterers of Bob Jackson's turkeys.

Commodore Calcutt was aboard and made it a point to make things comfortable. He regretted that more hunters were not present. The party was made up of Messrs. J. Clancy, R. Tivey, G. Corcoran and H. W. Kent. A capital dinner was served on board the boat. Arriving at Cow Island the party was met by the genial Bob Jackson, who welcomed them heartily, and expressed his hope that they would carry home a bagful of the bushy tails that killed his turkeys.

After a few minutes walk a fresh track was discovered, and the dogs were immediately let loose. It was not long till Mr. Clancy was the owner of a fine fox, which he could hardly hold high enough from Martin McFadden's magnificent black and tan hound. The hunters seeing that the hounds had stopped giving tongue, met and congratulated Mr. Clancy on the prize he had captured. Bob. Jackson was in ecstacies of revenge. "You little tarrier" said he with satisfaction, taking up the fox by the tail, "you won't hook any more of my fowl."

The dogs were put out again, and in due time two more of the cunning fell before the aim of Messrs. Corcoran and Kent. Mr. Tivey had not taken part in the fox hunt, but he was very successful in taking partridge on the wing. He bagged several fine plump birds, as well as a brace of woodcock.

Just here the engineer of the Golden-Eye called off the hunters by signalling a start for home. The party reluctantly left the place. But before they had gone far Commodore Calcutt came hurrying down the hill with a fine fox which he had succeeded in capturing, and to say that he was proud of it is speaking within bounds. He explained fully to the ladies on board what a fine shot he had made.

The homeward trip was very enjoyable. Vocal and instrumental music was indulged in by some, while others took the prow of the boat and blazed away at kingfishers, etc.

The ladies were presented with the "brushes" of the foxes as a memento of the first "Peterborough" fox hunt.

FATAL SHELL PRACTICE.

Many Japanese Killed and Wounded by Shells From the U. S. S. Omaha.

A Newport, R. I., despatch says:—The facts in the court of enquiry in the case of Capt. Thomas O. Selfridge were that he had ordered target practice off the shore of a Japanese village, contrary to international law and without taking any precaution to see that no one would be injured. Several natives were killed and he was suspended by Admiral Chandler.

A letter from Nagasaki, dated 31st, in the New York Sun, explains the meaning of the above despatch: The naval court of enquiry, which has been in session here for a month past, investigating the killing of four and the wounding of seven Japanese fishermen on the island of Ikeshima in March last, by careless target practice from the United Stated steamer Omaha, has concluded its labors. The court has looked into every detail of the disaster. Captain Selfridge, who commanded the Omaha, was accused of being responsible for the gross violation of international law the loss of life, the suffering of the wounded, and the outrage upon an unoffending and friendly people. While the proceedings of the court and its findings have not been made public, the evidence shows that Captain Selfridge did not take necessary proper precautions to see that it would be dangerous to fire when the Omaha did; that he appeared not to have determined to fire at this place until about opposite the cliff, and then proceeded at once to target practice; that the people and their cultivated fields were in full view, and were seen from the deck of the ship, as stated by Capt. Selfridge in his report; that before the firing began the captain was informed by an officer that Japanese small boats were in the line of fire, and that he replied: "They will get out of the way quickly when my shells begin falling among them;" that he was informed during the practice that an officer saw an unexploded shell going over the bluff, but that no attention was paid to it. From the testimony of the natives it was proven that many pieces of shell fell into the village, and some went entirely over the island and into the water. One piece of shell struck the cooking stove of a man who was engaged in cooking food. Six unexploded nine-inch shells were found in the fields between the bluff and the village. The father and mother of one of the young men of the four killed have both become insane from grief at the loss of their only child. The wounds of the woman who lost both legs have not entirely healed, nor has the wound of the man who lost one of his legs. The 12-year old boy who was so horribly mutilated is still in the hospital here. It is asserted here that the United States Government will be called upon for the payment of an equitable indemnity to the sufferers, who are in a helpless condition and are indigent.

THE EXETER THEATRE FIRE.

The Majority of the Victims Men and Boys About Thirty Women Burned.

LONDON, Sept, 6.—The fire brigade arrived at the Exeter Theatre five minutes after the breaking out of the flames, but the efforts of the firemen were without effect. There were several thrilling rescues. The majority of the victims were men and boys. About thirty women were burned. When the fire started the drop scene was lowered to prevent a draught. Some of the actors opened a door to escape causing the fire to burst through the drop scene and to ignite the gallery. The flames overtook the people, who were wedged in an immovable mass, and roasted them to death. Many who were rescued alive died soon after being brought out of the burning building. The occupants of the dress circle escaped without much harm. A telegram from Exeter at five o'clock this morning says that the fire is under control. Only the walls of the structure are standing. People, distracted with anxiety, are wandering about the streets in the neighborhood of the theatre in search of friends who attended last night's peformance. The hospitals are besieged by anxious enquirers for friends. Twenty badly burned persons, who were admitted to hospitals, died in a few moments after they were received.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—The Herald's cable regarding the Exeter Theatre fire says that the sheriff states that he had counted 130 dead bodies. The scene in the streets and where the bodies are lying is pitiful. Women are looking for missing husbands, husbands for wives and daughters, and mothers for their sons.

The Standard says: "The sad similarity between the Exeter theatre fire and previous disasters suggests a culpable disregard of the teaching of experience."

The News says: "It is safe to say that one effect of this awful disaster will be a general law governing the construction and management of public places throughout the kingdom. After this catastrophe and that of the Opera Comique in Paris, we ought surely to require no more warning."

LONDON, Sept. 6.—The victims by the burning of the Theatre Royal at Exeter, last night, were mostly working people. As soon as the flames were extinguished a large force of men began searching for bodies. The stairway leading to the gallery was literally packed with bodies. While at the head of the stairs there were scores of others piled one on top of the other. The unfortunate victims had rushed to the door when the alarm was given, but found the stairway blocked, and all means of escape cut off. In a short time the flames had reached them, and they suffered a horrible death. There were pitiful scenes in the vicinity of the burned theatre this morning as friends and relatives of supposed victims awaited the recovery of the bodies. In many cases fathers and mothers both perished, and numerous children are thus left without means of support. Several of the bodies were burned so that a small cinder remained. The number of persons severely injured is sixty. It is feared that the death list will reach 140.

RE TOWN TAXES.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—Permit me to rectify an error in your yesterday's report of the debate, in the Council, on the question of levying a per centage for non-payment of taxes on or before the First of December.

I objected to the addition of five per cent. straight, for neglect to pay on that day, because such neglect was always either in consequence of inability in the poor ratepayer or of oversight on the part of the ratepayer in better circumstances.

I urged that the only sum in addition to the proper tax, that should be levied for default, was a sum that would indemnify the Town for non-payment on the day fixed; the five per cent. as provided in the By-law being a penalty that was alike unjust to the poor man and the rich, though it bore more hardly on the former.

The more strongly did I feel on this matter from the fact that these penalties, which during the past year amounted to more than $300, are paid into the general funds of the town and applied for the benefit of all, so that the unfortunate ratepayer assists to pay the taxes of his more wealthy neighbour.

My resolution in amendment was in writing, and proposed in substitution for the hard and fast five per cent. on the unpaid tax, that one per cent per month (not one per cent. per annum as your reporter has it and which be absurd) should be levied for non-payment by the first day of December, that not less than one month should be charged for, if default were made, and that a broken month should be counted as a full month. This exaction, I am aware, would more than save the town from loss, as it pays the bank only six per cent. per annum for any money temporarily needed, but it was a sum very readily ascertainable by the collector and ratepayer, and for the first month was but one-fifth of that now imposed. And it was the vote on this question that a certain Councillor—erstwhile the poor man's friend, shirked. Although my resolution was opposed and defeated by a majority of the Council, yet I am so satisfied of its fairness, that I am convinced the unjust and harsh provision now in the by-lay will be removed from it within twelve months and one similar to that I advocated, take its place.

I am sir,
Your obedient servant,
W. H. MOORE.

After Deerfoot.

WINNIPEG, Sept, 6.—A Calgary despatch says: Colonel Herchmer returned this morning from the Blackfeet camp without taking Deerfoot a prisoner. Crowfoot and other chiefs are willing to give him up, but the young men refused to let him go. Colonel Herchmer left this afternoon with 44 mounted men, and will advance on the north side of the reserve, while deatchment from Lethbridge and Macleod close in on the south. Unless Deerfott is sooner taken the police will make a rush on him to-morrow night.

Another Schooner Seized.

ST. PETERS, C. B., Sept. 6.—The schooner Candid, Deveau, master, of Cheticamp, from St. Pierre, Miquelon, has been seized at River Bourgeois for violation of the Customs laws by collector Boyd. The vessel is said to have been hovering in the bay since Saturday evening acting suspiciously. Last night some of her crew, with a boat containing tobacco, liquor and dry goods, rowed into the tender embrace of the Customs official.

Burglars Foiled.

KINGSTON, Sept. 6.—Burglars entered the residence of Mr. Wm. Elliott, cattle exporter, last night. Awaking Miss Elliott they placed revolvers at her head and demanded to know where her father kept his money. She pointed to a bureau drawer, and, while one of the masked men was examining its contents, she broke from the grasp of the other and rushed to her father's room. The burglars escaped, though some of Barnum's circus men, at work at the depot close by, joined in the pursuit of them.

THE KIND OF ZOLLVEREIN.

We recently called attention to the real aim of the Toronto Mail, as exposed in its advocacy of our joining a North American zollverein, by instancing as satisfactory the case of the Duchy of Brunswick in the German Zollverein, its fate having been to be gobbled up by Prussia or the German Empire, a fact which the Mail took care not to mention.

And now the Mail in arguing that Commercial Union would not be injurious to Canada, says:—

"California was not injured by being introduced into the great American Zollverein, nor Louisiana, nor Texas."

For honest differences of opinion honestly avowed we have every respect, but we confess we have no patience with such dishonesty as the Mail displays.

The United States acquired California by conquest, Louisiana by purchase and Texas by fillibustering, and incorporated them commercially and politically in its dominion. Our neighbours have not yet acquired Canada by either of these three processes, so it is not yet their property to be similarly treated as the Mail suggests.

Is it not clear that annexation is the Mail's real object, though it does not say so in plain terms, sheltering itself behind a cloud of verbiage? Evidently it is of Mr. Butterworth's opinion that Canada is still too loyal for annexation to be directly preached, but might possibly be induced to accept Commercial Union which must involve annexation.

A peculiar incident in relation to the coal question has just occurred in Montreal The Water Committee advertised for coal, and the local dealers sent in similar tenders, declining to reduce their rates. On a call for new tenders one was submitted by "Mr. Baird, agent for the Welsh anthracite coal" at $4.50 per ton on the wharf and $5.10 at the Reservoir. If this is really coal from Wales, it obviously effects the question of the price of the Pennsylvania monopoly coal, now admitted free of duty into Canada. We would like further information as to whether this coal is from across the Atlantic and whether it was imported as an ordinary commercial transaction or is a chance lot brought over as ballast, or sold cheap as an introduction.

The New York Times' Washington despatch reports Secretary Bayard as saying:

"In the absence of direct authority from Congress, there can be no United States commissioners appointed with full power, such as those possessed by the commissioners commissioned by the British Crown.'

This is precisely what we have already pointed out, and we repeat that our Commissioners should not begin to negotiate with the United States Commissioners till the latter have received similar powers with themselves. We have had a taste of United States repudiation after getting the benefit of our concessions, and we should not be caught in the same trap again.

The Winnipeg correspondent of the Toronto Globe says:—

"The Tory picnic at Morris was the talk of the street to-day, and there is praise on every hand for Mr. Whitla in taking such a determined stand against a set of blackguards."

If the Globe must use such epithets, they would be more appropriately applied to its friends who went to a local picnic not as orderly visitors, but to coerce the meeting by means of a slugger and a retinue of rotten egg throwers, as it has itself described. But such tactics are naturally adopted by men who are defying the law.

We are accused by the Toronto Mail of using "hard words." As the words in question were not ours, but were invented for us by the Mail, it is very probable that they were "hard." At all events we do not speak words or commendations of which we are ashamed. Our proprietors do not attend meetings in favor of the disintegration of our country and union with foreigners, and then strike their names from the list of those present, through a feeling of shame, that would have been more timely if it had lead to abstention instead of concealment. The Mail should look at home.

CHICAGO'S CHINATOWN.

ODD AND INTERESTING THINGS SEEN DURING A RAMBLE.

The Stock of a Chinese Store—Celestial Scales and Calculating Machines—Chicago's Only Chinese Baby—Superstitious Wearing of a Bracelet.

The San Franciscan and the genial policeman started off together, but soon stopped in front of a window bearing a sign announcing that the combined laundry business and restaurant was carried on within. The door was locked, however, and loud knocks of the policeman's club failed to develop any signs of life. "They aren't up yet," said the clubman. "None of those fellows go to bed before 2 o'clock in the morning, and they don't get up till late. Come across the street."

Across the street they went, and entered the door of a Chinese merchant. The announcement that one of his visitors was from California, and was acquainted with an enterprising and well known Celestial there by the name of Tin Loy, gained for them the freedom of the place and the most hospitable treatment. Cigars were produced by the host, and accepted with a promise to smoke them after the next meal. The stock of his store was found to consist entirely of goods imported from China. It comprises, among other things, queer nuts and dried fruits, jars and bottles of rice vinegar, great packages of herbs of supposed medicinal value, cocoanut made into long strips and dipped in sugar, dried sea fish, flat and almost transparent, China melons from New Orleans, egg plant, etc. The proprietor claims that the only reason Americans do not buy these articles is that they do not know how to use them. If you ask the use of almost any of the green or dried stuff found in a place of this kind the almost invariable answer is, "To make soup." It is feared that queer looking jars or bottles in such an establishment occasionally contain whisky made from rice. At least the Chinamen seem to be familiar with such an article. "Heap stlong. Makee dlunk, allee same Melican whisky."

The only weighing apparatus to be found in a Chinese grocery is very primitive. The article to be weighed is put in the basket. One of the strings is taken in one hand, and the suspended weight is slipped along with the other until it balances the article in the basket. Little marks along the arm indicate different weights, and the ring from which the iron balance is suspended marks the number to be read off. This contrivance, of course, gives the exact weight, and hence in this respect is a great improvement on some of the more modern devices in use by many American grocers.

"John," said the Californian, "there is one thing I wish you would explain to me, and that is your system of counting. I have heard it explained, but could never understand it."

The first lesson was cheerfully given, and in so skillful and intelligent a manner that it was understood. The American, who has a decent reputation for expertness in figures, was given a column of dollars and cents to add. There would be a little rattling and a flying of fingers, and before he could even get the figures down he would be given the correct sum by the Chinaman.

In the back room breakfast was in progress. In addition to the rice there were several mysterious looking dishes discussed with spoons made of chinaware. The merchant informed his visitors that everything on the table except the bowls came from China.

"How many Chinawomen are there in town, John?" asked the San Franciscan, remembering his own city and her unspeakable plague spot. He was informed that there are only three or four, and a very ingenious reason was given, but he was unable to tell whether it was founded on truth or on the pride of the wily Celestial. It was, in substance, this: The reputation of the Chinawomen who come to this country is, as every one knows, in one sense of the term, unquestionable. The men who come to New York and Chicago are a more moral class, and they will not allow the women here.

Speaking of women reminded the officer that he knew the abode of a celebrated Benedick, and he proposed a visit thither. In the basement of a house on Van Buren street the family man was found asleep upon a peculiar couch made of four short posts, covered with bamboo matting imported from China. In his arms was a bundle that looked like a small bag filled with something, and that's about what it was. When the man started up, somewhat suddenly, the bundle proved to contain, among other things, as cute and ridiculous little piece of humanity as ever cried in the middle of the night. When you said it was pretty its father immediately ceased to be John Chinaman, and became a man. He made it show off in a manner that would have caused a white father of an eighteen months' old baby to turn green with envy. It said things in Chinese and English, threw kisses, made gurgling sounds with its hand to its mouth, and performed other baby feats of a high order. While the father was thus engaged, its mother, who is generally invisible, and who does not speak English at all, was forced into view by her maternal pride and by the fear that the baby was not being shown off to the best advantage. The mother is a Chinawoman, a statement that is not so unnecessary as might at first thought appear It is a pretty baby—a girl. Its name is Kum Lien, which, when properly pronounced by its mother, sounds musical. Its eyes and long hair are black, and its unformed childish face, as is generally the case, has not taken on yet the distinguishing features of the race.

The father wore on his wrist a ring or bracelet of some kind of Chinese stone, which he has worn for over twenty years.

"You see velly many thing," said he in explanation, "in the day time. Slam loud all night. You sabee slam? Slam alle same dleam. Wear this ling, no slam."

This was something new. "Do you mean to say," he was asked, that so long as you wear this ring you won't dream?"

"Well," he replied cautiously, intent upon defending his superstition, "slam some, no slam velly much. No wear ling, slam more." —Chicago Herald.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Farms Rented.—Mr. Richard Thexton, who lives a short distance southeast of this place, has rented his farm of 200 acres to Mr. Sisson, of Cavanville, for a term of five years. Mr. Thexton and his family purpose moving to Dakota this fall to try farming on the prairie. Mr. John Best has rented his farm, which is adjacent to this place, to the Bloxom brothers. This is the third farm for the brothers to rent here, and we hope to see them do well on them, as they are industrious young men.

Down Pigeon River.—Messrs. J. R. Greer, James Smith and John F. Handley, went down the river on Tuesday morning to spend the week in camp and to fish when they feel disposed to do so. We expect to see them home with a good haul some of these days.

Duck Shooting—Messrs. Jos. Hayes, W. Hickson and Geo. Sevey went out to Emily Lake last Wednesday evening to have a volley at the ducks, and although there was an overplus of sportsmen, and the ducks not too plentiful, W. Hickson and J. Hayes succeeded in bagging three or four brace of nice ducks.

Briefs.—Owing to the long continued drought, the farmers in this locality have great difficulty in getting along with their fall ploughing. Those who have clover seed are busily engaged in cutting it this fine weather. The crop of clover is very light, but the seed is reported to be good.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

"Good Lord!" ejaculated Jim; "you don't suppose I have told her, do you? Why, I never knew it myself until the other day, down at Eton, when the truth flashed upon me all of a sudden. It may seem very ridiculous to you, but I assure you that up to that moment I had been under the impression that I only cared for her as a friend. And it is only as a friend that she thinks of me."

"Really?" I said, somewhat staggered by this announcement. "Then—excuse my curiosity, but what made her eyes so red after you and she had been talking together?"

"Her eyes were red because she had been crying," answered Jim, curtly.

He looked so savage that I did not like to press him with further inquiries; but he resumed by and by of his own accord: "She had been telling me about her family affairs, and a nice mess they seemed to have got into. There is no inducing Lord Staines to economize. He has left off racing, but I believe that is the only expense that he has put down, and of course he has to support the Bracknells. In point of fact, I didn't come here to speak to you about myself and Lady Mildred, because that is a perfectly hopeless business, and neither you nor anybody else can help me; but I'm troubled in my mind about Bracknell. He has been very kind and pleasant to me since I have been back, but I know he is in a sea of difficulties, and"——

"I expected this," I interrupted, in some vexation. "So much for his promise. Of course he has been borrowing money from you, and he is just about as likely to repay you as if he were a South American republic. You may as well make up your mind that you will never see that money again."

"Do let a man finish his sentence," remonstrated Jim. "In the first place, he hasn't borrowed a shilling of me, and in the second, it wouldn't distress me in the least if he had borrowed a thousand pounds. But do you know, Harry, sometimes I am half afraid that Bracknell is a scoundrel."

He said this so hesitatingly and with such a look of anxious deprecation on his honest face that I had not the heart to tell him how extremely probable it was that his apprehensions were well founded, although I could not go so far as to meet him with the contradiction which he evidently hoped for. So I only begged him to be more explicit.

"I suppose you know," he said, "that Bracknell has been several times on the brink of a smash, and that his father has paid his debts, over and over again. Lord Staines is the kind of man who would cheerfully give away ninety-nine pounds if he had only a hundred left in the world, and he seems to have gone on meeting these periodical demands without a murmur, until one fine day he discovered that he couldn't raise another £5 note by hook or by crook. Then he took to his bed and said he was going to die. Bracknell wanted a lot of money—how much it was Lady Mildred doesn't know, but she thinks it was a very large sum—to save him from immediate bankruptcy; and the poor old man was so cut up about it that he almost went off his head. He declared that he was the only person to blame; that he had squandered money which ought to have been saved for his son; that he had brought Bracknell up to be extravagant and was bound to see him through, and so forth; and when he was in the midst of his despair, as luck would have it, Alfred Beauchamp came in to see him. I suppose," added Jim, with a touch of reluctance, "that Beauchamp must be a good fellow. Anyhow, he insisted upon lending his uncle the money; and so"——

"And so Lord Staines rose from his bed and promptly forgot all about the matter?" I suggested, as Jim came to a halt.

"No; not exactly that. He told Beauchamp frankly that he didn't think there was much prospect of his ever being able to discharge his debt, but that—that, in short, he wouldn't so much mind owing the money to his son-in-law as to his nephew. Do you see?"

I could not help laughing at this amazing method of canceling a liability, which assuredly would never have entered into the head of any human being but Lord Staines. "I can't say that I do see," I replied. "Fathers don't as a rule, expect to be handsomely paid for allowing their daughters to be taken off their hands; on the contrary, it is they who are expected to make settlements upon their daughters."

"Yes, but the husband makes settlements, too; and it appears that Beauchamp was to deduct this sum from the amount that he would otherwise have settled upon Lady Mildred. Most likely the fact of the matter was that he was overflowing with money, and that he was a good-natured sort of chap, and that he was glad to hold out a helping hand to his uncle. Whether he was really anxious to marry his cousin at that time or not I can't make out; perhaps it was only to pacify the old man that he said he was. But he certainly wasn't in any hurry to change his condition. He begged Lord Staines not to mention the subject for another year, because he had made arrangements to go off to Newfoundland and Canada for salmon fishing and couldn't tell how long he might be away, so Lady Mildred never heard a word about it until a few weeks ago, although of course she suspected that it was Beauchamp who had got her father out of his difficulties, and she couldn't help knowing that her people wanted her to marry the man. When she met him again in the beginning of the season he paid her a great deal of attention, and everything seemed to be going smoothly until Lady Bracknell, for reasons best known to herself, took it into her head to put a stop to the affair. You must have seen how easy she has found it to do that. Everybody has seen it, except Lord Staines, who was frightened at first, but was quite reassured after Bracknell had promised to make his wife drop Beauchamp.

"Bracknell knows about this curious money transaction, then?" I asked.

"He knows now. His father thought it best to tell him when Hilda's game became evident, and that is what makes me afraid he isn't as straight as he ought to be. Because Lady Bracknell hasn't dropped the man, and when you come to think of it, it is clearly to Bracknell's interest that Beauchamp should remain single."

That was undeniable, but what interested me more than Bracknell's probable bad faith was the singular attitude assumed by Jim, who seemed to be not only prepared but anxious to give up the girl of his heart to Beauchamp. I ventured to express a little of the surprise that I felt, which had the unexpected effect of making him very angry. What, he wanted to know, did I take him for? And as I made no reply, being unable to hit upon one which should be at the same time truthful and flattering, he went on to explain that true love (a sentiment of which I was evidently ignorant) is, in its nature, disinterested; that the true lover desires the happiness of the beloved object; not his own, and further, that, after what had passed between Lord Staines and Beauchamp, Lady Mildred's marriage with the latter was the only conceivable means of averting disgrace from her family.

"As to the nature of true love," I answered, "I will bow at once to your superior knowledge, although my own limited opportunities of judging would have led me to think otherwise. But with regard to these subtleties about the disgrace which threatens the house of Henley, I confess that I can neither follow you nor agree with you. Beauchamp, it seems, has lent money to Lord Staines, and if you say that Lord Staines or his successor is bound in honor to refund the money eventually, and to pay interest upon it in the meantime, I am quite with you. But when you assert that honor can only be satisfied by Lady Mildred's marrying, against her will, a man who doesn't want to marry her, you really do get a little beyond my depth."

"Who told you that it would be against her will?" asked Jim.

"My dear Jim," I returned, with excusable impatience, "am I an absolute idiot?"

He did not reply in the negative with that promptitude which I should have expected.

GENERAL.

The safe in the office of the Credit Mobilier, Paris, has been robbed of 125,000f.

The English War office are about to order six breech-loading guns for the defence of Esquimalt.

The treaty power have ratified the Literary and Artistic Copyright Convention which recently sat at Berne.

Headache, Billiousness, Dyspepsia and Indigestion relieved and at once by Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Try it. Samples free.

The Royal Commission on Labour is expected to commence operations in the course of two or three weeks.

Mr. Geo. Johnson, of Ottawa, and for some time a resident in Toronto, has been appointed Dominion statistician.

Rev. Father Labelle has been officially informed that the report of the investigating committee is favourable to the lottery.

The French mobilization tactics have proved a brilliant success, and the French now believe that they are ready for any emergency.

Right now is the time to use a good Blood Purifying Medicine. Lose no time in getting a bottle of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It will do you good. Sold by all druggists. 50c.

A company, with a capital of $300,000, has been formed in Montreal to re-open the beet-root sugar factory at Berthier, Quebec, which is expected to be in full operation by next summer.

A party of Russian millionaires are inspecting the cotton fields of Bokhara, with a view to selecting a suitable situation for a cotton mill.

It is expected that the Russian military railway from the Caspian Sea to Vladivostock, on the Pacific, will be completed before October, 1891.

After an exciting discussion lasting the whole afternoon, the Montreal City Council refused to adopt the bill appointing a Royal Commission to investigate the boodle charges against members of the Council, and decided to appoint a committee to receive and investigate charges.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills, Salts, &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists.

Insurance men are demanding an investigation into the efficiency of the Montreal fire brigade, owing to the numerous destructive fires in that city recently. The Underwriters' Association estimates the total loss by fire in Montreal for the present year at nearly $800,000.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order. Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

TURNBULL has imported a heavy stock o Winter Mantles. Don't fail to see them.

Acting on the advice of his physicians, Emperor William has abandoned his proposed journey of Konigsberg to meet the Czar.

Mr. Morgan's Plans.

Mr. J. Dickson Morgan, the Great English Poet, intends as soon as he can make arrangements to deliver an original and amueing lecture. The subject of his discourse will be "My Travels, or A Poet's Impressions on Land and Sea." He has been twice in India and, in fact, has travelled all over the world. In his lecture he will incidentally show up the aristocracy of England. Mr. Morgan has been around seeing his hosts of friends to-day. He has not yet called on Alderman Stenson, but thinks it prudent to address a few lines to him, as suggested by the REVIEW, before he sees the gentleman. The verses, as follows, have been composed off hand. It took just six minutes and a half, by a stop watch, for Mr. Morgan to indite them:—

TO ALDERMAN STENSON.

Accept a poet's gratitude
For all the kindness sh'own
To him in the days gone by
When he was all alone.

And the winds blew—
The steamship rolled
When the poet left these shores—
And homeward bowled.

And the poet shouted with glee,
And England came in sight;
Accept a poet's gratitude,
Who writes these lines to-night.

Kind sir, excuse the frolic
That's in this rollicking lay—
And the writer is only too willing,
To accept help another day.

Your looks betoken gentleman!
And that is a good sign;
And—if I'm not intrusive—
My size is number nine.

INAUGRAL EXAMINATIONS.

Rigid Grading Required to Place the Institute on a Sound Footing.

A regular meeting of the Board of Education was held on Tuesday evening. There were present: Messrs. Jas. Stevenson, Chairman, and Messrs. Wrighton, Kendry, T. Rutherford, English, Wier, A. Rutherford, Denne, Dumble and Burnham.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

ENQUIRIES,

Mr. DUMBLE enquired why the water was not put in the Institute building, for use in the Science Department.

Mr. WRIGHTON, Chairman of the Property Committee, replied that he had got the gas put in, but the Water Works men were too busy to get the piping put down.

Mr. RUTHERFORD enquired whether it was the authority of the Chairman of this Board, the Government or Inspector, that the promotion examinations were delayed till now. The pupils had been allowed to run to the four corners of the earth for the last two months and then were formed to undergo an examination. The result was that there were few promotions.

Mr. DUMBLE replied that this time of holding examinations was customary. Learning should keep for two months.

Mr. EARLE, who was present, was asked to explain what the new instructions from the Department were. He said that this afternoon the Principal received instructions to the effect that no pupil would be allowed to write for two certificates at one time, as had heretofore been the case. The manner in which the pupils were classed was, those having a fair chance for obtaining a 2nd class certificate were placed in the fourth form with those studying for college examination those who would probably take a third class certificate were placed in the third form, while the 2nd form was a provisional one. Precisely the same work was done here as in the 3rd form and at Christmas the pupils in it would have an opportunity to take 3rds.

Mr. RUTHERFORD—Did you ever have these written examinations at the beginning of the term before?

Mr. EARLE replied that the system of promotion according to written examinations had never been adopted in the Institute till now. Heretofore the promotions were made by whole forms being moved up regardless of the effect it had upon the upper forms. This militated against the school to such a degree that it was found that nothing but a rigid system of written examination would effect a cure.

Mr. RUTHERFORD asked how it was that they had the examinations at the opening of the schools.

Mr. EARLE replied that it would be impossible to hold terminal examinations, as the pupils went away at the end of the term before the Institute was closed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From R. Z. Rogers, making a complaint against the demand of fees from his son on account of his living outside the town. His property in town paid as large a tax as that paid by the majority of ratepayers.—Impossible to meet Mr. Rogers' wishes, owing to the present state of the law.

From T. A. Rowan, asking the Board to consider the question of his salary. At the time of his appointment he had been given to understand that the salary would remain at the same figure as Mr. Long received.—Received.

From Mrs. Morrow, acknowledging the Board's resolution of condolence, and thanking them for their sympathy.—Received.

The CHAIRMAN said that a demand had been made from Mr. Carnegie's daughter to pay the outside pupil's fee, though Mr. Carnegie was a large taxpayer in Peterborough. The Board might make the matter right.

Mr. ERBETT said that the law did not permit Mr. Carnegie, being a resident outside the town, to send his children to the Institute at the same rate as a resident of the town. If Mr. Carnegie, one of the wealthiest men in the County, were allowed to break the rule, everybody would.

Mr. A. RUTHERFORD held that they were here to do justice, regardless of rich or poor. He was disposed to meet Mr. Carnegie's case.

Mr. DUMBLE felt that there should be a cast iron rule. A line had to be strictly drawn somewhere.

From J. H. Long, presenting an account of $1.85.—Ordered to be paid.

INSPECTOR'S REPORT.

The Public Schools Inspector reported to the Board as follows:—

I beg to report that at the close of the examinations at the end of the last school term, I found the schools in a fairly healthful and progressive state. More than the usual number were promoted and the fact that those who attended the entrance examinations from Mr. Smith's room over 90 per cent. were successful speaks well for his teaching.

The Schools opened with full rooms, especially in the Central buildings and in the South Ward school. The West Ward is reported as having a moderate attendance, but this will no doubt increase.

The primary division of the South Ward School is over crowded requiring immediate attention. I intend to consult with the head master concerning proposed remedies for the present time.

Miss Hall complains of the delapidated state of the blackboards in her room and I must say that they are in a very bad state.

It gives me much pleasure to report that I consider the public schools of the town in a very favorable state.

I regret to have to state that at present Miss Graham and Miss Jenkins are unable to take their places but all I am sure sincerely wish that their illness may be of short duration.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
J. STRATTON.

The Chairman of the Committee of Appointments reported recommending the appointment of Mr. Fife to the position vacated by Miss Greenwood. The report was adopted.

The Board adjourned.

OPENED out at Turnbull's, case after case of Fall and Winter Millinery, marked at prices that will suit everybody.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for Diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind

VALEDICTORY.

The Winding up of the 1887 Cheese Business—Fining the Recalcitrants.

The Peterborough Cheese Board held its final meeting for this year on Tuesday afternoon. Messrs. Taylor, Drummond and Galvin conducted the sale. The meeting was held in the lower market room in the market building.

The cable quotation stood at 57 shillings.

The buyers present were Messrs. Cluxton, Wrighton, Green, Fitzgerald, and Spence.

The offer was as follows:—

PETERBOROUGH SECTION.

After the bidding had proceeded for some time Mr. Cluxton finally succeeded in getting the whole of the Peterborough section and Victoria section at 11½, August; 12½ for September and 12⅝ for Obtober. It was understood that the purchaser pay the cost of inspection for the first month and that the factories pay the costs for the other two months, this applying to Victoria section only. Mr. Cluxton made a bid for the Northumberlnd cheese, but it was not accepted.

THE BOARD'S JUSTICE.

Secretary Taylor briefly pointed out the rule of the Board respecting selling off the board. It was lawful for a factory to sell off the board only when getting the permission of the Board to do so, and such factories were liable to a fine. At the last meeting of the Board some of the factories had transgressed the rule and he thought they should be punished for it.

Mr. Taylor therefore moved, seconded by Mr. Galvin,—That the representatives of the Westwood, Norwood, Melrose Abbey and South Dummer factories, in the Peterborough section, and the representatives of Mariposa, West Ops, Cambrey and Bobcaygeon factories in the Victoria section, be suspended from the privileges of this Board, until they each pay a fine of $25 or at the pleasure of the Board.—Carried.

Mr. DRUMMOND, the President, offered his congratulations on the termination of a very successful season. He commended those who stood by the Board to prevent its being broken up even though they had lost a little money.

VOTE OF THANKS.

Votes of thanks was tendered to the Town Council and Town Trust Commissioners for giving the use of the market building to the Board and to the press for able reports of meetings.

Killing a Bear.

On Sunday last there was a very exciting time on the shore of Bald Lake. A camping party consisting of Messrs. J. T. Wilson, R. Smith, Peter Whitney and Hugh Quirk, left town on Wednesday and by Saturday had got comfortably into camp at Bald Lake. On Sunday morning Mr. Wilson took a pail and went down to a spring for some water. Arriving at the spring he was surprised to see about thirty yards ahead a huge black bear. He dropped the pail, ran to the camp and giving the alarm, seized his gun and made for the bear. He got within a few yards of it and poured a charge of heavy shot into bruin. The savage animal opened his capacious jaws and made a rush at Mr. Wilson. The latter, with steady nerve waited till the animal was within six yards of him, when he discharged another volley into his face. This staggered him for a moment, but irritated him the more. It is fortunate that the campers kept out of his way, else it might have been a serious matter for them. The blood streamed from the bear's head and into his eyes, rendering his sight bad. He was preparing for another attack on Mr. Wilson when Mr. Whitney gave him a broadside, and a minute after Mr. Smith gave him a dose of heavy duck shot, which performed its work and keeled the animal over. The hide was taken off and the meat dressed. He dressed about three hundred pounds.

THE BOYS OF ETON.

Children of Royalty and Rank—The Boys Who Are "Betters" of Everybody Else.

The college, as it is called—a huge school for boys—stands, as everybody knows, under the castle walls of Windsor, and the grounds stretch along the banks of the Thames, rivaling the royal Home park in exquisite beauty of verdure and softness of outline with their vistas of oaks and miles of sward. The boys of Eton are the children of the most important people of England. Men put their sons' names down for Eton as soon as they are born, as they do for the great clubs. The struggle for admission is prodigious, even among those who are entitled to such precedence (for rank counts at school as it does at court or anywhere else in England), and the rich parvenus pay enormous sums to place their boys in the company of those who will one day become dukes and earls.

These boys have a race on the Thames on the 4th of June, and all their noble and gentle relations go down to see them row. There are luncheons at the houses of the various masters, and the very great people indeed are invited by the provost. Then under the trees and on the lawns you may see the bearers of half the great names in England watching the race, holding the smaller boys by the hand or crowding around a royal personage to uncover or prostrate themselves, for royalty is held to take a special interest in this great school. The Eton boys are often admitted to make demonstrations of their loyalty in the very presence of the sovereign; and the 4th of June without the presence of some scion of the royal race would be incomplete indeed. The boys themselves, with their short jackets and high hats and broad collars—a costume no longer worn anywhere else—add to the effect of one of the prettiest scenes of the social year.

The same boys attract the same audiences at other times; for boys of the upper classes are important people in England. Those who are to be peers learn that fact very soon from the deference shown them, and all eldest sons feel their own consequence, while even the younger children of the nobility are "the betters" of everybody else. There are cricket matches between the boys of Eton and Harrow, the other of the great schools, which rivals Eton as Cambridge does Oxford, and presses it hard. Many pronounce Cambridge superior for scholarship to Oxford, and Harrow better for the boys than Eton; but Oxford and Eton have the stamp of superior caste. There is not a snob in the country who would hesitate a moment in sending his son; and the instincts of that sort of people are unerring. They may not attain social greatness themselves, or even approach it, but they know where to find it, as a dog does a truffle. They prefer Eton to Harrow. —Adam Badeau's Letter.

REVIEWS.

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE.—The current number of Century has for its frontispiece a fine engraving of Jefferson after Gilbert Stuart's painting, followed by two interesting papers on his home at Montecello by J. G. Nicolay and Frank Stockton. The "History of Abraham Lincoln," such a prominent feature of Century, reaches the stirring epoch culminating in his election to the Presidency. The account of "The Framers and Framing of the Constitution," by Prof. McMaster deals with a very instructive page of histor . The second instalment of "Snubbin' Through Jersey" shows how much may be seen to advantage near at home. "The Amateur Photographer" by Alex Black, and "The Camera Club of Cincinnati," will be welcome to the numerous class interested. Prof. Atwater in "The Digestibility of Food," brings the conclusions of science with great clearness within the reach of the ordinary reader. The war series in this number deals with the Siege of Petersburg from the various points of view of several officers who participated. Stockton's serial story, "The Hundredth Man," is drawing near its conclusion to the regret of the reader. There are some sparkling short tales and good poetry, "Topics of the Time" and "Open Letters" tersely discuss questions of the day, and "Bric-a-brac" supplies some very attractive light reading. It is a strong number.

THE WORK OF FIENDS.

Foiled in Wrecking a Train they Wound an old Couple.

CERRDO, W. Va., Sept. 7.—A dastardly attempt to murder A. E. Bush, aged 82, and his wife, aged 78, was made early yesterday morning. Two men bent on robbery, (negroes or white men with masks on their faces) were discovered in the house at five o'clock and shot Mr. Bush in the forehead and Mrs. Bush in the body. They inflicted probably mortal wounds. An eleven year old grandson was in the house and in his flight was shot several times. He gave the alarm and hundreds of citizens are scouring the surrounding country for the perpetrators of the crime, who if caught, will be lynched. They secured $40 in money.

The parties had evidently intended to wreck the pay car which was due yesterday morning, as a huge obstruction had been placed on the track, but a freight train came along and demolished the obstruction. Being foiled in this they went to the house of Bush.

THE BEHRING SEA SEIZURES.

The Reported Capture of Additional Vessels Not Believed.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 7.—No confirmation has been received at the State Department of the despatch published from the Pacific coast a week ago, stating that some additional sealers had been seized in the Behring Sea. There has been ample time for Capt. Shephard, of the Rush, to have reported the additional seizures if they had been made, but from internal evidence it is assumed that the despatch was really a duplication of facts previously reported, especially as the names of the vessels are not given. Consequently up to the present time there are only four seizures of British sealers known to have been made. In the absence of the exact text of the interpellation addressed to Sir James Ferguson and the exact language of his reply, it cannot be attached to the inference derived from his answer that the Behring Sea question will be included in the fishery negotiations. There would seem to be every reason to conclude that this Behring Sea matter cannot be properly included in the scope of the negotiations.

Thrown from a Car.

ST. JOHNS, N. B., Sept. 7.—Yesterday five men, Josh Blanchard, Philais Terriot, Betuno Boudreau, Geo. Godin and Jos. Dugaz, all of Bathurst, started on a section man's car for their place of work, some distance up the line of the Caraquet railway. While going along at fair speed, the planks with which the car was loaded broke, and all the men on the car were thrown on the rails directly in front of the car. Godin was killed instantly, Dugaz had had an arm broken, and Blanchard, Boudreau and Terriot were severely injured about the arms and legs.

SWEPT BY FLAMES.

The Village of Newburg almost Entirely Destroyed by Fire

The Belleville Intelligencer of Wednesday reports a disastrous fire at Newburg, in Lennox County, seven miles from Napanee. It says:—"A fire broke out this morning at 9.30 in the barn of Dr. Duff, at Newbugh which at first appeared but a slight affair, but it soon become evident that the spark once kindled was likely to wreck the village and unhappily such proved to be the case The fire quickly got such a headway that human agency seemed unable to check its terrible destruction. The telegraph office was soon destroyed, so that we had to rely upon private resources within our command for the particulars of this terrible calamity, and hence necessarily our report will be faulty in some particulars, but in the main it is trustworthy.

"The fire once started, rushed through the village with lightning rapidity; and as Newburgh, like other small places, was without fire appliances, they sent to Napanee, which liberally lent them all the assistance in their power, but by the time the Napanee engine had reached Newburgh the place was almost a mass of flames."

After giving a list of business places and dwellings burned, it continues:—"The fierce wind prevailing carried the firebrands into the country for miles, devastating farm buildings, it is said, two miles away; but the people are so horrorstricken with their calamity, that it is impossible to obtain particulars, further than it is known that Mr. W. A. Bell's barns and sheds, a mile and a half away, are destroyed. The station building is destroyed and 150 cords of wood belonging to the Napanee paper mills is destroyed, whilst at noon the mills were threatened.

"Mr. T. Wells is reported as being very badly burned, and Mr. James Davy was dragged out of the fire so badly burned that his life is despaired of.

"The freight shed is burned with all its contents, also Mr. Rathbun's lumber yard.

"The fire at 2 p. m. was under control, thanks to the exertions of the Napanee firemen, who worked heroically. Our despatch at two, gives a deplorable description of the destitution of the residents of the ill-fated village. Only a few were insured and those for but small amounts. Most of the sufferers have lost everything and will have to start the world over again. The few fragments of furniture and household goods left are scattered in every direction, with between thirty and forty families without a place to lay their heads to-night except through the kindness of their more fortunate neighbors."

BENSFORT.

From a Correspondent.

S. S. ENTERTAINMENT. — The Sunday School authorities are arranging for a tea and entertainment on the 21st inst., the proceeds of which are to be devoted to the purchase of an organ.

JUBILEE POINT.—The magnetism of Jubilee Point extends even beyond Bensfort. Two anglers who live quite a piece from us, last week narrowly escaped being suddenly transformed into stiff cold water men.

LACROSSE.—Some time ago the captain of the Silver Star Lacrosse Club received a challange from the captain of the Hustlers of Millbrook, to play them a friendly game there. Accordingly the clubs crossed sticks on Aug 2nd. Four of their players were Hustlers, the remaining eight were Victorias, an older team. The ball was drawn off at 4 p.m., and before an hour's play J. Thorn had put the ball through twice for Bensfort. Millbrook's slugging up to this had been pretty hard to take with "modest stillness and humility." When the third game commenced their abuse became so intolerable and the "Duncan Acts" came so thick that the captain of the visiting club recommended his men to stop playing lest their victory might not continue with clean-handed honor. A fee of ten cents was charged to pay the expenses of the visiting club, but when the play ceased the young exquisites of Millbrook made a sneak with their sticks at half mast and nothing more was seen of them that evening. We must leave them here; the subject is not a pleasant one to dwell upon.

Sent Back.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Six English weavers who landed at Castle Garden yesterday, en route for the Elastic Web Manufacturing Co. at Bridgeport, Conn, were ordered back to England by Collector Magone on the ground that they came over in violation of the contract labor law.

What a Conductor Has Observed.

A railway conductor combats the hallucination that the coming gefieration of his countrymen will be puny, sickly and played out. His experience of many years convinces him that the contrary is the case, and that the average child of "under 12" who travels with a half fare ticket is as large as a boy or girl of 15 or 16 used to be in ante-railway days.—New York Mercury.

A Stupid Clerk

Dealer (to clerk)—What did that young lady want, James?

Clerk—She asked for anatomical Brussels carpets, and I told her we hadn't such a thing.

Dealer—Great Scott, James, that young lady is from Boston! She wanted body Brussels, and we've got an overstock of 'em.—New York Sun.

WIMAN'S MONOPOLY.

The Baltimore and Ohio was a thorn in the side of all the great monopolies of the United States. The great railway pool hated it because it was a non union railway and secured to the public competitive rates. The Western Union Telegraph monopoly hated it. The Western Union is a union company in a more intimate sense than other trades unions. It is a union company in the same way as Aarons rod was a union rod, having gobbled up all the other rods. The Baltimore and Ohio telegraph system was therefore a thorn in its side. Montreal Witness.

LAKEHURST.

CHURCH OPENING.—The new Methodist Church at Lakehurst (South Harvey) will be opened on Thursday, Sept. 15th. The dedicatory service will commence at 10.30 a. m. to be conducted by Rev I. Tovell, of Peterborough. A grand dinner will be served at 1 p. m, after which a platform meeting will be held, when addresses will be delivered by Revs. I. Tovell, Chairman of the District, J. McFarlane of Lakefield, A. Wilson B. A., Bobcaygeon, and Mr. Fitspatrick, of Harvey. The Brass Band and choir of Chemong will be in attendance to render choice music. A large crowd and a good time is expected.

CARDIFF.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—This township has decided in conexion with Monmouth to have an agricultural society. A successful beginning has been made, some eighty members having entered, president, vice, and nine directors chosen, and a secretary-treasurer oppointed. The usual grant will be received from the County Society, and the first annual exhibition is to be held this fall in Monmouth, next year in Cardiff. Go on, be earnest and peaceable, and prosper. A cheese factory is looming in the near distance.

CHURCH SERVICE.—Mr. Harding, of Apsley, by request of the Rural Dean, Dr. Smithett, visited us on Sunday, and held service, with Holy Communion, in St. Aidan's Church in the morning, the congregation was but small, as there was some mistake about the time. Afternoon service in the Deer Lake school house, where there was a good attendance and a satisfactory feeling shown.

NEW SCHOOL HOUSE.—The trustees of No. 2 section have built an imposing looking school house on a very imposing site facing Mr. Woods' establishment. It is a striking building and no doubt will be very serviceable. There are fifteen or sixteen scholars at present, and the building can accommodate 50 or 60. The population of the section should naturally increase, but if not the school will do admirably for a church, and as there is no building of that kind but what belongs to the English Church it is desirable that other provision should be made, and it is a great advantage to have an irresponsible body—as the trustees—who can erect a house suitable for a church by means of a public rate, without calling on the members of the various religions to erect their own meeting houses. Indeed, as there is all but unlimited power to tax ratepayers for purposes of secular education, why should there be the power to levy a tax for the purpose of religious instruction? Which is most conducive to the public good?

HARVEST.—The harvest is nearly complete; good crops in good condition. It is said that there 500 tons of good hay well saved in one concession.

APSLEY.

From a Correspondent.

HARVEST.—The harvest operations are about through, and the threshing machines are busy. Grain turns out well, but the straw is short. Hay is good and well saved Potatoes appear to be a failure in many places. Plums have dried up on the trees because of the heat and drouth. Beef and mutton are in demand, as the weather has been so hot and the flies so plentiful it was thought better to let the animals roam about the streets and neighbor's fields than to have them crawling on the larder shelves.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC.—At last the English Church people have had a S. S. picnic! and a very successful one it appears to have been. The scholars and friends met in St. Stephen's Church for a short act of worship, to give, as the priest said, a religious character to an event connected with a religious object. The congregation under the direction of the superintendent and teachers marched from the church in procession singing, to Mr. James Young's sugar bush, where is a snug little shanty, and every preparation was made to pass a pleasant day, and the day was indeed a pleasant one, and everything was pleasant. The tables were strong and well loaded, the benches were stronger and heavier loaded, the swings were strong enough to carry all the merry swingers. A number of Sunday School prizes were distributed with apparently general satisfaction and much amusement. A large handsome three-decker "sugar-coated" cake was put up for a prize; Mr. Patrick Regan took a very kind and helpful part in this and other matters. The number drawn was Mr. Harding's, at which there was a general and hearty cheer, but some one said afterwards "our parson has turned into a gambler!" Dinner and tea were served on the ground, then there was an adjournment to the house of a neighbor where there was a magic lantern exhibition, after that there was a free supper to all comers. It was a success, from 200 to 300 people being on the ground, all peaceable and friendly and well conducted. If the church people manage like this they deserve to have another. The whole affair reflects great credit on all concerned,—the S. S. people and visitors.

"Onward Christian soldiers, marching as to war,
With the cross of Jesus going on before,"

LEAVING.—Dr. Campbell is leaving here, so are Mr. Jos Hawley and his family. They have the best wishes of many sincere feiends who much regret parting with them. Dr. Campbell is a kindly, genial earnest man, who has won from many more than respect, while Mr. and Mrs. Hawley have lived here so long with merited good will that it seems hardly right for them to leave, but then they leave many of their family behind them; sore bereavements have laid the greater number of their children in our little Church yard, waiting the resurrection. May goodness prevent and follow them. We understand Mr. Harding has bought the Hawley property for Church purposes.

A FLAG HAULED DOWN.

A War Ship Objects to a Steamer entering Port with a House Flag Flying.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 7.—Mail advices received here to-day from St. Johns, Nfld., dated Aug. 25th, contain the following; "This forenoon the Furness Line steamer Demarara, Capt. Dixon, which yesterday towed in the disabled steamship Eagle, had her house flag, the Union Jack, with the letter "F" in the centre, flying at her maintop. This was thought by those on board H. M. S. Emerald to be a gross breach of etiquette. A boat, in charge of a lieutenant, was accordingly despatched from the warship with orders to have the flag hauled down. This Captain Dixon refused to do, saying that it was the company's flag, and he had been accustomed to fly it in every port he entered, and was never interfered with before. But his expostulations were useless. Right or wrong, the flag must come down, said the Emerald, at a signal from their officers, jumped on board and lowered the flag Whether the lieutenant acted discreetly or not remains to be seen. It is generally understood that any ship can fly the Union Jack if it has a figure of any description on it. The Demarara sailed this forenoon, and while leaving the harbor ran up the same flag in its position, where it proudly fluttered as if in defiance of the warship till lost to view in the distance."

A UNITED STATES VIEW.

It is not regard for the Canadian Pacific railway alone that causes opposition in the Dominion to the new railway in Manitoba reaching to our border. A prominent Canadian has said that the political consequences of its construction will be most serious, and that "it is dangerous to the interests of the whole country." That is, it threatens the disintegration of the British confederation in North America. While it is probable that the disintegration of the Canadian federation would be the best thing that could happen to most of its members, it is true that this view of the new Manitoba road is well founded. That road connecting with our railroad system will make the United States more than ever the natural commercial outlet for the province.—New York World.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER, 8, 1887.

WHICH SHOULD PREVAIL?

IN an article on the veto power the London Advertiser asks the Peterborough REVIEW:—

"When did the Opposition, or any newspaper representing the views of the Opposition, maintain the right of the Provinces to nullify the general policy of the Dominion?"

We reply that they did so each time they encouraged and advised Manitoba to push a railway through to a foreign country, in spite of disallowance, in order to divert railway traffic to foreign railways and to facilitate commerce with foreigners rather than with their countrymen. It is the general policy of the Dominion, as repeatedly expressed, to favour railway communication through our own territory and between our own Provinces. It is the general policy of the Dominion, as repeatedly expressed, to favor as much as possible commerce within the Dominion in preference to dealing with foreigners. There can be no doubt as to the general policy of the Dominion on these two points, though the Advertiser and others may maintain that the people of Canada have been foolish to adopt it.

The agitators for the railway in Manitoba and their instigators in other Provinces openly declare that their object is to combat this general policy. We are told by them that it is a grievance, which they are trying to redress, to have to deal with their countrymen in other Provinces rather than with foreigners in what they are pleased to term their natural market. We are also told by them that it is a grievance which they are trying to redress that they should have to use Canadian railways instead of foreign railways as they wish to do.

These are two diametrically opposite general policies; which is to prevail, that of the Dominion or that of the Province? We are not now discussing which is the best policy, but which opinion is to prevail, that of the country as a whole or that of a portion of it. Our Constitution says that in view of such differences of opinion, the view of the country as to its general policy is to prevail, by means of the veto power if necessary. The Advertiser and its friends say that the view of the Province must prevail, even at the cost of rebellion, in spite of its action being contrary to the spirit, if not the letter also, of our Constitution, which gives the Dominion Parliament jurisdiction as to railways to a foreign country or other Provinces, and withholds it from the Provincial Legislatures; its action being also contrary both to the letter and spirit of our Constitution, which gives to the Dominion by its Executive a veto power, so as to preserve the general policy.

Important as the immediate controversy is, far more important is the establishment of the general principle. Is Canada to have a policy as a country, or is each section to go its own way without caring for the general interests, with the result of the weakness arising from disunion? If now or at a future time the majority of the people of Canada adopt an injudicious policy, is the wiser minority to try to amend it by choosing other representatives in Parliament and in the Administration, or by setting the law courts at defiance and rebelling against the Constitution?

It is an important question for the welfare of our Dominion. It cannot be settled by the Advertiser and its friends using the veto when in office, and then instigating rebellion if it is used when they are out of office.

IN some editorial remarks upon sugar the Montreal Witness says:—

"There is no reason why, under free trade, our refiners and grocers should not be as prosperous as those in Britain, and yet make sugar quite as cheap."

Well, we do not wish to see our refineries having the same kind of prosperity as those in Britain, which consists in many of them being closed and the remainder on the verge of bankruptcy, under the unfair competition of foreign bonused sugar. Those employed in the refineries are either altogether deprived of their living or are working short time at reduced wages. And as there is no custom revenue from this foreign sugar the people of Great Britain have to raise money by direct taxation. This may be prosperity but it is not the kind Canadians want.

As to the proposed Joint Commission on the fishery question the New York Sun says:—

"Whatever authority the British side of this so-called commission may represent, the members on the American side will act without the authority of Congress. They can conclude no negotiations. They can make no agreement binding our Government."

Precisely—and it is obvious that we should not begin negotiations with unauthorized private individuals. We can wait till Congress gives the due authority and places both set of commissioners on an equal footing. We do not care to make further concessions and then have the compensating concessions repudiated. Once is enough for that trick.

THE KIND OF UNION.

It shows that the Commercial Union between the North and South is not fatal to Southern industry, for under existing conditions the South is becoming a wealthy and progressive country. Why should Canada, if commercially allied with the natural market for our coal, our iron and much of our other produce, agricultural as well as industrial, be less progressive and less prosperous than the South?—Toronto Mail (Annexationist).

OVERWORKED BRAINS.

A POINT AT WHICH LABOR CEASES TO BE STRENGTHENING.

One of the Earliest Indications of Brain Exhaustion—Steps Toward the Verge of Insanity—Burdens Heaped Upon the Minds of the Young.

There is such a thing as mind strengthening work. In truth it is, as every physiologist knows, only by work, minds, or, more correctly speaking, brains can be strengthened in their growth and naturally developed. The exercise of those centers of the nervous system, whose functions what we call consciousness and intellect are associated is as essential to their nutrition as activity is to the healthy growth of any other part of the organism, whether nervous or muscular. Every part of the living body is developed, and enjoys vitality, by the law which makes the appropriation of food dependent upon and commensurate with the amount of work it does. It feeds in proportion as its works, as truly as it works in proportion as it feeds. This canon of organic life is the foundation of those estimates which physiologists form when they compute the value of food in weight lifting power. It is, however, necessary to recognize that, although these propositions are true in the abstract, they need the introduction of a new integer or combining power before any sum of results can be worked out.

We know that food is practically just as truly outside the body after it has been eaten, digested, and even taken in the blood current, as it is when it lies on the table. Nutrition is a tissue function, and its performance depends on the appetite and feeding power, which is something different from the organic need, of the tissue with which the nutrient fluid is brought into contact. Again, any particular part of the organism may be so exhausted by work that it has not power enough left to feed. It is a matter of the highest practical moment that this fact should be recognized. There is undoubtedly a point at which work ceases to be strengthening and becomes exhausting, self exhausting and self destructive so far as the particular issue in activity is concerned.

Work may be carried too far, in fact to such a point that not only the last reserve of power for action, but the ultimate unit, so to say, of the force of the nutrition, which is, as we now believe, identical with the force of general activity, may be expended in work and the organism left so utterly powerless that its exhausted tissues can no longer appropriate the food supplied or placed within their normal reach. We have said that it is necessary this should be understood. It has a special bearing on the question of brain work in childhood and indolence.

Just as extreme weakness and faintness of the body as a whole produce restlessness and loss of control, so extreme exhaustion of the brain produces mental agitation and loss of healthy self consciousness. This is how and why the "overworked" become deranged. One of the earliest indications, or symptoms, of brain exhaustion is commonly irritability; then comes sleeplessness of the sort which seems to consist in inability to cease thinking either of a particular subject or things in general; next, the mental unrestful or uncontrollable thought gets the better of the will, even during the ordinary hours of wakefulness and activity, which is a step further toward the verge of insanity than the mere persistence of thought at the hour of sleep—this way lies madness; and, finally, the thinking faculty, or, as we say, the imagination, gets the better of the will and asserts supremacy for its phantoms, those of sight or hearing being the most turbulent and dominant which happen to be most commonly used in intellectual work, and therefore most developed by the individual cerebrum—this is madness.

FROM BAD TO WORSE.

Such is the story of overwork of the brain or mind; and it is easy to see that at any stage of the progress from bad to worse the will may be overpowered and the judgment perverted in such manner as to impel the victim of this mind trouble to seek refuge in death, or to so disorder his consciousness that he supposes himself to be acting in obedience to some just and worthy behest, when he commits an act of self destruction or does something in the doing of which he accidentally dies. Such, in the main, is the story of suicide from overwork.

What, then, can be the excuse pleadable by those who heap on the brains of the young or adolescent such burdens of mind labor and worry as exhaust their very faculties of self help and leave them a prey to the vagaries of a starved brain? We pity the suffering of those shipwrecked sailors who, after exposure in an open boat, perhaps without food, for hours or days, "go mad," and, raving of feast and pleasures, the antitheses of their actual experience, fall on each other or throw themselves overboard. Have we no pity for brains dying of lack of food because we have compelled them to expend their very last unit of force in work, and now they are distraught in the act of dying?

It may be a sublime ideal, that of a highly educated people; but if it should happen that the realization of this beautiful dream of our philosophic reformers can only be achieved by the slaughter of the weak, it will scarcely console the national conscience to reflect that, after all, "the survival of the fittest" is the law of nature.—Lancet.

Boston Baked Beans.

In the Boston bakeries the method of cooking beans is as follows: After being washed clean they are placed in barrels or tubs and soaked for several hours, after which they are put in large iron kettles and parboiled for half an hour or so. Then they are flooded with cold water to reduce the temperature and put into earthen pots holding ten quarts each, with about five pounds of salt pork sunk to the general level in each pot. At night they are placed in ovens, from under which the fires are drawn, and are thus baked slowly ten or twelve hours. The slower the baking the better taste do the beans get. The ordinary price at the best places is fifteen cents a quart baked, but they are also sold for twelve cents. Quite a number of people prepare their own beans and send the pots to the baker, who charges five cents for baking them. Most of the smaller bakeshops get their beans from large bakers, who also supply many of the restaurants.

Millionaires at Lunch.

Four of five men, worth collectively money enough to buy Bulgaria, or the Union Pacific road, or Murray Hill, meet and eat luncheon together every afternoon between 1 o'clock and 2 o'clock in the Western Union building, on Broadway. They would not be likely to attract attention in a crowd. One looks like a country storekeeper in town on a visit, one like a college professor of a slightly church turn, one like a sharp little Cuban tobacconist, and the other two like ordinary, well fed, solid city business men. Their names will show, however, that they really answer no such description at all, for one is Jay Gould, another is Cyrus W. Field, a third is Sidney Dillon, a fourth is Russell Sage and the fifth is ex-Governor Alonzo B. Cornell. One is the richest man on the continent, one has been governor of the Empire state, one was a great man and world famous before the others were heard of, and one, Russell Sage, lost seven millions three years ago without being able to see much difference in his pile afterward. Altogether, they are supposed to be worth two hundred and fifty or three hundred millions of dollars by men to whom the Babel of Wall street is not uproar and confusion.

One reason why all meet in this way every day is that by doing so they get their luncheon for nothing. That may sound ridiculous to any one who supposes that rich men after getting their money by thrift suddenly become dead to their early training, but, however that may be, the friends of at least two of this little company declare it to be a fact that they are glad to economize in this way. There is no such daily conclave in the world. It is really a grand daily inquisition at which railroads and great corporations of many kinds are apt to be discussed in a manner most important to investors the world over—tragically, it may be, or happily or desultorily.—Julian Ralph's Letter.

The Soap Boxes in the Garret.

I received quite a valuable suggestion from a friend of mine up on the hill last week. There are ten in their family, and up in the garret stand as many wooden boxes, soap boxes, each with the name of its owner and the date of its beginning painted upon it. In this box each keeps anything private and it is never opened except by himself. How I should like to rummage them! The sentimental one would have locks of raven, gold and soft brown hair, rose buds, gloves, all the instruments of sweet torture, or relics of past conquests. The practical one would there store things not now available, but which might become so. Ned, she told me, keeps all newspapers containing any particular news, carefully marked. That's a good idea, too. What a history, years from now, when we scribblers have handed in our last "copy," and are quiet at last with only "Hic jacet" to be written, could be compiled from the words we have sent out, hot from their haste, in our daily race against time!

Louise has in hers every programme of everything she has ever attended with the gentleman's name who took her, and she has traveled much and seen more. Won't it be nice when that pink white skin of hers is brown and wrinkled; that mass of sunny hair dwindled to a little pug of faded hue, and that slight figure bent with life's storms, for her to sit of a winter evening looking over those very programmes? Her grandchildren will press about to hear of that night when Patti the divine: "Ah, children, you have no such singers now. I was a beauty then"—but we've all heard, we all know how she'll ramble on, while the little Louise wonders how grandma ever could have looked like her as she insists she did. Many thoughts those boxes have called up.—Pioneer Press.

A Liquor Made from Bananas.

The Indian Agriculturist calls attention to the fact that India abounds in bananas or plantains, and wonders that the fruit has never been employed in the distillation of a fermented liquor. The common prickly pear has been utilized for this purpose in Malaga, and with considerable advantage to the distillers; and it now appears that missionaries in the Congo region have discovered that a beverage made of bananas is a preventive of malarial fevers. A banana liquor company has recently been started in India for producing banana liquor in either an alcoholic or non-alcoholic form, and which can be used with equal advantage as an ordinary liquor or diluted with hot or cold or soda water. For the temperatures of northern regions, including England, it will probably be best esteemed in conjunction with brandy or other spirits.—Scientific American.

A Curious Point of Law.

An application was the other day made by Judge Bartlett, in the Kings County supreme court, for an order authorizing the payment of money out of an estate, the petitioner having become of age and entitled to it under the provisions of a will.

"A man cannot know his own age," observed the judge, as he looked up after reading an affidavit.

"Can't he swear to it?" asked the petitioner's lawyer.

"No. He will have to get some one who knows."

"Well, I think his mother will be able to swear to it," said the lawyer, as he gathered up his papers. "The boy was there at the time, I presume, but possibly his memory is defective."

"Anyway, it's a point of law," said another lawyer.—New York Journal.

An Example of Economy.

Out of what trifles does poverty contrive to extract a living! A decently dressed man with one arm sold me some fusees at a cent a box the other day. I asked him what he made on them, and he told me that he cleared two cents on every five boxes. He sold from 100 to 150 boxes a day. "And you can live on this?" I asked. "Yes," said he, cheerfully. "I hire a room for $1 a week and cook for myself. I live and save money. I've got a savings bank account, and, please God, I'll have a stand next winter if I can get a permit." And he showed me a bank book with a credit for fifty odd dollars in it—fifty odd dollars filched from his actual necessities out of an income never greater than sixty cents a day. —Alfred Trumble in New York News.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

"N—no," he said hesitatingly, after a pause, "but you may be mistaken. So, of course, may I; only I don't think I am. You see, I couldn't ask her point blank whether she loved the man, could I? All I know is that she had made up her mind to marry him if he asked her, that she thinks it her duty to marry him, and that she is awfully distressed about Bracknell's behavior. I haven't such a bad opinion of Bracknell as you have. My belief is that, if matters were put plainly before him, he would see what a dirty business this is and would refuse to have anything more to do with it. And I've a great mind to look him up and tell him what I think."

I endeavored to dissuade my friend from taking this uncalled for step; I represented to him, in the prettiest language at my command, that he would do far better to mind his own business, and that if he insisted upon meddling with what did not concern him, he would only get rapped over the knuckles for his pains; but, as I mentioned at the beginning of this chapter, very few people are wise enough to act upon my advice. Jim assured me that he did not in the least mind being rapped over the knuckles, that he intended to do what he was pleased to call "the straight thing," without regard to personal consequences, and that, for the rest, he was far too unhappy already to be made either more or less so by Bracknell's displeasure.

So I let him go, without attempting to comfort him about Lady Mildred, or telling him what was my own belief with regard to her affections. It would not, I imagine, have made him any happier to know that she was in all probability as unhappy as he, and the prospect of this love affair reaching a successful issue was so very slight that it seemed best to let it die of inanition, as all love affairs will, if only sufficient time be allowed them.

CHAPTER XII.

Not long after Jim had left me I walked down to the club to glance through the evening papers, and finding my favorite arm chair by the window vacant, I seated myself comfortably in it and took up The St. James' Gazette. The political article did not look very interesting, so I skipped it and went on to the next, which was printed in smaller type, and was headed "Infants in the Saddle."

"A much needed warning to parents," it began, "will, we may hope, be conveyed by the sad accident to Lord Bracknell's child which we report elsewhere. The wonder is that such accidents are not of more frequent occurrence." I read no further, but hurriedly turned over the leaves of the paper until I came upon the following paragraph:

"Accident in Rotten Row.—Lord Sunning, the only child of Lord Bracknell, and grandson of the Earl of Staines, was riding in Rotten row this morning, attended by a groom, when his pony suddenly became unmanageable and bolted. The animal galloped for a considerable distance, then swerved and fell, throwing its rider with great violence against the iron railings. Lord Sunning, who was rendered insensible by the fall, was at once removed to his father's residence in Wilton place, where we regret to say that he lies in a precarious condition, having, it is feared, sustained incurable injuries."

I ordered a hansom and started at once for Wilton place, hoping against hope that the newspaper report might turn out to be an exaggeration.

But before the butler who opened the door for me had spoken a word I knew that there was no hope. In a few moments I had heard all about it. The great doctors had been and had gone away again, saying that nothing could be done. Sentence of death had been pronounced, and the boy would hardly live until morning. He was conscious now, and had no pain, the butler said. "Perhaps his lordship would see you, sir," he added, in a low voice; "he's bearing up wonderful."

I entered the hall, where several servants were standing about, and one of them went to tell Bracknell I was there. At the foot of the staircase sat a man in groom's dress, bending forward, with his elbows on his knees, and a look of such blank despair upon his face that I could not refrain from making an effort to comfort him. "It wasn't your fault, you know, James," I said—stupidly enough. The man lifted his heavy eyes for a moment. "His lordship spoke terrible 'ard to me, sir," he said.

I could well believe it. Men like Bracknell are apt to be cruel and unjust in their grief, and to attack the first person who chances to cross their path; but to them, in their turn, it is an injustice to remember words spoken at such times. I was endeavoring to say as much to the unfortunate James, who, however, did not appear to hear me, when Bracknell came down stairs, with a slow, steady step. Except that his usually florid complexion had become perfectly colorless, he showed no traces of emotion. He waited until he was close beside me, and then said quite quietly, "Sunning has broken his back, Maynard."

All of a sudden the groom burst out crying. I don't know anything more painful and pathetic to witness than the unrestrained weeping of those who belong to what we call the lower orders. It is all very well to say that they feel less deeply than we who have been schooled to control ourselves; but sometimes I doubt whether they really do feel less deeply, and whether, after all, we have much right to consider ourselves superior to them because, as we assume, our sorrow outlasts theirs. For in truth all sorrow is short lived enough.

Bracknell glanced at the man, knitting his brows. "James," he said, "I believe I blamed you just now. I was wrong; you were not to blame. I beg your pardon, James."

He spoke in a hard, level voice. He had made a mistake and apologized for it; but he was not, apparently, moved. Presently he turned away, taking me by the arm and saying, "Come upstairs and see the boy. There is no more suffering now; but he is dying, all the same. Won't last through the night, they say."

I followed him up the stairs and across the landing, wondering a little at his calmness. But with his hand upon the lock of a door, from the other side of which came an audible murmur of voices, he faced about abruptly, his eyes blazing and his white face set.

"Damn that woman!" he exclaimed. "She promised me that the boy should never ride alone again, and she has killed him rather than have one of her cursed flirtations interrupted."

I caught him by the arm to stop him, for his voice rang through the silent house; but he guessed what I was afraid of, and broke into an odd, savage sort of a laugh. "Oh, don't distress yourself," he said; "it's all one to her—she doesn't care!"

Then he went into Sunning's room.

The poor little man was lying flat on his back where they had laid him. His cheeks were as white as marble, and his features were pinched and sharp, but of all the crowd of faces which I saw confusedly as I entered, his was the most cheerful. Lady Bracknell was sitting by the window, pressing her handkerchief to her lips. She looked frightened, I thought. Beside her stood Jim, who, I suppose, had come to the house upon the errand that we know of, and had been admitted. Lady Mildred was there too, and Sunning's old nurse, and Lord Staines, and Mr. Turner; but none of them spoke to me, nor did I venture to do more than glance at them.

Sunning had his dog, a little blue Skye, on the bed beside him. He held out his left hand to me, for his right arm was crushed and powerless, and smiled. We had been friends, more so than I have had any occasion to mention in the course of this narrative, and I think he was glad to see me. He wished me to have the dog, he said, and I was to take him away with me, please, because he wouldn't lie still much longer, "and he hasn't had his walk to-day." He had a few last words to say to me, but they were only a few, for his strength was evidently ebbing fast, and I could see that his childish brain was preoccupied. His eyes kept wandering from one member of the group to another, but always rested longest upon his father, whose broad shoulders were turned toward us, and whose elbow I touched at last, feeling sure that the boy wanted to speak to him.

GENERAL.

Bush fires north of Owen Sound have done great damage on the Indian peninsula, destroying crops, barns, fences and orchards.

During the month of August 4,839 emigrants left England for British North America, being 1,200 more than during the same month last year.

Headache, Billiousness, Dyspepsia and Indigestion relieved and at once by Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Try it. Samples free.

The Imperial Home Secretary announced on Tuesday, that, in view of the Exeter theatre disaster, the Government intended to legislate for the protection of the public attending theatres.

The Prince of Wales, accompanied by his son, Prince Albert Victor, arrived at Helsingaer on Tuesday and was received by the Danish royal family and the Czar and Czarina of Russia.

Mr. Clarke Wallace, M. P., has left Ottawa for the North West on a visit to the York colony. The settlers in the colony this year have produced about fifty thousand bushels of grain.

Right now is the time to use a good Blood Purifying Medicine. Lose no time in getting a bottle of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It will do you good. Sold by all druggists. 50c.

Posmaster-General McLelan states that negotiations are in progress with the United States postal authorities for sending United States mails for Japan and China by the Canadian Pacific route.

Rev. Donald McLeod, one of the Queen's chaplains and editor of Good Words, was in Ottawa on Tuesday and left for Prescott, whence he will proceed by boat through the Thousand Islands to Toronto.

Bush fires threatened to destroy the village of Aylmer, and the inhabitants turned out in a body to fight the advancing flames. Heavy rain, however, set in, and effectually stopped their progress.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills, Salts, &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists.

The Rebellion Claims Commission has completed its labours, and all the awards have been paid. Many of the claimants whose claims were rejected or only partially allowed have taken action against the Government in the Exchequer Court.

The railway statistics of the Dominion for the fiscal year 1885-86 have just been issued. They show an increase of 548 miles of line in operation over 1885, and a total profit of over $9,000,000. During the year 144 persons were killed and 50 injured.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order. Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

TURNBULL has imported a heavy stock o Winter Mantles. Don't fail to see them.

The rate of taxation in St. Thomas for the current year has been struck at 1¼ cents on the dollar.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind

Two hundred pairs of kid boots, and more than half of the Kidd's hide, left yet at R. J. KIDD'S boot and shoe store.

On a Visit to Kansas.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Fitzgerald are leaving town on a four weeks' trip to Blue Rapids Kansas. All orders for wood, shingles or livery will be taken at the livery stables by John Dunford, who is in charge.

Important, Very!

A regular monthly meeting of the Young Men's Prohibition Club will be held this evening in their room, Hunter street. Very important business. A full attendance requested at eight o'clock, sharp. 2d58

Seeing the Elephant.

Barnum's circus tents were spread at Lindsay on Wednesday. Several coach loads of people went up from Peterborough to see the elephant. There was a big crowd in town and things went off in real circus style.

NOVELTIES—Braided Fronts and Panels for Dresses at ROWSE'S. Watered Plushes, newest shades, at ROWSE'S. New shades in Plushes at 99c per yard at ROWSE'S. Lovely Costume Suitings at 12½c per yards at ROWSE'S.

Statute Labor.

Collector Cummings arranged several young men at the Police Court this morning, charging them with the non-payment of Statute Labor tax. Several were volunteers, others were not served and two cases were enlarged. No fines were imposed.

Eloped.

A breezy little incident happened on Wednesday, the culmination of an affaire d'amour which has been in progress for a time. Mr. Harry Prox, who has been cook at the Oriental Hotel the last few months past, was pronounced by all who knew him to be a gay fellow. The way he curled his moustache and brushed his hair was enough to make any girl with a vulnerable heart fall down and worship him. His charms were too much for one of the waitresses, and she, it seems, impressed him. The result was a drive to Lakefield, the tying of the nuptial knot, and a skip out for Rochester.

Wins the Cup.

Mr. W. R. Greatrix, town, went to Belleville on Tuesday to take part in the bicycle race for the Corby Challenge Cup. He and previously won it twice and T. West and E B. Cooper, both of Belleville, each had a win credited to them. Year before last, when Greatrix had a fair show of winning the final third, he was unfortunate enough to fall off his machine when passing around a curve. It was not competed for last year, but this year Greatrix carried it off triumphantly. The race took place in Belleville on Wednesday, Greatrix being pitted against his opponent of year before last, E. B. Cooper. The track was good but it was very windy. Greatrix covered the first 3½ miles distancing his opponent, who then withdrew from the contest, by half a mile. Greatrix finished the five miles in 19 minutes. The cup is a very handsome piece of plate. It will be on exhibition at the Golden Lion dry goods store this evening.

OPENED out at Turnbull's, case after case of Fall and Winter Millinery, marked at prices that will suit everybody.

FAZ—Will you believe it? They are really selling 85c Kid Gloves, 4 Button length, for 49c a pair at ROWSE'S Trade Palace.

Arriving Daily

At Ostrom's Fruit market, George street, Oysters by the quart, 40 cents. d59f

Personal.

Mrs. Dunsford will be prepared to receive her pupils on and after Monday, 5th Sept.

The Very Rev. Dean O'Connor, Perth, is registered at the Grand-Central Hotel.

Councillor Cahill has returned from California, where he has been spending his holidays. He looks pleasant and happy even though he hadn't heard the rate was 12¾ mills on the dollar.

Mr. James Fife, of Otonabee, the well-known cattle buyer, has returned from an extended trip to the North-West. He was up on a prospecting trip and has returned well satisfied. The crops, he says, are magnificent. Wheat and all kinds of grain are heavy, the root crops being particularly good. Potatoes have been dug weighing four pounds apiece. He met many of his old friends, many of whom hold important positions, while on his trip.

WONDERFUL—1000 yards of Fancy Ribbons to be sold this week at Rowse's Trade Palace, at only 5c per yard.

Fall Fairs.

The following dates of autumn exhibitions have been announced:—

Central Exhibition, at Peterborough, Oct. 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th.

Provincial Exibition, at Ottawa, Sept. 19th to 24th.

East Durham and Cavan, at Millbrook, Sept. 26th and 27th.

Industrial and Dominion, at Toronto, Sept. 5th to 17th.

Bay of Quinte, at Belleville, Sept. 20th to 23rd.

South Monaghan, at Centreville, on Oct. 13th and 14th.

Lindsay Central, at Lindsay, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 20. 21. and 22.

Manvers, at Bethany, on Friday and Saturday, Sept. 30 and Oct. 1.

Minden, Snowden, etc., at Minden, Tuesday, October 4th.

Emily, at Omeme, Sept. 28th and 29th.

Baillieboro Central at Bailiboro, Sept 29th and 30th.

Otonabee, at Keene, on Oct. 14th.

The Kabo Corset, warranted to wear a year without breaking, is sold only at Turnbull's, the Headquarters for all New and Improved Corsets.

COMMERCIAL UNION IMPRACTICABLE.

A commission appears to be the only feasible way now open of settling the (fisheries) question, for Commercial Union is not to be counted among practical things.—Monetary Times.

OUR DEGRADED POSITION.

It would be utterly absurd for Canadians to expect to gain any more power in settling the tariff of a real commercial union than would be possessed by any 5,000,000 citizens of the United States. Retaining fully the right to go out of Z liverein, Canada could expect no more than such influence in forming the continental tariff as 5 000,000 people ought to have in a business partnership with 60,000,000."—Toronto Globe (Annexationist.)

A Gambler Decorated.

The French government, which some time ago seemed to sympathize with the efforts of the adversaries of Monte Carlo, that academy of suicide, has evidently changed its opinion on this subject. It has just decorated the president of the Societe des Jeux. It is hard to explain why the government refuses to authorize the establishment in France of a society similar to that at Monaco, the president of which it decorates. The gamblers of the whole world might be attracted to Paris, which for some time has complained of being less visited than it was, and they would bring with them the animation and the profits now taken to Monaco. But instead of that the government forbids at Nice, which is at the very door of Monaco, even the small horse game, in which, with a run of bad luck, one can lose twenty-five francs in a day, while at Monaco one can ruin himself and his whole family in fifty minutes.

It is to be hoped, then, that the decoration of the Legion of Honor, bestowed on the president of the Society of Suicides at Monte Carlo, is the prelude to freedom of gambling in France and to the conferring of a right on all Frenchmen to open gambling houses, and by this means to win a title to the decoration of the Legion of Honor.—St. James' Gazette.

Wild Game at the Capital.

Not long ago a great commotion was observed in the White House grounds, directly back of the conservatory. All the workmen in the establishment were dodging about in a violent manner, and the object of their attention was presently seen to be a wild rabbit, which soon disengaged himself from his pursuers and made good his escape into the White lot and adjacent wilderness. Inquiry shows that this is not an unusual phenomenon in Washington. There is considerable game in the public reservations here at times. Opossums, coons, rabbits, foxes and squirrels are sometimes seen in them, and it is said that in the more secluded portion of the mall, near the Smithsonian Institution, several wild rabbits have established their permanent home.—New York Sun.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there was a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—"Civil Service Gazette."

Tailors' Picnic.

The first annual picnic under the auspices of the tailors of Petercorough took place on Thursday. The Golden Eye, which had been chartered for the occasion, took a party of about two hundred to Idyl Wild. A very pleasant sail was had both down and back. A feature of the day was the baseball match between the tailors and Hamilton's foundry hands, for the tailor's challenge cup. The foundry nine won by a score of 6-4.

Hurt.

A horse belonging to Mr. Howden ran from the market building across the market square this afternoon. When it reached the sidewalk near the corner of George and Charlotte streets it took a short detour and ran into a man who was passing along. The movement was so sudden that the man had no time to get out of the way. The buggy wheel struck him on the back and prostrated him. The horse, with the buggy dragging behind him, ran down Charlotte street. The people gathered around the injured man and carried him to Clancy's hotel. Dr. Kincaid was telephoned for, but was unable to ascertain the injuries till an examination was made. A hack was called and he was taken home. The name of the injured man is Edward Connors. He was formerly foreman for Mr. Scott, lumberman.

Scorched.

On Thursday evening Teddy Courtney, son of Mr. E. Courtney, and Geo. Baguley, both of Ashburnham, went out for a sail on the Little Lake. Mrs. Courtney left town on a visit in the morning and Teddy had the gun in the evening. He took the gun when he went out for a sail, and fired it off as George rowed. He also manufactured squibs as the boat sailed around. The sport came suddenly to an end on a spark getting in the powder flask. The explosion took off Teddy's hat and sent the flask twenty feet in the air. The boat was rowed to shore and the lad was carried to the section man's house. Here his face was oiled and it was found that he had not lost his eyesight. His hair was burned off, his eyelashes were singed and a copious amount of powder was driven into his face. He was attended all last night, and though suffering intensely, shows signs of an early recovery. Dr. King attended.

Mr. Frank Karsh, formerly of Peterborough, is here on a visit. He is now in charge of a train on a leading American road.

Fun.

One of the windows of Habilliment Hall to-day is crowded incessantly. The attraction is the figure of a gentleman with a red nose and questionable balance of limb, trying to unlock his house door. The inscription reads, "Only been down to the club." The expression assumed by the gentleman at the various stages of the operation is very amusing.

OH, kid, kid, Kidd! why are boots so cheap at your shop?

Business.

The successful business men are those who first keep a large and varied stock of goods, and then let the people know what they have to sell at close prices. Among the many fine dry goods establishments of Peterborough that of Sheppard stands out prominently. His place of business under the Town Clock has shelves loaded with the newest goods, He buys a large part of his goods direct from the factories, thereby saving his patrons the profits of middlemen. One thing can be said of Sheppard's establishment, and that is this, that no business in Ontario is conducted upon a more correct business plan. The equipments, among which is the cash railway, having several stations, are complete Mr. Sheppard is at the head of affairs himself, and is ably seconded by a competent staff of clerks. The people of Peterborough will take interest in reading his fall announcement, made in another column of this issue.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Electricity and Ice Cream.

An eastern physician announces that he has solved the mystery of ice cream poisoning and that electricity is at the bottom of it all. He has found that the rapid revolutions of the zinc paddles used in the ordinary ice cream freezers generate electricity, and that the zince is dissolved and disseminated through the cream. I rather doubt this theory, as zinc, if present in sufficient quantity to produce poisonous effects, would be easily detected by chemists, and its supposed part in ice cream poisoning would have been announced long ago. That ice cream is sometimes poisonous is settled, but just what causes it no one can definitely state.—Globe-Democrat.

Smoking at the Seaside.

AT PORT ARTHUR.

Bishop Dowling, of Peterborough, Welcomed to that Town.

On Sunday, Sept. 5th, there was a large attendance, the Sentinel says, at the services in St. Andrew's Church, Port Arthur, numbers of persons being unable to obtain seats. After high mass at eleven o'clock Bishop Dowling administered the sacrament of confirmation to about fifty boys and girls and several adults.

At the opening of the evening services an address was read and presented to his lordship, on behalf of the parish of St. Andrew, by Mr. Thomas Ryan. From the address we make the following extracts:—

"My Lord,—In the name of the Catholics of the Parish of St. Andrew's, Port Arthur, we have the honor to approach your lordship to bid you a hearty welcome on this your first pastoral visit to this old missionary district of Algoma. When the glad tidings reached us some months ago that the illustrious Leo XIII., ever solicitous for the welfare of his flock and the evangelization and salvation of his children, appointed your lordship to preside over this young diocese our hearts were filled with joy; and we acknowledged our indebtedness to the Holy Father for the high dignity to which he has exalted you and our full appreciation of the deep debt of gratitude we are under to him for his judicious choice of a successor to the illustrious Bishop Jamot. We have learned with great pleasure that your lordship is endowed with all the qualities of mind and heart and administrative ability befitting a successor of the apostles. During the many years of your pastorate in a neighboring diocese as a parish priest and administrator your zeal and piety won the love, respect and confidence of all classes of the community in which you labored. Your literary abilities are known to us and we have every reason to believe that God's holy word will be expounded with true apostolic inspiration.

"We trust your lordship will be so gracious as to allow us to assure you that this present visit is a source of gratification to us and we are desirous of tendering to you, as children of our holy mother the church, our profound respect for your lordship as chief pastor of this diocese."

In replying his lordship said he felt he was not worthy of the high tributes paid to him, but he accepted them as indicative of what he ought to be. He would not make any attempt at eloquence, but merely speak as a father to his children, from the depths of his heart. It had given him great pleasure to visit the parish and note the zeal and homage to the church which was evinced. He was pleased to see such evidences of prosperity in the parish as was shown by the religious feeling, and also the educational and charitable institutions. He pointed out the grave responsibilities of the office of bishop and asked for the prayers of his flock that his work might be blessed to the furtherance of religion and God's holy church. Taking for a text "The Office of the Good Sheppard," his lordship then delivered an eloquent sermon.

EXETER THEATRE HORROR.

Relief Fund for the Sufferers—Government Action.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—The relief fund for the sufferers by the Exeter theatre fire has reached a sum exceeding £500, and is rapidly increasing. The managers of the London Theatres are striving hard to overcome the damaging effect of the disaster upon the attendance at the Metropolitan Theatres, and are publishing statements showing the abundant facilities for exit possessed by their respective houses and the marvellously short time in which they can be emptied without resorting to unusual haste and with no danger of choking up the passage ways. The Government will immediately introduce a bill in the House of Commons prescribing such regulations for theatres and public halls as may be necessary in addition to the present laws to prevent a repetition of the Exeter horror, and an attempt will be made to lay aside all other business until it shall be passed.

EXETER, Sept. 8.—The public funeral of the victims of the Theatre Royal fire took place yesterday. There were 52 caskets containing identified bodies and 14 caskets containing remains which it was impossible to identify. The streets though which the funeral procession passed were lined by silent crowds.

THE POPE'S OFFER.

A Rumor That he Would Meditate Between England and Ireland.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—It is rumored that the Vatican has intimated its willingness to undertake the task of meditating between the Government and the leaders of the Irish party for the final settlement of the Irish question on the lines of a moderate measure of Home Rule and it is also said that such a proposal would find favor in the minds of the Liberal-Unionists as a whole, a large number of Tories and not a small portion of the followers of Mr. Gladstone. Whether the project would be satisfactory to the Parnellites, most of whom are committed to a policy of absolute control of purely Irish affairs, is not stated, but the probabilities are that they could easily be persuaded to be guilded by the maxim "that half a loaf is better than no bread," and accept the Pope's offices of mediator. The project is understood to be the result of Mgr. Persico's mission of Ireland, and if it should be carried out to a successful issue would greatly strengthen the Vatican's chances of restoring full diplomatic relations with England. If His Holiness could thus finally relieve the Government from the harassment of the Irish question the privilege of sending a papal nuncio to London and receiving in return an English ambassador at the Vatican would seem to be but small compensation for the service rendered

A VOTE OF CENSURE PROPOSED.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—The Liberal leaders have decided to challenge in the House of Commons the legality of the Government's proclamation of the Irish meetings at Ennis and elsewhere, and a vote of censure will be moved and supported by Sir William Harcourt and Sir George O. Trevelyan on Monday next. The Parnellite members, who are absent in Ireland, will be recalled to assist in the effort to carry the motion, and all except Mr. Parnell himself, who is sick at Avandale, will it is expected, be in their seats. The discussion will be led on the part of the Irish members by Mr. Sexton.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—The imports during the month of August, as shown by the returns issued by the Board of Trade to-day, increased £2,380,000, as compared with the month of August, 1886, and the exports increased £1,040,000.

DEFENCES OF HALIFAX.

A New Fort on McNab's Island—To be Made a Great Coaling Station.

A Halifax despatch says:—It is learned that the British Government is prepared to further strengthen the defences of Halifax harbour. A new fortification is being erected at the extreme point of McNab's Island, on which will be stationed two ten-inch breech-loading guns, weighing 54 tons each. These guns will have an explosive power of 200 pounds of powder, and will carry 800-pound shot a distance of 6 miles. York Redoubt has hitherto been regarded as the chief outer defence of the harbour, but it was discovered at the time of the sham naval engagement, during Jubilee week, that it was possible for a war vessel to get safely past this defence. The new fort on McNab's Island is being erected to meet such a contingency. It is said Halifax is also to be made a great coaling station and the headquarters for the British American squadron as soon as the dry dock here is completed. The Bermuda dockyard staff will be removed to Halifax, and three batteries of artillery will also come. Besides this, the Scottish regiment at present quartered in Jamaica will arrive here in November to remain. It is estimated that the squadron and additional troops to be located here will involve an expenditure in this city of not less than half a million dollars a year.

THEY WANT IT.

Australians Anxious for Connection with Canada by the Pacific Cable.

An Ottawa despatch says: Sandford Fleming, C. M. G., returned from England, says at the Colonial Conference the Pacific cable scheme made a deep impression on the Australian delegates. They left England having every faith in the importance of such a connecting link, and intent on doing what they could to promote its success. The company is now in correspondence with the Australian authorities, and have submitted a proposition for consideration. Sounding the imperial federation note, Mr. Fleming expressed surprise that Canadians did not take a more active interest in what must be of immense benefit to the growth and future progress of the British empire. The Canadian section of the league would go on working quietly for the present until the opportune hour for more vigorous and united action on the part of the general forces was required. Mr. Fleming is looking quite robust, and says he had an exceedingly enjoyable trip throughout.

The Daily Review

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER, 9, 1887.

THE SUGAR TRADE.

It is very disgraceful that for the sake of attacking the Government of the country and the policy adopted by its people, disappointed politicians should endeavour, by false representations made to injure an important industry, to deprive of their means of support the numerous people who depend upon it and to belittle Canada in the eyes of those dwelling here or thinking of doing so, that an exorbitant price is being extorted for an article of general consumption.

These decriers of their own country and of their fellow countrymen are impudently asserting that the sugar refiners have combined to fix a price for sugar and to exact an excessive profit from the consumer. This is simply a falsehood. So far from having fixed a price the different refineries are asking different prices. As to the profit being excessive, and the conclusion drawn from it that competition is prevented, contrary to the claims of the advocates of the National Policy by this asserted combination, both are equally false. At this very moment two refineries are standing idle because the profits of refining are too small to induce capitalists to operate them. If the profits were excessive or even amply remunerative these or other refineries would soon be at work to obtain a share of the good thing.

The only foundation on which the edifice of falsehood has been built is that the refiners have refused to sell to certain grocers unless at an advanced price. We have no hesitation in saying that in so doing they have adopted the only course open to honest men. They are selling to other grocers who have sensibly and honestly resolved to discontinue the evil practice of retailing sugar at a loss, and henceforth to sell at a fair, though by no means large profit. The refiners, therefore, are only acting justly in refusing to aid less honourable men in a cut-throat competition, with these honest customers by selling at a loss. Such unscrupulous dealers must either risk bankruptcy and defrauding their creditors, or they must trick their customers by a sly increase of profit on other articles to counteract the loss. The whole system is rotten and it is well that it should be stopped. Consumers naturally wish to purchase as cheaply as possible, but we have too high an opinion of the people of Canada to believe that their desire for economy would make them willing to share in fraudulent bankruptcies or to be parties to tricking themselves.

As to the comparative prices in other countries, it must be remembered that in most of them the cheapness is caused by the people paying money to bonus the refiners, so they really make no gain. In Great Britain the cheapness is caused by the bonused sugar having driven the refiners to the verge of bankruptcy and some of them over it. As to these gratuitously advertised Scotch importations, we are convinced, from the informations we have sought, that they are not being resold at a profit, but that it is a continuance of the dishonest system of selling at a loss, with the intention of making it up in some improper manner.

Sugar is now sold in Canada at a fair, but not large, profit to the refiner and the wholesale and retail dealers, its preparation affords a livelihood to a very large number of Canadians, it contributes materially to the public revenue, and with all this it is both cheaper and better than it was a few years ago. These are all demonstrable facts and very satisfactory they are. Anyone who attempts to excite discontent under such circumstances by distortion of the facts or suppression of some of them to gain a political end is acting in a manner that is both dishonest and unpatriotic.

THE opponents of the National Policy after long posing as freetraders are now advocating the adoption of the more protective tariff of the United States. They tell us that commercial annexation would at least mean free trade with sixty millions of people immediately adjoining Canada. Now we deny that those of these sixty millions of people who live in California, New Mexico, Texas, ect., are more immediately adjoining Canada than the people of Great Britain. Indeed we doubt if the bulk of these 60,000,000 can truthfully be so described, taking into consideration distance, time and facilities for intercommunication. And between us and their denser centres of population there intervene millions of their own countrymen ready to supply them with their surplus of goods such as we have to sell. This 60,000,000 of near customers is a myth.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are teething. It relieves the little sufferer at once. It produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain; relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for Diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

THE MARKET REPORTS

The wheat situation is very problematical. One thing to be borne in mind is this, that the export trade from America is going to be dull during the coming year, owing to good crops in Europe. The English crop averages 32 bushels to the acre, and 70,000,000 bushels will be grown at home for the English market. This will leave only 138,000,000 to be supplied from all other sources. France imported 36,000,000 bushels of wheat during the year just closed, but will not need more than half of that amount this year. Advices from Germany, Ostro-Hungary, and Russia state that the crops are above the average. On the other hand, the stocks held in America are over 10,000,000 lighter than those held at this time last year, when prices ruled 9 cents a bushel higher than at present. If Europe wants less, America has less to send. The crop for the current year is much below that of last year. There is every reason to believe, considering all circumstances, that prices will maintain their present position, if not advance.

By reference to the quotations given below it will be seen that local prices for wheat and barley have made a material advance. Potatoes have fallen 25 cents per bag, and there is a slight weakness in pork, owing to a decline in Montreal. The price of oats, which depends largely upon the local supply, will in all probability rise within a few weeks, as the crop has been light.

Chicago Grain and Provisions.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—To-days closing cash quotations are as follows:—Wheat 68¾, corn 42¼, oats 24¾, pork $12 80, lard $6.52.

Cheese.

At the cheese market held in Ingersoll on Tuesday 320 boxes of cheese, August make, were sold at 12½.

Horses.

The Montreal Gazette says that the horse market has been more active, there being a number of American buyers in the city who are buying good horses freely. The local demand has been good and a number of sales has been made for both local and American account. The supply of horses is larger, which furnishes a better assortment for buyers to select from. The shipments from Peterborough during the past seven months have been twenty-one cars, averaging nineteen horses to the car—399 altogether.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

Bracknell wheeled round hastily and dropped on his knees beside the bed. "Yes, my boy," he said, "what is it?"

"Father," whispered Sunning, "you won't have Shiela shot, will you? I don't want Shiela to be shot."

His eyes grew very large and piteous, and there was a quiver about the corners of his mouth. No doubt he had had some experience of his father's passionate nature, and feared that, in a fit of unreasoning fury, he might take vengeance upon the irresponsible cause of his son's death.

But Bracknell answered gruffly, "No, my boy; nobody shall harm her. I'll swear that."

Sunning gave a little sigh of relief, looked curiously at his father for a moment, and then turned his head toward Lord Staines, who was sitting motionless on the other side of the bed, in what seemed like a state of nerveless stupor.

"Never mind, gran," he said; "it doesn't hurt." And then, "You're so awfully old, too, gran; you'll come soon."

Lord Staines made no answer, but Mr. Turner rose and approached, wiping the tears away from his foolish old eyes with a large silk pocket handkerchief. "We shall go to you; but you will not come back to us, Sunning," he began. I don't care to quote the rest of his remarks. He was a cleric of the old fashioned school, who had not, I should imagine, occupied himself much with the subject of eschatology. It was, perhaps, right that he should give utterance to his views, which, I am sure, were at any rate sincere; but those stereotyped phrases about the New Jerusalem and white winged angels and golden harps, enunciated with a certain pomposity, despite the occasional quavering of the speaker's voice, jarred somewhat upon my ears, as I dare say they did upon those of several other persons present. Sunning listened patiently. Thank God, he had not many sins, even of a childish kind, to reproach himself with. He had always been a good boy, as well as a brave one, and had no need to dread the unknown future, be that what it may.

After a time, he beckoned to me and put the dog into my arms. "Goodby, Bluey," he whispered. The dog licked his face and he patted its rough head, and then for the first time two great tears welled up into his eyes and brimmed over.

I bent over him and kissed him, and then I picked up the dog and went away. I had no right to intrude upon the scene which I could see was close at hand; and besides, to tell the truth, I couldn't bear it any longer. Many sadder things than a child's death are happening in the world every hour. One may look back upon it dispassionately now and say that it was perhaps well that our poor little Sunning should have been taken from us—that if he had lived, he might not have been happy; that he would almost certainly have been badly brought up; that he would have succeeded to a diminished property; that he would very likely have followed in the steps of his father and grandfather, with less means at his disposal, and consequently greater temptations than theirs, and so forth; but the fact remains that he was the brightest and most promising child I have ever known, and that, humanly speaking, his life was cut short because his mother did not choose to take the trouble of looking after him.

CHAPTER XIII.

Everybody expected that the loss of his grandson would be poor old Lord Staines' deathblow. He himself was of that opinion and at first refused to leave his bed, saying that he had now nothing to live for. But perhaps, upon further thought, he may have remembered that he had still certain matters to attend to before quitting a troublesome world, or perhaps he may have been too old and worn out to die of grief. At any rate he did not die, nor did his health appear to suffer, although I believe he was never seen to smile again after Sunning's little coffin was laid in the family vault at Staines court.

Lady Bracknell did not appear at the funeral. It is believed—or at all events it was stated—that she felt unable to face so cruel an ordeal; but the truth, as I afterward heard on excellent authority, was that she was afraid to venture within reach of her husband, who had ordered her away from him immediately after the boy's death, assuring her that he was not master of himself, and that she would do well to keep out of his sight for some time to come. So she took him at his word and fled down to the country, to the house of I forget what friend, who undertook to comfort her in her affliction. Bracknell remained in London, and, as I was told, continued to go to his club every day, to gamble heavily and to drink hard.

I called upon him several times, but he was always out; and one day when I chanced upon him in the street, he told me roughly that I need not trouble to look him up again.

"Kindly meant, I've no doubt," he said; "but I should be very much obliged to my friends if they wouldn't be so—etc., etc.—officious. When I want to be condoled with I'll let them know."

After that I could only leave him to himself. Even if he had been willing to listen to me, I should have been puzzled to discover any plausible form of consolation; and certainly I should not have hit upon that selected by my mother, who in the overflowing kindness of her heart wrote him a long letter, in which she reminded him that among other blessings he still possessed his wife. I believe she was afterward a little ashamed of having taken this bold step, and would never have let me know of it had she been able to resist showing me Bracknell's reply, which was brief and pithy:

"Dear Mrs. Maynard: I told your son the other day that I didn't wish to be condoled with, and I don't. But I must say that I hardly expected to be congratulated. Lady Bracknell is not with me just now, or she would, I am sure, desire me to thank you for speaking of her as a blessing. It is probably the first time in her life that she has been called by that name, and I should think it would be the last. Sincerely yours, BRACKNELL."

GOLDEN PRECEPTS.

EXPLANATORY NOTES BY REV. R. S. M'ARTHUR, D. D.

Lesson XI of the International Series (Third Quarter) for Sunday, Sept. 11. Text of the Lesson, Matt. vi, 1-12. Golden Text, Matt. vii, 12.

V. 1. Judge not.—This prohibition is against rash, harsh and censorious judgment. Judicial and official judgments are not prohibited; neither is the formation and expression of opinion prohibited. That ye be not judged.—The judgment warned against is the judgment of God. He who cherishes an unkind spirit against his neighbor makes himself liable to the severe judgment of God (Luke vi, 37; John viii, 7; Romans, xiv, 10, 13). The impersonal form, however, leaves to each of us to decide who the judge is. This makes the judgment all the more solemn. It is equally certain that those who indulge in harsh judgments will, by the ordinary laws of life, be the victims of harsh judgments.

V. 2. With what judgment, etc.—This is an amplification of the thought already expressed. Some have supposed that this part of the discourse was suggested by the presence and attitude of some censorious Pharisees, one of whom our Lord addresses in the following verse.

V. 3. Why beholdest thou the, etc.—Our Lord now adopts the direct and personal form of address. Those who possess the spirit of harsh criticism are sure to censure those who are less open to censure than themselves. This truth Christ now makes plain. The mote.—This is a minute particle of wood. It may stand for small sticks or twigs with which birds build their nests. Here it stands for a small fault. But the beam, on the contrary, is a joist, a rafter. Here it refers to a gross fault. The language is emblematic and hyperbolical. As is a beam to a mote, so is your fault, O critic, to the fault of him whom you harshly censure. Considerest not.—A stronger word than beholdest. Instead of gazing intently at the mote in our brother's eye—the word mote is used to express difference as to size, but not of material—we should attentively scrutinize the huge beam which is in our own. This exaggerated form of expression presents in a most forceful way the great difference between our brother's fault and our own. Brother.—Used as among Christians.

V. 5. Thou hypocrite.—The direct and personal form of address is still maintained. One who acts a part, who assumes a character not his own, who pretends to be a rigid moralist while he is a great sinner. First cast.—This is the true course to pursue. Subject thyself to the closest scrutiny and examination. Correct thine own faults; then thine eye will be clear to see at its proper dimensions the fault of thy brother. This is sound common sense.

V. 6. Here there is a turn in the thought, showing that we are to judge within proper limits. There may be a laxity in judging on moral questions which is as censurable as undue severity. We may withhold our condemnation and thereby incur guilt. We are not to treat bad and good men alike. Dogs, swine.—The dog among the Jews was unclean. The name became a term of reproach and utter contempt. Dogs were the scavengers of the cities. They prowled about for food; they ran wild, had no owners, lived on refuse, and had no attachment to any one; they were ravenous and abominable. Swine were also unclean. They have no desire higher than to fill themselves. The term became the synonym of all that was degraded and degrading. Dogs and swine well represent the coarse and brutal foes of purity and religion. Holy . . . pearls.—Whatever was dedicated to God's service was regarded as holy; whatever had been offered on the altar. This would include the shewbread and all fleshy sacrifices. The pearl has been always held in high esteem. In modern and ancient times it occupies a prominent place among the ornaments of kings and palaces. We may not accept any of the traditions of its heavenly origin, and yet may cling to its inherent beauty and market value. To give the offers and promises of the Gospel to coarse, sensual, captious, atheistic men is as if one should cast that which is holy to dogs, and pearls to swine. The tenderest feelings of Christian experience are not to be spoken of in mixed society, neither are the corrections to men's faults to be given without discretion.

V. 7. Ask, seek, knock.—We need wisdom in dealing with boys and girls and men and women. For that wisdom we must pray. We need wisdom so that we may not have undue care and anxiety for food and raiment; hence the exhortation to pray. To be critical and yet charitable is a hard matter; hence the duty of prayer. We have here a threefold command. It presents the duty of prayer under different aspects, reaching a climax. The initial letters of each word give us the word "ask." Ask—i.e., make known your desire to God. Seek is a step in advance. This is to earnestly implore God. Knock.—This is to continue asking and seeking.

V. 8. In this verse the promises of the preceding verses are repeated. They are also made a present reality. He that asketh receiveth. The tense is present; he receives here and now. Shall be opened.—Some manuscripts make this also a present tense, "is opened." The Revised Version retains the familiar form.

Vs. 9-11. We have here great encouragement to expect an answer to our prayers, founded upon the paternal character of God. Jesus reasons from what earthly and sinful parents do what the heavenly Father will do. He makes the tenderest relations of earth illustrate, however faintly, God's infinite tenderness and truthfulness. If human love leads earthly parents to do so much, what may we not expect that divine love will lead the heavenly Father to do! From the less he reasons to the greater, from the sinful to the sinless, from the earthly to the heavenly. The interrogation is really a strong affirmation. Even a wicked father will scarcely give a stone to a son who asked for a loaf of bread. The round, flat loaf, common in the east bore a resemblance to a flat stone. Some kinds of fish, the eel for instance, resembled serpents. There is an advance in the thought from a stone for bread to a serpent for fish. A stone is useless to a hungry child. To give it to him would be heartless. A serpent, however, is poisonous. To give it to him would be devilish. We can scarcely conceive of the most hardened father doing it. Now comes, in v. 11, a question which is a climax. We are fallen, selfish, sinful; yet we would not do so. God is supremely holy, just and good. How much more will he give! This is a blessed and comforting reasoning.

V. 12. "The Golden Rule."—This is a simple working rule, a summary statement which covers the entire ground. As God loves us with infinite pity and tenderness, so we should be considerate to all men. Whatsoever.—Make the case your own. "Put yourself in his place" would be the modern way of stating this truth. Similar sentiments are found in heathen and Jewish writers. Some modern writers have endeavored to rob Christ of the glory of having originated this golden rule; but a little examination will show that there is a radical difference between his language and that of other writers. The rabbins said, "What is offensive to you, do not to another; for this is the whole law." Confucius (B. C. 550), Socrates (B. C. 400), Menander (B. C. 275) and others have given us somewhat similar precepts; but these writers have given simply the negative side. Christ, on the contrary, has given us a positive command. They have said what we should not do: Christ has told us what we should do. This is the law, etc.—The whole law is fulfilled in love. This is its practical application.

POINTS TO BE REMEMBERED.

1. If we pronounce harsh judgments on men, we invite God to treat us as we deserve.

2. The man who fully knows the evil of his own heart will be the least likely to exaggerate the evil of others.

3. Selfishness blinds us to our faults and to our neighbors' virtues, and is the essence of all sin.

4. In all times of doubt and difficulty regarding the salvation of our own souls and the prosecution of God's work, we may go to him for wisdom, assured that we shall receive without upbraiding (James i, 5).—Sunday School World.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1887.

A VISIONARY SCHEME.

COMMERCIAL UNION IMPRACTICABLE AND OF NO USE

Even if Attained—A Lumberman's Views—Prominent Men Speak on the Question—The Scheme Condemned.

A meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Imperial Federation League was held in the Forester's Hall on Thursday evening.

Mr. J. H. LONG, Chairman, called the meeting to order at 8 o'clock.

The SECRETARY read the minutes of the last meeting, which were confirmed.

The first business of the evening was the reading by the Chairman of a digest of a prospective pamphlet on Commercial Union. Before reading it he touched on several points in reference to Commercial Union. One argument its advocates used was that it would confer the same priveleges upon Canada that the Zollverein gave the German States. If their arguments would hold good Canada would be annexed to the United States for the 43 German States were now annexed to Prussia, the larger power in the compact. The exodus of Canadians to the United States was an argument used by advocates of Commercial Union to prove that Canada offered no field for her population. A good explanation of this lay in the fact that Canadians are in demand in the United States. In the professions a much higher educational standing was required in Canada than in the United States, and Canadians, being better lawyers and better doctors, were in demand. This argument, of course, would not apply to the farming community at all. Along the Lake Erie frontier the early settlements were made by Americans, and they were Americans in sympathies still. By preference they went to the United States to live. The only way to stop this exodus was to lower the standard in the professions, which no one would be inclined to favor. In regard to the effect of the removal of the customs houses between the two countries, he said that, in the first place, the tariff against the outside world would have to be exactly the same, else, if the Canadian were lower than the American, the imports would be made to Canada and thence to the United States free, and if the United States tariff were lower than the Canadian the effect would be similar. The identity with the Americans would not cease here. If there were no customs houses the traffic in oleomargerine, obsene literature, and a hundred and one things trafficed in in the United States would be extended in Canada. The Globe says, "have a few customs houses." But what would be the use of a few? The line must be perfect if the objectionable matter is to be kept out at all. Otherwise it would come in between the established custom houses. The result of the abolition of the custom or examining houses would be to compel us to have the same ideas as the Americans in regard to trade and even morality, many of which are repugnant to Canadians. He then went on to give Mr. McGowan's arguments against Commercial Union. Mr. McGowan discarded the sentimental aspect of the question altogether, treating it wholly from the financial point of view. He showed that with the breaking down of the customs houses $7,500,000 would have to be raised either by excise duties or direct taxation. It was said that Canada would get that amount from the pooling of the duties those who said so computing according to the gross duties collected, but the duties were not at all the same in the two countries. He asked whether it would pay Canada to give up the trade of the outside world for that of the United States, and answered the question in the negative. The export trade with Great Britain alone was greater by a proportion of 50 to 40, and as to the market for Canadian exports, that of Great Britain was represented at 20 to 3. He argued that by the adoption of the American tariff, which, on dutiable goods, is 46 per cent while ours is 26, would cripple our foreign trade by preventing an interchange of products, for there could be no exports to last where there were no imports. The great maxim in trade was nearness of position but dissimilarity of products. The United States produced just the same materials as Canada, except in the South, and the land carriage to Canada was of greater cost that the sea carriage from countries from which Canada could get the same goods. He showed that the great market for wheat and staples is Europe and not the United States. Under Commercial Union the fisheries would be ruined. It was characteristic of the Americans that they preferred great present gains to moderate and enduring gains. This was shown by the destruction of their own fisheries and forests. Nothing could prevent them under unrestricted trade from destroying ours. He showed that shipping would decline with the decline of foreign trade. The American shipping went down with the raising up of the tariff walls. The Canadian and American shipping was represented now, per head, as follows:—Canada, 2-7; American, 1-13. The through railway lines would suffer, in consequence of the flow of trade being changed to north and south instead of a present, east and west. He showed that the farmers of the United States are no better off than the Canadian farmer, and concluded by asking if Commercial Union would make the country milder, or increase the acreage of cultivated land.

Mr. J. H. BURNHAM asked if it was the object of the Imperial Federation League to maintain British connection at all hazards.

The CHAIRMAN replied that it was.

Mr. BURNHAM thought it useless to discuss Commercial Union at all, seeing that it would lead to a severance of that connection.

The CHAIRMAN replied that that was a question for discussion.

Mr. TOKER said that if it meant anything it meant annexation.

The CHAIRMAN said that, for his part, he thought it did mean annexation. But a Commercial Unionist might be a member of this League. If such member thought that it would lead to more friendly relations with the Empire he had a right to membership of the League. If he thought it would lead to annexation his membership would be cancelled.

Mr. TOKER read the opinions of several leading United States papers, and extracts from the published speeches of advocates of Commercial Union, showing that Annexation was the undercurrent of the movement. He read extracts of speeches made in the United States by Messrs. Wiman, Butterworth and Goldwin Smith, all favoring Annexation. Mr. Butterworth said that they could not advance such ideas in Canada, as the people were too loyal, but Commercial Union would educate the Canadians to Political Union. He did not like to read the opinions of such men. They came to our country as guests to stir up virtual rebellion against the British Empire. They did not come out openly and advocate disloyalty, but, they openly advocated what they really thought would accomplish their object. Commercial Union would be opposed to the idea of Federation and permanent unity of the Empire, for it would separate Canada from the Empire in the most important of worldly affairs. It was said that it was likely England would agree to the proposal. He did not care if England did. We were not tied to England, but to the Empire as a whole. Though he was proud of being an Englishman by birth, and proud of being a Canadian, he was prouder of belonging to the great British Empire, and until Canada was forced out of the Empire he would advocate our forming an integral part of it. He then presented the following motion:—

"That the Peterborough Branch of the Imperial Federation League, while firmly maintaining the right of Canada to frame her tariff to suit her own circumstances, would gladly welcome any equitable agreement, which without the abandonment of that right, would promote closer commercial relations between the various parts of the British Empire by discriminating against foreign countries, and meanwhile utterly repudiates any proposal to grant more favourable terms to a foreign nation than to our Mother Country or our sister colonies."

The Hon. R. HAMILTON seconded the motion, at the same time expressing his concurrence with it and a strong disapproval of Commercial Union.

Mr. John CARNEGIE was convinced that the direct result of Commercial Union would be annexation and it should be put fairly and squarely before the people in that way. The fact should not be disguised that there would be certain advantages to be derived from reciprocity of trade in certain things but the advantages would be so small that the whole question only needed to be brought into the light of day to be effectually killed. He did not know of a single interest Commercial Union would benefit except one, and that was the lumber interest. And the lumberman's advantage would strike the farmer at once, for the lumbermen would bring cheap supplies, and cheap pork from the United States, to the detriment of the Canadian farmer, as they did before thee tariff change in 1878. The farmer might gain one item alone, and that was barley, but this would be more than counterbalanced by losses other ways. A A great objection to Commercial Union was not sufficiently recognized. It would tell strongly against most of the people and particularly against the farmers, and that was the adoption of a system of direct taxation to support Provincial matters. He discussed the tariff of the two countries, showing that, though people objected to the present tariff, the Commercial Unionists invited them to adopt one twice as high, and, in some cases, five times as high, Canada was better as she was. We were on the right road now, and all it needed was pluck, courage and prudence to make a great nation.

Mr. E. B. EDWARDS spoke of his visit to England. One thing he could say was that he found it a great advantage to be a Canadian on his recent visit. The fact of being a Canadian was a sure pas port to places of interest which were accessable with difficulty. It seemed to him that public opinion in England was shaping fowards Inter-Imperial trade. He had been introduced to farmers and manufacturers, who both complained of United States and other competition. There was a unity of feeling in favor of protection and a desire to consolidate the Empire, so that it would show a solid front against the rest of the world.

Mr. LONG said that the proposed Inter-Imperial trade scheme would be founded on the basis of discrimination of tariffs, not as the Mail assumed, on a free trade basis.

Mr. HILLIARD, ex-M. P., said that he was decidedly opposed to Commercial Union. He had seen nothing laid down which would be of the slightest good to Canada. To the one article of barley it might be a little advantage, but that was questionable. In reference to lumber he could say fearlessly that it would be an injury, except to the few who exported. He could say emphatically that it would be better if there was $10 duty instead of $2 to-day. In a very few years Canada would need all the lumber she has. He spoke of the fast diminishing supply of timber. Another thing: he thought it very undignified for Canada to go begging to the United States. Twice now they had asked for reciprocity, once in Mackenzie's time and once under the Macdonald Government. Were they to go again to the States and say, "For God's sake do something for us?"

Mr. JAS. STEVENSON, M.P., said when Commercial Union first was mooted he looked on it as impracticable, and something that was not worth talking about. What was the result of their last experience with the States? They had reciprocity for ten years. Then the States thought they had Canada in a tight place. They thought if Canada was shut off she would humbly bow down and ask for annexation. She had no manufacturies and no means of getting any. But Canada didn't ask for annexation. She went on and built up her manufactories. Were they to have another ten years and give the States the chance to do the same thing over again? As far as good times and reciprocity were concerned, the hardest times in Canada was in the year 1857, when the great New York crisis came. Under free trade relations all of these bursts up in financial circles were sure to effect Canada, but since Canada has got away from the United States she did not feel these shocks. Three years ago, when times were very distressing in the United States, Canada went along, manufacturing away, and conducted her business as if nothing had happened. As to cheaper goods under Commercial Union, he showed that the Canadian consumer would pay just as high or higher prices. He instanced the article of coal, which was put up in price as soon as the duties were taken off. He could see nothing in Commercial Union that would benefit Canada in any way. As far as he could see no one except the old free traders took any stock in the movement.

Mr. A. P. POUSSETTE, Q. C., discussed the question in an able manner. He resented the mode in which the agitators were preaching their doctrines, coming to Canada, instead of agitating among their own people, and also the way in which they conducted their meetings, allowing no reply to their assertions. They seemed to direct their attacks upon the farmers, thinking to hoodwink the farming community by false promises of prosperity. He discussed the prospect of assimilation of Canadians and Americans, and concluded that it was impractical from a variety of causes.

Mr. TOKER, before the vote was taken on his motion, wished to refer to remarks made by several of the previous speakers as to our manufacturing interests, and read the avowals of the agitators on both sides of the international line that Commercial Union would close some of our factories and injure others. With the admitted injury to manufacturing the farmers must suffer also by the loss of their home market. Some of the advocates of Commercial Union had the effrontery to use the argument that Ireland had gained by free trade with England and Scotland. The greatest wrong ever inflicted upon Ireland was the suppression of her manufacturing industries, and she would never be prosperous till they were restored. The bulk of her people were forced upon the land, for they had nothing else but that or emigration. Everything they produced that they could not eat themselves they had to export with less profit than if sold in their own market. And now we were told that Ontario should close her factories and export her produce to foreigners manufacturing for her.

The motion was passed unanimously and the meeting adjourned.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.

The Ottawa Free Press of September 2nd, says:—

"The name of Uncle Tom's Cabin requires, like good wine, no bush, and the crowd which filled the Opera House this afternoon where Abbey's company gave their matinee, only serves further to illustrate this. The acting throughout is good and the play clean and well staged. A great attraction found in this company at present in the city is the Hyers sister's vocalism. Possessed of good, pure and strong voices, they sing with great artistic taste and much cultivation. This afternoon they received an enthusiastic encore. Their voices are well trained, sweet and musical, possessing more than ordinary powers of expression. In the glee Sweet and Low, their pianissimo were given with perfect clearness and striking effect, drawing down the house. It is not often that Ottawaites have a chance of hearing such sweet singers as the Hyer sisters. The concluding performance will be given this evening."

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1887.

THE AGITATORS' METHODS.

If the Lindsay Post wishes to criticise us honestly, it should quote us correctly and not misrepresent us. It is not telling the truth when it says that we in a roundabout way called Mr. Cluxton "one of the asserted Annexationists of Peterborough." We stated plainly the fact that the Detroit News, one of the strongest advocates of the Annexation movement, so classed him. Let the Post attack its contemporary for its untruth, not us for regretting it. But while Mr. Cluxton is not knowingly an Annexationist, he is blindly following, as one of their force, the guidance of leaders who do not conceal on the other side of the line that Annexation is their aim.

As to the political wire pulling in the United States, we know, if the Post does not, that the greatest danger for President Cleveland, if seeking re-election, is the suspicion that he is inclined to free trade, like many Democrats, though there are enough protectionist Democrats to defeat him if combined with the Republicans, who are protectionists almost to a man. To increase such suspicion is one of the objects of Messrs. Butterworth, Wiman, and other Republican wirepullers. They wish to place him in such a position that whichever course he takes he may alienate some supporters. So in Canada the political wirepullers are endeavoring to excite discontent that it may fall upon those in office, while their own party leaders watch to see if the agitation succeeds before they pronounce in favor of it. Mr. Wiman, in addition, as one of the foremost lieutenants of Jay Gould, is looking after the interests of their all-devouring railway and telegraph monopolies. Canada has already had some experience of Mr. Wiman in this line of money getting.

THE journals that are endeavouring to stir up the Manitobans to rebel against the constitution of our country reported that Mr. Whitla stated that Sir John Macdonald was privy to Sir George Stephen's telegram threatening Winnipeg. On the strength of this invention they have been abusing and vilifying Sir John Macdonald in their usual style. And now they are obliged to confess that not only Sir John Macdonald and Sir George Stephens but also Mr. Whitla contradict the whole story, which was only one of the usual Reform fabrications. They do not, however, retract any of their abuse.

A PIRATE vessel while pursuing its avocation on the high seas lately seized a Canadian vessel in Behring Sea and placed on board a prize crew of two men. Now the news comes that the Canadians, overpowering the two pirates, carried them with them to Victoria, B.C. The pirate vessel is said to have flown the United States flag, but of course this is only a usual trick of the freebooters, for Secretary Seward promised that there should be no more seizures in Behring Sea.

MESSRS. Wiman and Gould have at last succeeded in gobbling up the last strong opponent of their gigantic telegraph monopoly, which, erected by trickery and dishonesty, has been bleeding the people of the two countries. They have succeeded in absorbing the telegraph system of the Baltimore and Ohio, and thus have the public at their mercy in the United States. Fortunately for Canada, the C. P. R. telegraph system has come to check the career of these monopolists in this country.

SHOT BY THE POLICE.

A Conflict Between Police and People at Michellstown.

DUBLIN, Sept. 9.—Mitchellstown, where the case of the Government against William O'Brien, under the Coercion Act, was to have been heard to-day, was crowded all day with civilians, police and soldiers. Mr. O'Brien did not appear to answer the summons. The service of the summons was proved, and the judge granted a warrant for O'Brien's arrest.

An open air indignation meeting was subsequently held. Henry Labouchere and others made speeches denouncing the Government for its course in regard to Ireland.

MITCHELLSTOWN, Sept. 9.—A conflict occurred at the meeting which was held on Market Square. The police were attempting to protect a Government stenographer when a fight took place and the crowd repulsed the police, sixty in number, several of whom were struck with sticks and stones and severely injured. The police obtained reinforcements and returned to the scene. They fired six shots and two men were instantly killed. Several other persons were wounded. The rioters dispersed.

THE FISHERY COMMISSION.

What is Said at Washington Regarding the Work of the Commission.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—It is expected that when the British Fishery Commissioners arrive they will be presented at once to Mr. Bayard and the President, and the names of the American Commissioners will then, for the first time, be made public. After mapping out their work here they will proceed to Boston, where arrangements will be made and testimony taken. Gloucester, Portsmouth, Portland, Booth Bay, Rockland Castine and Eastport will be then visited. At all these towns the fishermen will be called, examined and cross-examined. After this, Halifax and all the other Canadian towns interested will be visited. Two sets of evidence will be made, one American and one Canadian. The enquiry will probably last two months. It is not known whether the Alaska seal difficulty will be considered by the commissioners or not. A revenue cutter will be placed at the disposal of the Commissioners, should the English members desire to visit the scene of these new complications. The latest report from an American source in Alaska says that the number of seals has decreased 10 per cent. on St. George and St. Paul islands during the past year.

A SCHOONER WRECKED.

Thirteen or Fifteen Persons Drowned in a Gale in Lake Superior.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 9.—A special from Marquette, Mich., says the schooner Niagara foundered near Whitefish Point, Lake Superior, in yesterday's gale. She was commanded by Capt. Clements and was laden from Ashland to Ashtabula. Her crew of ten men was lost and the Captain's family is also reported to have been aboard. The Niagara was owned by Mr. Corrigan, of Cleveland.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 9.—Capt. Waite, of the steamer Idaho, just arrived, reports passing the wreck of the Niagara at 11.30 a. m. yesterday. She lies in one fathom of water ten miles this side of Whitefish Point and five miles from shore. Her mizzen mast just reaches above the water. Captain Waite saw no traces of her ill-fated crew, and says no small boat could have lived in the terrible sea which was running there on Wednesday. Capt. Waite thinks that in addition to the crew of the Niagara there were a number of ladies on board of her, as he met her as she was coming up and noticed them. All must have perished, between thirteen and fifteen souls. The Niagara was in the tow of the Australasia. The gale was one of the worst on the lakes for years, the wind reaching a velocity of 60 miles an hour.

UNPROFITABLE CHARITY.

Don't Trade Watches with Strangers in Toronto.

The Toronto Mail of this morning says: "It is wonderful how charitable some people become when they think that by doing so they can help a sufferer and at the same time make a little money out of the affair. A case of this kind was ventilated at the Police Court yesterday morning. A young man named John McManus, fresh from the rocks and rivulets north of Peterborough, visited the city to see the exhibition yesterday morning. While enjoying the sights in the neighbourhood of the Union Station he was approached by a sad looking man who politely requested to be directed to a pawnshop. Mr. McManus told him that, being a stranger in the city, he could not inform him. The stranger replied that he had a magnificent watch and chain, and wanted to pawn them to raise enough money to take him out of the city. McManus had his cupidity and charity aroused at the same time and asked the stranger to show him the watch. Just then a jeweller came on the scene, who pronounced the chain to be worth about forty dollars. This settled the question with the young man from Fowler's Corners, who offered his own watch and a dollar to boot for the stranger's timepiece. The trade was effected just as detective Spence appeared and took the stranger and the jeweller into custody and marched them to the police headquarters, followed by the charitably disposed young man, and at the Police Court they gave their names as Jacob Levi and George Cane. While there it was discovered that on Wednesday Wm. Chubb, of Parry Sound, had been applied to by these two worthies who were in search of a pawn shop. Chubb's charitable disposition had also been aroused to the extent of ten dollars. The Magistrate said he considered the whole affair a scheme to swindle unsuspecting strangers, and committed the prisoners for trial, bail being fixed for each at two sureties at $500 each."

BALTIMORE AND OHIO DEAL.

Reported Purchase by Jay Gould—A Wild Scene on Wall Street.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—It was reported on the Stock Exchange to-day that Jay Gould had bought the Baltimore and Ohio telegraph lines, the consideration given being $3,500,000 in Western Union stock. The announcement was followed by a wild scene in the Western Union crowd, fully two hundred brokers gathered around the spot allotted to it in the exchange, and their purchases, which were enormous forced the price up from 77¾ to 79¾ in less than fifteen minutes. Mr. Gould was on Wall street for a good part of the day, and in conference with members of the Baltimore and Ohio syndicate for over an hour and a half. President Green of the Western Union Company, refused to speak in regard to the matter. One of the representatives of the syndicate admitted, however, that the report was only premature, and that the sale was inevitable. What the terms were he refused to state.

The talk on the streets is that the stock of the Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph Company, amounting to $3,872,693, and held by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad among its assets, will be exchanged for Western Union stock and that the arrangements made will probably be placed before the stockholders at the annual meeting on the second Wednesday of October. The books close for the meeting about September 20th.

THE CAMPAIGN IN IRELAND.

English Home Rulers to Stump the Country in Favor of Home Rule.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Lord Mayor Sullivan, of Dublin, is preparing for the reception, on Tuesday next, of a deputation of twenty-two English Home Rulers, among whom will be Mr. Charles A. V. Conybeare, member for Camborne; Mr. R. C. Graham, member for the northwest division of Lanark; Mr. E. H. Pickeral, member for Bethnal Green; Prof. J. E. Thorold Rogers, the eminent statistician, and a number of clergymen of the Church of England, who are in sympathy with the Home Rule movement. The deputation will first attend an enormous demonstration in the Irish capital, and will then scatter throughout the country to deliver addresses under the auspices of the Irish National League and the various Protestant Home Rule Associations in different sections of Ireland.

THE BEHRING SEA SEIZURES.

No More Vessels to be Seized Pending Judicial Proceedings.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Sir James Ferguson, replying to Mr. Gourley in the House of Commons to-day, said that the Government had no information with reference to the seizure of the Pathfinder by the American Government, but unless she was engaged in fishing within three miles of the coast of Alaska she was not liable to lawful seizure. A report had been received that seven vessels in all had been seized. The American Government had ordered that no more vessels be seized pending judicial proceedings and that the vessels and persons already seized be discharged, reserving all the questions involved for the negotiations at Washington. He was not prepared to state what course the Government would take in dealing with the Alaska fishery question.

BLAINE AND THE PRESIDENCY.

The Maine Statesman Says He Would Not Take It as a Gift.

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—The News's cablegram from Hamburg says: When Mr. Blaine presented his letters to Mr. Seligman, the wary banker instantly recognized him, and proceeded to make a stir. He assured Mr. Blain of his high regard, and then escorted him through the various banking institutions of the city, introducing him at first as the coming President of the United States. As Mr. Seligman repeated the experience, Mr. Blaine presently objected to this, and assured him smilingly that he was not a candidate. "But, my brother tells me," persisted Mr. Seligman, "that you are sure to be elected." "I have no idea of allowing my name to be used," said Mr. Blaine. "I am not seeking the Presidency, nor would I take it as a gift."

A SUBSIDY GRANTED.

To the C. P. Railway For Carrying Eastern Mails.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—The Government has assented to the granting of a subsidy of £45,000 yearly to the Canadian Pacific Railway for conveying the mails to and from the East.

Alleged Brutal Treatment.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 9.—The investigation of the convict lessees took place before Governor Goodwin yesterday. Two colored convicts testified that they were whipped so severely that the blood ran down their legs. In the court the convicts still bore the marks inflicted by the whipping boss. The penitentiary physician testified to the truth of the various reports which he has made to the Governor during the past four years, showing brutal treatment and the persistent determination of the lessees to thwart his efforts for the alleviation of prisoners' condition. The investigation will be continued.

The Admiral Will Stay.

PITTSFIELD, Mass, Sept. 9.—Secretary Whitney stated here yesterday that Admiral Luce would be retained in his present position in the North Atlantic squadron.

For Delicate, Sickly Children.

Scott's Emulsion is unequalled. See what Dr. C. A. Black, of Amherst, N. S. says: "I have been acquainted with Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, with hypophosphites, for years, and considered it one of the finest preparations now before the public. Its pleasant flavor makes it the great favorite for children, and I do highly recommend it for all wasting diseases of children and adults. Put up in 50c and $1 size.

THE DEMANDS OF LABOR.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—The tenor of the resolution passed by the Trades Congress agitating the eight hours a day movement, demanding Saturday as a full holiday and recommending land reform beginning with such an imposition of the land tax as will eventually leave the land in the possession of the people, are causing widespread comment. The Congress yesterday gave the papers still further ground for criticism by suspending its regular order of business for the sole purpose of passing a set of resolutions condemning the present truck system in Ireland and censuring the House of Lords for its action of Wednesday in repudiating a clause truck act which was intended to do away with some of the most objectionable features of the system.

MR. GLADSTONE'S ANSWER.

DUBLIN, Sept. 9.—Dr. C. Kane, Grand Master of the Order of Orangemen, recently wrote to Mr. Gladstone asking him to state whether, in his future proposals for home rule, representatives of Ireland, an integral part of the United Kingdom, would be retained in the Imperial Parliament. Mr. Gladstone has replied that the subject of the exclusion of Irish members from the Imperial Parliament is not involved in the question of home rule for Ireland.

CRUISE OF THE LUCILE.

A MONTREAL CANOEISTS RACY NOTES ON THE A. C. A. CAMP.

The Fun at the Meet—An Amateur Disciple of Esculapius—Ammusements and Exciting Contests.

A series of letters are appearing in the Montreal Gazette describing the A. C. A. camp at Stoney Lake and a cruise thence to Montreal. We give the first letter, which more particularly interests our readers:—

The Lucile is a No. 5 English canoe, which, being interpreted, signifies a painted canoe, built of bass wood, sixteen feet in length, and thirty-two inches in beam, meant to carry two men with camp equipment complete. The builder is William English, of Peterborough, Ontario, and, in addition to paddles, the canoe is rigged with lee boards and a lateen sail. The Lucile is painted slate color, inside and out, and carries the flag of the Lake St. Louis Canoe Club. So much for the craft—not a very reassuring one for cruising on so broad a body of water as the upper St. Lawrence. As to the cruise and the cruisers, they must be described more at length.

On the 1st of August the Lucile was shipped to Peterborough, via Port Hope, on one of the steamers of the Richelieu and Ontario Navigation Co., and on Tuesday night I went up on the Canadian Pacific Railway, arriving in Peterborough shortly after daylight on Wednesday morning. At nine or thereabout—for the train is a local and most accommodating—we left Peterborough for Lakefield via Midland division of the Grand Trunk Railway, arriving at the latter place about 10.30, after a most exciting run of nine miles. From this to Stoney Lake—the meeting place of the Northern Division of the American Canoe Association—is, perhaps, another ten miles, and for this we took the steamer Cruiser, a small steam launch whose only competitor is the Fairy, a still smaller one. I should have told you that Peterborough is not devoid of biographical and prospectively historic interest, inasmuch as it was there that this faithful chronicler first saw the light of day. As a consequence of this I am sure when I go there to meet some one who remembers "the sweet child," and it so happened upon this occasion. There was a young lady on the Cruiser, this trip, who had been overcome with the heat, and was quite unwell, and as my friends knew her they decided that I should be introduced as a medical student in his final year. The professional air which even a camping costume was inadequate to conceal rendered the deception complete, and after taking a sugar-coated pill, the young lady was much better! The joke was nearly reacting on me, however, for I had a narrow escape of being roused up during the night in true medical fashion, as the young lady did not feel quite so well, and her friends wanted to send for me!

The organization of the American Canoe Association, or, as it is called, the "A. C. A." is familiar to most of your readers, and it will only be necessary to say that there are now three divisions of the Association—the Northern, Central and Eastern—each of which elects a vice-commodore and staff of division officers. The division officers form the executive committee for the whole Association, the Commodore and Secretary-Treasurer being the only officers unattached to one of the divisions. This year Mr. Robert J. Wilkin, of Brooklyn, is Commodore, the Vice-Commodore of the Northern or Stony Lake division being Col. H. C. Rogers, familiarly and admiringly referred to as "Colonel Harry," in contradistinction to "Colonel Jim," also well known at Stony Lake. When Col. Harry dropped in before breakfast to say how do you do (N. B.—The county is under the Scott Act), he adorned himself with a massive cardinal Tam O'Shanter, the tassel of which would have dwarfed the largest peony into insignificance. It could not hide the kindly smile which sparkled in his eye and pushed its way through the flowing iron-grey moustache and whiskers, however, and when it appeared at the tent door, we soon saw the blue flannel shirt, knickerbockers, long stockings and shoes, which completed the Colonel's morning costume. This was the Colonel, not the Commodore, the latter costume, which consisted of a gold-laced naval cap and a frock coat with brass buttons, instead of the Tam and flannels, was reserved for parades and other state occasions. At such times the Colonel faded into the Commodore, and it was a glorious sight to see the stately figure paddling on the outskirts of a long line of canoes, and to hear the ringing voice telling us to "Paddle up on the right!" "Easy in the centre!" or in response to the "One! two! three! Commodore, please sing," giving us

"Through streets broad and narrow
She rolled a wheelbarrow,
Singing cockles and mussels.

and all together for the chorus. This in the evening, remember, when the lake was dotted all around with blazing camp fires, and the gay flotilla of canoes gilded about decked with many colored Chinese lanterns, and the echoes were aroused by lusty choruses or the awful "bang!" with which one of them terminated or soothed again by the plaintiff melody of the "Old Stable Jacket." The evening was the time of general meeting—when all gathered round a camp fire and made the hours go merrily with jest, or song, or story. Then it was that we heard the sad song of the "Colored Man from Mrs. McCracken," or the "Wreck of the Jules Laplante" from the Lindsay contingent; when Ballyhack sang "Bow-wow-wow and Ki-yi-yi," and the Minne-wa-was joined in the chorus, or when we were treated to a solo from some of the sweet voices of the ladies. The various camps kept more or less distinct, and vied with one another in these impromptu entertainments, so that there was no lack of amusement. During the day there were sailing and paddling races of all kinds, including the merry tournaments, which were a source of great amusement and interest. Some of the tournaments were most exciting, particularly if the charges were repeated many times; indeed, on one occasion, two redoubtable knights fought so nobly and so long that the interest centred in them, while all the spectators shouted frantically. As a result of this tout, "Go it, Darcy," and "Brace yer knees, Darcy," were for several days the war cries of the camp. Of course, the inevitable small boy found his way to Stoney Lake, and a race between two canoes, each manned by six juvenile paddlers, was one of the features of the meet. They made the canoes fly, with always a close finish. The commanders had difficulty in maintaining order, however, and it was not easy to enforce the rule that none but the steersman should speak. Still they looked very well, and as soon as the race was over they would hop on to the wharf and begin to chatter like so many young magpies—you see, the race always required explanation.

With all this, I have said nothing about Stoney Lake itself, but there really is no room for this, and I must also leave Squaw Point and the Ancient Mariner, and the Sergeant, with a host of other interesting details to your imagination. If I don't we shall never come to the cruise proper, which only began when the A.C.A. was over. It was very pleasant to spend the bright, breezy, summer days whittling red cedar into hat pins or other knick-knacks, with no thought of anything beyond the immediate present, and no care in that; but such days pass quickly, and the time for parting comes all too soon. So on the 15th, at sunrise, I did the Arab act and "silently stole away." Then more Cruiser from 6 to 8.30—then a pause of two hours for refreshments!—then Peterborough abough noon. The afternoon was devoted to purchasing supplies, etc., but as this is the initial step of the cruise I shall reserve it for the next letter.

CARL FULLER.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

My mother snook her head at this. "He ought not to speak so of his wife," she said. And when I brought forward certain excuses on Bracknell's behalf (I would not shock her by mentioning all those that might have been mentioned, nor would she have believed in them if I had) she only shook her head the more, telling me that I had no realizing sense of the sacredness of marriage.

Whether I deserved that rebuke or not is of small consequence, but I might fairly have retorted that my dear mother, for her part, was a little too sublimely indifferent to the worldly side of that contract, and that by her present conduct she was in danger, not only of making two people more unhappy than there was any occasion for, but of getting herself into serious trouble as well. However, I doubt whether anything that I could have said would have prevented her from asking Lady Mildred to come in to tea every other day, and then casually getting Jim to meet her. She had made up her mind that this couple ought to be married, and even that it was the will of heaven that they should be married. It would have been too much to expect that the will of heaven should be set aside to please Lord Staines or Mr. Beauchamp, the latter of whom, as my mother pointed out, might have proposed long ago, if he had chosen, but had preferred to go off to Norway and catch salmon.

And so, during the summer, our house was made the scene of what, to a commonplace person like myself, wore very much the appearance of clandestine love making.

Lord Staines' suspicions were at length aroused, and he sent for me to pour them into my ear. It was on a fine autumn day that, in obedience to his summons, I walked up to Staines Court and was shown into the library, where he now sat from morning to night, and where, in spite of the warmth of the weather, a fire was burning. He looked very feeble and broken, bending forward in his chair and holding up a thin, trembling hand to the blaze.

"Maynard," he said, "I want you, like a good fellow, to speak a word of warning to your friend Leigh. I would rather not speak myself, because, as you know, he has been caused trouble and disappointment by our family already, and I should be sorry to seem unfriendly to him. So will you just tell him as kindly as you can that it won't do? I see more than perhaps you young folks suppose, and of course you know what I allude to. It won't do, my dear Maynard. I am sorry for it; but it won't do."

"Lord Staines," I answered boldly, "I am not going to undertake any such commission. I can quite understand your anxiety to keep the Beauchamp property in the family, and if you can get the persons principally concerned to do as you wish, I dare say it will be in some respects a good thing; but I don't choose to be a party to any scheme of that kind. My point of view is not the same as yours. What may become of the Beauchamp property is nothing to me; whereas it is a good deal to me that Jim Leigh should have what he wishes for. I believe that Lady Mildred and he are attached to each other, and, that being so, I hope they will stand up for themselves and marry."

I fully expected that this audacious harangue would call forth an explosion of wrath; but my expectations were not fulfilled. Lord Staines only sighed wearily and said: "God knows I care little enough for money or lands now! My time is almost up, and I suppose Bracknell will be the last of our name. Against Leigh I haven't a word to say; only, as I told you before, it won't do. Mildred must marry Beauchamp. I am under obligations to him which can't be discharged in any other way; and he will be a kind husband to her. We won't argue the point, if you please."

"He will not be a husband of her choosing," I made so bold as to observe, despite his prohibition.

"You don't know what you are talking about," returned the old man, fretfully. "The thing must be, and there's no use in discussing it. If you don't see your way to speaking to your friend, I must speak to Mildred, that's all."

I said nothing about this conversation to those whom it concerned, and whether Lord Staines carried out his intention of remonstrating with Lady Mildred or not I cannot tell. Very likely he did not, for I fancy that he shrunk from distressing her, and he may have thought it needless to take active steps before Beauchamp's return from Norway.

No news with regard to that event reached my ears, and it was not until late in the autumn that I was made aware of its having taken place, by encountering Beauchamp himself at a country house in the north of England, where I had been invited to spend a few days. It struck me that our meeting was not a source of unalloyed satisfaction to him. There was even a sort of shamefacedness in his demeanor which I could not at first account for, but which explained itself at dinner time, when Lord and Lady Bracknell made their appearance among several other guests who had arrived late in the afternoon, and when her ladyship exchanged meaning glances with my young friend, after affording him a conventionally polite greeting.

The Bracknell menage, which for a time had been threatened with disruption, had been set agoing once more (by the kindly intervention of friends, as I was informed), and was, to all appearances, being conducted upon much the same principles as heretofore. At all events, Bracknell seemed to look with absolute indifference upon the renewal of the flirtation which he once professed himself determined to check. The past few months had worked a very perceptible change in him; he had grown stouter; his complexion had become pasty and his eyelids heavy, and a few gray hairs had appeared about his temples. His manners, too, had distinctly deteriorated. He was bored, and did not attempt to disguise the fact; moreover, he displayed a contradictious and quarrelsome tendency which evidently caused some anxiety to our hostess.

As for Lady Bracknell, she was brilliant and radiant. Her black dress and jet ornaments threw up the dazzling whiteness of her skin; she looked as if she had not a care in the world; and if, as I suspect, the other ladies were whispering to each other what a heartless wretch the woman was, I can only say that in my humble opinion they had a very good right to do so.

Probably neither their remarks nor my opinion were matters of much moment to her. She was a cold hearted and calculating woman, but she was capable, no doubt, of enjoying herself after her own fashion, and few things can be more pleasant than to indulge in your favorite pastime, while making it subserve a definite, practical end. This, for the time being, appeared to be Lady Bracknell's enviable lot. The subjugation of Beauchamp was complete. He remained by her side the whole evening through; he scarcely took his eyes off her for a moment; and it may be assumed that he had no idea of the sorry spectacle that he presented to lookers on.

Hilda had a second string to her bow, in the shape of a certain Comte de Vieuzac, a French attache, whom I had met several times in Wilton place. De Vieuzac was one of those semi-Anglicized Gauls who get their clothes made in London, whose talk is of horses and shooting, and who discuss sport with a solemnity far exceeding that of their models. Being young, by no means bad looking, and full of that confidence in the irresistible nature of his charms, which is the very last thing that his countrymen can bring themselves to part with, he most likely flattered himself that he had made a conquest of Lady Bracknell, and it was easy to see that he found Beauchamp a good deal in the way. That Beauchamp reciprocated his sentiments with interest was not less obvious; and while one of the young men assumed an aggravatingly supercilious mien and the other scowled savagely, Hilda, arbitress of the contest, sat between them, displaying her white teeth and gently swaying a black ostrich feather fan.

He Put Him Out.

George Ashmun used to tell a story about an auctioneer who was provokingly annoyed while in the exercise of his profession by the ludicrous bids of a fellow whose sole object seemed to be to make sport for the buyers rather than himself to buy. At length, enraged beyond endurance, the knight of the ivory headed hammer, looking round the room for a champion to avenge his wrongs, fixed his eyes upon a biped of huge dimensions, a very monarch in strength, and cried out:

"Marlow, what shall I give you to put that fellow out?"

"I take one $5 bill."

"Done! done! you shall have it."

Assuming the ferocious—knitting his brows, spreading his nostrils like a lion's, and putting on the wolf all over his head and shoulders—old Marlow strode off to the aggressor, and, seizing the terrified wretch by the collar, said to him in a whisper that was heard all over the room:

"My good frin, you go out with me I give you half the money!"

"Done! done!" said the fellow.

"Hurrah! hurrah!" shouted the audience. The auctioneer had the good sense to join in the laugh and coolly forked out the V.—Ben: Perley Poore.

The Queen's Spanish Oxen.

The great feature of the Isle of Wight Agricultural show was a pair of magnificent Spanish oxen in beautifully embroidered harness, which were shown, with their cart, by the queen, who also sent a number of entries for competition from her farm at Osborne. This Spanish oxen cart, with its oxen and harness, is a recent present to her majesty from Spain. They are beautiful beasts, and the whole turnout was most picturesque.—London Truth.

Risk in Running Two Engines.

When two engines are attached to a train of cars it is the hindmost, or engine that is coupled to the train, which controls the air brakes, the leading, or head engine, having no connection with the brakes. Thus you will see the engineer who controls the brakes has got to go it blind, having to depend on the leading engine to whistle for brakes in case of danger, as his view of the road ahead is entirely obstructed by the blinding smoke and sparks from the forward engine. Often a call for brakes by the head engine might be mistaken by the rear engineer for a "road crossing" whistle for a few seconds, which might be ample time to cause or avoid a terrible smash up.—Engineer in Chicago News

FALL -:- SPECIALTIES.

Better to Whistle than Whine.

It went hard, during our recent Great Clearing Sale, to allow such elegant Goods go off at the Sacrificing Prices which they did. But we had to make room for our Fall importations; so, Out They Went!—"bag and baggage!"—and we have good reason to believe that 'tis better to Whistle than Whine.

Our Fall Goods are now coming in without interruption, and consist of the Choicest Selections of CLOTHS, from all Countries, ever yet displayed in Peterborough.

OUR CUSTOM TAILORING DEPARTMENT

is in its full sway at present. Orders for FALL OVERCOATS and SUITS should now be placed in order to be ready for the cool and chilly days of Autumn and Fall.

The Medal.

The last of the Peterborough Rifle Association matches for this season was held at the range on Thursday. The ownership of the Ontario Rifle Association Medal was decided, Mr. Geo. Fitzgerald making the highest aggregate score in three out of the four matches. His score was 186, Mr. F. Hall's 183 and Mr. D. Cameron's 178.

Rapid.

A few days ago a bridge was shipped to Millbrook by the Central Iron and Bridge Works. Mr. Law went down to superintend the putting up of it, and it was successfully erected in nine hours and a half. The bridge was a forty foot span, with twenty foot roadway and five foot sidewalk. The bridge is a credit to the village and the Central Works.

A Timber Limit Purchase.

The Lakefield Chronicle says:—"We understand the Messrs. R. & G. Strickland have purchased all the timber limits in Burleigh and Anstruther belonging to Mr. Ullyott. We hope Messrs. Strickland have made a good purchase and we are sure a wish for their future prosperity will be echoed by every inhabitant in a village for which they have done so much."

A Grocer's Joke.

One day this week a man entered a grocery store and after giving his order for some goods said: "Mr.—I think you should present me with one of those fine hams." "Well," said the grocer meditatively, "Seeing that you're a good customer I will." The other expostulated that he was only joking, but right or wrong the grocer would persist in giving the customer a present. Finding that he could do nothing but accept, the customer called the grocer out and when they came back the beautiful aroma of ten cent. cigars filled the place. The ham, all done up in yellow canvas, was loaded carefully in the customer's rig and was taken home. But judge the astonishment of the customer when he lifted it out—it was as light as a feather, being only a sawdust ham for show.

Taxation Compared

The Post says:—"The rate of taxation at Peterborough this year is 12½ mills on the dollar for Protestant, and 13½ mills for Catholic ratepayers. A very favorable showing indeed. At Lindsay the rate is 23 mills on the dollar. Property at Peterborough is assessed much nearer its value than at Lindsay, although there may be instances at either places where unproductive property, or property not desirably located, is fully assessed. The rate at Peterborough is not less than one-half the rate at Lindsay, as stated by members of the Peterborough town council. Were Lindsay's assessment made the same as Peterborough's—that is full value—the rate at Lindsay would stand at about 16 mills." Perhaps it would be too bad to rob Lindsay of the small comfort such excuses give it by pointing out that municipal assessors are bound to assess property at its value. Let us rather accept the excuse and hope that Lindsay may yet learn how to do things properly.

Division Court.

A session of the Division Court was held on Friday. There were about forty cases on the docket, about half of which were disposed of, the court adjourning till Sept. 26th to try the rest. The only jury case on Friday was that of Singer Manufacturing Company against Donovan.

The Circus.

The Post says says:—"Barnum's circus gave Peterborough the go-by because the town and district could not afford an audience sufficiently large to pay expenses." The Post does not mean that. A large circus is daily open for New Yorkers, but it is on Staten Island, a suburb. Barnum adopted this rule and went to a Peterborough suburb.

The Kabo corset warranted to wear a year without breaking, is sold only at Turnbull's, the Headquarters for all New and Improved Corsets.

Personal.

Councillor Ward, of Port Hope, is registered at the Oriental Hotel.

The Toronto World says: "Dr. Barnardo, whose name is so well-known in Canada in connection with the Rescue Homes of East London, has leased Lambton Lodge on Beverley street, the residence of the Hon. George Brown, and proposes remaining in Toronto for a short time."

Scott Act.

Four Scott Act cases came before the Police Court this morning:—Cochrane vs. Roddy, Cochrane vs. Brosseau, Cochrane vs. McGreggor and Cochrane vs. Halpin. Pleas of guilty were entered for a first offense and fines of $50 and costs were imposed in each case. This afternoon Harvey Pierson and D. Costello were arranged in the Police Court, Ashburnham, before P. M. Edmison and were each fined $50 and costs.

A New Bishopric.

A Montreal French paper last week, the Lindsay Post says, mentioned the probability of a new R. C. diocese being formed out of the remote portions of the diocese of Peterborough, and the Abbe Laurent was stated as likely to be Bishop of Sault Ste. Marie. That undoubtedly would mean Vicar-General Laurent, of Lindsay, who has spent ten years of his life as missionary in the diocese.

Runaway.

A horse attached to an old buggy started at Fitzgerald & Stanger's carriage shop and ran to George street, and down the east sidewalk as far as Hunter street. The sidewalk, which was crowded with people, was quickly cleared, and no one was hurt. The horse was caught up Hunter street about thirty yards. A jar of buttermilk, which was in the buggy, was splattered all over, giving the vehicle a dapple grey appearance.

Large lot of PEACHES selling at Ostrom's Fruit Market, from 75 cts. to $1.00 and $1.40 per basket to-day.

Still Another.

Mr. E. E. Henderson has been appointed agent in Peterborough and district for the old Atlas Fire Assurance Company, founded in 1808, with a capital of six millions of dollars. This substantial office has just extended its business to Canada. With the excellent reputation in Great Britain there is no doubt but that it will command public confidence here, and a large share of the business of the district. Mr. Henderson now represents five of the leading fire offices, in addition to life and accident business. Mr. Henderson is so well and favorably known that it is unnecessary to point out the excellence of the choice of an agent made by the Atlas Company.

FOR neat and cheap Millinery in all the New Shapes and Shades, go direct to Turnbull's.

TURNBULL has imported a heavy stock o Winter Mantles. Don't fail to see them.

ANY BUT CANADIAN.

For weeks the Globe has been insisting that Canadians should consume Scotch sugar, and at the same time insisting upon the adoption of an anti-British tariff that would shut Scotch sugar and Scotch everything else out of Canadian markets. Last Saturday it protested against the Canadian duty upon English tweeds, but still urged the adoption of a much higher duty that would bar Canadian ports against everything English. How can any man expect such insincerity and self-contradiction to impose upon intelligent people.—Toronto World.

CRICKET.

Campbellford and Peterborough—The Home Team Scores a Victory.

These clubs played their return match here yesterday, and the visitors got left to the tune of one innings and 59 runs. For this result the fine batting of Hamilton, E. Stratton, Thomas, "Baker" and Sabine, and the wonderful bowling of the last named (one of Wrighton's lambs, by the way), were mainly responsible. The score amounted to 129, only ten men being played. 69 were put up at the fall of the third wicket, then four wickets fell very rapidly, a stand by Stratton and Sabine finally bringing the score to decent proportions. Horkins got 6 wickets and Michell 3. Both are young bowlers, and give good promise of future excellence. Mitchell, it may be mentioned, shapes well with the bat also.

The visitors seemed utterly unable to play Sabine, his low delivery and Max. Hamilton's high delivery working well together. Max. had several easy catches missed from his bowling, but even with this the score reached only 21, Sabine actually taking 8 wickets for 6 runs, a performance very seldom equalled.

In their second innings they played up better, scoring 49, of which Tait made 15 and Daley 11 by good cricket; the not out, Mitchell, also showed promising form. Sabine again proved destructive, and Hamilton bowled well; a change in the bowling was tried, however, which ended the innings in short order. It may be remarked that 9 of the wickets were bowled, the tenth falling to an excellent catch by Stirling at the on. The general fielding of the Peterboroughs was not above mediocrity.

The following is the score:—

A new hotel for Mr. C. A. Phillips is being built at Midland.

Mr. Lewis Little, of Seymour heard his wife groan early on Tuesday morning. He failed to awake her and roused the family, but when a light was brought she was dead.

Louis French, 15 years old, had his arm lacerated by a saw on Monday in the Little Bob mill, Bobcaygeon. It was amputated below the elbow.

Nearly twenty buildings have been erected at Havelock since spring, several of them neat, comfortable and stylish. Building lots, quarter of an acre, command from $100 to $250. Mr. T. P. Pearce has built a fine store.

Mr. Adam Dinwoodie, of Dinwoodie, Bros., Campbellford, was on Tuesday married to Mrs. Davidson, daughter of the Rev. R. Neill, D. D., of Seymour.

The drought has been severe in Haliburton. Root crops will be deficient. Bush fires have done damage in Cardiff, Monmouth and Snowden. Haliburton village was closely pressed.

Abbey's Theatre Co.

The Cornwall Ont., Standard of Sept. 1st, contains the following notice of the talented company:—

"There was a large audience at Town Hall Wednesday evening to hear the rendering of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The drama though old, still has a hold upon the people that is wonderful. While the main features of the dramatization are retained, there are many new features added by the management, and, as rendered by Abbey's double mammoth company, one does not see the old and familiar version, but a new and sparkling drama, retaining the familiar story. One of the most pleasing features of the evening was the singing of the celebrated Hyer sisters who are acknowledged artists, besides rendering many vocal selections. They are the two Topsys. The two Marks keep the audience good natured when in sight, and when either say a word there is applause. The part of Little Eva is taken by Jennie Fursman, who is but four years old, and acts her part in a remarkably truthful manner. The entire company took their parts well, and presented a most pleasing performance. If the same company appears in town again, it may be assured of a crowded house."

RALLY TO-NIGHT.

A meeting of Conservatives will be held at eight o'clock this evening in the rooms of the Young Men's Conservative Association, over Mr. G. Stethem's store. The object of the meeting is to make final arrangements for the Young Men's Convention which will be held to-morrow and on Wednesday in Toronto. Reports from all parts of the Province show that the Convention will be a representative one. Sir John Macdonald, the veteran leader of the party and Premier of the Dominion, is expected to be present, as well as Mr. W. R. Meredith and other leaders of the party.

Those who purpose attending the Convention are especially requested to be present this evening to receive certificates and badges.

THE MITCHELLSTOWN MEETING.

Details of the Fight With the Police—The Crowd Finally Dispersed.

MITCHELLSTOWN, Ireland, Sept. 10.—The meeting in Market Square yesterday was attended by 7,000 persons. Messrs. Dillon, Brunner, Labouchere, John Ellis, Gill, Condon and O'Hea were present. A Government reporter with an escort of police tried to push to the front. The crowd resisted them with sticks and stones. The police then made a charge against the crowd and were repulsed by men on horseback. Mr. Condon tried to pacify the crowd. Mr. Dillon advised them to treat the police with silent contempt because Home Rule was nearly won, and then the Irish forces would be under the control of the people instead of, as now, in the hands of their enemies. The row was renewed, however, and reinforcements of police, who had been driven up from the barracks, fired into the crowd. One man was killed and several others were wounded. One of the wounded has since died. The police next charged and dispersed the crowd.

DUBLIN, Sept. 10.—Mitchelstown is quiet. Mr. Dillon remains there, but Mr. Labouchere has gone to Cork. The persons killed were an old man named Riordan, a resident of the locality, and an elderly cabman from Fermoy. The injuries received by the police consist principally of scalp wounds and bruises.

FRENCH MOBILIZATION.

The Experiment Said to Have Inspired Confidence in the Army.

PARIS, Sept. 10.—The mobilization experiment necessitated the raising of the Seventeenth Army Corps from 10,000 to 36,759 men, fully clothed, armed and equipped. The members of the reserve are offine physique. The cavalry have a good pace, but the men lack a firm seat many having been thrown. The officers were somewhat bothered in handling larger bodies of men than they were accustomed to. The artillery movements were sluggish. Altogether, however, the expirement inspires confidence in the army, the Southern crops not being as the best. At the conclusion of the sham fight yesterday, General Ferron conferred upon General Clement the decoration of Commander of the Legion of Honor

A Big Railway Deal.

BOSTON, Sept. 10.—The Advertiser this morning publishes the details of a big railway deal. The New York, New Haven and Hartford and the Boston and Albany roads have agreed upon a consolidation of interests that will secure to them the bulk of the passenger business between New York and Boston, absorbing between them the New England and Norwich and Worcester line, giving them a boat via Norwich and an all rail line via Springfield. The running time between Boston and New York will be reduced to 4½ hours.

The Kabo corset warranted to wear a year without breaking, is sold only at Turnbull's, the Headquarters for all New and Improved Corsets.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

MR. O'BRIEN'S CASE.

What is Said of His Refusal to Appear at Mitchellstown.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The question as to the right or wrong of Mr. O'Brien's failure to appear for trial to-day is the foremost topic of discussion, and out of the large number of issues that have been dragged into the consequent disputes, many of them wholly irrelevant, numberless fights have arisen and countless friendships have been severed. In view of the excited state of feeling over the affair, it is, perhaps, well to explain that Mr. O'Brien's decision to ignore the summons and compel the Government to arrest him in order to carry out its intention of arraigning him before a magistrate, was the result of a conference of his immediate personal and political friends, who believed that the course they had decided upon would more sharply define the issue and more exhaustively test the question of the Government's right to abridge or abolish the privilege of free speech and free political action. The appearence of Mr. O'Brien in court in obedience to a simple summons, his friends contented, would belittle the issue, while his arrest and forcible arraignment would at once raise the matter to the plain of a question of the first importance. The order of arrest issued against Mr. O'Brien is, therefore, welcomed as a point scored against the Government, and an appeal for the sympathy of all who hold that the privilege of free speech on political questions is the inalienable right of a British subject, be he an Irishman or not. On the other hand it was held by those opposing the home rule cause that Mr. O'Brien has clearly and wilfully violated a law of the United Kingdom, and must therefore suffer punishment. He may contend that the law is unjust and even unconstitutional, but it is still the law and must be obeyed. Opinion is pretty evenly divided on the question of the wisdom of Mr. O'Brien's action, but even those who applaud his course are unable to see that it will result in any advantage to him or the cause he assays to promote. Messrs. Labouchere, Dillon, Brunner, Ellis and others are now at Mitchellstown, and will remain there until Mr. O'Brien's case is finally disposed of, rendering him such assistance as it is in their power to give.

IN THE COMMONS.

The Mitchellstown Riot Discussed—The Police Defended.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. John G. Gibson, Solicitor General for Ireland, in reply to an interrogatory by Mr. Sexton, said the Government had not sufficient information to make a statement in relation to the trouble at Mitchellstown. Mr. Sexton then said:—"I shall resist any progress of the Appropriation bill until the Government gives the desired information." (Parnellite cheers.)

At a subsequent period yesterday Mr. Sexton appealed to the Government to give such justification as they could for the murderous acts at Mitchellstown. It was beyond doubt, he said, that the bloodshed had resulted from the wanton attack of an armed force upon a body of citizens engaged in the exercise of their undoubted constitutional right of public meeting. On every previous occasion application had been made for the accommodation of the Government reporter and had never been refused. This time no application was made, but another course was adopted, whose apparent object was to excite the passions of the people and provoke them to violence. (Parnellite cheers.) Who ordered the firing? What steps had been take to identify the men who committed the murders? The catastrophe was the inevitable result of the language and acts of the Government, who had found it easier to begin than to end the conflict. (Cheers.)

Mr. Balfour replied that Mr. Sexton had given an account of the affair more minute and detailed than any he could lay before the House, but which differed in every vital and substantial particular from the accounts the Government had received. The Government reporter, said Mr. Balfour, under an escort of police attempted to approach the vehicle from which thespeakers were going to address the people. Mr. Condon shouted to the people to close up against the police. That was the signal for an assult on the police, which was utterly unprovoked and of the most violent and brutal character. They were pelted with stones and beaten with black thorn sticks; thrown out of formation and ridden down by men on horseback and driven back inside the barracks; the doors and windows of the barracks were broken, and it was then, in self-defence, that the shots were fired. (Cheers.) If this account was true, as he believed it was, there never had been a more wanton or brutal attack upon the police. (Renewed cheers.)

Mr. Sexton asked—Do you deny that the space around the barracks was entirely free when the shots were fired?

Mr. Balfour said he had given the substance of the reports telegraphed to him. Fifty-four of the police were struck and twenty of them severely injured. The men did no more than their duty in resorting to their means of defence as a last necessity. The responsibility rested with a band of politicians calling themselves leaders of the Irish people, who spoke of Government reporters as spies. If those persons, instead of talking about constitutional agitation, had exercised their influence to keep the people within the law the country would not have to deplore these scenes.

Mr. J. O'Connor justified Mr. Condon's advice to the people to close their ranks. The Irish members, he said, were doing their best to restrain the people, while the Irish officials were doing their utmost to provoke them.

Sir Edward Reed, member for Cardiff, warned the Government that the English electors would resent interference with public meetings. The people of Great Britain would not allow their fellow subjects in Ireland to be treated like the people of Mitchellstown had been treated.

MARMORA.

NUPTIAL KNOTS.—Mr. Mark Devlin, o Marmora, was united in marriage to Miss Matilda Payne, daughter of Dr. Payne of the Staff of physicians in Dr. Pierce's Medical Institute, Rochester, on Wednesday, 7th inst. The young couple are favorites in and around Marmora and will make their future home in that village.—Intelligencer

PORT HOPE.

ANOTHER BEAR.—Another bear story comes to us, this time nearer home. Mr. James Scott (brother of Messrs. W. B. and R. B. Scott of this town) was working on Tuesday, 6th inst., with a man in a field of his farm, lot 16, con. 4, Hamilton, when he noticed a bear at a short distance. They with two other men and a small dog, chased it, when bruin sought refuge in a tree, but stayed only a little time. Running in front of the men and dog was not enjoyed by the bear, for he was again treed, but this time one of the men went to the house brought a gun and shot it. The bear was large but not in very good condition.—Guide.

BOUNDARY RAILWAY.

Injunction Proceedings Begun by the Dominion Government.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 11.—Yesterday morning at the instance of the Dominion Government, the firm of Aikins, Culver & Hamilton filed two bills with the Clerk of Record and Writs, praying that the Red River Valley contractors and Hon. Messrs. Norquay and Wilson be restrained from building the Red River Valley Railway. The two bills of complaint are precisely the same in their wording, the only difference being that of the lots which they cover. They are much the same as the bills formerly filed, and embrace lots 575,619,621,635 and 637 in St. Agathe, a village on the west bank of the Red River, twenty four miles from Winnipeg, and also another batch of lots in the same municipality. It is understood that the Minister of Justice signed these bills when he was in the city, and that they have been ready for filing for a considerable time, it having only been decided to file them when it became pretty well understood that the Chief Justice was likely to decide the Browning injunction case against the C. P. R.

ANOTHER BAD BLAZE.

Montreal Again Visited by a Serious Conflagaration.

MONTREAL, Sept. 10.—The fire brigade was called out this mornitg for a fire n Porter & Savage's tannery, and boot and shoe factory. There was a stiff wind blowing, and the fire soon had the upper hand. Water was scarce, and it was but a short space of time before the whole premises were enveloped in flames. The entire tannery was destroyed besides F. X. Gauthier's tenement house in rear of Geo. Peards's grocery. Mr. Porter's establishment formed a quadrangle fronting on Visitation, Sherbrooke and Beaudry streets. On the Beaudry side was the three story belting factory and a four story tenement house belonging to Mrs. Porter and occupied by twelve families. The flames spread with lightning rapidity and at a quarter past 5 o'clock the walls fell. The fire originated from the igniting of a shaft which had been running all night. Over three hundred persons will be thrown out of employment, and the total loss will be over $200,000. During the progress of the fire August Chevrier was injured by the falling of the wall of the shoe factory.

THE KNIGHTS OF LABOUR.

Mr. T. T. Powderly Outlines New Laws And Recommends Their Adoption.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 10.—The Times says that General Master Workman Powderly has issued a very important circular "to the order everywhere," outlining a policy which he recommends should be enacted into a law of the order at the next general assembly. The new plan is as follows: Give to each trade the right to organize a national trade assembly, under the jurisdiction of the general assembly, said national trade assembly to meet at least once a year for the election of officers and for the better regulation of the affairs of the district. Each national trade assembly to have exclusive control over the affairs of its trade, without let or hindrance, so long as the constitution of the general assembly is not violated. In matters concerning strikes no trade or local assembly to enter upon one until all of the assemblies of the national trade assembly have voted on the question and have, by a three-fourths vote agreed to give assistance (the general laws of the order requiring attempts of arbitration to be observed). No assistance from the general order to be given until the case has been presented to the general executive board, and by them submitted to the order at large. In case that no assistance from the general order is required the general executive board is not to interfere with the matter. Each national trade assembly to have a bureau of statistics and information concerning the state and condition of the trade, the information to be furnished by local statisticians. State, territorial, and provincial assemblies to be formed in every state, territory, and province in the jurisdiction of the order. In the circular Mr. Powderly also advocates a general benefit association.

What Printers Demand.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 10.—The St. Louis Typographical Union, jointly with the Pressman's Union, have notified the employing printers of this city that after November 1st nine hours shall constitute a day's work and eight hours on Saturday, and that wages shall remain the same as now. The employers adopted resolutions, decraring the demand unjust and that it should be firmly resisted, also that, as this is the result of the action of the International Union a convention should be called embracing employing printers, lithographers and binders of the United States and Canada to consider the question.

LATEST CABLE NEWS.

HARCOURT'S ATTACK.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Urgent Parnellite, Liberal and Tory whips have been issued in view of Sir William Harcourt's promised attack upon the Government and motion of a vote of censure on Monday, because of the action of the Dublin Executive in proclaiming the meeting at Ennis last Sunday. While the action of Sir William Harcourt is generally regarded as a mere repetition of the course pursued by Mr. Gladstone in moving against the proclamation of the League, and consequently considered as a trivial matter, it is really of the greatest importance and the division on the motion is anxiously looked for.

KILBRIDE FOR PARLIAMENT.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The report which has been in circulation for several days that Mr. John O'Connor, member for South Kerry, intends to resign his seat in the House of Commons, is confirmed, and the statement is made upon authority that Mr. Parnell will name Mr. Kilbride, who came into prominence as an evicted tenant of the estate of Lord Lansdowne, and the companion of Mr. O'Brien on his visit to Canada, as Mr. O'Connor's successor.

DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—It is stated on the authority of a member of the lady's family that the Duke of Marlborough, at present visiting the United States, is engaged to be married to Mrs. Adair, of Queen's County, who is said to be one of the most beautiful women in England and one of the wealthiest landowners in the world.

DOM PEDRO.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The Emperor of Brazil will visit Nienna and Italy and will spend the winter in Egypt and Algeria and on his return again visit England.

RAVAGES OF CHOLERA.

VIENNA, Sept. 10.—The Austrian Consul at Bombay reports that 31,326 deaths from cholera occurred in Oude during last May.

THE THEATRE DISASTER.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The Exeter theatre disaster is still a prominent topic in the columns of the daily press and has brought forth hundreds of suggestions looking to the adoption of increased means of safety to audiences in places of amusement. The papers freely comment on these suggestions in the main favorably, and advocate the passage of a bill by Parliament placing all the theatres in the kingdom under the supervision or the Home Office.

RESCUE OF SHIPWRECKED CREW.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 10.—The steamer Umbria from New York brings thirteen of the crew of the American schooner Lillian Baxter wrecked off Newfoundland. The men had suffered great privation for two days on board their dismantled vessel, and one of the crew was drowned.

ANTE-MORTEM STATEMENT.

MITCHELLSTOWN, Sept. 11.—The town has been quiet to-day. The victims of the fight on Friday will be given a public funeral on Monday, which will be made the occasion of a great demonstration. The man Shenick and the boy Casey are dying from the effects of the wounds they received on Friday. Casey's ante-mortem deposition has been taken. He states that he was standing near Shenick, at one corner of the square, when Head Constable O'Sullivan came to a window of the barracks and fired at him. Four witnesses confirmed this statement. The Nationalists say they have evidence to establish the identity of the policeman who shot Riordan.

ARREST OF MR. O'BRIEN.

DUBLIN, Sept. 10.—Mr. O'Brien was arrested to-day while seeing Mr. Labouchere off on the steamer.

NO REPUBLIC FOR THEM.

PARIS, Sept. 11.—The Journal Official declares that neither France nor Brazil will permit the establishment of an independent republic in Counani.

A UNION OF SLAVS.

VIENNA, Sept. 10.—At an assembly of 50,000 Slavs held on Gonssignee Mountain, in Moravia, it was decided to issue an invitation to all Slavs to unite firmly together to fight against the enemy of their race. It was also decided to adopt a common alphabet for all Slavs.

THE EMIN BEY EXPEDITION.

Mr. Stanley Heard From—Advancing Into the Interior—All Going Well.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—A despatch from St Paul de Loanda, under date September 9, states that Major Bartellot, commander of the camp on the Aruwimi, had sent advices to Leopoldsville that he had received news from Henry M. Stanley, dated July 12. Mr. Stanley was then ten days' march in the interior and was still proceeding up the Aruwimi, which he had found navigable above the rapids. He had launched the steel whale boat and rafts. The members of the expedition were in good health, and provisions were easily procured at the large villages. The country showed a gradual rise towards the high table lands. A caravan of 480 men followed the expedition on the left bank of the river and an advance guard of 40 natives of Zanzibar, led by Lieut. Stairs, foraged for supplies. Mr. Stanley expected to arrive on July 22nd at the centre of the Mahodi district and to reach Wadelai by the middle of August. The advance had been so peacefully accomplished that Mr. Stanley had instructed Major Bartellot that he would shortly send him orders to follow the expedition by the same route.

A Bishop's House Burglarized.

HAMILTON, Sept. 11.—During Friday night burglars entered Bishop Hamilton's residence on John street north, but, strange to say, took nothing but some money and jewellery belonging to one of the servants, $25 in cash, a silver watch and chain, silk handkerchiefs, silver bracelets and sleeve-links, and silver and gold earrings. Entrance was effected through a basement window. Two other small burglaries also occurred during Friday night. Hoover & Hoyle's tailor shop, opposite the Times office, was entered and $30 stolen, and a window was broken in John Devine's shoe shop on York street, and a pair of shoes stolen.

RAILWAY CHARTERS.

We are glad to find that the Hamilton Spectator and the Mail now take the same view with ourselves of a contention we have been maintaining for some time without any journalistic assistance heretofore. It is that the British North America Act withholds from the Provinces and gives to the Dominion jurisdiction as to railways extending beyond the limits of a Province. If these words do not cover the part within the Province of a railway extending beyond it, they are absolutely meaningless, for the absurdity of a Province chartering a road outside its territory could not have been contemplated even to forbid it. This is in accordance with the spirit of our Constitution, which places under the control of the Dominion authorities our dealings with the outside world, among other matters of general concern. The Spectator supports this interpretation by the following extract from a speech by Lord Clarendon, when the B. N. A. Act was before the Imperial Parliament:—

"Public works fall into two classes: first, those which are purely local, such as roads and bridges and municipal buildings; and these belong, not only as a matter of right, but also as a matter of duty, to the local authorities. Secondly there are public works which, though possibly situated in a single Province, such as telegraphs and canals, and railways, are yet of common import and value to the entire Confederation; and over these it is clearly right that the central Government should exercise a controlling authority."

Without such an agreement for concerted action through their representatives, the people of Canada would not be an organized community, but a mere fortuitous concourse of discordant bodies with no common policy. Such general action by no means conflicts with the local management of really local affairs.

LIBERAL ELECTIONEERING.

Of all the cases of wholesale interference with the choice of representatives by the people, the dastardly attempt at coercion by Mr. Mercier in Ottawa County is the grossest ever witnessed. The lumbermen in that constituency are mostly Conservative so Mr. Mercier has determined to "put the screw" on them. He has raised the ground rent of the limits from $2 to $5 and the increase was to take effect on Sept. 1st. But as there is an election now pending in Ottawa County Mr. Mercier has extended the time till Oct. 1st, with the almost open threat that the lumbermen will then be treated according to their action in this election. It would hardly be a more tyranical interference with the freedom of election if Mr. Mercier were to threaten with imprisonment or fine every elector who dared to oppose his candidate by vote or voice. Those whom Mr. Mercier is thus attempting to coerce will, however, be very foolish if they yield to his bulldozing. Apart from the degradation of submitting to be thus enslaved, they would gain nothing by the humiliation. If they give way to the pressure and are coerced into returning Mr. Mercier's candidate they will have served his purpose and they may be sure that having no further use for them, Mr. Mercier will proceed to exact from them the means to satisfy the greed of his followers. Such a man, who would thus influence a portion of the electorate by threats or promises of reward according to their votes, would have no hesitation in refusing the reward after he had obtained his object.

SUCH IS FAME.

The Belleville Ontario, which might have some knowledge of Peterborough, in its endeavours to enlighten the public, thus displays its ignorance:—

"What has the self-elected exponent of the views of the Conservative party on Commercial Union to say to the following extract from a letter by Mr. Luxton, M. P. (Tory) for West Peterborough?"

This is introductory to an extract giving Mr. Cluxton's suggestion that Canada should extend its area for commerce by confining it to one foreign country and shutting out the rest of the Empire, and, indeed, of the world. Most people would call this restriction.

It will be seen that Mr. Cluxton is being promoted by the annexationist press. A little time ago no abuse was too bad for him whenever they mentioned him. Then he became an ex M.P. Now he is, according to them, a full-fledged M. P. for West Peterborough. When he makes himself acquainted with the real objects of his new leaders, as divulged by them on the other side of the international line, he will at once shrink from further complicity with such schemers, and then we will see the annexationist press retracting their promotions of him step by step.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

GOUGH'S CHALLENGE

Use your own judgment, have your wits about you, and in this age of delusion take no man's word unless he is prepared to prove what he asserts and is willing to back it, then you will see that a Shepherd may sometimes be one of the black sheep in disguise.

MY CHALLENGE.

I HEREBY CHALLENGE the self-styled Cheapside Store for $500 or $1,000 that the following is correct:—1st. That I carry ten times more clothing, that I sell twenty times more, and, in many instances, sell them cheaper than Cheapside buys them, and yet I always sell with a profit; 2nd. That I do sell to other dealeres who sell twice the amount of clothing Cheapside does, and that I can sell lines also cheaper than he buys in his present market, and yet I will make a profit; 3rd. That when Cheapside sells grain bags for $1.75 per dozen he makes no money out of them, and hence his reason for refusing to wholesale them at that price; 4th. That anything the BIG CLOTHIER advertises to sell he makes no stipulation as to the amount. You may take one or all he has. This is not so with Cheapside, and consequently advertising to sell grain bags at $1.75 per dozen is only a decoy to catch trade; 5th. That when Cheapside states in his advertisement that he sold bags to the Big Clothier he deliberately states what he knows to be false, for when the BIG CLOTHIER sent to buy bags he sent him back word that he did not wholesale them and refused to do so; 6th. That not one single article in Cheapside's Clothing advertisement in Weekly Review of 9th inst. is worth the money he represents them to be, and yet he warns the public to beware of designing dealers. Now, Mr. Cheapside, as you have courted a notice from the Big Clothier, and as you are too small fry for the Wonderful Cheap Man to again notice, don't come out next week with another delusive advertisement, but either shut up or put up. Every word I herein state is true, and if you accept my challenge I will make you swallow it or I will lose my $1,000. In the meantime I will sell grain bags for $1.50 per dozen—(there is no money in it for me at this price)—but if you have the backbone you profess to have, then just follow the BIG CLOTHIER. He will keep you hustling, for remember that the man that always leads and never follows is

GOUGH, THE WONDERFUL CHEAP MAN,

GENERAL.

An international Trades Congress will be held in London next year.

A vein of pure rock salt, 155 feet thick, has been struck at Ellsworth, Kansas.

A definite statement relative to the fisheries commission is expected to be made this week.

The total loss by Wednesday's fire in the village of Newburg is $150,000, with only $30,000 insurance.

The Nile is so high that a large number of estates are flooded. The crops are almost ruined, and a famine is imminent.

The Executive Committee of Toronto City Council voted $200 to the sufferers by fire at the village of Newburg.

The Hamilton Board of Education has postponed for the present the extension of the kindergarten system in the city schools.

It is reported that an American schooner has been captured by the Dominion cruiser Intrepid while fishing within the three-mile limit off Campobello.

Right now is the time to use a good Blood Purifying Medicine. Lose no time in getting a bottle of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It will do you good. Sold by all druggists. 50c.

The schooner David Dows, of Toledo, parted from her tow in Tuesday night's storm on Lake Superior, and is believed to be lost with her crew of fifteen men.

A cablegram to the Mail says Sir Charles Tupper has been invited to spend a few days with Mr. Chamberlain in Birmingham to talk over the Canadian fisheries question.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills, Salts, &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists.

A statement of the public debt of the Dominion issued on Saturday by the Finance Department shows that the total net debt on the 31st of August was $228,494,461, an increase since June 30th of $3,467,699.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are teething. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep. Believing the child can scarcely be sick while using this article, we say to every mother who has a suffering child, look at once for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup and learn how quickly it relieves the poor little sufferer. It is perfectly harmless, and pleasant to taste. It corrects acidity of the stomach, relieves wind colic, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures diarrhœa, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

Somehow or other the sight of that smiling, contented, selfish woman, playing off her admirers one against the other, infuriated me. I could not get the memory of poor little Sunning out of my head while I watched her; it seemed to me that of all forms of depravity the most odious is that which obliterates—the natural, animal instinct of maternal love. And my soul being stirred within me by the spectacle of the power possessed and exercised by that woman, who if she had had her deserts would have been picking oakum in Millbank penitentiary, I could at last contain myself no longer, but, rising from my sequestered corner, crossed the room with the intent to do a truly silly thing.

I made straight for the sofa on which Bracknell was sitting apart with his hands in his pockets, and asked him whether he didn't want to smoke.

"Of course I do," he growled. "Why the dickens don't these people go to bed?"

"We will give them the slip," said I; for I was bent upon having a few words in private with him. "Now is our time, while nobody is looking."

So I got him away to the smoking room, and, as soon as we had lighted our cigars, plunged head first into the middle of my subject. "Bracknell," said I, "do you or do you not intend Beauchamp to marry your sister?"

I have mentioned already that Bracknell's manners had deteriorated. He frowned heavily and asked me what the devil that was to me.

"I will tell you," I answered. "You must admit, I think, that you haven't behaved very well to Jim Leigh"——

"Good Lord!" interrupted Bracknell, "are you going back to that old story again? Why, man, I made him an apology when he reappeared in London last summer! What more would you have? I can assure you that I repent from the bottom of my heart of having deprived him of Miss Hilda Turner."

"I don't doubt it," I replied; "I only meant to remind you that you owe him a good turn. I can't go into particulars, because we shall have the other men in here presently, but the long and the short of it is that Lady Mildred and he are in love with each other."

"Oh, indeed!" said Bracknell. "Well, really, I don't care."

"Does that mean," I inquired, "that you won't oppose their marriage?"

"It means," answered he, "that I shall not bother myself about the matter, one way or the other. Jim had better fight it out with the governor."

I ought, I suppose, to have been contented with that. I had not behaved with my usual circumspection in introducing the subject at all, and I had received an assurance, which, so far as it went, should have been entirely satisfactory to me. But, being so exasperated with Hilda, and being also curious to learn how far Hilda's absolute lack of principle was shared by her husband, I must needs proceed to remark:

"You once told Lady Bracknell in my presence that you would not permit her to entice Beauchamp away from your sister. You have changed your mind as to that, it appears."

Bracknell rose slowly from his chair, advanced to that in which I was seated, and placed a heavy hand on each of my shoulders, looking straight into my eyes. "Maynard," said he, "you aren't a bad sort of fellow, taking you all round, but you're just as cheeky now as you used to be at Eton, and I may as well tell you at once that I'm not in the humor to put up with cheek. Do you remember my giving you a licking once in Keate's lane?"

"No," I replied, "I do not. I remember your hitting me and I remember kicking you on the shins, and I remember old Jim Leigh coming between us."

"Well," said Bracknell, "I dare say it was no bad thing for you that Jim Leigh happened to be handy. I didn't want to thrash you then and I don't want to thrash you now; but if you take upon yourself to interfere with my private affairs a second time, by the Lord, I'll knock your head off your shoulders!"

This threat, which was embellished by certain expressions which I prefer not to transcribe, caused me to reflect. I do not suppose that Bracknell could have knocked my head off my shoulders, but it is quite possible that he might have managed to give me a black eye; and really I cannot afford to be seen going about with a black eye. Therefore I resolved to abstain from further provocation; and at this opportune moment our interview was interrupted by the entrance of our host, accompanied by a large detachment of his guests.

CHAPTER XIV.

On the following morning I descended to the dining room to find there Lady Bracknell, attended by her brace of devoted admirers, and I perceived at once that Hilda had resumed the game of the previous evening. It was a game of which, as I knew, she never wearied. She had the appearance of being well satisfied with it now; which was more than could be said for either of the other players.

"After all," she was remarking, as I entered, "I can't see why we should give ourselves airs because we ride and shoot better than most other nations. That is something, of course; but there are so many other ways in which the French, for instance, are our superiors. They are a great deal more amusing to talk to, and they are more artistic, and they write better novels. Mr. Maynard, aren't French novels much better than ours?"

I said I must decline to deliver judgment upon that point; it was a matter of taste.

"Well, but," broke in Beauchamp, who was looking decidedly cross, "I never denied it. I'm sure I don't know whether their novels are better than ours, and, to tell you the truth, I don't much care either. All I said was that they are not a sporting people."

"There is more variety of sport in France than in England," said De Vieuzac boldly. "We have, for example, the wolf and the wild boar"——

"And you gallop after 'em in green and gold coats, with horns twisted round and round your bodies," interrupted Beauchamp, not ever courteously.

"You have perhaps derived your ideas of French sport from the pictures in 'Punch,'" observed De Vieuzac, without losing his temper. "They are funny, those pictures, they are very funny; but I do not think that the artists have drawn them from life."

"I have been in France," returned the other doggedly, "and I've seen a lot of chasseurs, as you call them, shooting cock sparrows on Sunday afternoons."

De Vieuzac shrugged his shoulders. "You will come to it, my good friend," said he. "What would you have? We are a little in advance of you; we made our revolution a hundred years ago. When your game laws are abolished, when your great estates are broken up, when your country squires can no more live upon their rents—then you will see what you will see. For the rest, the persons who, as you say, shoot sparrows on Sundays are not of the rank who would shoot partridges if they were Englishmen; and you must not ask of a man that he should be a good game shot when he has never the occasion to shoot at game."

"At any rate," observed Hilda, rising and bestowing a gracious smile upon the speaker, "we all know that Monsieur de Vieuzac can shoot as well as anybody. And isn't it time for you to go out shooting now?"

Beauchamp held the door open for her. "We are to have a ride this afternoon, are we not?" I heard him ask eagerly.

"Of course we are," she answered. "Didn't you promise to take me out?" And then, turning to the other, "Monsieur de Vieuzac, I am going to be very selfish, and make you join us. You will have to tear yourself away from the partridges and be in time for luncheon."

The Frenchman raised his eyebrows slightly and bowed, murmuring something about Lady Bracknell's wishes being law. Possibly he thought that a ride in company with his rival would not be very good fun.

As for Beauchamp, he did not attempt to conceal his disgust. "Perhaps you will ride with me some other day. If I'm not wanted I'd just as soon shoot this afternoon," he was beginning; but the closing of the door deprived me of the remainder of his sentence, as well as of Hilda's reply. However, it was pretty certain that he would do what she ordered him, whether he liked it or not.

After I was left alone, I spent some five minutes of my valuable time in wondering why Lady Bracknell had asked De Vieuzac to spoil poor Beauchamp's afternoon. Were I a lady of great personal attractions, I should, I dare say, enjoy having several admirers; but I should certainly prefer to take them one at a time. That a second may be found useful as a means of stimulating the ardor of the first I can understand; but the object of keeping them together after that result has been fully obtained is not so easy to discover.

I did not go out shooting with Bracknell and the others that morning, nor was I able to put in an appearance at the luncheon hour. I had to finish my admirable essay upon "Proportional Representation" for The Eclectic Review, and, getting my arguments into a knot toward the last pages (which, I am sorry to say, is no uncommon experience of mine when composing admirable essays), I was chained to my desk until the afternoon was far advanced, struggling to reconcile certain irreconcilable statements to which I had committed myself, and which I was unwilling to retract. Having at length made up my mind to throw one of these overboard for the sake of harmony, I wound up my task and sallied forth to take the air.

THE PROPOSED ZOLLVEREIN.

The Development of the Commercial Union Theory Considered.

The Monetary Times, an impartial authority, has a long editorial discussing the Commercial Union propositions as at present developed. From it we take the following extracts:—

THE SCHEME DEVELOPED.

"Commercial Union, under the light of discussion, does not improve in aspect, as seen by the thoughtful Canadian. On the contrary, as discussion goes on, new features of an objectionable character are brought out. At the Detroit meeting, last Saturday, Mr. Wiman advanced one or two steps further in the development of the theory, of which he is a foremost champion. Heretofore little notice had been taken of objections to the scheme; but it was felt that these objections were beginning to tell, and that some attempt to answer them must be made."

HOSTILE TO GREAT BRITAIN.

"Canada taxes British goods as heavily as she taxes foreign; and Mr. Wiman sees in this practice a reason for taxing British goods more than foreign (American) goods. But it may be replied that equality is one thing, hostile discrimination against the trade of the Mother Country is another. Equality we have won; in discrimination we have been forbidden to indulge. This has been a standing rule by which the relation between Mother Country and the colonies has been regulated."

THE SIXTY MILLION MYTH.

"The Commercial Unionists tell us a great deal about the benefit of trading with sixty millions of people; but the poetry is taken out of the promise when it is added that we must trade on conditions imposed by our new customers, that is, under the American tariff. What does this mean? Mr. Wiman says it merely means an innocent ten per cent. addition to our tariff. But it means a great deal more. It means that we are to be compelled to buy the dear and inferior goods of the United States, and are to be forbidden to buy the cheap and superior goods of Great Britain. The loss in this exchange would be enormous."

A SURRENDER DEMANDED.

"Mr. Wiman has repeatedly stated that the United States would readily agree to commercial union with Canada, but he has apparently become convinced, somewhat recently, that she would not agree to surrender one jot of tariff-making power but that, if we are to go into commercial union at all, we must adopt the American tariff bodily. This will settle the matter in the minds of every one who values the right of deciding on the conditions on which the trade and finance of the country shall be conducted. Canada could not accept terms so disadvantageous to her."

ROOM FOR RECIPROCITY.

"Without commercial union, there is room for reciprocity. Reciprocity in raw products is a totally different thing from universal reciprocity."

WE CAN LIVE WITHOUT IT.

"If the Americans will not agree to this form of reciprocity, the responsibility rests on them. We retain our shore fisheries, and their fishermen are suffering for want of access to them. If this is their choice, we have nothing to say to it, for with them rests the decision. We may regret the effects, on both sides, of their blindness, but we do not complain. If they do not want limited reciprocity, they cannot have access to our shore fisheries, and we can live without it."

ANNEXATION AVOWED.

"Professor Smith 'believed that Annexation was best for both countries, and that it was sure to come.' This is a political not a commercial issue; but it is better that it should be put in this naked form, than that it should be masked under Commercial Union. If Commercial Union means Annexation it should be put in that form."

CONCEALED TRAITORS.

"No doubt there are, among Commercial Unionists, Annexationists, more or less concealed, and there are others who abhor the word Annexation, as Mr. Smith does, while believing that the nauseous dose in the form of the thing itself would produce good effects."

FORCIBLY ANNEXED.

"Mr. Butterworth is reported to have said: 'This arrangement simply contemplates doing with Canada what we did with Texas, California, and other places, and on he same terms.' There is surely some confusion here; for both Texas and California were forcibly annexed; and it cannot be contemplated to treat Canada in that way."

Broke Its Neck.

On Saturday night at about half-past ten o'clock Mr. Andrew Jackson was driving a horse belonging to Mr. John J. Howden along the road near the Nassau Mills. While passing quietly along the horse shied at a dog which ran out suddenly in front of it The buggy went into a ditch and one tug broke and the other came unfastened. The horse plunged forward, but getting entangled, fell and turned a complete somersault, breaking its neck in the operation. The horse was a valuable one, Mr. Howden having been offered $150 for him a few days ago.

MOODY MR. MORGAN.

The Great English Poet Experiences a Revulsion of Feeling.

During the past few days Mr. J. Dickson Morgan, the poet, has been busy filling orders for the celebrated "fall scene." Today he acted in several shops, but says that it is rather work, seeing that he wears an overcoat.

His experience with the citizens, from a financial point of view, has not been equal to his expectations and his fair words on Peterborough a few days ago have taken a sad relapse. The Great Poet came into the REVIEW office to-day, looking quite gloomy. He said that he was living too high; that he was fasting to get back his good health; that living too high made life miserable. But these were evidently coined excuses, for soon after he drew from his pocket the following which explains his moody manner:—

HATRED OF PETERBOROUGH, CANADA.

I know not why! I cannot tell!
I hate this land—with bitter hate
It's men are greedy, proud and mean
How great a fool I've been 'tis hard to tell.
It needs no rhyme to express my scorn
Of Peterborough—hateful town:
A fool I was to cross the sea
To come again to this ill place.
Everyone here seems very rich;
While I am poor—almost in rags
Am without linen, change of suit.
A curse upon the men who flatter me,
Who call me great and wise; who say
"How art thou?" "Good morning." 'Hail.'
To England I will get again,
And bid farewell to this ill place.

Mr. Morgan doesn't know what the people will think of this, but he says he doesn't care a continental. He is able and willing to take the consequences.

P.S.—Mr. Morgan is down on the Driving Park this afternoon giving an exhibition of pedestrianism.

Fall Fairs.

The following dates of autumn exhibitions have been announced:—

Central Exhibition, at Peterborough, Oct 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th.

East Peterborough, at Norwood, Oct. 11th and 12th.

Smith, Ennismore and Lakefield, at Lakefield, Sept. 29th and 30th.

Provincial Exibition, at Ottawa, Sept. 19th to 24th.

East Durham and Cavan, at Millbrook, Sept. 26th and 27th.

Industrial and Dominion, at Toronto, Sept. 5th to 17th.

Bay of Quinte, at Belleville, Sept. 20th to 23rd.

South Monaghan, at Centreville, on Oct. 13th and 14th.

Lindsay Central, at Lindsay, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 20. 21. and 22.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.

The following is clipped from an American paper:—

"A large audience assembled at the Opera House last evening to witness "Uncle Tom's Cabin" by Abbey's double company. The old but ever popular play was never better presented in Rochester than it was last night by this most excellent troupe. The new attractions and scenes that have been introduced by Mr. Abbey to the famous drama have added materially to its effect upon the stage and to its force and character as a reminder of slavery in former times. The Hyer sister's singing and their personification of the Topsys in the tragic representations was simply wonderful, as the latter belong a whole entertainment in themselves. The different scenes—consisting of the sale of slaves, the death of Eva, and of her father and Uncle Tom—were certainly the most thrilling and natural presentation of events thirty years ago that it has been our lot to see. In short, every character was admirably taken, and the orchestra music was all that could be desired. Those who failed to seeing Abbey's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" last night lost a treat seldom enjoyed, and all who paid their money to see it came away more than satisfied."

A Wheet Point.

Peterborough is becoming more and more in point for wheat. The surrounding country falls far short in supplying the demands of the Peterborough millers. On Saturday alone six thousand bushels was imported to town over the Canadian Pacific railway.

Twins.

Detective Rossiter has gone into horticulture, and has produced an anomaly in the shape of a twin cucumber. He wrapped them up in a piece of brown paper and showed them to his friends this afternoon. He didn't take them to any of the hotels.

Electric Light.

An electric light lamp has been placed on the corner of Murray and Aylmer streets in accordance with the order from the Fire, Water and Light Committee. The four gas lamps which are displaced will be stationed in the South Ward.

Run Off.

The Sunday morning express on the Canadian Pacific railway going westward as delayed several hours on account of two freight cars having run off at the Brockville yard.

A Blank.

There was a blank at the Police Court this morning, but to-morrow morning four defendants will toe the mark on charges of infractions of the Scott Act.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WEATHER NOTES.—August of '87 will be handed down to rising generations as being one of the hottest and driest on record. It commenced at 88 degrees in the shade at 3 p. m., gradually increasing, and on the 4th at 97 degrees, and 5th at 96 degrees, which is a very rare occurrence in this part of Canada. The lowest during the month was on the 27th, standing at 65, leaving the mean temperature at 62 degrees, 27-31. We had 4 thunder storms during the month, but with the exception of that on the 5th, when it 7 hours in fell 2¼ inches of water, we had little rain. Rain fell on 10 days to the depth of 2 inches and 97 100 of an inch. We had white frost on 5 mornings, the first being on the morning of the 13th. Ploughing is progressing very slowly, owing to the continued dry weather, but the horse and steam thresher are now doing their best. The following are the different points from which the wind was blowing at sunrise during the month, namely:—North, 7 days; north-east, 2 days, east, 3 days; south-west, 2 days; north-west, 8 days; south east, 2 days; south; 4 days; and west, 3 days.

Two Passengers Robbed.

A bold robbery was perpetrated on board the Allan ss. Sarmatian just before she sailed from Montreal for England. Among the many cabin passengers who went on board the previous evening were Miss Buchanan, daughter of Mr. W. J. Buchanan, general manager of the Bank of Montreal, and Mr. C. S. MacInnis, son of Senator MacInnis. Upon rising on Wednesday morning Miss Buchanan found that her stateroom had been entered and her pocket book, containing £8, had been stolen. Mr. MacInnis had a similar experience in his stateroom, he losing £13. It is supposed that the theft was committed by some one who quietly walked ashore before the vessel left. There has not been such an attempt for some years. The last thief, being detected and convicted, is still in the Quebec Penitentiary.

OH, kid, kid, Kidd! why are boots so cheap at your shop?

Horses Burned in Cobourg.

COBOURG, Sept. 10.—About half past ten this evening a fire was discovered in the sheds surrounding the agricultural fair grounds and about 200 yards of them, with a dwelling were quickly consumed. Thirteen horses, valued at $2,000, purchased by the British Government, awaiting shipment here, were also burned. The loss on the buildings is about $3,000, insurance not yet known.

Building in Winnipeg.

WINNIPEG, Sept, 10.—An estimate of the building done in the city during the past summer places the amount expended in private residences at $240,000; in business blocks at $120,000, and in public improvements in laying sewers, water mains, gas mains, etc., at $250,000, making an aggregate of $600,000, the largest in any year since the collapse of the boom.

THE MITCHELLSTOWN MEETING.

Conflicting Amounts—Violent Speeches —The Funeral Procession— Gloomy Anticipated.

INCENDIARY SPEECHES.

DUBLIN, Sept. 12.—Messrs. Labouchere, Hooper, Brunner and other members of Parliament addressed a meeting in Cork on Saturday, called to denounce the action of the Government. Michael Davitt spoke at a meeting in Dublin yesterday. He declared that he would adopt every word and meaning of Mr. O'Brien's speech at Mitchellstown. Irishmen would deserve the contempt of the world if they allowed themselves to be hunted from their cabins like beasts. He complained bitterly against the constabulary for slaying their own kith and kin in cold blood, even without a word of command from their officers. If the slumbering embers of retaliatory vengeance were fired, as in 1881, he hoped they would not be to blame, for any evil wrought upon Ireland would fall upon the instigators of the Mitchellstown massacre.

AN INVESTIGATION.

Capt. Plunkett, in obedience to orders from Chief Secretary Balfour, visited Mitchellstown, and, assisted by detectives, and by Magistrates Eaton and Seagrave, held an informal enquiry, inspected the barracks and visited the wounded. Less than twenty police are actually injured, and only one seriously.

CONFLICTING ACCOUNTS.

Mr. Brunner says he saw a dozen constables attack one man with their batons. He also saw a policeman pierce a horse with his bayonet, while another constable thrust his bayonet into the rider. An independent eye-witness relates that when the first blow was struck it was impossible to control the Tipperary men, who attacked the police like fury. The air was thick with sticks, but before the police reached the barracks their anger had cooled. The people made no attempt to reach the barracks. Six panes of glass in the barracks were broken from the inside. The walls bear evidence of a fusilade of stones. The lower half of the door was broken in. There are many bullet marks on the walls opposite.

THE FUNERAL.

Contingents of Nationalists from all the surrounding towns promise to attend the funeral to-morrow. The procession will be an enormous one. The police refuse to allow the cortege to traverse the regular route to the cemetery which passes the barracks. The Nationalists consider this a great indignity, as they will be compelled to go through the Protestant part of the town. They claim that they have a right to take the usual route, promising to resort to no violence. The coffin of the man shot dead on Friday, whose name was Lonergan, not Riorden, is inscribed as follows: "Michael Lonergan, murdered Sept. 9th, 1887. Requiescat in pace." The funeral will begin at 2 p. m.

CRIME UPON CRIME.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—The Daily News, speaking of the occurrence at Mitchellstown, says: The more we examine into the tragedy the more evident it becomes that it was nothing less than murder by persons unknown. The ominous silence by the Government and its agents on the question of responsibility is one of the worst features in the case. What are we to expect but crime answering to crime, devilish outrage following devilish oppression.

TAKEN TO MITCHELLSTOWN.

DUBLIN, Sept. 12.—William O'Brien, who was arrested at Kingston yesterday, was conveyed to Mitchellstown this morning in custody of an officer. He was accompanied by Timothy Harrington and his counsel. Mr. O'Brien emphatically denies that he boarded the steamer at Kingston to avoid arrest, his object being simply to see Mr. Labouchere, who was about to leave for London.

AN ENCOUNTER WITH THE POLICE.

The streets through which Mr. O'Brien was taken to the gaol were lined with troops. Stones were thrown at the police escorting Mr. O'Brien and several of them were wounded. The police then charged the crowd, using their batons freely and injuring many of the spectators.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

Is sold all over the world. It is far superior to plain Cod Liver Oil, palatable and easily digested. Dr. Martin Miles Stanton, Bury Bucks, London, England, says: "I have prescribed Scott's Emulsion, and taken it myself. It is palatable, efficient, and can be tolerated by anyone, especially where cod liver oil itself cannot be borne. Put upin 50c. and $1 size.

IN THE COMMONS.

Further Discussion on the Mitchellstown Riot in the British Parliament.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—The discussion on the Mitchellstown meeting was continued in the House of Commons this forenoon, on a motion that the House go into committee on the Appropriation Bill.

Sir William Vernon Harcourt, Liberal, called attention to the general policy of the Government in Ireland, especially to the invasion of rights of people respecting the holding of public meetings. He demanded that the House be informed of the nature of the instructions given to the police in Ireland regarding the line of action they are to pursue with respect to public meetings; also whether the report was true that Gen. Sir Redvers Buller had resigned his post of Under Secretary for Ireland, and what were the reasons for his resignation. He claimed that the Irish people possessed in common with the English people the right to meet, and denounced the action of the legislative branch of the Government, and declared that attempts to prevent the holding of such meetings violated the common law and the Constitution, and were a flagrant breach and denial of the fundamental principles of both, and were wholly incompatible with the existence of free government or the rights of a free people. The most detestible and scandalous language has been used by the Times for the express purpose of driving the Irish to revolt; language such as never before degraded the press of a free country. He was confidant, he said, that the Irish people would persist in the prudence and calmness they had already exhibited. If anything was dear to the English it was the right of public meeting, which the Government were now trampling upon.

MR BALFOUR'S REPLY.

Mr. Balfour, said that the instructions the police were now acting under were the same they had received when Sir William was a member of the Gladstone Government. With regard to General Buller, he had always acted in perfect harmony with the present Government. His appointment as Under Secretary for Ireland was only temporary, and he resigned now simply because he desired not to delay his return to the War Office. Referring to Sir William's contention that the suppression of public meetings was illegal, Mr. Balfour said he did not know at what period Sir William lost his knowledge of law; but it was a matter of history that under the common law of Ireland Sir William himself acted with Messrs. Gladstone and Forster in proclaiming 130 meetings. It was absurd to describe such meetings as being for free discussion. They were heralded by placards of an inflammatory nature, and it was obviously their object to defeat the law and foster outrages and intimidation. Regarding the Mitchellstown affair, Mr. Balfour said it had been clearly ascertained that the action of the police was in the face of extreme provocation. The police were assaulted with stones and blackthorn sticks before they drew their batons. It was not till they were thrown into disorder by the charge of the horsemen which knocked down and wounded a number and forced the rest to fly for their lives, that the police fired. It was absolutely necessary for them to fire to protect the barracks and the unfortunate police stragglers outside. The firing was not the random firing of men in a panic, but a deliberate act under the order of the commanding officer. He maintained that the conduct of the police was amply justified, and that they were in no way to blame. The sole responsibility rested upon those who convoked the meeting. Did the Opposition mean to further inflame the passions of the Irish, driving them into resistance of the law of liberty, founded upon order, that was once dear to both parties in the State.

THE TU QUOQUE DEFENCE.

Mr. Gladstone said that Mr. Balfour had met Sir William Vernon Harcourt's speech with a simple tu quoque. What signified it for the purpose in view if the late Government did the same thing? He was not prepared to admit that, but if they did, it was with no excuse. The Government on being charged with infringing the law, say that those who make the charges are also culpable under the law. Mr. Balfour had enumerated that all Liberal meetings might be suppressed because they were called for improper purposes. The Government had not even attempted to show that they had acted in conformity with the highest legal authority. With regard to the Mitchelstown affair, which at once moved and harrowed the feelings of the country, Mr. Balfour's conduct seemed marked by singular rashness and imprudence. It was competent for him, under such grave circumstances, to decline to enter into any discussion till an equally grave enquiry had been held. But instead of that, he rushed headlong to the conclusion that all the police had done was right, and that if they had acted otherwise they would have been guilty of great neglect of duty. He reserved his judgment, but he considered Mr. Balfour's assertions were right in the teeth of the facts. From the fact that the Government failed to bring the reporter, as was their duty, to the Mitchellstown meeting in the way most convenient to all concerned, he could only suppose two explanations:—1st. An intention to promote disorder, which he did not entertain; 2nd. That the authorities exhibited a degree of stupidity and negligence such as is rarely seen. The responsibility rested with those who committed the first error, and it was a gross, dangerous error for a body of police to force their way through a dense crowd. There was no proof of any attempt to storm the barracks. On the other hand, the victims were two old men and a boy. He was convinced the people of England would not follow the Government's course, which could lead to nothing but distress and disaster.

Mr. Labouchere, Mr. Dillon, Lord Randolph Churchill and Messrs. Parnell and Bradlaugh also spoke, and the House is still in session.

A Fruitless Hunt.

MONTREAL, Sept. 12.—A Chicago newspaper man, who has been trying to follow McGarigle's movements, and who is at present stopping at the Windsor, has received the following letter from his city editor: "Do not waste any time hunting up McGarigle. Write us a good description of your trip and come home. We hear on good authority that McGarigle is on his way to Switzerland and will get there next week. He is all right and they say he has enough cash to float him."

Powderly's Coming Message.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—A special from Scranton, Pa., says: Mr. Powderly said his next annual message will advocate the Government ownership of telegraph and railway lines and the establishment of a postal savings bank. Bills will be prepared by him to carry these suggestions into effect, and they will be submitted to the General Assembly for its approval. Should the Assembly approve these measures they will be introduced in Congress and backed by the full strength of the Knights of Labor.

A FAULTY INDIAN POLICY

The Ute Chief Colorow, who is now on the warpath, will doubtless in a few days be either dead or a prisoner. His rising is another proof, if one were needed, of the radically faulty character of our Indian policy, which for three centuries has been a succession of blunders, violence and crime. —St. Louis Republican.

MR. MERCIER IN OTTAWA.

Every one who takes an interest in the contest knows that the chances of the Conservative candidate, Mr Cormier, are slim this time because the lumbermen, who supported him in the general provincial election, dare not do so now. Mercier has the ground rent increase hanging over their heads, purely for the purpose of keeping them quiet until Rochon is elected. Similarity he has his agent.—Ottawa Journal (Indep.)

THE CUT-THROATS CHECKED.

Sugar has been the weak spot of the grocery trade for years in both this country and the United States, but while the American trade papers are commending the business sagacity of the Canadian wholesale grocers in attempting to stop the cut-throat policy of making this standard article a "leading" line and selling it at or below cost, we find Canadian journals appealing to popular prejudice and endeavoring to force the trade to return to the old ruinous system.—Journal of Commerce.

THE SLANDERERS.

It was hardly necessary for Sir John Macdonald to cable to the old country denying the story that he contemplated asking for British troops to bring the Manitobans to their senses. No one believed the story. It was on a par with that started by the Grit organ when it said that Sir John had gone out of his mind.—Toronto Telegram (Indep.)

PLEASE EXPLAIN.

As to the prices of sugar and cotton, they may be the result of combination or not, but they are no higher than they are in the country whose markets the Mail seeks. By the way, does it not seem to be a departure from the tenets of free trade orthodoxy to be advised to go to a country of high protection to get cheap goods. Will the Mail enlighten.—Chatham Planet.

Baillieboro Central at Baillboro, Sept 29th and 30th.

Otonabee, at Keene, on Oct. 14th.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver a misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask you druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

MURDER BY MOONLIGHTERS.

DUBLIN, Sept. 12.—Moonlighters last night murdered Constable Wheeleham and mortally wounded another officer named Ellis, in County Clare. Wheeleham was killed with a bludgeon. Eight arrests have been made of suspected parties. The assault occurred at Lisdoonvarna. A constable who was present when Wheeleham was killed stated that twelve policemen had waited in concealment in a house where they had learned from an annoymous source that a number of moonlighters would gather. When the moonlighters came they were admitted and the door closed and locked after them. Then a fierce fight took place in a small room. There was no firing. Five moonlighters were arrested. Two others escaped.

STORMS IN ARIZONA.

Miles of the Southern Pacific Railway Washed Away.

TUCSON, ARIZONA, Sept, 12.—The storms of Thursday and Friday were the most severe ever known in this section. Five miles of the Southern Pacific track between this point and Benson's was washed away, two large bridges over the Cenango and Rillita were destroyed, telegraph wires are down and in some places are imbeded ten feet in the sand; steel rails were carried a quarter of a mile down the stream. The Southern Pacific trains are being run over the Atlantic and Pacific road. Washouts are also reported all along the line from Tucson to Yama. From parties in from San Pedro and Rillito rivers it is learned that the flood is the worst ever known in Arizona and many old land marks have been swept away and fields of grain swept off. The Southern Pacific officials say that travel over the road cannot be resumed for a week.

A Premature Report.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 12.—The Free Press says: "The statement that the contractors were paid $100,000 on Saturday was premature because the payment is not yet due. A member of the Local Government said yesterday that the only payment made as yet was $50,000 to a Montreal bank to secure the shipment of the rails which are now on their way to Winnipeg. Negotiations are now in progress which would, it was hoped, enable the Government to meet its liabilities to the contractor when they fell due. The Government could not say definitely whether or not Mr. Norquay had succeeded in floating the provincial bonds. He was wired on Saturday about the action of the Dominion Government, and this it is expected will expedite the Premier's return.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER, 13, 1887.

A BOGUS BILL.

We are told by Mr. Butterworth and his friends that his bill is to be again submitted to Congress at the beginning of its next session, which will be held shortly. It will be satisfactory if he keeps his word, as we will then know on indisputable authority what the United States does think of this question. But as for the Bill itself it is a mere sham, not intended for practical legislation. It contains three sections only. The first enacts that when Canada admits everything from the United States free of duty, the United States shall do the same by Canada. The second section empowers the President to effect this change by proclamation. The third section authorises the Secretary of the Treasury in connection with the proper Canadian officials "to make rules and regulations for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of this Act, and to protect the said respective Governments against the importation of foreign goods through either into the other," also to communicate these rules to U. S. customs officers for their guidance. This is all there is in the Bill. There is not one provision for fixing the tariff or assimilating it. There is not one provision as to dividing the revenue. These two points are absolutely essential to any reciprocal arrangement, which could not be put in force without their determination. It is plain that Mr. Butterworth's Bill is a mere bogus affair, not meant for legislation but to delude unthinking people. It is exactly on a par with the empty packages placed on the shelves of a small grocery to delude customers into a belief in a large stock which does not exist.

NOT TO COMPETE, BUT ANNEX.

The Toronto Mail attacks us for objecting to the disallowed Red River Valley line, and in its efforts to put us in the wrong wilfully misrepresents our position. We did not say we held the view some years ago that competition should be hastened, but we held and expressed it a few months ago, till the agitators avowed their object to be the use of United States railroads, markets and ports in preference to Canadian. We had not in our mind the Grand Trunk alone, but any Canadian road, and we have yet to learn that there has been any objection offered to competition by a line through Canadian territory. Take the proposed Hudson Bay road for example. That is a very different thing from tapping a road, built by the whole of Canada at great cost, and making it a mere feeder of a foreign railway system. We have never praised the C. P. R. branch to Emerson, which was the injudicious work of the Mail's present friends. As to the short line across Maine, of which the Mail speaks, it re-conveys freight into Canada to Canadian ports, and is similar to a route by Sault Ste. Marie to Canada, which we have expressed our willingness to accept. If the Mail disapproves of our views, why does it not oppose them manfully instead of quibbling? As to its sneers at our loyalty to our country, they fall harmless, for we knew already that loyalty to Canada was offensive to it.

It is very gratifying news that the British Government has resolved to give a mail subsidy to our Pacific route to the East. It is of course satisfactory that a Canadian line is to receive money and thereby be enabled and stimulated further to improve and extend its service. But the subsidy is even more important from the public point of view, in that it is a practical acknowledgment of the usefulness of the great route we have opened through Canada, and of the value of the C. P. R. and its connections. It must also be taken as a prognostication of its continued and augmented success. Yet there are some Canadians who are doing their utmost to "smash" the C. P. R. Well, it will be like Jumbo and the railway train.

There is a shout of Opposition indignation because the Dominion Minister of Justice has taken legal steps to prevent the disallowed Red River Valley Railway from trespassing on lands belonging to the Dominion. The Ministers are in the place of trustees for the whole people of Canada, and it is therefore their duty to maintain the rights of the people in their property. If the claim of the people is unfounded the law courts will so decide, and there will be no harm done, so there is no reason for these angry cries, unless the clamorers feel that they are in the wrong.

In a speech at Waterloo Mr. Wiman talks of taking down a barbed wire fence between Canada and the United States. But at the same time he advocates raising a barbed wire fence between Canada and all the rest of the world except the United States, thus creating almost a monopoly for his adopted country, since few people will jump over a barbed wire fence when there is unfenced access available.

It is a mistake to suppose that sour, fermented slop for hogs is better than a fresh mixture that is sweet and clean.

The newest remedy for the cabbage worm is a tablespoonful of saltpetre in a pailful of tepid water. The plants should be sprinkled well two or three times.

Plants for blooming indoors should be potted as soon as they are well set with buds, placing them in the shade until they recover from the effects of the removal.

Thistles, dandelion, or dock roots, can only be removed by cutting them out with a knife. There is no necessity, however, for cutting the whole root out. If cut below the crown the root will not start again into growth.

Hungarian grass, proper, has black seed, mainly. The millets have yellow seed. Hungarian grass has less head and more stalk than leaf, and is less liable to rust, and hence is a better hay crop, and not so good a grain or seed crop.

Care of Vegetables in Autumn.—Though work does not press now as it does in the spring months, and the gardener can take a vacation, yet there are several important things that must not be overlooked. Sow spinach, and German greens are sprouts, to winter in the open ground; also onion sets and shallots. Sow early cabbages, cauliflowers and lettuce, to raise plants to be wintered in cold frames. The plants must be neither too large nor too small, hence the date of sowing is important. Near New York many sow on the 15th; others find it safer to make two sowings, one on the 11th, and the other on the 16th of this month. How the weeds will grow! Hoe between the rows of root crops until the leaves prevent. Hoe cabbages and cauliflowers often. Help any backward ones with manure water, or a slight dressing of guano. Keep celery clear of weeds and hoe to promote growth, which should be rapid these warm days and cool nights. —American Agriculturist.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

The house in which I was staying stood in the midst of one of those wild, undulating parks which are more frequent in the northern than in the southern counties, and which look like a survival of the England of 300 years ago. It was very beautiful in its way, under the gray autumnal sky, with shafts of pale sunlight falling upon the gnarled oaks and the withered bracken, and upon patches of gorse and heather here and there. I had walked some distance across it and was wondering whether De Vieuzac's unpleasant prophecy would ever be fulfilled—whether the land upon which I was standing would ever be parceled out among peasant proprietors, and whether, in that case, the peasant proprietors would not find out that they had made an uncommonly bad bargain, when the thud of approaching hoofs interrupted my musings, and presently Lady Bracknell, riding between her two cavaliers, hove in sight.

They were pleased to draw rein on recognizing me, and Hilda said they had had a delightful ride; which assertion was received with emphatic silence by her companions. In all probability some bickering had taken place during the course of it; for the two men were looking daggers at each other, and it struck me that De Vieuzac was not quite as cool as he had been earlier in the day. A short distance ahead of us was an inclosure, surrounded by a high fence of posts and rails, like a large cattle pen. It may have been intended to serve that purpose, or possibly, at certain seasons of the year, to confine the red deer, of which there was a herd in the park.

"There," said De Vieuzac, pointing to it with his whip and looking at Beauchamp, "would be a pretty leap. You could take it, perhaps; you who hesitate at nothing."

"Oh, do, Mr. Beauchamp!" exclaimed Hilda, enthusiastically.

"My dear Lady Bracknell," I remonstrated, "what are you thinking of? The thing is absolutely impossible."

I am not sure that it was impossible; I am an indifferent judge of matters of that kind, and I have read wonderful accounts of the high jumps accomplished by Australian horses. But I should certainly be very sorry either to attempt such a feat myself, or to see any friend of mine attempt it. Hilda did not seem to have heard me.

"Oh, do try!" she repeated. "I know you would get over all right."

Beauchamp's reply was highly creditable to his good sense and self control. "I might get over," he said. "Whether I could get out again is another question. But, anyhow, I couldn't think of risking it with another man's horse."

De Vieuzac smiled, and Beauchamp turned upon him at once. "What's that you say?" he asked, sharply.

"I assure you," answered the Frenchman, with exaggerated politeness, "that I did not utter one word."

"You were thinking something, though."

"Oh, for that, yes. I was thinking something, I admit. I was thinking that sometimes it is very convenient to be riding a friend's horse."

The words amounted to a studied insult, and would unquestionably have been so accepted in De Vieuzac's own country. In France speeches of that kind are permissible, their consequences being, of course, well understood; but neither in France nor elsewhere is it customary to offer such direct provocation in the presence of a lady, and Beauchamp went up several degrees in my esteem when he answered quietly: "We'll discuss the question afterward, if you like. We may as well ride on now."

Hilda suddenly broke into a short laugh, touched her horse with the whip and galloped away. The two men followed her. I confess that I hurried back to the house as fast as my legs would carry me. I dislike and deprecate quarrels above everything; still, if quarrels must needs take place, why should I not be there to see? After De Vieuzac's inexcusable conduct, I felt that it would be a real satisfaction to me to see him knocked down, and I thought that if I made great haste, I might just manage to arrive in time. As it turned out, I reached the front door with several minutes to spare. From the flight of steps which led up to it I could descry the riders, who, perhaps, had made a detour, approaching at a foot's pace, and presently I had the honor of assisting Lady Bracknell to dismount.

She stood for a moment, tapping her foot with her riding whip, and looking with an odd, satirical expression at the rivals. "Au revoir," she said, nodding to them; "I am going to lie down till dinner time." Then she made a scarcely perceptible sign with her hand to Beauchamp, who ran up the steps after her and accompanied her into the house.

De Vieuzac and I remained where we were. I suppose we both knew that Beauchamp would be out again directly. And indeed the horses had hardly been led away to the stables before he emerged and made straight for us.

"Monsieur de Vieuzac," said he, "you hinted just now that I was a coward. May I ask whether that was what you meant?"

The Frenchman straightened his back, brought his heels together, twirled his mustache, and replied: "You are at liberty, sir, to place any construction upon my words that may suit your pleasure."

"In good English, I suppose that means that you want to fight. If you had been an Englishman I should have hit you straight between the eyes, and it would have done you a lot of good; but as you're a foreigner, I'm afraid we can't settle it that way."

"The method," observed De Vieuzac sweetly, "seems a little barbarous. For me, I confess that I have not learned to box; but with the sword or the pistol I shall be charmed to hold myself at your disposition. You do not, perhaps, use those weapons?"

"Oh, don't we, though?" returned Beauchamp, with a short laugh. "I shall be happy to prove the contrary to you when and where you please; only, of course, it can't be in this country. If it's the same thing to you, I should prefer to stay out my time here; but next week I will meet you at Ostend or any other place you choose to name."

The Frenchman bowed. "It is usual," said he, "to leave all details to be arranged by the seconds in these affairs. Will you then be so kind as to mention two gentlemen whose names and addresses I may give to the friends whom I shall ask to represent me?"

Beauchamp rubbed the back of his head. "I don't want this talked about all over the place, you know," he said. "Maynard, you've heard it all; perhaps you'll be good enough to act for me, and find some other fellow who can hold his tongue. And look here," he added, turning to De Vieuzac, "we had better pretend to be friends for the next few days. Don't you think so?"

"Sir," replied the Frenchman, magnificently, "I shall withdraw. I should be desolated to be the occasion of embarrassment, and I will leave for London to-morrow."

With that, he took off his hat, bowing low. Beauchamp stared, looked rather inclined to laugh, then nodded and turned back into the house. And so this sanguinary encounter was agreed upon.

CHAPTER XV.

As a matter of theory, it has always seemed to me that the duello is, upon the whole, the best means that can be devised of wiping out a mortal affront or injury. Such being my sentiments, and Beauchamp, having been most unequivocally and grievously insulted by De Vieuzac, I could not but applaud the course taken by the former. However, it is one thing to approve of a given quarrel, in the abstract, and quite another to allow one's self to be mixed up in it; to see one's name mentioned and one's private character discussed in all the newspapers, and even, perhaps, to be hauled before the authorities and cast into prison. Deep, then, would have been my consternation, when my young friend so coolly nominated me as his second, if I had thought that there was any probability of my actually figuring in that capacity; and the genial alacrity with which I accepted the greatness thrust upon me was, I allow, due solely to the circumstance that I had not the remotest intention of permitting a hostile meeting to occur.

The line of conduct which I adopted with a view to avert bloodshed was simple, and, as I flattered myself, likely to prove effectual. I slipped away from the dinner table that evening, a little before the other men, and, hurrying into the drawing room, seated myself beside Lady Bracknell, who was reclining in an easy chair apart, and was doubtless waiting for one or other of her victims to join her.

"Allow me," said I (for I was resolved not to spare her), "to congratulate you upon your energy and determination. If you could have persuaded Beauchamp to break his neck at that fence this afternoon, it would have been very nice. You would have been an immensely rich woman at this moment, and probably nobody, except my unworthy self, would have suspected you of being a murderess, in addition to your other claims to notoriety. But the wretched creature wouldn't jump, and so you had to fall back upon your original plan of inducing that Frenchman to challenge him and kill him. I am sorry to disappoint you, but that plan of yours will have to be abandoned. You must try to cook Beauchamp's goose in what the cookery book calls 'another way.'"

To be continued.

GENERAL.

Prince Hohenlohe, the Governor of Alsace-Lorraine, has gone to St. Petersburg on a political mission.

Mr. Elliott, postmaster of Brampton, died suddenly of paralysis on saturday evening at the Forks of the Credit.

Right now is the time to use a good Blood Purifying Medicine. Lose no time in getting a bottle of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It will do you good. Sold by all druggists. 50c.

Winnipeg grain men say the yield this year is prodigious, an average of forty bushels to the acre being a common occurrence.

The schooner David Dows, which was supposed to have foundered in Lake Superior with all her crew, arrived safely at Marquette on Saturday morning.

The traffic receipts of the Grand Trunk railway for the week ending September 3rd were $387,184, an increase of $20,179 compared with the corresponding week last year.

Headache, Biliousness, Dyspepsia and Indigestion relieved and at once by Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Try it. Samples free.

The traffic receipts of the Canadian Pacific railway for the week ending September 7th were $161,000, an increase of $16,000 compared with the corresponding week last year.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills, Salts, &c., when you can get a Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists.

The report of the United States Department of Agriculture for September presents a heavy reduction in the condition of cotton, corn and potatoes, with little change in the status of wheat and other small grains.

A FIXTURE.

In the last political campaign a liberal speaker, the Hon. Oliver Mowat, was understood to say that the people had no reason to feel uneasy about the fate of the national policy, that it was a fixture, and, as such would be respected by whatever party succeeded to power. If Mr. Mowat expressed the feeling of his party the assaults of certain liberal papers upon protection will, for the present, amount to little.—Kingston Whig (Reform.)

NO SUPPER NO SONG.

The Winnipeg Free Press, Grit, says that no matter which side of the railway squabble it takes, the Call, Tory, must lose patronage—that it is bound to lose the patronage of the Dominion Government, of the Local Government or of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The Free Press thus furnishes a clue to its motive for making so much noise about a very small matter; it hopes to secure the patronage that its rival will lose, or at least to cripple its rival. Winnipeg Grits don't shout for nothing.—Hamilton Spectator.

The Essential Feature.

Irate Poet—Look here, sir; what in blazes do you mean? I wrote, "I kissed her under the silent stars," and I'll be hanged if you haven't let it go in the proof, "I kissed her under the ceiler stairs."

Peterborough Canton No. 10.

The success attendant upon the new Canton since its organization five weeks ago bids fair to place it as one of the leading Cantons of the First Regiment of Ontario. The greatest enthusiasm prevails among its members, as is evinced by the large turn-out for practice drill, which has been held every Wednesday evening in the old music hall. At the last practice so large was the turn-out that it was decided to look out for larger premises. These have been secured, and the drill on Wednesday evening will take place in the Charlotte street rink. This will be an admirable spot for the Canton to go through their pretty evolutions, and hope ere long to have the pleasure of announcing their first public parade.

Mr. Croft's Factory in Full Blast on Water Street.

The ginger ale and soda water factory established by Mr. Croft, one door north of his hotel on Water Street a short time ago, has been largely added to and improved of late.

It is complete now, with all the machinery necessary for the manufacture of ginger ale, lemon and cream soda water, Montreal ginger ale, plain soda, birch beer, etc. The manufacturing process is confined to two fountains, a generator and a syrup reservoir. From these are drawn in due proportion the materials to fill the bottles. There are three bottling machines, one to fill the ordinary "pop" bottles, one to do the corking and tying, and one to fill syphons. The capacity of the factory is about fourteen hundred dozen bottles per day.

A Water Spout.

While the citizens of Peterborough are agitating for public fountains the Lindsay people are rejoicing in the prospect of a natural supply of aqua pura. The Lindsay correspondent of the Mail says:—For some weeks past Mr. R. Sylvester, of Sylvester & Bros. agricultural works, has been trying to obtain a good well on property where his new mansion is being erected. A small spring prevented digging, so drilling was attempted. After reaching about thirty feet, the drill being in hard spar, suddenly dropped two feet, and instantly water burst out, rising to the height of twenty feet. The water continues flowing at the rate of 2,000 gallons daily from a two inch pipe. Other wells are running at various places in the town, and there is great rejoicing at the prospect of a public water supply.

MISS TULLY, Mantle Cutter at Turnbull's, is now prepared to show all the New Styles in Mantles and Mantle Cloths. Orders executed promptly.

It May be Remarked

—That Poet Morgan did a big business in the fall scene yesterday.

—That since he made $1.35 his liver complaint has left him and he has decided to stay with the town.

—That Uncle Tom's Cabin is the play that always draws a house.

—That Lindsay's citizens are likely to have free waterworks.

—That this has been the hottest day in several weeks.

RICE LAKE.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—Of late years Rice Lake seems to have been losing ground as a place of summer resort, and for several seasons the number of visitors has been comparatively small. The summer now drawing to a close has, however, been an exception, and on almost every point and every island may be seen the little white tents twinkling in the sun light. For our part we can't conceive of any more desirable place for a quiet rest. It is within the bounds of civilization, and at the same time possesses many of the romantic features of the forest and wilderness. The sport is not quite as good as in years gone by, and yet it is very fair, and quite equal to many places that are cried up at a great rate. An excellent and commodious hotel is about to be erected at the mouth of the river and I have no doubt that next year will see a large influx of visitors. The steamer that plies weekly between Gore's Landing and Peterborough is always at the command of the public, and, though the Beaver is not a large boat, it is commodious and speedy, and Captain Harris is one of the most careful and obliging men in that capacity. During our stay of three weeks we met quite a number from Toronto, an ex-mayor among the rest, and many from other parts of Ontario. From the other side of the border line there was a good representation from the State of Ohio and from York State. The Lake Inspector, Mr. Gilchrist, is very strict in the performance of his duty, but no one can complain of any discourtesy, so long as there is no wilful violation of the law.

Rice Lake also possesses the advantage of having on all sides an abundance of church accommodation. In Harwood the Episcopalians, Presbyterians and Methodist denominations all have churches. In Gore's Landing also there is a good Methodist Church and a smaller place of worship belonging to the English Church, and on the north side of the lake the Methodists have an Indian station, a commodious church and good mission house. It was to this church we paddled our way on Sabbath evening, Aug. 21st. The attendance was large, and the singing of the Indian choir very fine. We were surprised at the large proportion of whites in the congregation. The minister in charge, the Rev. Mr. Cragg, spoke in English, and gave an admirable sermon, one of the best we ever heard from any pulpit.

Taking it all in all, we know of no place in Ontario where a tired man can put in a few weeks of quiet enjoyment to more advantage than on Rice Lake, and in future we shall patronize it.

Yours, &c.,
C. O. M.

[NOTE.—Our correspondent might also have mentioned that the Golden Eye, Capt. McDonald, runs from Peterborough to river and Rice Lake points, and is a comfortable boat.—ED. REVIEW.]

TOWN TAXES.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—There is a great deal of apathy among our citizens in regard to public affairs, otherwise Councillor Moore's sensible and public-spirited letter would have caused a discussion ere this in the press about the stupid and unfair law that now exists fining those who do not pay their taxes by a certain date five per cent. of their amount. I am sorry Mr. Moore's motion for its abolition should have been rejected as it is an absurd regulation that ought to be materially modified so as to do justice to those who are unable to pay in time, and also to prevent others making money out of the Corporation by not paying their taxes for eight or nine months after they are due, so as to recoup themselves for the five per cent. fine.

As there are many poor men in the town who have a difficulty in making up the full amount of their taxes at once, I would propose that they be payable in three equal monthly instalments due on the first weeks of October, November and December. This would give a fair chance to those unfavorably situated for paying in one sum and enable not a few to avoid contributing towards the "fine" fund, which last year amounted to $300, an unjust levy on those who were unable to pay at the time by law required.

Councillor Moore's proposal of one per cent. a month is a reasonable and equitable one, encouraging payment as soon as possible and preventing long delays, as twelve per cent. is a sufficiently high rate of interest to be generally unprofitable. I hope to see both the public and the press taking hold of the subject in such a manner as to show the council that the present law should thus amended at an early day.

Yours truly,
JUSTICE.

YOUNG CONSERVATIVES.

The Formation of a Provincial Association For Ontario.

From Our Own Correspondent.

TORONTO, Sept. 14.—The convention of young men of Ontario who favor Conservative principles assembled in the Temperance Hall in this city yesterday. Peterborough sent up a representation consisting of about twenty-five young men, and several more are expected to be present at to-day's session.

Mr. J. A. Worrell, of Toronto, was elected Chairman. Several vice-presidents and secretaries were elected, and the importance of the Peterborough delegation was recognized thus early by one of their number, Mr. D. H. Burritt, being elected one of the Secretaries. Several prominent gentlemen present gave brief addresses.

In the afternoon it was decided to form a Provincial Association. A constitution was adopted after considerable discussion on various points. The objects of the Association were declared to be the dissemination of Liberal Conservative principles, the assisting in the election of Liberal-Conservative candidates and the establishing and encouraging of local associations of this body throughout the Province with the view of perfecting the organization of the younger members of the party. The central organization will consist of twenty delegates from each electoral district.

A Nominating Committee, a Committee on Resolutions and a Committee on Organization were appointed, to report to-day. Mr. John O'Meara, of Peterborough, is a member of the Nominating Committee.

Last night the committees were at work. Each of them had plenty of work to do.

A WONDERFUL BICYCLE.

With Which the Rider Swims Rivers and Crosses Ploughed Fields.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—A number of gentlemen interested in the adaptation of cycles to military purposes assembled at Hanwel Saturday afternoon to witness some trials and experiments with a bicycle which has been constructed by Wilking & Co., of Holborn Viaduct. The bicycle, which it its general outward appearance resembles the machine of the familiar safety type, was put through a series of most extraordinary tests, with results which greatly astonished the amused onlookers.

Starting from the centre of the town a man rode the machine over half a mile or so of road to the bank of the River Brent, where, dismounting, he proceeded to blow into a couple of small bags attached to the handles. The inflation occupied about half a minute, and then the rider, having thrown his bicycle into the water, dived after it swam across and landed on the other side. He then rode over three or four miles of very rough and varied country, including ploughed fields and swampy meadows, and having recrossed the river, regained Hanwell by some very rough lanes, lifting his machine over closed gates. Altogether he covered a distance of about five miles and his time was little more than 41 minutes. Subsequently a few well-known cyclists who were among the visitors tried the machine and rode over the most uneven ground, up and down short and sharp hills and over bricks and other obstructions in a manner that greatly surprised the military men and others who were present.

PREPARING.

The U. S. Seeking Evidence for the Fishery Commission.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Secretary Bayard did not return to Washington yesterday, but is expected to-day. After leaving Philadelphia, where he went to attend the funeral of a friend, the secretary went to Massachusetts. Rumor has it that the object of his trip was to confer personally with certain New England persons with a view of finding and enlisting the services of men who will meet the British fishery commission and assist the government in the effort to settle the questions arising out of the fishery troubles.

THE TOTAL ECLIPSE.

Unsatisfactory Results From the Observing Stations in China.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept 13.—Advices by the steamer San Pablo, from China, are to the effect that at most of the scientific stations whence the totality of the eclipse of the sun on August 19th could be viewed, the result was very unsatisfactory, more especially at Shirakawa, where the United States expedition, under the direction of Prof. Todd, was located. Twenty minutes after the eclipse began the sun was hidden by the clouds, and remained hidden during the total eclipse. It was like a dark night, and the face of a man standing a distance of three or four feet could not be seen.

MOST THE ANARCHIST.

His Application for Admission to Citizenship Refused.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Johann Most, the Anarchist, in accordance with a promise made at a meeting of Anarchists yesterday, to-day made application for admission to citizenship at the Court of Common Pleas, Naturalization Bureau. He arrived at the Bureau, accompanied by several friends. In reply to questions put by Chief Clerk Boise, Most said he believed in the constitution of the United States and in laws passed by the proper authority, if they were good laws. If he believed laws interfered with the rights of the people he would resist them by force. He admitted that he had been in prison for violation of the laws, but claimed that his conviction was unjust, and asserted that if he could take his case to the United States Supreme Court the judgment would be reversed. Most continued that he had resisted tyranny in every country he had lived in, and would continue to do so. Thereupon Chief Clerk Boise declined to administer the oath, adding that if he had made a mistake the court would rectify it. Most replied that he would test the point. This is the first time a refusal of a naturalization application has been made on the same grounds.

THE TALK OF LONDON.

Mr. Balfour's Speech on Irish Affairs Criticized.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The debates last night was of special importance as showing that the Government will grant no enquiy into the conduct of the Mitchellstown police, and are prepared to give them practically a free hand all over Ireland. Mr. Balfour, though not personally a heartless man, gave the usual impression of cynical indefference both to popular rights in Ireland and the harm the police might do if not under restraint. Saturday he spoke of the firing as retribution. Last night he declared if he had his way he would never prohibit firing when the authority of the law required it. As usual he was inaccurate to the point almost of disingenuousness. His statement that 130 meetings had been proclaimed by Mr. Forster under the ordinary law, which was the most successful point of his speech, is shown to be entirely wrong. Mr. Gladstone's reply was very vigorous and marked by splendid power both of voice and manner. He declared that if Mr. Forster had done wrong it was no reason why this Government should do wrong too. Of course the answer to Mr. Balfour's statement was that Mr. Foster's policy was a failure and was broken down by Mr. Gladstone's and Mr. Chamberlain's opposition.

SHOCKING ACCIDENT.

A Young Girl's Clothing Completely Burned From Her Body.

MT. VERNON, O., Sept. 13.—The home of Mr. Jeremiah Gleason, in Monroe township, about four Miles northeast of the city, was a scene of a most horrible casualty about midnight last night. Miss Mary Gleason, aged about 24, was the victim. She has been suffering during the afternoon and evening from sickness, and at the time mentioned rose to get something to allay the pain. In some manner, which she could not explain, her clothing caught fire, and she ran out into the yard screaming for help. Her cries were not heard, and she writhed in agony, while every thread of her clothing was consumed. Terribly burned, she made her way back to the bed occupied by herself and her sister. The latter discovered her condition when she got into bed. A doctor was summoned and found that she was burned from the calves of her legs to her chin, the skin, where it was not peeled off, being charred and hard and stiff. She was perfectly conscious, and said that she thought her night dress had taken fire from the stove. Everything that medical skill could devise was done to relieve the girl, who bore her suffering bravely, but without avail, and she died about four o'clock this morning.

CRAZED BY REMORSE.

A Strange Tragedy Revealed by the Finding of a Woman's Skeleton.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Sept. 13.—The local papers appear to have solved the mystery of the insanity of honest John Federman, a railroad employee at Monroe Junction. He became insane three years ago, and feared trouble being made about "that woman there." This summer the skeleton of a woman was found in the woods, three miles from Monroe Junction. It had evidently been placed where found after death. After some time it was recognized as having the dress, teeth, hair and shoes of Mrs. Prentiss, who disappeared from East Milan in March, 1884. Mrs. Prentiss had disagreed with her husbadd and left home. She had not sufficient money with her to pay her fare. The theory of many was that she attempted to walk to Toledo, where she had an uncle living. At this time Federman was poisoning foxes along the railroad with strychnine placed in meat. It was supposed that she found and ate some of the poisoned meat, and Federman found her, and, horror-stricken hid her body where it has just been found. This theory would explain his insanity, his remarks about "that woman down there," his mutterings about strychnine for foxes and his fear of the officers. Acting on impulse, he hid the secret, which weighed so heavily upon his mind that it drove him into an insane asylum.

A DARING BANK ROBBERY

A Sleight of Hand Trick Made to Enrich the Perpetrator.

MONTREAL, Sept. 13.—A daring robbery, the incidents of which show some new tricks in sleight of hand and daring, was perpetrated on Saturday. A little after noon Mr. P. Daigle, of 187 St. Pau street, entered the Banque du Peuple to deposit $503, made up of two cheques for $100 and $27 respectively, and the balance in bills. The whole, folded together with a deposit slip, he placed on the ledge of the pigeon hole, at the desk of the receiving cassier, who was at that time making some entries in his book. Mr. Daigle moved back to a table to fill up a cheque, and two other customers coming in placed their pass books on the top of Mr. Daigle's bundle of notes. A young man at once pushed his way past these last two depositors, and, placing his hand under their books, removed the parcel and inserted a smaller one in its place. The people standing by, thinking he was attending to what belonged to him, did not, of course, interfere, and he quietly left the bank. It was not until the cashier asked to whom the bundle belonged, as there was no deposit slip with it, that Mr. Daigle became aware that his bundle of $503 had been exchanged for one containing only $50. As soon as the bystanders explained what they had seen, it was clear that a daring and impudent robbery had taken place. Mr. Daigle immediately placed the matter in his lawyer's hands who communicated with the police. Up to the present no intelligence of the thief has been received.

A TERRIBLE DEATH.

A Mad Bull Attacks His Owner and Gores Him in a Horrible Manner.

HINDSDALE, Ill., Sept. 13.—Farmer Lyman, a resident of the southern part of Downer's Grove township, was gored to death by a bull on Wednesday. Mr. Lyman and another man went into the pasture to look at some cattle, when the bull attacked his owner and gored him in a horrible manner. His companion escaped to a barn and he and another man mounted horses, armed themselves with pitchforks, and galloped back to the rescue. They were too late, however, for Mr. Lyman was dead. The bull stood near the mutilated body bellowing angrily. His eyes were rolling, froth was dripping from his mouth, and his tail was lashing the air. The excited horsemen charged fiercely upon him with the pitchforks, and after a stubborn fight he ran away. Returning to the body of Mr. Lyman the men found it terribly mutilated and disfigured. One ear was torn off and he was nearly disembowled. Mr. Lyman's companion says that when the infuriated bull first knocked his victim down, Mr. Lyman lay still and the animal simply walked around his prostrate form, pawing and bellowing. It was then that the eye witness ran for a horse, thinking that Mr. Lyman would lie still until he should arrived armed. It is supposed that Mr. Lyman got up, and that the act was the signal for the animal to renew the attack, which resulted in the death of Mr. Lyman.

More White Cap Outrages.

LEAVENWORTH, Ind., Sept. 13.—James Wilson, an aged farmer of Crawford country was the victim of a distardly outrage by the White Cap regulators last night, being brutally whipped by a party, one of whom is said to be his own son. The young man expressed a desire to join the White Caps, and his father opposing, they got into an altercation and parted in anger. The son then told some of the members of the vicious organization of the cause of the trouble, and last night they took the old gentleman from his house, tied him to a tree and gave him a terrible whipping. Wilson has left the country and claims that his son was one of the desperadoes who abused him so shamefully. John Hildenrand, another old farmer, was whipped severly a few days ago, but was unwilling to complain on account of disgrace. He was waited upon the next night and forced to write a communication to the country paper giving the details of the whipping. No effort appears to be making to stop the outrage.

A Beef Pool.

DENVER, Col., Sept. 12.—A meeting of representatives of the cattlemen of the range country was held here yesterday to form the American beef pool, the purpose of which is to bring the prices of beef cattle in the West, west of the feeding districts, more near to the level of prices of dressed beef in the East; to increase the profits to the producers, and to do away with middlemen. Armour & Co. have signed a contract with the pool to kill their cattle and give them all there is on them, less reasonable commission, and aid in extending their market facilities. Armour further agreed to slaughter their cattle for $2.50 per head, giving the shipper the entire proceeds of the animal, less freight and selling commission on dressed beef in the East.

Destructive Fire.

BOWMANVILLE, Sept. 13.—About 2.30 o'clock on Monday morning, the High and Public School building was discovered to be on fire. The firemen were promptly on hand, but the devouring element had gained so much headway before discovery that all their efforts were in vain; the building with all its contents were destroyed. The loss is in the vicinity of $15,000, covered by an insurance of $10,000. The fire was without doubt the work of an incendiary, as no fire had been about the place this season.

Threatened by Dynamiters.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The editors of the American Flag, the organ of the American party, recently received letters signed, "The Loyal Irish Avenging Committee" threatening to blow up the building where the paper's office is located if its publication was not stopped. The police were notified and guarded the building for three weeks. No signs of the dynamiters have been seen and the watch has been discontinued.

THE "THUNDERER'S" OPINION.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The Times commenting on the debate in the House of Commons last night on the Governments's course in regard to Ireland, says the figure cut by the Separatist leaders does not appear to have been found impressive by their own followers. The Opposition was not more thoroughly beaten by votes than by argument.

RIOT AT BALLYPOREEN.

DUBLIN, Sept. 13.—At Ballyporeen, Tipperary, last evening a riot broke out in a public house and the police used their batons freely on the rioters. The latter after a tussle compelled the police to retreat to their barracks, from which a few shots were fired at the crowd. No one was injured, however. Several rioters were arrested.

LONERGAN'S FUNERAL.

MITCHELLSTOWN, Sept. 13.—The funeral of Michael Lonergan, who was shot dead by the police last Friday, took place yesterday afternoon. The body was followed to the cemetery by thousands of people, the procession being over half a mile long. At the grave Father McCarthy made an address in which he exclaimed: "God have mercy on his soul. May he receive more mercy in heaven than he received on earth."

TWO MEMBERS SUSPENDED.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—During the discussion in the House of Commons last night of the amendments made last night in the House of Lords to the Coal Miners' Bill, Mr. Graham, advanced Liberal member for Lanarkshire, was suspended for refusing to apologize for a derogatory reference to the House of Lords. Mr. Edward Harrington, Nationalist member for Westmoreland, was also suspended. The House at the time was considering the amendments made by the House of Lords to the Truck Bill, in reference to weekly payment of wages in Ireland. Mr. Harrington, after being warned for his utterances during the debate, was ordered by the Speaker to resume his seat. He replied passionately, "I will not resume my seat. You have been watching to pounce on me ever since I rose. I claim my right to speak." Mr. Harrington was thereupon suspended, and retired from the house amid the cheers of the Parnellite members.

A FATAL DYNAMITE EXPLOSION.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—A despatch from Callao announces that an explosion of dynamite occurred in the Custom House there yesterday, killing six persons and injuring eight others.

A SINGULAR CHANGE.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The Loyal Irish Union of Great Britain has been dissolved, owing to dissatisfaction with the Government's policy. Many of the members will join the National League.

THE KING PEELS POTATOES.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Mad King Otto of Bavaria has added another amusement to his usual pastime of making cigarettes and reading old illustrated papers. His latest craze is for peeling potatoes, and bushels and bushels of them does he deprive of their jackets every day with such economical skill that the hotel keepers of Munich have availed themselves of the permission accorded by the king's keepers to send their potatoes to his Majesty to be peeled. In fact has not this outlet for the king's industry been found a very serious item would have been added to the state expenditure, so many potatoes does he attend to in the course of a day.

FIGHT IF AFGHANISTAN.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—A despatch from Cabul dated Sept. 6 states that severe fighting took place on Aug. 31 at Mashaki between the Ameer's troops and the insurgents, the number of killed and wounded being 500, but there was no definite result.

FUNERAL DEMONSTRATION.

DUBLIN, Sept. 13.—A great demonstration is being arranged at Mitchellstown to be made to-morrow during the funeral of Shennick, one of the men shot by the police. The Cool Abbey branch of the National League and all the local branches in the country for many miles around Mitchellstown will participate.

WHY THEY DECLINE.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 13.—On hearing that the committee having in charge the preparations for the approaching military encampment at Chicago intended to transport the foreign troops as second and third class passengers the Civic Guards here decided not to accept the invitation to attend.

MR. O'BRIEN'S IMPRISONMENT.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Mr. Nolan, Home Ruler, asked if it was true that Mr. William O'Brien was confined in a cell nine by four feet in area, and if Mr. Balfour meant to order reasonable accommodations for the prisoner. Mr. Balfour said he had no knowledge respecting the nature of the cell occupied by Mr. O'Brien. Of course, he added, it was his (Mr. Balfour's) desire that Mr. O'Brien should be comfortably confined, and the present rules provided that untried prisoners should have reasonable accommodations.

RED RIVER VALLEY RAILWAY.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Sir Henry Holland, Secretary of State of the Colonies, states in the House of Commons this evening that the Government had received advices from the Governor-General of Canada regarding the dispute in Manitobe over the Red River Railway matter, but that as the whole case was sub-judice it would not be proper for him to disclose the nature of the advices nor to offer an opinion on the subject. The Government hoped all parties to the controversy would abide by the final decision in the case.

FERDINAND CHEERED.

SOAIA, Sept. 13.—A meeting of the National party was held yesterday, 800 persons present. Addresses were made by the political leaders. After the meeting a procession was formed, which was subsequently augmented to 2,000 peasons. They marched to the palace where they cheered Prince Ferdinand. Thence they proceeded to the residence of M. Karaveloff and threw stones at the windows. The police were unable to quell the disturbance and many of them were injured. The mob then visited the offices of the opposition journals and smashed the windows, shouting "Down with Traitors." Then they returned to the palace where Prince Ferdinand appeared upon a balcony. The resolutions adopted at the meeting were read to him, and in reply he said: "Love me and be good patriots. Long live Bulgaria." The crowd then dispersed singing the national anthem.

BRITISH EMPIRE OR THE UNITED STATES.

THE resolution passed at the recent meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the Imperial Federation League seems to have displeased the Toronto Globe. It says those present were rank Conservatives, that the resolutions were cut-and-dried, and that there was no attempt at discussion. These statement are all inaccurate. The speaking and voting in support of the resolution were not confined to Conservatives and the organization in Peterborough as elsewhere includes men of both political parties who object to breaking up the Empire of which Canada forms part. The resolution was not cut-and-dried having been shown by the mover to only one other before offering it, but it was unanimously accepted. There was a lively and interesting discussion for two hours, all the chief points of the question being considered. The Globe's objections lack the essential of truth. If the Globe and its informant mean that there was no debate between speakers holding different views, we will only remark that if the local commercial or political annexationists wish to debate the question with the members of the Peterborough branch of the society, they are not likely to experience any difficulty in making arrangements for such a debate on fair and equal terms.

CUTTING PRICES.

IN the discussion on the "sugar combination" a friend of the discontented grocers admits that they are parties to agreements not to cut prices on other articles, but defends them on the ground that the prices are fixed by the manufacturers of the goods, who refuse to sell to anyone who will undersell.

We are glad to learn that some manufacturers are in this practical manner fighting against the dishonest practice of selling some articles without a profit on the transaction. It is obvious that if a dealer were to sell all his stock at a loss, or even at cost without any margin for his business and personal expenses, he must come to bankruptcy and his creditors must suffer. If he only loses on certain articles to attract customers it is clear that he must compensate himself by placing an increased profit on other goods, deceiving the purchaser.

Neither course is moral, and neither course is beneficial to the community in the end. Those who are fighting against this bad practice should be supported. A combination to prevent such methods of doing business is praiseworthy and beneficial, being a very different thing from a ring to raise prices to an excessive amount.

THE agitators for Annexation, or for Commercial Union as a first step towards it, are nicknaming the honest loyal majority of the people of Canada the "Restricted Trade Party." The unreasonableness of this substitute for argument may be seen on remembering the fact that the open or covert Annexationists are asking us to restrict our trade to one foreign nation, while those who are not traitors to the Dominion of Canada and the British Empire would have us first develop our home market and then deal with all the rest of the world on equal terms. Are not those the real restrictionists who ask us to cease manufacturing, to restrict our imports of manufactured goods to one foreign nation, while imposing a penalty for all such dealings with our Mother Country, our sister colonies, and the rest of the world.

WE are glad to see that the danger, to which we have several times pointed, is now attracting attention, that the United States would not be bound by an appointment of Commissioners by the President. The Ottawa Journal says:—

"The situation at present is that Britain and Canada are risking a great deal, and the States risking nothing. If in the deliberations of the coming commission the American diplomats get the better of the Imperial ones, the result will be ratified, and the States win the day; if the Imperial Commissioners get the better of the Americans, the result will be burked by the United States Senate, and the States will not lose. In short, unless the Senate beforehand impilses its willingness to abide by the decision of the Commission, the United States will go into the deliberations with the comfortable certainty of 'tails, I win; heads, I don't lose!'"

AT Glenburnie the Farmers' Club has been discussing Commercial Union, but the chairman would not allow any reference to Annexation. Surely a case of the play of Hamlet without a Prince of Denmark.

THE ANNEXATION MOVEMENT.

Further Opinions of the United States Press—The Avowed Object.

THE PROPOSED EXCHANGE.

It would give the Dominion a better market for her lumber, minerals and fish. It would open up a market for our own manufactured goods.—Chicago Tribune.

NO GAIN FOR US.

With the tariff averaging on our exports to Canada about 30 per cent. we should expect to sell more goods at prices very much the same as now.—Chicago Tribune.

WASTE AND GO TO CANADA.

Again the cry is heard that the Adirondack forests are fast disappearing. Never mind; we'll find them in Canada when we want them.—Rochester Post-Express.

THE RESULT ANTICIPATED.

We are confident that by the exercise of tact and mutual concession a highly profitable union can be brought about. We also believe that the welding of interests by such means would result in ultimate political union.—Buffalo Roller Mill.

NO POLITICAL DIVISION.

The political division which separates them has no longer reason for its being. The history of our own country shows that its wiping out would do no violence to the spirit of our institutions, and the experience of a century leaves no doubt of the advantages that would redound from the extension of our boundary line to the polar sea.—Detroit News.

HARD TO DETERMINE.

No scheme which would give to Canada an equal voice in the determination of Federal taxation could be considered. She would have to accept the position of a State in the Union, with only such power in the determination of the tax rate as her comparative population would entitle her to. How this could be effected without representation in Congress is a matter hard to determine.—Philadelphia Record.

REMOVE THE BOUNDARY.

To-day there is but one foreign power, instead of five, with a foothold upon the North American continent. It is not a wild prediction to make that within the lives of those now living that one will be removed by the wiping out of the artificial boundary line which separates the domain of Great Britain from that of the United States.—Detroit News.

TO WIPE US OUT.

We would swamp their markets with manufactured goods, and wipe out their manufactures in many branches at one stroke. To save these industries they have have adopted a protective tariff against even the Mother country, Great Britain, which is their greatest source of revenue. The idea that they will give us better than they do Great Britain it would be foolish to entertain. Great Britain would not tolerate any such invidious distinction.—Cleveland Leader.

EDUCATION IN TREASON.

The people of both countries are rapidly coming to realize that a joining of the two under one government is but the logical event of history, and when their education is complete—as it must be before many years—no earthly power can stand in the way of their joining hands in a political union that will make the United States' possession of the North American continent practically complete.—Detroit News.

CANADA TO SURRENDER.

If the Dominion will take our tariff laws as they are, and as Congress may choose to modify them, and as our Treasury Department and courts may construe them, well and good. This country may agree to such an arrangement as that, but it will never agree to accept the Dominion laws, or to put the whole business of tariff making out of the hands of Congress and into the hands of some joint high commission representing the treaty-making functionaries of the United States and British Governments. Unless, therefore, the Dominion is prepared to make a complete and unconditional surrender of all control over its own tariff and accept whatever tariff our Congress may choose to enact from time to time, the scheme of Commercial Union, in the sense in which that phrase is used, is entirely out of the question.—Chicago Times.

NEWSPAPER COMMENTS.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The Standard says it is a relief to know that the opposition failed ridiculously to turn to factious uses a calamitous incident which, in well ordered minds, could only excite a feeling of the deepest regret. The Post considers the opposition attack upon the ministry last night a very feeble one. The News says: "At the last general election both parties agreed that henceforth Ireland should be placed upon an equal form with England in every respect. It is curious that none of the supporters of the Government in Parliament or in the press seem conscious of this change in the mode of viewing political events in Ireland."

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are suffering with pain. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

The Essential Feature.

Irate Poet—Look here, sir; what in blazes do you mean? I wrote, "I kissed her under the silent stars," and I'll be hanged if you haven't let it go in the proof, "I kissed her under the ce'ler stairs."

Calm Proofreader—Ah? Is that so? Yes, it does look like that, doesn't it? Well, my dear boy, you ought not to bother so much about these unimportant details. We got the main fact all right, didn't we?—Journal of Education.

Give them a Chance.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain

THE SCIENCE OF SAILS.

Points That Yachtsmen and Catboatmen May Value.

Like a bird's wing, the first need for all effective sail is a rigid leading edge or weather leech; obtained in the square and lugsails by the drag of a bowline, in the lateensail by the yard or bone of the sailwing itself, in staysails by the rigidity of the mast or supporting stay and in jibs by the powerful hoisting purchase and use of chain for halyards. Before the introduction of chain, the jib, like the first string of a violin, was constantly getting out of tune and in want of setting up. Another point in a good sail is that the after edge, when held in place by the sheet, should be as nearly upright or vertical as the seams of the sail, and, like the after edge of a wing, unconfined by anything more than a hem or lightest of rope, save where a reefband requires strength.

The cloth at this end of a jib is at times seen shaking while the rest of the canvass is still as though frozen, and it is better the wind should pass it freely so than be girt in or held by it. The cloths of a jib are out a little convex upon the leading edge, and unless the position of the sheets were carefully fixed with respect to this convexity, the luff of a jib would be concave instead of straight when roped and hoisted.

There is an old sea saying, often used, too, by landsmen without knowing why, viz.: "I knew him by the cut of his jib," a jib really having more cut about it than other sails.

Though few practical sailmakers or users of them know really much about algebraic formula, they have their rules, handed down to them from old time, for cutting out sails; and, as wind and water are very conservative elements, they seldom go far wrong. Among these rules is that working by thirds—that is, when at a loss as to the best proportion for one thing toward another, to take a third. The boat always takes her third of the fish caught, a yard of a lug sail is slung a third from the end, the most convex part of the jib is at one-third of the luff from the tack, and the sheet exactly opposite the point. A pious adherence to his old mystery saves much calculation and trouble; and when shipbuilders thought a third a good proportion of beam to length, a fair amount of stability was insured to our ships. Sailors speak of a sail as lifting or pressing quite independently of its power of driving a vessel ahead. All jibs are lifting sails, which do their work with least tendency to force a vessel's lee side down. They are safe sails to jibe or veer round under the wind; hence, perhaps, the term "jibe." The angle at which the weather edge of a jib stands has much to do with this lifting quality, for a cutter's foresail, though triangular, is not found a lifting sail. Next to a jib, the sail which has most of this power is no doubt the lateen (latin) sail of the south, particularly as set upon the foremast of a felucca, while the splendid lifting power of the lanteen sail may have led to its being retained as the head sail in the strange combination of rigs seen in the Turkish vessel which is known as a xebec.—Robert Leslie in Harper's.

Peculiar Actions of Drowning Persons.

"I believe I can tell just by the clutch how many times a drowning person has been down," musingly remarked Edward Horn, of the ferry company, and the man who has saved sixty-four lives. "The first trip down they go for you with a firm, decided clutch that means they still know what they are about. The second immersion causes a shaky, uncertain grip, which can be easily broken if you so choose. It is the last time down that the grasp becomes a convulsive, bewildered one, and but few swimmers can save a person after the unfortunate man has descended for the third time. Almost invariably the drowning man on his final journey below the water will seize his preserver by the legs. It seems to be a law of nature, and one I cannot account for. It would be easier to save a whole river full of men than one drowning woman. The odd feature of the latter's struggle in the water is that she will seize your hands if she can get hold of one or both of them. A woman will drown quicker than a man. She opens her mouth from the time she first strikes the water and never closes it, and so loses her senses more easily. Yes, I saw one person die of strangulation while we were under water together. His eyes were wonderfully fascinating as he stared helplessly at me. You may not believe it, but they shone like two balls of fire."—Detroit Tribune.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

Hilda burst into scornful laughter. "What in the world are you talking about?" she asked. "Have you lost your senses?"

"Not at all," I replied; "I retain possession of them and place a modest reliance upon their evidence. But surely yours were not quite as acute as usual when you cast yourself for the part of Lucrezia Borgia. Tragedy, believe me, is not your forte, and as often as you attempt it you will break down. Don't you see that if this rather diabolical plot of yours had succeeded, you would never have been able to show your face in any decent society again? Do you really imagine that there would have been the slightest doubt in anybody's mind as to who had instigated the duel between two men whom you have been openly endeavoring to set by the ears ever since your arrival here? The best thing that you can do now is to get your fire eating Frenchman to make an apology, which you will instruct Beauchamp to accept."

Hilda's face was not ordinarily an expressive one; but as she turned it toward me now, there swept across it a look of such vindictive malice that I inwardly recanted my criticism upon her tragic capabilities. However, she soon subdued that passing emotion and laughed again. "I don't in the least understand you," she declared; "I know nothing of any duel, and how can I help it if a couple of foolish young men choose to quarrel? It appears to me that you have been drinking too much wine, and I should be much obliged if you would go away for the present."

"With pleasure," I replied, rising. "Do you absolutely refuse, then, to be a peacemaker?"

"I refuse," she answered somewhat defiantly, "to be dictated to by you. I don't believe what you say, and I shall not make myself ridiculous by trying to smooth down a quarrel which most likely exists only in your imagination."

That was all that I obtained from her; but in truth I had not expected more; and in addressing such plain spoken remarks to her I had been actuated rather by curiosity as to how she would take them than by any hope that they would divert her from her purpose. The person whom I did hope to influence was De Vieuzac. Him I waylaid an hour later, as he was entering the smoking room, and drew him away into the billiard room, which adjoined that apartment, and which, fortunately, was untenanted.

"Monsieur de Vieuzac," I began, "it is quite out of the question that you should fight young Beauchamp, and I think you will admit as much when I have given you my reasons for saying so."

He interrupted me with suave courtesy, observing that the subject was no longer one which he could properly discuss. Any remarks which I might have to make must be addressed to his friends the Count de Something and the Marquis de Something else, who would not fail to call upon me in due course.

I replied that it would be needless to give his friends that trouble. "Of course," I continued, "you will not pretend that the ostensible cause of your quarrel is the real one."

"The cause of quarrel," returned he, "is of perfect simplicity. I have used words which I decline to withdraw, and by which Mr. Beauchamp conceives himself to be wounded. And perhaps in another moment we shall be no more, sir, to tell you that this conversation is most irregular."

"I dare say it is," I rejoined, "but you had better listen to me all the same. The lady who is at the bottom of all this"——

"Mr. Maynard," interrupted De Vieuzac, "it is impossible that I should listen to you. You scandalize me—positively you scandalize me! What! you speak of a lady!—you would perhaps in another moment go so far as to mention her by name! It is unheard of! I must beg of you, sir, to excuse me." And he made for the door.

"Very well," said I, "have it your own way, then, if you are determined to bring about an explosion. Since you insist upon it, your friends shall talk the affair over with me and with Lord Bracknell, who will be my coadjutor."

De Vieuzac paused upon the threshold and pulled his mustache. "Lord Bracknell!" he ejaculated. "Is that Mr. Beauchamp's choice, may I ask?"

"Oh, no; it is my choice. You heard him give me leave to select a colleague, and such is the selection that I propose to make."

This brought the Frenchman to his bearings. He returned slowly and consented, under protest, to hear me. "What is it that you have to say?" he inquired.

"Why, simply this," I replied. "Mr. Beauchamp, as you are probably not aware, is the present holder of very large estates, which, in the event of his dying without issue, would pass to his cousin, Lord Bracknell. Consequently, if he were to die suddenly within a short time, a certain lady whose name we won't mention would be snatched from the brink of bankruptcy and raised to a position of great wealth. Now, suppose that, by a misadventure which I am sure you would be the first to deplore, but which you might not be able to avert, you were to kill that young man. What do you think would be said of you and of the unnamed lady? Or suppose, without going so far as that, that you only wounded him. Is it not certain that everybody would declare that you had done your best to kill him? To me, at any rate, it is very evident that the insult which you offered him to-day was a mere pretext, and that you had deliberately made up your mind to fasten a quarrel upon him."

The Frenchman's countenance, while I was speaking, exhibited various phases of emotion; but now he blazed forth with sudden fury and sprung at me like a wild cat. "Sir," he hissed out, "do you dare to accuse me of being an assassin?"

"Certainly not," I replied, drawing back a few paces as a precautionary measure, "but I think you are in some danger of incurring that accusation from others." Then, as he eyed me in a suspicious manner and appeared to be hesitating, I continued: "Allow me, as an insular barbarian, to speak the truth to you without phrases. The fact is that you have been made a cat's paw of by the most thoroughly unscrupulous woman of my acquaintance. I venture to think that it would be more consistant with your honor and dignity to apologize to Beauchamp, whom you can't really believe to be a coward, than to fight him for the sake of Lady Bracknell, whom I have known all my life, and who, I can assure you, is not worth a drop of honest blood. In any case, depend upon it that we shall not allow our man to go out with you. Lord Bracknell would not dare to sanction such a meeting, even if he were, what I am convinced he is not, as infamous a wretch as his wife."

"Keep silence!" whispered De Vieuzac, hurriedly.

But his caution came too late. In my anxiety to bring conviction home to the mind of my interlocutor, I had not noticed the entrance of a third person, and now, when I looked round and saw Bracknell standing close to my elbow, I perceived that the cat was out of the bag.

"You don't mince matters, Maynard," Bracknell observed. "After that very frank expression of opinion, I dare say you won't object to my asking what you are talking about."

"Our conversation was strictly confidential," broke in De Vieuzac, with some eagerness. "Neither Mr. Maynard nor I have the right to repeat it."

Bracknell glanced at him for a moment, as a big dog glances at a little one, and then turned to me again. "Come," he said, "I am waiting to hear in what respect I am less infamous than my wife."

It seemed best to answer him. "Monsieur de Vieuzac and Beauchamp have fallen out," I replied, "and unfortunately the difference has ended in a challenge, you and I being nominated as Beauchamp's seconds. When you came in I was trying to point out that, as you are heir presumptive to Beauchamp's estates, you could not let him risk his life in such a way."

"I should have thought," remarked Bracknell, coolly, "that a man from whom one has expectations would have been the man of all others whom one would like to see risking his life."

"I doubt," I replied, "whether you would like it—under the circumstances."

"Oh, the circumstances, eh? And pray what are they?"

"It is needless to speak of them," cried De Vieuzac, before I could answer. "Mr. Maynard has convinced me that I have been in the wrong, and I shall hasten to offer my excuses to Mr. Beauchamp. I have only to add that if you consider yourself in any way aggrieved by me, my lord, I shall hold myself entirely at your disposition."

"You seem to be spoiling for a fight," remarked Bracknell. "I don't know that I have any grievance against you; but I'll try my best to indulge you by discovering one."

DOMESTIC AND USEFUL.

A very complete filling for open cracks in floors may be made by thoroughly soaking newspapers in a paste made by one pound of flour, three quarts of water, and a tablespoonful of alum thoroughly boiled and mixed; make the final mixture about as thick as putty, a kind of paper putty, and it will harden like papier-mache.

To make Victoria cake rub six ounces of butter well into a pound of flour, then mix six ounces of sugar; beat two eggs and make with the above into a paste. Roll it very thin, and cut with the top of a glass; prick them with a fork, and cover with caraway seeds, or wash with the white of an egg, and dust a little white sugar over.

A good way to make pot pourri is to put into a jar rose leaves and buds, a little mint, lemon, thyme, a few bay leaves, a little lavender, and rind of a lemon, a few cloves, and sprinkle some powdered bay salt between the layers of the sweet-smelling flowers. Fill the jar as you get the flowers, sprinkling salt as you fill it up.

In making sponge cream take one pint of fresh milk, three tablespoonfuls of gelatine, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, three eggs. Put the gelatine into cold milk, let it stand a little while, put on stove and bring to boiling point, then add the sugar and yolks of eggs well beaten together; remove from the fire and stir in the whites, also beaten stiff; add a little salt, flavour to suit, and pour into moulds, wet first, so that the cream will turn out easily.

To clean lace, fill a bottle with cold water; draw a stocking tightly over it, securing both ends firmly. Place the lace smoothly over the stocking and tack closely. Put the bottle in a kettle of cold water containing a few shavings of soap, and place over the fire to boil. Rinse in several waters, and then drain and dry. When dry remove and place smoothly in a large book and press with weights. Very nice lace can be made to look like new by this process.

In making bread pudding fill a breakfast cup quite full with grated bread, broken up in small pieces will do, and put it into a bowl; put on to boil 1½ breakfast cups of milk, and pour it boiling over the bread; cover the whole with a plate and let it soak for 10 minutes; add to it 1 large tablespoonful of sugar, and mix it thoroughly with a

Artistic Painting.

Mr. Ralph Carton, painter, has just finished a big job at Mr. T. Kelly's dry goods store. For the past week himself and assistants have been engaged in repainting the whole of the store. The ceiling is tastefully divided into three sections and overlaid with elegantly designed paper. The mouldings have been painted a rich cream color with a darker tinge in the concaves and the centre pieces circling the gasaliers are painted a crushed strawberry hue. The place looks very much improved.

Prudently Managed.

The Belleville Intelligencer says:—"The rates of taxation at Peterborough this year is 12¾ mills on the dollar for Protestants and 13¾ mills on the dollar for Catholic ratepayers. A very favorable showing, indeed. At Lindsay the rate is 23 mills on the dollar. If the above rate for Peterborough represents the school and municipal rates combined and is ample for all demands, the affairs of that town must be wisely and prudently managed. There was a time in Belleville when a low rate of taxation was enjoyed, but there was too much economy. The city is now making up for its holiday in tax paying. The rate this year is 19 7 12 mills on the dollar. Lindsay, with over two cents on the dollar, is ahead, and nobody here envies her the distinction."

Uncle Tom's Cabin.

Abbey's Uncle Tom's Cabin Company presented the ever ancient and always new drama at Bradburn's Opera House on Tuesday evening. The place was crowded as was expected, the success attending this company being even greater than that won on their appearance here a year ago. The Company is an excellent one; the leading parts are taken by genuine artists, and an even balance is maintained by the support. The two Marks' sr. and jr., and the two wicked Topsys' supplied the comic element with great credit. Little Genie, as Little Eva, was a marvel. She reached scarcely up to Uncle Tom's knee, yet she lisped through her part perfectly. The character of Uncle Tom was capably taken by Mr. Geo. Dorsey. The cast of characters is as follows:—

Topsy No 1 } Topsy No 2 }	Hyer Sisters
Eva, the angel child	Little Genie
Aunt Ophelia, from Vermont	Miss Irene [Lannigan
Mrs St Clair	Miss Georgie Millson
Eliza, the fugitive wife	Miss Marie Campbell

Drill.

The 57th Battalion held regular drill on Tuesday evening. Nearly all of the officers and a fair turn-out of men were present. Arrangements have been made for a marchout to be held a week from next Tuesday evening. The target practice will be commenced soon. The colonel has applied for the ammunition to be destributed as prizes, and no doubt his application will be satisfactorily met.

A Queer Pig.

Mr. M. O'Donnell has at present in his possession a young pig striped like a tiger. It is the wonder of the butchers and drovers of town, none of whom in all their experience have come across such a curious specimen of live stock. It will be shown at the Central Exhibition.

MISS TULLY, Mantle Cutter at Turnbull's, is now prepared to show all the New Styles in Mantles and Mantle Cloths. Orders executed promptly.

Boys Beware.

On a fence near the corner of Stewart and McDonell streets, there appears this notice: "Boys keep off this lot, in case you get shot, as there are spring guns and man traps set." No doubt the boys will stay off the lot, in case they get shot.

A Brakesman Killed.

GRAVENHURST, Sept. 13.—While a special freight train was approaching Gravenhurst station yesterday Brakesman John Crumbe fell between two cars. Three of the cars passed over his legs, severing one below the knee and the other at the thigh, also cutting off part of one hand. The mangled body was carried to Boyd's hotel, where he died shortly after. He comes from the vicinity of Bowmanville.

OH, kid, kid, Kidd! why are boots so cheap at your shop?

A Count in America.

TROY, N.Y., Sept. 13.—Count Montsaulnin, who with his wife is spending a few days at Lake Lazerne, is also Baron of Fontenoy, his estates lying about 150 miles from Paris. The Count is said to be making the railroad interests of America a subject of enquiry. Countess Montsaulnin was a Miss Zobrowski, a descendant of the Morris family of Morrisania, N.Y.

THE KAISER AT STETTIN.

STETTIN, Sept. 13.—Emperor William upon his arrival here was well but looked tired. The streets through which the Emperor and Empress and their party passed were thronged and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed.

PETERBOROUGH PRESBYTERY.

Regular Session Held in St. Andrew's Church.

A regular session of the Peterborough Presbytery was held in St. Andrew's Church on Tuesday.

There were present: The Rev. Jas. Cleland, Rev. J. Ewing, Rev. W. C. Windal, Rev. F. Andrews, Rev. W. Bennett, Rev. D. Sutherland, Rev. Cameron, Rev. E. F. Torrance, Rev. A. Bell, Rev. W. White, Rev. J. Ross. Rev. W. H. Jemison, Rev. J. Carmichael, Rev. J. R. Craigie, Rev. D. A. Thompson, Rev. J. W. Mitchell, Rev. G. McKay, Rev. John Hay, Rev. J. McEwan, Rev. Mark M. Turnbull, Rev. R. Hyde, and Messrs. E. Mahood, Mount Pleasant; W. E. Roxborough, Norwood; A. Russel, Cobourg; Robt. Tully, Peterborough; J. Fitzgerald, Lakefield; and A. Smith, Warsaw.

The minutes of the last session were read and confirmed.

The Rev. E. F. Torrance was elected moderator for the next six months.

A call to the Rev. Mr. McWilliams, from Port Hope, was considered and confirmed. The call was accepted and the induction ceremony will take place on October 13th. The Rev. Mr. Cameron will preside, the Rev Mr. McCloud, Brighton, will preach, the Rev A. Bell will explain the policy of the church, the Rev. E. F. Torrance will address the Minister and the Rev. Mr. McEwan will address the people.

Very interesting missionary reports were received from several mission fields.

The Presbytery of Peterborough asked the Presbytery of Lindsay to take the Superintendence of the mission fields of Minden and Haliburton.

The Revs. Carmichael, Ewing and Bennett were appointed a committee to visit Lakefield, North Smith, Smith and Harvey with a view to the erection of North Smith and Harvey into a pastoral charge.

Mr. Hossack, barrister, Cobourg, was received as a student of the church in his first year in theology.

A scheme of systematic beneficience was presented by the Rev. Mr. Bennett as follows:—

1. That all the members of our church be earnestly exhorted to devote a fair proportion of their income for the support of religious and benevolent objects.

11. That our congregations be recommended to adopt the weekly offering system as the best plan for the raising of funds for the maintenance of Gospel ordinances at home and abroad.

111. That the sessions of each congregation be requested to take steps to give all the people under their care who are willing, the opportunity of contributing weekly to the Stipend Fund and to the schemes of the church, and that the members of sessions themselves be affectionately exhorted to show a good example of liberality to the other members of the congregation.

1v. That in order to the carrying out of the aforegoing recommendations suitable subscription lists be drawn up for use in each of the congregations.

It was received and adopted and ordered to be printed, copies of it to be sent down to Sessions and Boards of Managers for their consideration.

The Presbytery sanctioned the appointment of trustees to take charge of the Oak Hill church property.

The Rev. Messrs. Carmichael and Thompson were appointed to hold a series of evangelistic services in Minden and Haliburton at such time most suitable to themselves and the people.

It was decided to hold Sabbath School Institutes in Hastings, Millbrook, Grafton and St. Andrew's, Peterborough.

A report on evangelistic work was presented. It was received and its recommendations adopted. It was ordered to be printed sent down to sessions and congregations for their consideration.

The next session will be held in the Mill Street Church, Port Hope, on the second Tuesday of January, commencing at 10 a.m

THE MAIL'S CONFESSED AIM.

IT is well that the eyes of the people of Canada should be opened to the real aim of the advocates of Commercial to be followed by Political Annexation. In the United States the journals, and the leaders of the movement when speaking on the platform, do not hesitate to show that they mean commercial supremacy and political union But these journals are seen by comparatively few Canadians, and the same leaders when in Canada, following Mr. Butterworth's advice not to offend our loyalty by talking yet of the annexation that Commercial Union is intended to bring about, pretend that it is simply a commercial question.

Thus the people of Canada are being deliberately deceived, but fortunately conspirators not infrequently forget the part they are playing and betray their object, and it is so in this case. The Toronto Mail quotes and adopts as the foundation of its argument against closer trade relations with the rest of the British Empire and in favor of the United States, the following statement by Mr. Andrew Carnegie, the Pittsburg millionaire iron master:—

"Any discrimination against one country in favour of another must partake of the nature of an offensive act and cause a rupture of cordial relations."

Yet the Mail is employing all its energies to pursuade the people of Canada to discriminate "against one country in favour of another"—against the rest of the British Empire in favour of foreigners. Those who have watched the course of the Mail must have been persuaded that it is working for the disintegration of the Dominion and the disruption of the Emptre, but now it has put its meaning beyond a doubt. It boldly advocates that the people of Canada shall commit what it characterises as "an offensive act" against our follow countrymen, and thus cause a "rupture of cordial relations" with them.

Who will follow the Mail and its associates; who?

A FISHERY QUESTION.

Newfoundland Anxious about Her Herrings on the French Coast.

ST. JOHN'S Nfld., Sept. 13.—The grand jury of Bay St. Georges has brought in a strong presentment touching the probably disastrous consequence of the threatened competition of the French in the herring fishery in which 200 bankers were likely to be engaged next spring, and desiring to be informed if the bait act applied to subjects on this coast. Justice Pinsent, commented at length upon the presentment and upon notifications of the French commanders, brought under his notice and, repudiated the assumption of the French that the investure of British official authority on this coast was irregular. His Lordship held that the provisions of the bait act applied to all other subjects but explained there was nothing to prevent the issue of licenses to residents of this coast, a course which would avert evil consequences the jury apprehended, without injury to the rest of the colony and would tend to preserve harmony between the French and English subjects on this coast.

SACRIFICING OUR INDEPENDENCE.

It is not pretended, even by the advocates of Commercial Union, in their addresses on the other side of the line, that we should have the slightest voice in the framing of the common tariff we should be bound to accept for the supposed advantage of more intimate commercial relations and we should be compelled to sacrifice the position we have attained by great sacrifice of practical independence.—Sherbrooke Gazette.

YOUNG CONSERVATIVES.

Second Day of the Convention—The Officers and Resolutions.

TORONTO, Sept. 15.—Pressing public business kept Sir John Macdonald in Ottawa yesterday, and in consequence the banquet that was to have been held last evening was postponed. The convention assembled at 11 o'clock and proceeded to permanently organize by electing the following officers:—

Hon. Presidents—The Right Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald and W. R. Meredith, M.P.P.

President—J. A. Worrell, Toronto.

Vice-Presidents—J. A. Scott, Kincardine; J. A. McGillivray, Uxbridge; J. R. Esmonde, Ottawa.

Secretary-Treasurer—W. D. MacPherson, Toronto.

Assistant Secretaries—George Howe, Ottawa; J. L. Campbell, Simcoe; S. Hughes, Lindsay.

A number of members were chosen to act on the Executive Committee, among whom was Mr. Geo. W. Hatton, of Peterborough.

The following resolutions were adopted:

That this convention desires to express the loyalty of the Young Liberal-Conservatives of Ontario to the institutions of this country, and their firm adherence to British connection, and truly pledges itself to resist any attempts to alter the one or weaken the other.

That, as Canadians, we point with pride and satisfaction to the immense public works which have been constructed, and to the rapid strides of development which the country has made under the public-spirited and progressive policy of the present Government.

We point with still greater pride to the small extent to which the burdens of the people have been increased by carrying out successfully such a progressive policy, and beg to express the hope that in the future, as in the past, the Government may, while pushing forward the development and settlement of the country, exercise a due regard to economy.

That, inasmuch as it has been found that the exercise by local bodies, of the fullest powers in the management of affairs which do not affect the country at large, contributes greatly to the happiness and well-being of a people and tends to develop the principles of self-government, we view with disapproval and alarm the course which the present Government of Ontario has adopted, of centralizing power in itself, and thereby prejudicially affecting the dignity, and lessening the power of usefulness, of Municipal Councils.

That this convention approves of the steps which are being taken to establish a newspaper in Toronto, which will advocate the principles of the Liberal-Conservative party.

That we view with apprehension the increase in the Provincial expenditure, while the revenue remains almost stationary, and we deprecate the policy of the Ontario Government in maintaining an apparent revenue by selling Provincial assets, and entering the proceeds as income.

That in the opinion of this convention the policy of protection to our native industries which has been advocated and brought to practical issue by the Liberal-Conservative party of Canada, is deserving of the support of every young Liberal Conservative, as it has received the support of the Liberal-Conservative party in the past three elections, and the success of the Canadian Pacific Railway, the latest evidence of which is the grant by the Imperial Government to the Canadian Pacific steamship line to the east, thus connecting all parts of the Empire, is evidence of the broad statesmanship of John A. Macdonald and his Government, the faith of Canadians in Conservative principles and institutions, and the genius and energy of the people of this Dominion.

That this Association of Young Conservatives, inspired by love and loyalty to Britain's greatest Queen, take this opportunity of expressing their gratitude to kind Providence for having spared her useful life to this jubilee year, breathing the prayer and inspired with the hope that she may long live to grace the throne of a united empire in the conscious possession and enjoyment of the love and loyalty of a contented people.

Several speeches were delivered by prominent delegates. A constitution for local associations was adopted, and Toronto was chosen as the next place of meeting, the date being the second Tuesday in February.

The convention concluded by the delegates singing the National Anthem and cheering for Sir John Macdonald, Mr. Meredith and the President.

SAD HEARTS BY THE SEA.

Fishermen's Losses in the Late Gales—Sharks Feeding on the Bodies.

HALIFAX, Sept. 13.—Captain Goodich, of the schooner Willie McGowan, at Shelburne, from Grand Banks, says there will be hundreds of sad hearts in New England and the Provinces when the fishermen's muster roll is called this season. While off Liverpool yesterday he spoke the banker Harold whose skipper, Captain Lyons, reported having passed many derelict and capsized vessels on his way home from the banks, whose crews must have perished during the great storm. Captain Lyons says one of the most heartrending spectacles he ever witnessed on "that racecourse of the winds, the grand banks," was that presented on board the battered hulk of a fishing vessel which was thrown upon her beam ends by the violence of the sea and was aimlessly drifting at will of the wild waves. Skipper Lyons boarded the craft with difficulty, but found no sign of life about her decks. Peering down the skylight of the cabin, which was out of the water, he beheld a sickening sight. A number of dead fishermen were floating about in the wash of the sea while several small sharks were tearing their limbs asunder and feeding voraciously on their flesh. The sight made Lyons' blood freeze, but he could render no assistance in rescuing the bodies nor could he get them out of the cabin and sink them in the ocean, and was compelled to leave them a prey to the ravenous sharks. The skipper says that not half of the disasters resulting from the storm have yet been reported. Advices from St. Pierre, Miq., give details of terrible disasters which overtook the French fishing fleet in the gales of the 20th, 27th and 29th ult., and 3rd inst. One hundred vessels were demoralized and fifty lives lost. Scores of fishermen were also seriously injured, many having arms and legs broken. The schooner St. Pierre was lost with all hands. The fishing season has ended disastrously to the French. The catch is one third below that of last year. The losses of gear, &c., incurred during the gale were enormous, added to which is the fact that the distressed vessels lose a month of September fishing. These things have combined to already advance the price of codfish fifteen per cent. at St. Pierre.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

From Our Own Correspondent.

A FREAK AMONG FISH.—Three of our worthy villagers who were down Pigeon River returned on Saturday night, Sept 3rd, bringing with them some twenty beautiful 'lunge, which they were successful in hauling in, and by which they have established more than an ordinary name for trolling. But though they were successful in getting the fish to bite at their glittering baits, and thereby becoming caught, it is very doubtful if they knew just where to hit a 'lunge, so that it would not wriggle off after it had been taken in, for 'lunge have been known to jump three feet out of the water, or jump into a boat, or even jump out of a boat after being taken in; but these 'lunge, after they were landed safely, as the anglers thought, in a nice pile here on the side of the street, actually slipped off and were hid under a board in a neighboring garden. When the proud fishermen came to make "the divide," then there was astonishment depicted on each angler's countenance, and there was hurrying to and fro; loud suppositions were supposed, and even accusations were made, but of course no person saw those fish go; oh, no; no person saw them go; but the villagers who had not retired to their peaceful slumbers turned out and a general search was made for the escaping fish, and the result was that the "beauties" were found in a neat pile under a board in a garden near by.

SALE.—Mr. Richard Thexton's great sale of stock and implements is to come off on the 19th Sept., commencing at 11 a.m. Mr. Thexton and his family are bound for Dakota in a few weeks.

OFF TO EXHIBITION.—A number of our villagers are off to the exhibition in Toronto this week.

Purely Ecclesiastical.

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—Archbishop Lynch has sent the following letter to Mr. Stewart Lyon:—

DEAR SIR,—In answer to your questions I say:

1st.—Henry George's doctrine or book has not as yet been pronounced on by the Holy See.

2nd.—Dr. McGlynn's excommunication was occasioned by his persistent refusal to obey the command of the Holy See, to which he promised obedience as a priest and as an Alumnus of the College of the Propaganda at Rome. Dr. McGlynn's case is purely ecclesiastical, not political.

Yours,
THE ARCHBISHOP OF TORONTO.

Fatal Forest Fire.

KINGSTON, Sept. 13.—Some of the land at Violet, over which bush fires swept recently, belonged to Sir Richard Cartwright. On Wednesday and Thursday about 150 men were out fighting the flames and preventing them from consuming valuable buildings and their contents. The fire at Bickneil's Corners swept over the country as far as Milton, burning woods and fences and three houses. A blind man named Davy perished in the flames.

The Anarchists Must Die.

OTTAWA, Ill., Sept. 14.—The Supreme Court, this morning, delivered an opinion on the Anarchist case, affirming the judgment of the court below. The execution is to take place Nov. 11, between 9 and 4 o'clock.

TO BE ENFORCED.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The Standard says:—"The Government will make a fatal blunder if they defeat the purpose of the law by converting imprisonment under the Crimes Act, or any other act, into a term of honorable and easy detention. Mr. O'Brien claims to be an elegant recluse."

END OF THE SESSION.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The session of Parliament practically closed last night. The Ministerial speeches leave no doubt of the Government's intention to resort to a rigorous application of the Crimes Act, and a merciless exercise of its powers.

MONEY FOR O'BRIEN.

DUBLIN, Sept. 14.—Mr. O'Brien has received £100 from America, which he intends to distribute among the relatives of victims of the recent affray at Mitchelstown.

ACCIDENT TO M. CLEMENCEAU.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—Yesterday, at Nantes, while M. Clemenceau was driving with M. Normand, Mayor of Nantes, their carriage collided with a heavy waggon and both gentlemen were thrown out. Mayor Normand was severely injured and M. Clemenceau slightly hurt.

A DEADLY EXPLOSIVE.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—It is reported that a Russian engineer has discovered a new explosive which is destined to drive all existing ammunition out of use, being equal in strength to proxylin. It is stated that the Russian war office will build a special factory for the manufacture of the explosive.

ABIDE BY THE LAW.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The Colonial Secretary stated in the House of Commons to day that he had received a confidential despatch from Lord Lansdowne regarding the Manitoba railway. As the matter was sub judice it would not be proper to offer an opinion on the case. He hoped all parties would abide by the final decision of the Superior Court in Manitoba.

THE TEA TRADE.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The English Consul at Tokio reports that the Canadian Pacific steamers will before long attract not only the bulk of the tea hitherto taken by the Suez Canal, but also a fair share of the general export trade hitherto passing through San Francisco.

NEW LABOR PARTY.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—A meeting of the new National Labor Party was held last night and many addresses were made. This party was initiated by the Trades Congress, and it is announced that it is not connected in any way with any trades unions, but intends to co-operate with them as far as possible. In their platform the new party demands adult suffrage, that every man shall have one vote, that the State shall remunerate members of Parliament for their services, free education, land reform and poor law reform. They advocate the maintenance of free trade, but insist upon the abolition of State-paid bounties. Finally they demand Home Rule and Local Government reform and religious equality.

HOME RULE DEPUTATION.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—A large deputation of Home Rule members have left for Ireland. They intend to make speeches throughout Ireland. Great curiosity awaits the outcome of this project.

A Great Strike.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 14.—A despatch from Hazelton, Pa., says:—By the strike of the miners and laborers of the Lehigh and lower anthracite regions for an advance of 15 percent in their wages fully 5,000 are idle. All day yesterday and to-day the streets of the town were crowded with idle men, and the situation is being discussed on all sides. The miners quit work last Saturday evening with a determination not to return to their field of labor until their demand is granted. A more determined set of men has never been seen, and not a few have been heard to say that they are prepared to remain idle six months, if necessary, and not be in want.

Discrimination Protested Against.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The board of managers of the Produce Exchange to-day adopted resolutions protesting against the action of the railroad companies in giving lower rates on grain, provisions and lard to European and continental points than to seaboard cities, thus discriminating against our own country. A committee was appointed to lay the matter before the interstate commence commissioners with a request that they enforced the law.

Sault St. Marie Railway.

OTTAWA, Sept. 14.—Two hundred and forty miles of the Minneapolis, Sault St. Marie and Atlantic Railway eastward is completed. Rapid progress is being made with the remainder of the road, as well as with the Algoma branch of the Canadian Pacific, with which it is to connect over the bridge now being built at the Sault.

Supposed Convict.

KINGSTON, Sept. 14.—A body found near Oswego is thought to be that of Kelly, the escaped convict. The marks on the clothes correspond with those he had when he left the prison. An investigation is being made.

TREATY MAKING.

THERE seems to be considerable misapprehension as to the treaty-making power in Great Britain, Canada and the United States respectively. From the mistaken or imperfect views held by many on this subject, fallacious arguments are sometimes drawn.

In the Three Kingdoms the treaty-making power, as is usual in monarchies, resides in the Crown. But under the constitutional system that has grown up and now prevails in our Mother Country, this means practically that the power is exercised on the advice of the Administration, and thus indirectly by the people whom they represent, Parliament not having a voice in treaty-making, though having some power to check by means of a vote of censure or refusal of supplies. It follows that British ambassadors or commissioners bind the country by their decisions. The Ministry appointing them cannot repudiate them, and even a succeeding Administration feels bound to respect the pledged faith of the country. A refusal to ratify a treaty is, therefore, almost unknown, though the right may be exercised in exceptional and flagrant cases. For instance, the ratification of the Ashburton treaty might have been refused if the fact had been known before, instead of afterwards, that we had been robbed of our rightful territory through the deliberate and dishonest suppression of evidence by the United States. Again, the Alabama award might have been rejected if it had been known at the time that by fraudulent claims and false pretences the United States was obtaining payment for asserted damages, for which, with the most liberal interpretation, they have never to this day been able to find claimants.

In Canada there is no direct treaty-making power. The chief obstacle is that nations refuse to deal with the authorities of portions of other nations, declining to recognize internationally any but the central authority. But the custom has grown up of the Crown appointing Canadian representatives when Canada is specially interested, and making the decision subject to the consent of the Dominion Parliament. This rule is certain to be observed for the future, as such concessions cannot be recalled, though they may be extended.

In the United States the treaty making power virtually resides in the Senate, the Executive having no power to bind the nation without its consent. This was exemplified recently in the conduct of the Senate, which contemptuously repudiated the hope held out to us by the President that there should be a joint commission to settle the fishery question, this repudiation of the bargain taking place after receiving the benefit of free fishing last year in our waters, a concession granted by Canada in consideration of the dishonored bargain made by the President. The Senate does not hold that the Executive or any authority but itself can pledge the good faith of the nation.

Briefly then the treaty making power is practically as follows:—

In the Three Kingdoms and all parts of the British Empire not granted autonomous powers, it is exercised by the Crown on the advice of its responsible advisers, acting through diplomatic representatives.

In Canada it is exercised by the Crown acting in the same manner, with the Canadian Ministry also having a voice, and the decision being subject to the assent of the Dominion Parliament.

In the United States it is virtually exercised by the Senate who will not be bound by the action of any other national authority.

The differences in the manner of conducting international negotiations and making international agreements, have an especial interest in view of the proposed joint commission on the fishery question. It will be seen that the demand made by some is unreasonable, that the United States Senate should bind itself before hand to accept the decision of the Commission, unless indeed the Dominion Parliament was similarly pledged. On the other hand it would be obviously absurd for us to enter into negotiations, with the United States in the position of being a stranger to the whole proceedings, while we are bound at least by a decent respect for the national faith plighted by the constitutional authorities. Such an arrangement would be one-sided and unfair. To place both parties on an equal footing as nearly as possible, the United States Senate should give its assent to the commission and to the choice of its commissioners, so that it would at least have some responsibility for them and not be free to say the commissioners were simply private persons of whom they knew nothing, the mere agents of the President, whom the majority of the Senate are more inclined to thwart than support, even when he is acting for the nation. Until this equitable arrangement is made we should in self-protection refuse to commence any negotiations by a so-called joint commission, in which the representatives of one party would not be validly commissioned.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth It relieves the little suffer at once; it produces natural, quiet slee by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

GENERAL.

Writs for new elections to the Quebec Legislature for the three vacant constituencies of Maskinonge, Shefford and Rimouski will be issued immediately.

Three ferry boats plying to and from the Toronto exhibition grounds collided on Tuesday night. Four men were thrown into the water and one was drowned.

A convention of temperance workers from different parts of the Dominion was opened in Toronto on Tuesday, with the object of taking united action in regard to the forthcoming Scott Act repeal contests.

Fishing vessels arriving at Nova Scotia ports report immense loss of life and vessel property on the Grand Banks during the recent violent storms, the worst and most destructive occurring on Saturday, the 3rd instant.

Headache, Billiousness, Dyspepsia and Indigestion relieved and at once by Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Try it. Samples free.

Application was made at Osgoode hall on Tuesday, on behalf of Henry Taylor, ex-president of the Bank of London, for an order to discharge the writ of capias under which he is at present confined in the London gaol. The motion was enlarged for a week.

Mr. Perley, chief engineer of the Public Works Department, has recommended the construction of a boom across Lake St. Louis to protect Montreal from spring floods. The work, which is estimated to cost about $65,000, will be commenced almost immediately.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills, Salts, &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists.

Mr. Carling, Minister of Agriculture, has instructed Mr. McEachren, chief veterinary inspector of the Department, to ascertain the exact nature of the reported outbreak of a contagious disease among cattle in Nova Scotia, which is believed to have been greatly exaggerated.

Give them a Chance.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain

DON'T COUGH!

But, Seriously, do you Catch on?

Well, the Great-and-only-Original-Terror to High-Priced-Clothiers, Wonderful-Forepaw dealer, in other words, teddy Cough (Now bring along the Babies, take the name and the gold dollar and be Happy.) has issued a Challenge. He has the war paint on, and terror and destruction will come to any of the Baby Clothiers of Peterborough who will pretend to do business in opposition to this wonder of the 19th Century. He says he is TRUTHFUL! Well, let us see. He states positively that SHEPPARD is lying when he says that he got Bags from Peterboro's Great Cheapside. He says that he never advertises that which he will not carry out to the latter. READ CAREFULLY THE FOLLOWING, and see the position it puts this oracle of truth in—Mr. Teddy Cough:

37 Vic. 37. C. D.

I HENRY SHEPPARD, of the Town of Peterborough, in the County of Peterborough, do Solemnly Declare that on Saturday evening last past two young men came into my place of business and stated to me that they had one deal with Gough but never wanted another. One said "I purchased goods from Gough, (meaning I suppose the store) and he guaranteed me that he would refund me the money if I "was not satisfied or words to that effect. I had witness to prove this. Afterwards I went back with the goods, stated that I was not "satisfied and wanted my money. He would not give it me. I told him I could make him return me the money if I wanted to, as I "had witness. I did not get the money, so Gough got the money and the clothing too, but, I have the experience."

On Wednesday, August, 31st, 1887, a responsible farmer came into my store and inspected my Grain Bags. He purchased two dozen bags of good quality, looking at the same time at the cheap bags selling at $1.75 per dozen. but, said he, would not buy them for his own use. About two hours after leaving my store he returned and said "I want two dozen of your cheap bags now" and stated that they were not for himself, He afterwards stated to me in the presence of a witness that he took the two dozen cheap bags in the store of one, Gough, a Clothier on George Street, Peterborough, and was paid $3.50 for the same by the said Gough, or one of his salesmen.

And I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the Act passed in the Thirty-seventh year of Her Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act for the suppression of voluntary and extra-judicial oaths."

HENRY SHEPPARD.

Declared before me at the Town of Peterborough, in the County of Peterborough, this 13th day of Sept., in the year of our Lord 1887.

E. A. PECK, A Commissioner, &c.

The above has the contrary ring of truth, seeing that in each case four reputable witnesses can be found to corroborate the above sworn statement, and, when it is necessary, more will follow. Sheppard has no desire to bring any man's business in such a light before the public But the Back-bone talked about will never be found wanting in Sheppard, and just at the right time and place, Mr. Forepaw dealer may need his $500 or $1,000 to prove his assertions.

So that, at the present moment, Peterboro's great Cheapside will go on selling the Cheapest Clothing in Peterboro' though it raises the wool on this only Original Cough. Sheppard has no brother-in-laws in Muskoka to sell goods to, neither has he relatives or any other person, who at any time endorsed his paper to the extent of one cent. He has, though his stock is small, $10,000 in assets over liabilities, and just so long as this state of affairs exists he will pledge himself to the public to give entire satisfaction.

You can save money on any purchase. Sheppard has reduced Men's $10.00 Suits to $6.00, Men's $15.00 Suits to $10.00. Look out for Slashing Reductions in Men's and Boy's Clothing.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

"Now, Harry," said Bracknell, "perhaps you'll explain yourself. Of course I can guess what those two idiots quarreled about, but it seems to me that 'infamous wretch' is pretty strong language for a cautious fellow like you to use. Between you and me, what did you mean by it?"

Perhaps I was hardly justified in telling him, but at that moment I really did not see for whose sake I was bound to be reticent. To my mind there was nothing extraordinary in such a woman as Hilda wishing to get Beauchamp out of the way, and step into his shoes. It has always seemed to me that murderers are only regarded with greater abhorrence and punished more severely than other criminals because we all have such a strong dislike to the idea of being murdered, and that the man who slanders or cheats me is morally just about as culpable as the man who knocks me on the head. Therefore, when I had related the events of the day to Bracknell, I was a good deal astonished at the effect produced upon him by my narrative. He strode up and down the room, muttering furious imprecations and working himself up into such a state of blind rage that I determined not to let him out of my sight until he should have become calmer. If Lady Bracknell had made her appearance just then, I don't know what catastrophe might have happened.

But the storm soon spent itself. Presently he came and sat down beside me, saying quietly, "That Frenchman behaved rather well, I think."

"Well, yes," I agreed, "I think he did. He is a gentleman, and he will hold his tongue; but I suspect that you won't see him at your house any more."

"Hardly! For the matter of that, I sha'n't have a house much longer. I'm utterly smashed, and I suppose every stick in my possession will be sold up. Her ladyship will be a pleasant sort of companion to face grinding poverty with, won't she? I expect she'll go back to her father, though. After all that has happened, I don't see that I am bound to go on living with her. Well, what are you making grimaces at? You think it's a case of the pot calling the kettle black, perhaps? I'm black enough, goodness knows! but you yourself said just now that you didn't believe I had sunk to her depth of infamy. I allowed her to have her own way with regard to Beauchamp, which, if you like, was not pretty behavior; but she represented to me that the young fool was mad about her, that he would never marry Mildred, and that, for poor little Sunning's sake, it would be a thousand pities to let that huge fortune slip between our fingers. She didn't put it quite so coarsely as that; she can express herself in a very pleasant and convincing sort of way when she chooses, and I dare say I wasn't unwilling to be convinced." Bracknell paused for a moment and sighed. "You remember what I said to you the day my poor little man died," he went on presently. "I haven't been able to endure the sight of her since then, and I haven't cared two straws how she amused herself or what her plots or plans might be. It was all one to me. But I never suspected her of anything so fiendish as compassing a friend's death in order to get hold of his money. No, by Jove! I never suspected her of that. I shall tell Beauchamp about it."

"I think you had better not," I said.

"I shall, though," he returned; "it's the least I can do. If that doesn't cure him, nothing will; and I owe it to him to do my best to cure him. I shouldn't be surprised if he went off and married Mildred, after all."

"It would be a fitting conclusion to this highly creditable business," I could not help remarking. "Shall you urge Lady Mildred to accept him now?"

"No," answered Bracknell shortly, "I am not going to urge anybody to do anything; they may muddle it out among them. As for me, about the best thing I could do would be to put a bullet into my head. I am sick of all this!"

Thereupon he got up and strode away, leaving me not altogether dissatisfied with my evening's work. "There will at least be no duel now," thought I to myself. "Hilda's machinations have ended in a complete fiasco; and, unless I am very much mistaken, she is about to pass through the most uncomfortable quarter of an hour of her ill spent life."

CHAPTER XVI.

Murder, the proverb tells us, will out; and although, of course, we do not know how many murders have remained undiscovered, appearances seem to lend support to the theory. In like manner, I have always observed that anything in the shape of a scandal is sure to become public property, however much it may be to the interest of those concerned in it to keep their own counsel; and a very comforting thought this should be to the numerous persons who love a choice bit of scandal above everything. That De Vicuzac and Beauchamp had had a mortal quarrel; that they had been within an ace of slitting one another's weasands in the good old fashioned style; that they had only been pacified by the joint exertions of Lord Bracknell and the reader's humble servant; and that a scene of the most distressing and dramatic nature had taken place subsequently between Lady Bracknell and her incensed husband—these things were known all over the house before I left my bed room the next morning; and when I made my appearance I found my fellow guests upon the tiptoe of joyous excitement and curiosity. If they gained no further information from me, it was not for want of asking for it; nor, I imagine, would the appeased rivals have escaped cross-examination had not those gentlemen wisely sought safety in flight. They must have journeyed up to London by the early express together; and I should much have liked to hear what they conversed about by the way, but had no opportunity of making inquiries as to that until the whole subject had ceased to interest me.

However, that I may not seem to exalt myself unduly by affecting a superiority to the weaknesses of my neighbors, I will confess that I was most anxious to obtain some account of the lecture which Bracknell had doubtless administered to his wife: because I thought it likely that this had been expressed in fine, forcible English, such as one is always glad to listen to in these days of roundabout phrases and involved construction. My hostess, looking rather hard at me, informed me that the Bracknells were leaving that morning; so that I was obliged to bolt my breakfast in a terrible hurry. For, after all the trouble that I had taken in the matter, I should have been truly vexed had I been denied the satisfaction of seeing her ladyship's face before she departed.

As it fell out, I was privileged not only to see her face but to hear her voice; and I don't know when I have enjoyed anything more than the interview of ten minutes or so which she was pleased to accord to me in the conservatory, where I discovered her. A deeply discomfited woman was she that day, and bitter were the reproaches with which she assailed me.

"This has been your doing from first to last!" she exclaimed. "All the misery and disgrace that may come of it will lie at your door."

And when I replied that I accepted the whole responsibility and gloried in it, she fairly lost her temper—a thing that was not usual with her—declaring that that only showed what an empty headed, conceited idiot I was. "You think yourself so wise that you must needs have a finger in every one's business. I should very much like to know whom you flatter yourself that you have benefited this time! Not your friend, Jim Leigh, at all events; for, mark my words, Mr. Beauchamp will go straight off and propose to Mildred now. I need not tell you that she will accept him. For all her demure airs, she knows the value of a large income as well as anybody. As for me, you have certainly done me an ill turn, if that is any satisfaction to you—which I suppose it is. For the last five or six years I have shown you every possible civility; I have had you to dinner again and again when you bored me to death, and I have introduced you into lots of good houses which you know very well that you would never have entered but for me. Naturally, therefore, you hate me. Why you should hate Bracknell I don't know; but you have very effectually ruined him. Alfred Beauchamp's marriage means bankruptcy to him—neither more nor less than that."

She must have been very angry to use such candor. "You admit then, dear Lady Bracknell," I observed, "that your purpose was to improve the family prospects by getting Alfred Beauchamp killed out of the way."

"I admit no such thing," she returned, "and I defy you to produce one atom of proof that I wanted him to fight M. de Vieuzac. I will admit that I flirted with him. If that shocks you, you are welcome to be shocked. It don't shock Bracknell, who knew quite well what I was doing and why I did it. That much he couldn't deny last night, in spite of all his raving and storming."

AT HYMEN'S ALTAR.

Clergymen Busy Performing the Marriage Ceremony.

Social circles have been agitated this week by the number of weddings which have taken place, and are to take place. Yesterday was the favorite day.

EMMERSON-WELLS.

At 3 30 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon Mr. James T. Emmerson and Miss Lou Wells, daughter of Mr. A. S. Wells, were united in the bonds of matrimony. The ceremony took place at the residence of the bride's father, Dublin treet, the Rev. F. H Wallace, M.A., B.D., being the officiating clergyman. The bride received a large number of very beautiful presents from friends. She had been a member of the choir of the George Street Methodist Church for about nine years, and the Trustees of the church showed their appreciation of her services by sending her a beautiful parlor lamp with garnet bowl and gold mountings, a hall lamp with a very handsome etched globe and also with gold mountings, and a beautiful toilet set, all procured at China Hall. The present was accompanied by a letter from Mr. W. J. Mason on behalf of the Trustees. Mr. Emmerson is a well-known and popular young man, and the best wishes of a host of friends go with the happy couple. They departed of the 5.52 Canadian Pacific train for Toronto, intending to proceed from there for a trip down the lake and the St. Lawrence.

JOHNSTON-STEPHENS.

The residence of Mr. J. H. Stephens, sr., on Sherbrooke street, was the scene of another pleasant event on Wednesday evening. The Rev. I Tovell, pastor of the Charlotte Street Church, united in marriage Mr. Alf. J. Johnston and Miss Grace R. Stephens. The popularity of the bride was attested by a large number of handsome presents. She had been a member of the choir of the Charlotte Street Church and later of St. Paul's Church, and frequently gave her services as a vocalist in church and other entertainments. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston commence life together with strong wishes for their happiness.

DAWSON-STOCK.

On the same evening Mr. Joseph W. Dawson, South Monaghan, and Miss Emma Stock, eldest daughter of Mr. Wm. Stock, were joined in wedlock at the residence of the bride's father. The Rev. Benj. Greatrix, of Fraserville, performed the ceremony in the presence of about forty friends of the couple. Miss Minnie Stock, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and Mr. Harry Dawson supported his cousin, the bridegroom. After the ceremony the couple and the friends present were entertained at tea, after which Mr. and Mrs. Dawson departed on the Grand Trunk train for Port Hope to take a trip to the Thousand Islands and Montreal. The bride was the recipient of a large number of well assorted and beautiful presents.

LONG—PALMER.

Bloor Street Church, Toronto, was the scene of another interesting event on Wednesday afternoon, in which one of Peterborough's merchants was one of the most interested parties. Mr. James Long, of the firm of Long Bros., was united in marriage to Miss Maggie E. Palmer, of Moscow, Addington County. The officiating clergyman was the pastor of the church, the Rev. T. W. Jolliffe, Grand Chaplain of the Order of Oddfellows. The ceremony was witnessed by a few friends of the groom from Peterborough, friends of the bride and others. Mr. and Mrs. Long departed to-day for Niagara, to view the sights of the great wonder and to take a trip through Rochester and cities east, returning by Kingston. Mr. Long's friends in Peterborough extend hearty congratulations and wish him and Mrs. Long a long and happy life.

DUNFORD-MANN.

On Tuesday evening Mr. Henry G. Dunford and Miss Victoria E. Mann, second youngest daughter of Mr. Stephen Mann, were matrimonially made one at the Parsonage of the George Street Methodist Church, the Rev. F. H. Wallace, M.A., B.D., performing the ceremony. The young couple enter life with the congratulations and best wishes of their friends.

IRVINE-HARMER.

The residence of Mr. Thomas Harmer, South Ward, was the scene of a similar happy event on Wednesday evening, when Mr. James Irvine and Miss Annie Harmer were married by the Rev. J. C. Wilson, pastor of the Mark Street Methodist Church, Ashburnham. Congratulations and good wishes are extended.

MAGILL-STEWART.

The Rev. Wm. Bennett, of Peterborough, officiated at another wedding on Wednesday afternoon, the contracting parties being Mr. James Henry Magill, of Manvers and Miss Essie Stewart, of Cavan. The happy couple came to town to depart on a tour.

THE CEMETERY.

Improvements Made During the Summer at this Beautiful Place.

It is a pleasure each year to visit the Little Lake Cemetery and notice the improvements that are made in it in various ways. Each summer Superintendent Kelly is busy in adding to the beauties of the beautiful place—a work he well knows how to do. This year his attention has, with the exception of the usual work of trimming, watering, etc., been given principally to the ground added to the cemetery last year. Six acres were purchased, which, with the ground that formerly formed the cemetery, make a burial place fifty acres in extent.

One of the first things that met the reporter's eye was a new boulevard on Haggart street, the western boundary of the cemetery. It is fourteen feet deep, and when completed, and covered with grass, it will be very beautiful. The boulevard is now completed about half the distance between Crescent street and the southern boundary of the cemetery.

A block in the new ground containing a hundred lots has been graded, in addition to what was graded last year. A margin of several feet has been left on each side of Ware avenue, a little lower than the level of the lots, in which trees have been planted. A border of sod has been placed around the block and the whole seeded. Another block of one hundred lots is being cleared and graded. Considerable earth will have to be removed, it being necessary in some places to cut it down two or three feet, and a number of stumps, as well as large stones, have been taken out, but care is taken to preserve trees. This block takes in the ground on which stood McGowan's old shanty, a building which for years stood at the boundary fence of the cemetery. This spot is one of the best parts of the whole cemetery.

The driveways or avenues have been levelled and cleaned up and are splendid drives. On each side of the avenues surface drains have been constructed of stones, the loose stones gathered on the ground being used. From near the fountain to the main entrance a wide drain similarly constructed has been laid, the stones being laid in Portland cement. Two thousand lineal feet of this drainage has been put in. A walk has been cut and graded from the main entrance along the boundary to the entrance gate at Ware street.

The addition of the new ground necessitated an extension of the waterworks system. It will be remembered that the power is furnished by a windmill. Over two thousand feet of water pipes have been laid and eighteen hydrants have been put in. The extension of the waterworks was a great boon, as the hot, dry weather was very trying on the trees and grass.

A large number of trees have been planted, including soft and hard maple, elm, spruce, black walnut, cut leaf birch, mountain ash, wire leaf maple and red cedar, as well as shrubs of different kinds. The trees have been set out in straight rows, each kind forming one row. In all five hundred trees have been planted, and they have all done well except a few cut leaf birch and red cedar. A cedar hedge has been planted on each side of the driveway leading from the main entrance.

Superintendent Kelly's house has received some attention this summer. Buttresses of stone and brick have been built at the north end and Mr. Kelly has painted the whole house, shingled the roof and otherwise improved the building. The buttresses were rendered necessary, he believes, by water washing down against the foundation and he has constructed drains, laid in cement, to carry it off.

NOTES.

The vault has been repaired and the front wall pointed.

A new chimney has been built on the Cemetery Chapel.

A number of hitching posts, ornamentally turned, placed in the boulevard, are convenient and rather add to the good appearance of the place.

Several willows have been planted by Mr. Kelly on Crescent street on the shore of the Little Lake. A row of willows planted along this street would, as can be seen by a glance at the willows in the cemetery, in a few years make it a beautiful drive.

The flower beds look fresh and bright yet, and show evidence of careful attention. A square of grass on the slope from the main entrance shows the letters "L. L. C." (Little Lake Cemetery) in flowers. The flowers for the beds were given by Mr. F. Mason and Mr. A. Blade.

Ware street, the next one south of Crescent street, has been graded to the cemetery. There is a large entrance gate at the end of this street.

The whole cemetery, although the leaves are changing color and falling, retains its summer beauty, the flowers and plants in the lots still being fresh, and the grass, shrubbery, drives and walks being as usual carefully attended to.

THE MAIL'S CONFESSED AIM.

IT is well that the eyes of the people of Canada should be opened to the real aim of the advocates of Commercial to be followed by Political Annexation. In the United States the journals, and the leaders of the movement when speaking on the platform, do not hesitate to show that they mean commercial supremacy and political union But these journals are seen by comparatively few Canadians, and the same leaders when in Canada, following Mr. Butterworth's advice not to offend our loyalty by talking yet of the annexation that Commercial Union is intended to bring about, pretend that it is simply a commercial question.

Thus the people of Canada are being deliberately deceived, but fortunately conspirators not infrequently forget the part they are playing and betray their object, and it is so in this case. The Toronto Mail quotes and adopts as the foundation of its argument against closer trade relations with the rest of the British Empire and in favor of the United States, the following statement by Mr. Andrew Carnegie, the Pittsburg millionaire iron master:—

"Any discrimination against one country in favour of another must partake of the nature of an offensive act and cause a rupture of cordial relations."

Yet the Mail is employing all its energies to pursuade the people of Canada to discriminate "against one country in favour of another"—against the rest of the British Empire in favour of foreigners. Those who have watched the course of the Mail must have been persuaded that it is working for the disintegration of the Dominion and the disruption of the Empire, but now it has put its meaning beyond a doubt. It boldly advocates that the people of Canada shall commit what it characterises as "an offensive act" against our follow countrymen, and thus cause a "rupture of cordial relations" with them.

Who will follow the Mail and its associates; who?

A FISHERY QUESTION.

Newfoundland Anxious about Her Herrings on the French Coast.

ST. John's Nfld., Sept. 13.—The grand jury of Bay St. Georges has brought in a strong presentment touching the probably disastrous consequence of the threatened competition of the French in the herring fishery in which 200 bankers were likely to be engaged next spring, and desiring to be informed if the bait act applied to subjects on this coast. Justice Pinsent commented at length upon the presentment and upon notifications of the French commanders, brought under his notice and repudiated the assumption of the French that the investure of British official authority on this coast was irregular. His Lordship held that the provisions of the bait act applied to all other subjects but explained there was nothing to prevent the issue of licenses to residents of this coast, a course which would avert evil consequences the jury apprehended, without injury to the rest of the colony and would tend to preserve harmony between the French and English subjects on this coast.

SACRIFICING OUR INDEPENDENCE.

It is not pretended, even by the advocates of Commercial Union, in their addresses on the other side of the line, that we should have the slightest voice in the framing of the common tariff we should be bound to accept for the supposed advantage of more intimate commercial relations and we should be compelled to sacrifice the position we have attained by great sacrifice of practical independence.—Sherbrooke Gazette.

YOUNG CONSERVATIVES.

Second Day of the Convention—The Officers and Resolutions.

TORONTO, Sept. 15.—Pressing public business kept Sir John Macdonald in Ottawa yesterday, and in consequence the banquet that was to have been held last evening was postponed. The convention assembled at 11 o'clock and proceeded to permanently organize by electing the following officers:—

Hon. Presidents—The Right Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald and W. R. Meredith, M.P.P.

President—J. A. Worrell, Toronto.

Vice-Presidents—J. A. Scott, Kincardine; J. A. McGillivray, Uxbridge; J. R. Esmonde, Ottawa.

Secretary-Treasurer—W. D. MacPherson, Toronto.

Assistant Secretaries—George Howe, Ottawa; J. L. Campbell, Simcoe; S. Hughes, Lindsay.

A number of members were chosen to act on the Executive Committee, among whom was Mr. Geo. W. Hatton, of Peterborough.

The following resolutions were adopted:

That this convention desires to express the loyalty of the Young Liberal-Conservatives of Ontario to the institutions of this country, and their firm adherence to British connection, and truly pledges itself to resist any attempts to alter the one or weaken the other.

That, as Canadians, we point with pride and satisfaction to the immense public works which have been constructed, and to the rapid strides of development which the country has made under the public-spirited and progressive policy of the present Government.

We point with still greater pride to the small extent to which the burdens of the people have been increased by carrying out successfully such a progressive policy, and beg to express the hope that in the future, as in the past, the Government may, while pushing forward the development and settlement of the country, exercise a due regard to economy.

That, inas much as it has been found that the exercise by local bodies, of the fullest powers in the management of affairs which do not affect the country at large, contributes greatly to the happiness and well-being of a people and tends to develop the principles of self-government, we view with disapproval and alarm the course which the present Government of Ontario has adopted, of centralizing power in itself, and thereby prejudicially affecting the dignity, and lessening the power of usefulness, of Municipal Councils.

That this convention approves of the steps which are being taken to establish a newspaper in Toronto, which will advocate the principles of the Liberal-Conservative party.

That we view with apprehension the increase in the Provincial expenditure, while the revenue remains almost stationary, and we deprecate the policy of the Ontario Government in maintaining an apparent revenue by selling Provincial assets, and entering the proceeds as income.

That in the opinion of this convention the policy of protection to our native industries which has been advocated and brought to practical issue by the Liberal-Conservative party of Canada, is deserving of the support of every young Liberal Conservative, as it has received the support of the Liberal-Conservative party in the past three elections, and the success of the Canadian Pacific Railway, the latest evidence of which is the grant by the Imperial Government to the Canadian Pacific steamship line to the east, thus connecting all parts of the Empire, is evidence of the broad statesmanship of John A. Macdonald and his Government, the faith of Canadians in Conservative principles and institutions, and the genius and energy of the people of this Dominion.

That this Association of Young Conservatives, inspired by love and loyalty to Britain's greatest Queen, take this opportunity of expressing their gratitude to kind Providence for having spared her useful life to this jubilee year, breathing the prayer and inspired with the hope that she may long live to grace the throne of a united empire in the conscious possession and enjoyment of the love and loyalty of a contented people.

Several speeches were delivered by prominent delegates. A constitution for local associations was adopted, and Toronto was chosen as the next place of meeting, the date being the second Tuesday in February.

The convention concluded by the delegates singing the National Anthem and cheering for Sir John Macdonald, Mr. Meredith and the President.

SAD HEARTS BY THE SEA.

Fishermen's Losses in the Late Gales—Sharks Feeding on the Bodies.

HALIFAX, Sept. 13.—Captain Goodich, of the schooner Willie McGowan, at Shelburne, from Grand Banks, says there will be hundreds of sad hearts in New England and the Provinces when the fishermen's muster roll is called this season. While off Liverpool yesterday he spoke the banker Harold whose skipper, Captain Lyons, reported having passed many derelict and capsized vessels on his way home from the banks, whose crews must have perished during the great storm. Captain Lyons says one of the most heartrending spectacles he ever witnessed on "that race-course of the winds, the grand banks," was that presented on board the battered hulk of a fishing vessel which was thrown upon her beam ends by the violence of the sea and was aimlessly drifting at will of the wild waves. Skipper Lyons boarded the craft with difficulty, but found no sign of life about her decks. Peering down the skylight of the cabin, which was out of the water, he beheld a sickening sight. A number of dead fishermen were floating about in the wash of the sea while several small sharks were tearing their limbs asunder and feeding voraciously on their flesh. The sight made Lyons' blood freeze, but he could render no assistance in rescuing the bodies nor could he get them out of the cabin and sink them in the ocean, and was compelled to leave them a prey to the ravenous sharks. The skipper says that not half of the disasters resulting from the storm have yet been reported. Advices from St. Pierre, Mig., give details of terrible disasters which overtook the French fishing fleet in the gales of the 20th, 27th and 29th ult., and 3rd inst. One hundred vessels were demoralized and fifty lives lost. Scores of fishermen were also seriously injured, many having arms and legs broken. The schooner St. Pierre was lost with all hands. The fishing season has ended disastrously to the French. The catch is one third below that of last year. The losses of gear, &c., incurred during the gale were enormous, added to which is the fact that the distressed vessels lose a month of September fishing. These things have combined to already advance the price of codfish fifteen per cent. at St. Pierre.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

From Our Own Correspondent.

A FREAK AMONG FISH.—Three of our worthy villagers who were down Pigeon River returned on Saturday night, Sept 3rd, bringing with them some twenty beautiful 'lunge, which they were successful in hauling in, and by which they have established more than an ordinary name for trolling. But though they were successful in getting the fish to bite at their glittering baits, and thereby becoming caught, it is very doubtful if they knew just where to hit a 'lunge, so that it would not wriggle off after it had been taken in, for 'lunge have been known to jump three feet out of the water, or jump into a boat, or even jump out of a boat after being taken in; but these 'lunge, after they were landed safely, as the anglers thought, in a nice pile here on the side of the street, actually slipped off and were hid under a board in a neighboring garden. When the proud fishermen came to make "the divide," then there was astonishment depicted on each angler's countenance, and there was hurrying to and fro; loud suppositions were supposed, and even accusations were made, but of course no person saw those fish go; oh, no; no person saw them go; but the villagers who had not retired to their peaceful slumbers turned out and a general search was made for the escaping fish, and the result was that the "beauties" were found in a neat pile under a board in a garden near by.

SALE.—Mr. Richard Thexton's great sale of stock and implements is to come off on the 19th Sept., commencing at 11 a.m. MR. Thexton and his family are bound for Dakota in a few weeks.

OFF TO EXHIBITION.—A number of our villagers are off to the exhibition in Toronto this week.

Purely Ecclesiastical.

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—Archbishop Lynch has sent the following letter to Mr. Stewart Lyon:—

DEAR SIR,—In answer to your questions I say:

1st.—Henry George's doctrine or book has not as yet been pronounced on by the Holy See.

2nd.—Dr. McGlynn's excommunication was occasioned by his persistent refusal to obey the command of the Holy See, to which he promised obedience as a priest and as an Alumnus of the College of the Propaganda at Rome. Dr. McGlynn's case is purely ecclesiastical, not political.

Yours,
THE ARCHBISHOP OF TORONTO.

Fatal Forest Fire.

KINGSTON, Sept. 13.—Some of the land at Violet, over which bush fires swept recently, belonged to Sir Richard Cartwright. On Wednesday and Thursday about 150 men were out fighting the flames and preventing them from consuming valuable buildings and their contents. The fire at Bickness Corners swept over the country as far as Milton, burning woods and fences and three houses. A blind man named Davy perished in the flames.

The Anarchists Must Die.

OTTAWA, Ill., Sept. 14.—The Supreme Court, this morning, delivered an opinion on the Anarchist case, affirming the judgment of the court below. The execution is to take place Nov. 11, between 9 and 4 o'clock.

A Railway Catastrophe.

LEADVILLE, Col., Sept. 14.—A construction train on the Midland Railway was derailed near Lake Ivanhoe yesterday, killing four men and seriously injuring sixty-one.

TO BE ENFORCED.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The Standard says:—"The Government will make a fatal blunder if they defeat the purpose of the law by converting imprisonment under the Crimes Act, or any other act, into a term of honorable and easy detention. Mr. O'Brien claims to be an elegant recluse."

END OF THE SESSION.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The session of Parliament practically closed last night. The Ministerial speeches leave no doubt of the Government's intention to resort to a rigorous application of the Crimes Act, and a merciless exercise of its powers.

MONEY FOR O'BRIEN.

DUBLIN, Sept. 14.—Mr. O'Brien has received £100 from America, which he intends to distribute among the relatives of victims of the recent affray at Mitchellstown.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The English Consul at Tokio reports that the Canadian Pacific steamers will before long attract not only the bulk of the tea hitherto taken by the Suez Canal, but also a fair share of the general export trade hitherto passing through San Francisco.

NEW LABOR PARTY.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—A meeting of the new National Labor Party was held last night and many addresses were made. This party was initiated by the Trades Congress, and it is announced that it is not connected in any way with any trades unions, but intends to co-operate with them as far as possible. In their platform the new party demands adult suffrage, that every man shall have one vote, that the State shall remunerate members of Parliament for their services, free education, land reform and poor law reform. They advocate the maintenance of free trade, but insist upon the abolition of State-paid bounties. Finally they demand Home Rule and Local Government reform and religious equality.

HOME RULE DEPUTATION.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—A large deputation of Home Rule members have left for Ireland. They intend to make speeches throughout Ireland. Great curiosity awaits the outcome of this project.

A Great Strike.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 14.—A despatch from Hazelton, Pa., says:—By the strike of the miners and laborers of the Lehigh and lower anthracite regions for an advance of 15 percent in their wages fully 5,000 are idle. All day yesterday and to-day the streets of the town were crowded with idle men, and the situation is being discussed on all sides. The miners quit work last Saturday evening with a determination not to return to their field of labor until their demand is granted. A more determined set of men has never been seen, and not a few have been heard to say that they are prepared to remain idle six months, if necessary, and not be in want.

Discrimination Protested Against.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The board of managers of the Produce Exchange to-day adopted resolutions protesting against the action of the railroad companies in giving lower rates on grain, provisions and lard to European and continental points than to seaboard cities, thus discriminating against our own country. A committee was appointed to lay the matter before the interstate commerce commissioners with a request that they enforced the law.

TREATY MAKING.

THERE seems to be considerable misapprehension as to the treaty-making power in Great Britain, Canada and the United States respectively. From the mistaken or imperfect views held by many on this subject, fallacious arguments are sometimes drawn.

In the Three Kingdoms the treaty-making power, as is usual in monarchies, resides in the Crown. But under the constitutional system that has grown up and now prevails in our Mother Country, this means practically that the power is exercised on the advice of the Administration, and thus indirectly by the people whom they represent, Parliament not having a voice in treaty-making, though having some power to check by means of a vote of censure or refusal of supplies. It follows that British ambassadors or commissioners bind the country by their decisions. The Ministry appointing them cannot repudiate them, and even a succeeding Administration feels bound to respect the pledged faith of the country. A refusal to ratify a treaty is, therefore, almost unknown, though the right may be exercised in exceptional and flagrant cases. For instance, the ratification of the Ashburton treaty might nave been refused if the fact had been known before, instead of afterwards, that we had been robbed of our rightful territory through the deliberate and dishonest suppression of evidence by the United States. Again, the Alabama award might have been rejected if it had been known at the time that by fraudulent claims and false pretences the United States was obtaining payment for asserted damages, for which, with the most liberal interpretation, they have never to this day been able to find claimants.

In Canada there is no direct treaty-making power. The chief obstacle is that nations refuse to deal with the authorities of portions of other nations, declining to recognize internationally any but the central authority. But the custom has grown up of the Crown appointing Canadian representatives when Canada is specially interested, and making the decision subject to the consent of the Dominion Parliament. This rule is certain to be observed for the future, as such concessions cannot be recalled, though they may be extended.

In the United States the treaty making power virtually resides in the Senate, the Executive having no power to bind the nation without its consent, This was exemplified recently in the conduct of the Senate, which contemptuously repudiated the hope held out to us by the President that there should be a joint commission to settle the fishery question, this repudiation of the bargain taking place after receiving the benefit of free fishing last year in our waters, a concession granted by Canada in consideration of the dishonored bargain made by the President. The Senate does not hold that the Executive or any authority but itself can pledge the good faith of the nation.

Briefly then the treaty making power is practically as follows:—

In the Three Kingdoms and all parts of the British Empire not granted autonomous powers, it is exercised by the Crown on the advice of its responsible advisers, acting through diplomatic representatives.

In Canada it is exercised by the Crown acting in the same manner, with the Canadian Ministry also having a voice, and the decision being subject to the assent of the Dominion Parliament.

In the United States it is virtually exercised by the Senate who will not be bound by the action of any other national authority.

The differences in the manner of conducting international negotiations and making international agreements, have an especial interest in view of the proposed joint commission on the fishery question. It will be seen that the demand made by some is unreasonable, that the United States Senate should bind itself before hand to accept the decision of the Commission, unless indeed the Dominion Parliament was similarly pledged. On the other hand it would be obviously absurd for us to enter into negotiations, with the United States in the position of being a stranger to the whole proceedings, while we are bound at least by a decent respect for the national faith plighted by the constitutional authorities. Such an arrangement would be one-sided and unfair. To place both parties on an equal footing as nearly as possible, the United States Senate should give its assent to the commission and to the choice of its commissioners, so that it would at least have some responsibility for them and not be free to say the commisaioners were simply private persons of whom they knew nothing, the mere agents of the President, whom the majority of the Senate are more inclined to thwart than support, even when he is acting for the nation. Until this equitable arrangement is made we should in self-protection refuse to commence any negotiations by a so-called joint commission, in which the representatives of one party would not be validly commissioned.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

GENERAL.

Writs for new elections to the Quebec Legislature for the three vacant constituencies of Maskinonge, Shefford and Rimouski will be issued immediately.

Application was made at Osgoode hall on Tuesday, on behalf of Henry Taylor, ex-president of the Bank of London, for an order to discharge the writ of capias under which he is at present confined in the London gaol. The motion was enlarged for a week.

Mr. Perley, chief engineer of the Public Works Department, has recommended the construction of a boom across Lake St. Louis to protect Montreal from spring floods. The work, which is estimated to cost about $65,000, will be commenced almost immediately.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills, Salts, &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists.

Mr. Carling, Minister of Agriculture, has instructed Mr. McEachren, chief veterinary inspector of the Department, to ascertain the exact nature of the reported outbreak of a contagious disease among cattle in Nova Scotia, which is believed to have been greatly exaggerated.

Give them a Chance.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain

DON'T COUGH!

But, Seriously, do you Catch on?

Well, the Great-and-only-Original-Terror to High-Priced-Clothiers, Wonderful-Forepaw dealer, in other words, teddy Cough (Now bring along the Babies, take the name and the gold dollar and be Happy.) has issued a Challenge. He has the war paint on, and terror and destruction will come to any of the Baby Clothiers of Peterborough who will pretend to do business in opposition to this wonder of the 19th Century. He says he is TRUTHFUL! Well, let us see. He states positively that SHEPPARD is lying when he says that he got Bags from Peterboro's Great Cheapside. He says that he never advertises that which he will not carry out to the latter. READ CAREFULLY THE FOLLOWING, and see the position it puts this oracle of truth in—Mr. Teddy Cough:

37 Vic. 37. C. D.

I HENRY SHEPPARD, of the Town of Peterborough, in the County of Peterborough, do Solemnly Declare that on Saturday evening last past two young men came into my place of business and stated to me that they had one deal with Gough but never wanted another. One said "I purchased goods from Gough, (meaning I suppose the store) and he guaranteed me that he would refund me the money if I "was not satisfied or words to that effect. I had witness to prove this. Afterwards I went back with the goods, stated that I was not "satisfied and wanted my money. He would not give it me. I told him I could make him return me the money if I wanted to, as I "had witness. I did not get the money, so Gough got the money and the clothing too, but, I have the experience."

On Wednesday, August, 31st, 1887, a responsible farmer came into my store and inspected my Grain Bags. He purchased two dozen bags of good quality, looking at the same time at the cheap bags selling at $1.75 per dozen. but, said he, would not buy them for his own use. About two hours after leaving my store he returned and said "I want two dozen of your cheap bags now" and stated that they were not for himself. He afterwards stated to me in the presence of a witness that he took the two dozen cheap bags in the store of one, Gough, a Clothier on George Street, Peterborough, and was paid $3.50 for the same by the said Gough, or one of his salesmen.

And I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the Act passed in the Thirty-seventh year of Her Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act for the suppression of voluntary and extra-judicial oaths."

HENRY SHEPPARD.

Declared before me at the Town of Peterborough, in the County of Peterborough, this 13th day of Sept., in the year of our Lord 1887.

E. A. PECK, A Commissioner, &c.

The above has the contrary ring of truth, seeing that in each case four reputable witnesses can be found to corroborate the above sworn statement, and, when it is necessary, more will follow. Sheppard has no desire to bring any man's business in such a light before the public But the Back-bone talked about will never be found wanting in Sheppard, and just at the right time and place, Mr. Forepaw dealer may need his $500 or $1,000 to prove his assertions.

So that, at the present moment, Peterboro's great Cheapside will go on selling the Cheapest Clothing in Peterboro' though it raises the wool on this only Original Cough. Sheppard has no brother-in-laws in Muskoka to sell goods to, neither has he relatives or any other person, who at any time endorsed his paper to the extent of one cent. He has, though his stock is small, $10,000 in assets over liabilities, and just so long as this state of affairs exists he will pledge himself to the public to give entire satisfaction.

You can save money on any purchase. Sheppard has reduced Men's $10.00 Suits to $6.00, Men's $15.00 Suits to $10.00. Look out for Slashing Reductions in Men's and Boy's Clothing.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

"Now, Harry," said Bracknell, "perhaps you'll explain yourself. Of course I can guess what those two idiots quarreled about, but it seems to me that 'infamous wretch' is pretty strong language for a cautious fellow like you to use. Between you and me, what did you mean by it?"

Perhaps I was hardly justified in telling him, but at that moment I really did not see for whose sake I was bound to be reticent. To my mind there was nothing extraordinary in such a woman as Hilda wishing to get Beauchamp out of the way and step into his shoes. It has always seemed to me that murderers are only regarded with greater abhorrence and punished more severely than other criminals because we all have such a strong dislike to the idea of being murdered, and that the man who slanders or cheats me is morally just about as culpable as the man who knocks me on the head. Therefore, when I had related the events of the day to Bracknell, I was a good deal astonished at the effect produced upon him by my narrative. He strode up and down the room, muttering furious imprecations and working himself up into such a state of blind rage that I determined not to let him out of my sight until he should have become calmer. If Lady Bracknell had made her appearance just then, I don't know what catastrophe might have happened.

But the storm soon spent itself. Presently he came and sat down beside me, saying quietly, "That Frenchman behaved rather well, I think."

"Well, yes," I agreed, "I think he did. He is a gentleman, and he will hold his tongue; but I suspect that you won't see him at your house any more."

"Hardly! For the matter of that, I sha'n't have a house much longer. I'm utterly smashed, and I suppose every stick in my possession will be sold up. Her ladyship will be a pleasant sort of companion to face grinding poverty with, won't she? I expect she'll go back to her father, though. After all that has happened, I don't see that I am bound to go on living with her. Well, what are you making grimaces at? You think it's a case of the pot calling the kettle black, perhaps? I'm black enough, goodness knows! but you yourself said just now that you didn't believe I had sunk to her depth of infamy. I allowed her to have her own way with regard to Beauchamp, which, if you like, was not pretty behavior; but she represented to me that the young fool was mad about her, that he would never marry Mildred, and that, for poor little Sunning's sake, it would be a thousand pities to let that huge fortune slip between our fingers. She didn't put it quite so coarsely as that; she can express herself in a very pleasant and convincing sort of way when she chooses, and I dare say I wasn't unwilling to be convinced." Bracknell paused for a moment and sighed. "You remember what I said to you the day my poor little man died," he went on presently. "I haven't been able to endure the sight of her since then, and I haven't cared two straws how she amused herself or what her plots or plans might be. It was all one to me. But I never suspected her of anything so fiendish as compassing a friend's death in order to get hold of his money. No, by Jove! I never suspected her of that. I shall tell Beauchamp about it."

"I think you had better not," I said.

"I shall, though," he returned; "it's the least I can do. If that doesn't cure him, nothing will; and I owe it to him to do my best to cure him. I shouldn't be surprised if he went off and married Mildred, after all."

"It would be a fitting conclusion to this highly creditable business," I could not help remarking. "Shall you urge Lady Mildred to accept him now?"

"No," answered Bracknell shortly, "I am not going to urge anybody to do anything; they may muddle it out among them. As for me, about the best thing I could do would be to put a bullet into my head. I am sick of all this!"

Thereupon he got up and strode away, leaving me not altogether dissatisfied with my evening's work. "There will at least be no duel now," thought I to myself. "Hilda's machinations have ended in a complete fiasco; and, unless I am very much mistaken, she is about to pass through the most uncomfortable quarter of an hour of her ill spent life."

CHAPTER XVI.

Murder, the proverb tells us, will out; and although, of course, we do not know how many murders have remained undiscovered, appearances seem to lend support to the theory. In like manner, I have always observed that anything in the shape of a scandal is sure to become public property, however much it may be to the interest of those concerned in it to keep their own counsel; and a very comforting thought this should be to the numerous persons who love a choice bit of scandal above everything. That De Vicuzac and Beauchamp had had a mortal quarrel; that they had been within an ace of slitting one another's weasands in the good old fashioned style; that they had only been pacified by the joint exertions of Lord Bracknell and the reader's humble servant; and that a scene of the most distressing and dramatic nature had taken place subsequently between Lady Bracknell and her incensed husband—these things were known all over the house before I left my bed room the next morning; and when I made my appearance I found my fellow guests upon the tiptoe of joyous excitement and curiosity. If they gained no further information from me, it was not for want of asking for it; nor, I imagine, would the appeased rivals have escaped cross-examination, had not those gentlemen wisely sought safety in flight. They must have journeyed up to London by the early express together; and I should much have liked to hear what they conversed about by the way, but had no opportunity of making inquiries as to that until the whole subject had ceased to interest me.

However, that I may not seem to exalt myself unduly by affecting a superiority to the weaknesses of my neighbors, I will confess that I was most anxious to obtain some account of the lecture which Bracknell had doubtless administered to his wife: because I thought it likely that this had been expressed in fine, forcible English, such as one is always glad to listen to in these days of roundabout phrases and involved construction. My hostess, looking rather hard at me, informed me that the Bracknells were leaving that morning; so that I was obliged to bolt my breakfast in a terrible hurry. For, after all the trouble that I had taken in the matter, I should have been truly vexed had I been denied the satisfaction of seeing her ladyship's face before she departed.

As it fell out, I was privileged not only to see her face but to hear her voice; and I don't know when I have enjoyed anything more than the interview of ten minutes or so which she was pleased to accord to me in the conservatory, where I discovered her. A deeply discomfited woman was she that day, and bitter were the reproaches with which she assailed me.

"This has been your doing from first to last!" she exclaimed. "All the misery and disgrace that may come of it will lie at your door."

And when I replied that I accepted the whole responsibility and gloried in it, she fairly lost her temper—a thing that was not usual with her—declaring that that only showed what an empty headed, conceited idiot I was. "You think yourself so wise that you must needs have a finger in every one's business. I should very much like to know whom you flatter yourself that you have benefited this time! Not your friend, Jim Leigh, at all events; for, mark my words, Mr. Beauchamp will go straight off and propose to Mildred now. I need not tell you that she will accept him. For all her demure airs, she knows the value of a large income as well as anybody. As for me, you have certainly done me an ill turn, if that is any satisfaction to you—which I suppose it is. For the last five or six years I have shown you every possible civility; I have had you to dinner again and again when you bored me to death, and I have introduced you into lots of good houses which you know very well that you would never have entered but for me. Naturally, therefore, you hate me. Why you should hate Bracknell I don't know; but you have very effectually ruined him. Alfred Beauchamp's marriage means bankruptcy to him—neither more nor less than that."

She must have been very angry to use such candor. "You admit then, dear Lady Bracknell," I observed, "that your purpose was to improve the family prospects by getting Alfred Beauchamp killed out of the way."

"I admit no such thing," she returned, "and I defy you to produce one atom of proof that I wanted him to fight M. de Vicuzac. I will admit that I flirted with him. If that shocks you, you are welcome to be shocked. It don't shock Bracknell, who knew quite well what I was doing and why I did it. That much he couldn't deny last night, in spite of all his raving and storming."

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

Is sold all over the world. It is far superior to plain Cod Liver Oil, palatable and easily digested. Dr. Martin Miles Stanton, Bury Bucks, Loudon, England, says: "I have prescribed Scott's Emulsion, and taken it myself. It is palatable, efficient, and can be tolerated by anyone, especially where cod liver oil itself cannot be borne. Put up in 50c. and $1 size.

Better to Whistle than Whine.

It went hard, during our recent Great Clearing Sale, to allow such elegant Goods go off at the Sacrificing Prices which they did. But we had to make room for our Fall importations; so, Out They Went!—"bag and baggage!"—and we have good reason to believe that 'tis better to Whistle than Whine.

Our Fall Goods are now coming in without interruption, and consist of the Choicest Selections of CLOTHS, from all Countries ever yet displayed in Peterborough.

OUR CUSTOM TAILORING DEPARTMENT

is in its full sway at present. Orders for FALL OVERCOATS and SUITS should now be placed in order to be ready for the cool and chilly days of Autumn and Fall.

AT HYMEN'S ALTAR.

Clergymen Busy Performing the Marriage Ceremony.

Social circles have been agitated this week by the number of weddings which have taken place, and are to take place. Yesterday was the favorite day.

EMMERSON-WELLS

At 3 30 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon Mr. James T. Emmerson and Miss Lou Wells, daughter of Mr. A. S. Wells, were united in the bonds of matrimony. The ceremony took place at the residence of the bride's father, Dublin treet, the Rev. F. H Wallace, M A., B.D., being the officiating clergyman. The bride received a large number of very beautiful presents from friends. She had been a member of the choir of the George Street Methodist Church for about nine years, and the Trustees of the church showed their appreciation of her services by sending her a beautiful parlor lamp with garnet bowl and gold mountings, a hall lamp with a very handsome etched globe and also with gold mountings, and a beautiful toilet set, all procured at China Hall. The present was accompanied by a letter from Mr. W. J. Mason on behalf of the Trustees. Mr. Emmerson is a well-known and popular young man, and the best wishes of a host of friends go with the happy couple. They departed of the 5.52 Canadian Pacific train for Toronto, intending to proceed from there for a trip down the lake and the St. Lawrence.

JOHNSTON-STEPHENS.

The residence of Mr. J. H. Stephens, sr., on Sherbrooke street, was the scene of another pleasant event on Wednesday evening. The Rev. I Tovell, pastor of the Charlotte Street Church, united in marriage Mr. Alf. J. Johnston and Miss Grace R. Stephens. The popularity of the bride was attested by a large number of handsome presents. She had been a member of the choir of the Charlotte Street Church and later of St. Paul's Church, and frequently gave her services as a vocalist in church and other entertainments. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston commence life together with strong wishes for their happiness.

DAWSON-STOCK.

On the same evening Mr. Joseph W. Dawson, South Monaghan, and Miss Emma Stock, eldest daughter of Mr. Wm. Stock, were joined in wedlock at the residence of the bride's father. The Rev. Benj. Greatrix, of Fraserville, performed the ceremony in the presence of about forty friends of the couple. Miss Minnie Stock, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and Mr. Harry Dawson supported his cousin, the bridegroom. After the ceremony the couple and the friends present were entertained at tea, after which Mr. and Mrs. Dawson departed on the Grand Trunk train for Port Hope to take a trip to the Thousand Islands and Montreal. The bride was the recipient of a large number of well assorted and beautiful presents.

LONG—PALMER.

Bloor Street Church, Toronto, was the scene of another interesting event on Wednesday afternoon, in which one of Peterborough's merchants was one of the most interested parties. Mr. James Long, of the firm of Long Bros., was united in marriage to Miss Maggie E. Palmer, of Moscow, Addington County. The officiating clergyman was the pastor of the church, the Rev. T. W. Joliffe, Grand Chaplain of the Order of Oddfellows. The ceremony was witnessed by a few friends of the groom from Peterborough, friends of the bride and others. Mr. and Mrs. Long departed to-day for Niagara, to view the sights of the great wonder and to take a trip through Rochester and cities east, returning by Kingston. Mr. Long's friends in Peterborough extend hearty congratulations and wish him and Mrs. Long a long and happy life.

DUNFORD-MANN.

On Tuesday evening Mr. Henry G. Dunford and Miss Victoria E. Mann, second youngest daughter of Mr. Stephen Mann, were matrimonially made one at the Parsonage of the George Street Methodist Church, the Rev. F. H. Wallace, M.A., B.D., performing the ceremony. The young couple enter life with the congratulations and best wishes of their friends.

IRVINE-HARMER.

The residence of Mr. Thomas Harmer, South Ward, was the scene of a similar happy event on Wednesday evening, when Mr. James Irvine and Miss Annie Harmer were married by the Rev. J. C. Wilson, pastor of the Mark Street Methodist Church, Ashburnham. Congratulations and good wishes are extended.

MAGILL-STEWART.

The Rev. Wm. Bennett, of Peterborough, officiated at another wedding on Wednesday afternoon, the contracting parties being Mr. James Henry Magill, of Manvers and Miss Essie Stewart, of Cavan. The happy couple came to town to depart on a tour.

An Invention.

A new kind of quilting frame, the invention of a workman in the factory, is being made at Mr. Forsyth's. It is a very convenient frame, solid and easily adjusted. The poles run through turned posts, and are held in place by wooden screws. The frame can be lengthened or shortened, and the work rolled up, at pleasure.

THE CEMETERY.

Improvements Made During the Summer at this Beautiful Place.

It is a pleasure each year to visit the Little Lake Cemetery and notice the improvements that are made in it in various ways. Each summer Superintendent Kelly is busy in adding to the beauties of the beautiful place—a work he well knows how to do. This year his attention has, with the exception of the usual work of trimming, watering, etc., been given principally to the ground added to the cemetery last year. Six acres were purchased, which, with the ground that formerly formed the cemetery, make a burial place fifty acres in extent.

One of the first things that met the reporter's eye was a new boulevard on Haggart street, the western boundary of the cemetery. It is fourteen feet deep, and when completed, and covered with grass, it will be very beautiful. The boulevard is now completed about half the distance between Crescent street and the southern boundary of the cemetery.

A block in the new ground containing a hundred lots has been graded, in addition to what was graded last year. A margin of several feet has been left on each side of Ware avenue, a little lower than the level of the lots, in which trees have been planted. A border of sod has been placed around the block and the whole seeded. Another block of one hundred lots is being cleared and graded. Considerable earth will have to be removed, it being necessary in some places to cut it down two or three feet, and a number of stumps, as well as large stones, have been taken out, but care is taken to preserve trees. This block takes in the ground on which stood McGowan's old shanty, a building which for years stood at the boundary fence of the cemetery. This spot is one of the best parts of the whole cemetery.

The driveways or avenues have been levelled and cleaned up and are splendid drives. On each side of the avenues surface drains have been constructed of stones, the loose stones gathered on the ground being used. From near the fountain to the main entrance a wide drain similarly constructed has been laid, the stones being laid in Portland cement. Two thousand lineal feet of this drainage has been put in. A walk has been cut and graded from the main entrance along the boundary to the entrance gate at Ware street.

The addition of the new ground necessitated an extension of the waterworks system. It will be remembered that the power is furnished by a windmill. Over two thousand feet of water pipes have been laid and eighteen hydrants have been put in. The extension of the waterworks was a great boon, as the hot, dry weather was very trying on the trees and grass.

A large number of trees have been planted, including soft and hard maple, elm, spruce, black walnut, cut leaf birch, mountain ash, wire leaf maple and red cedar, as well as shrubs of different kinds. The trees have been set out in straight rows, each kind forming one row. In all five hundred trees have been planted, and they have all done well except a few cut leaf birch and red cedar. A cedar hedge has been planted on each side of the driveway leading from the main entrance.

Superintendent Kelly's house has received some attention this summer. Buttresses of stone and brick have been built at the north end and Mr. Kelly has painted the whole house, shingled the roof and otherwise improved the building. The buttresses were rendered necessary, he believes, by water washing down against the foundation and he has constructed drains, laid in cement, to carry it off.

NOTES.

The vault has been repaired and the front wall pointed.

A new chimney has been built on the Cemetery Chapel.

A number of hitching posts, ornamentally turned, placed in the boulevard, are convenient and rather add to the good appearance of the place.

Several willows have been planted by Mr. Kelly on Crescent street on the shore of the Little Lake. A row of willows planted along this street would, as can be seen by a glance at the willows in the cemetery, in a few years make it a beautiful drive.

The flower beds look fresh and bright yet, and show evidence of careful attention. A square of grass on the slope from the main entrance shows the letters "L. L. C." (Little Lake Cemetery) in flowers. The flowers for the beds were given by Mr. F. Mason and Mr. A. Blade.

Ware street, the next one south of Crescent street, has been graded to the cemetery. There is a large entrance gate at the end of this street.

The whole cemetery, although the leaves are changing color and falling, retains its summer beauty, the flowers and plants in the lots still being fresh, and the grass, shrubbery, drives and walks being as usual carefully attended to.

EGGS.

THERE are, it is said, a hundred and one receipts for cooking eggs, but surely never before have they been cooked so thoroughly and diversely as by the Commercial Annexationists. At first its advocates said to the Canadian farmers "you export more than 14,000,000 dozen of eggs to the United States, and you are being robbed every year of the duty paid upon them." When gently reminded that there is no duty on eggs these schemers try another plan for making their omelet. "Yes," they say, "we were wrong when we said you were robbed of the amount of the duty, but see what a magnificent export you have, fourteen million dozen of eggs because they are free, and why should you not increase your export of other produce by making them free also?' There figures are not quite correct for less than thirteen million dozen of eggs are exported from Canada to the United States, but this is so unusually near the mark for these gentlemen that the cooking is hardly worth notice. What is more important is the fact that our export of eggs to our neighbor has under this free trade fallen off largely in four years, and the value per dozen has decreased 20 per cent., so this argument in favor of reciprocity is a boomerang. The truth is our eggs are required by our neighbors, not so much for food, but because the albumen is needed in large quantities for certain manufactures. They need our eggs and if there was a duty they would have to pay at least the larger portion of it, so they have taken it off.

The agitators do not confine their cookery to eggs or chicken in the shell, but pursue them when they are hatched. Their oracle, Mr. Wiman, again told our farmers they were robbed as to their spring chicken because "broilers" were sometimes worth $2.50 a pair in New York city, and they ought to get this price. Well Mr. Wiman is wrong again for there is no duty on spring chickens, so the duty cannot rob our farmers as it does not exist. The truth is that "broilers" are not worth $2.50 a pair even in the most aristocratic purveyor's of New York city, at the time when our farmers have spring chickens for sale, but only at such an early season that they have to be imported from the South or artificially incubated. Our farmers can get precisely the same wholesale price for their "broilers" as the farmers of the United States at an equal distance from a large city. They have a rather better profit in their local market now that they have a Canadian manufacturing population to supply, but the agitators wish our farmers to resign this advantage to the farmers of the United States.

These cookers of figures cannot successfully cook egg or broilers.

THE UNEARNED INCREMENT

Apart from the question of the correctness of Mr. George's theory that the unearned increment of the value of land should be public, not private property, how is it to be determined whether the increment is unearned or is the result of improvements by the occupant? If a settler buys two adjoining lots, puts up a farm house on one, a smaller house for his brother, to whom he pays wages, on the other, and cultivates both lots, the land is raised in value by the improvements, and we suppose the increment is earned. It, however, the two brothers have each taken one of the lots, each of them by his improvements will raise not only the value of his own lot, but of his neighbour's also. How is it to be determined what part of the increment is unearned and what part earned? Has the public any greater right in one case than in the other? And is not the mutual benefit given and received by two neighbours the same in principle if they are three or ten, or a hundred, or even a whole county? Will some admirer of the George theory please explain?

AFTER some silly abuse, original and quoted from the Mail, the Kingston Whig asks us what we think of Sir John saying the Government could not check Manitoba, and calls upon us to speak the truth though the heavens fall. Thus adjured we cannot keep silent, even though the truth is unpleasant to our contemporary. We think it either forged the words or uttered them knowing them to be a forgery, as they are not Sir John's. Nor did the Hon. Thos. White use them. We do not think the Winnipeg agitators have dealt honorably with the Manitobans in trying to get a road for the benefit of the city at the cost of the Province, and to its injury, in order to make Winnipeg a destributing centre, which the C.P.R. refused to do by a rate discriminating against other parts of the Province. The Manitobans do kick against this imposition, and the Winnipeg agitators silence them by means of sluggers and rotten eggs. We have answered in effect the other questions of the Whig, and will be glad to supply it with more information when required.

MR. MERCIER has succeeded in carrying Ottawa county by the most iniquitous devices. First he kept the great lumbermen quiet by threatening to raise the ground rents of their timber limits $3 a mile next month if they opposed his candidate, and then he lead away the numerous men they employ by raising the cry of "hangmen" against all who dared approve of the punishment of a criminal with a drop of French blood in his veins. Such is Reform electioneering!

THE absurdities in computing percentages are astonishing. We have Mayor Howland reported as saying that a decrease from 211 to 74 was a decrease of 150 per cent. Such a decrease would result in 105⅓ less than nothing. Of course the real decrease is a small fraction less than 65 per cent. How can 150 be taken from 100 and leave anything at all?

HOW THEY WILL DRESS.

A Couple of the New Canton Uniforms Arrive.

The Captain of Canton Peterborough No. 10 has received a couple of the new uniforms to be purchased for the chevaliers of the canton.

Commencing at the headdress: the undress cap is neat and tasty. It is made of black silk with the rim of gold and purple. The chapeau, or drill head dress, is very handsome. Two long white ostrich feathers sweep from the front to the rear, these being covered by a luxuriant purple one. The shape of the chapean is made of silk plush with end straps an inch and a quarter wide made of black silk ribbon. The tips of the chapeau are ornamented with bullion fringe and the sides bear emblems of the order, the wreath and crown, and cross and crook, standing on black velvet background.

The coat will be a single breasted black broadcloth frock, having an inch and a quarter standing collar. The shoulder knots are of corded gold, very rich in design and workmanship. Gilt buttons ornamented with cross and crown and wreath and crook form the fastening for the coat. A handsome cross belt, striped with gold and purple, carries the baldric, which folds within itself the gossomer cape.

The belt is similar in design but more ornamental. It is adorned with emblematic devices and is inscribed with the following mottoes: "Pax ant Bellum," "Justitia Umnersalis." The sword hangs from the belt. Its scabbard is of fine steel ornamented with gold. The sword blade is of the finest steel, and upon it will be emblazoned the name of the owner.

The trowsers will also be of black broadcloth.

The uniforms are exceedingly handsome and the appearance of Peterborough Canton No. 10 in them will be sure to create a sensation.

A meeting of the canton is to be held this evening to discuss a proposition which arrived to-day from army headquarters.

CONSUMPTIVES should try Allen's Lung Balsam; it can be had of any Druggist.

Married.

On Thursday evening the Rev. F. H. Wallace solemnized the bridals of Mr. S. English and Miss L. Lilly, youngest daughter of Mr. W. Lilly, both of town. The ceremony took place at the residence of the bride's father at eight o'clock. Miss Laura Goldie was the bridesmaid and Mr. John Brownlee the groomsman. After the ceremony the wedding guests and contracting parties, to the number of about forty, sat down to luncheon. The evening was most pleasantly spent. At a seasonable hour the bride and groom were escorted by a number of the guests to their home on Charlotte street. The wedding presents were very handsome, among them being four sets of China.

EXPLOSION OF A CANNON.

Fatal Accident During a Religious Fete —Three Persons Killed.

QUEBEC, Sept. 15.—News has just reached the city of a horrible accident at St. Anne de Beaupre. It appears that Cardinal Taschereau accompanied by several archbishops and bishops and a large number of his clergy of this diocese proceeded to the shrine yesterday morning to attend the blessing of a new statue of St. Anne which has been presented to a church of the locality. The little village was all en fete and three cannon which have decorated the lawns surrounding Beauport Asylum for years past were conveyed to St. Anne for the purpose of saluting the Prince of the Church on his arrival and departure.

The guns were used without accident in the morning, but in the evening just when the boat was leaving the wharf to return to Quebec, one of them exploded. Large pieces of metal flew in every direction, killing instantly three residents of St. Anne who were standing close by. Who the unfortunate victims of the accident are cannot as yet be ascertained, as there is no telegraphic communication with St. Anne. It is said that the cause of the explosion was the used up condition of the guns and the fact that a wet sponge was not run down them after each shot.

CANADA'S CHOICE.

Imperial Federation or Union With the United States.

Mr. Alfred Morris, who signs himself "Secretary British Union, Royal Exchange, Manchester," in a letter to the Toronto Mail combats Commercial Union, and declares that it must lead to political union. He then continues:—

We sometimes hear that Canada would never have thought of Commercial Union with the United States if a similar union with the Mother Country had not been unattainable.

But is it unattainable? Has Canada ever seriously tried to get it? Has she even ever earnestly asked for it? Not of governments, but of the British people? Canada, in common with the rest of the colonies has looked coldly on while, during the last six or seven years, a little band of earnest, but prominent, men in this country have been educating public opinion in favour of the commercial federation of the Empire. Snubbed at first as akin to madmen, stifled next with silence, then damned with faint praise, the work has steadfastly been carried on until the people of Great Britain are on the point of waking from their fatuous dream, that cheapness in price is more important than a plentiful supply. Let Canada and Australia give us a clear, plain, definite mandate to declare to our fellow-countrymen that may desire and are willing to enter into a Commercial Union with the Mother Country on the basis of differental customs duties, and within twelve months we will light up such a fire from Land's End to John O'Groats as shall illumine the world as to the future policy of the British race.

Nothing which is in its nature within the reach of human grasp is unattainable to those who are determined to attain it.

Hymeneal.

The Toronto Mail of this morning says:—"The spacious lecture room of the new Methodist Church on Avenue road was filled on Wednesday evening to witness the marriage of Mr. James Long, of Peterborough, to Miss Maggie Palmer, of this city. The bride was supported by her two nieces, Annie and Maud Lemon, and Miss Lulu Tye. The groom was supported by Dr. J. F. Adams and Masters Orlando Jolliffe and Willie Adams. The bride was elegantly attired and looked charming. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. T. W. Jolliffe, pastor of the church. Miss Booth, the organist of the church, played the wedding march. This is the first wedding in the new church. After the ceremony the friends were entertained at the home of Mr. Tozer on Cumberland street."

CONFLICTING STATEMENTS.

DUBLIN, Sept. 15.—At the inquest yesterday over the victims of the affray at Mitchelstown, Head Constable Doherty's evidence differed from the statement made by Chief Secretary Balfour in the Commons. A Scotch tourist gave testimony that agrees with the Nationalist version of the affair.

A UNIONIST DEMONSTRATION.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—Mr. Chamberlain's visit to Coleraine will be made the occasion of a great Unionist demonstration. It is expected he will announce his scheme of local government for Ireland.

ENGLISH HOME RULERS.

DUBLIN, Sept. 15.—The English Home Rule deputation were welcomed by an immense meeting last evening. Messrs. Rogers, Conybeare and Pickersgill, the English members of Parliament, made addresses. Several ladies also spoke. Great enthusiasm prevailed.

AN INVASION OF IRELAND.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—It is rumored that Mr. Gladstone, Mr. John Morley, Sir William Vernon Harcourt, Earl Spencer and Lord Aberdeen intend to shortly invade Ireland in the cause of the new crusade, and thus cement forever the friendship between the Radicals of both countries. Mr. Thomas Quinn, Nationalist M. P., threatens a libel suit against the Standard for publishing the New York World's story of last Sunday concerning letters written by Quinn to Tynan, known as No. 1. The Standard used the story in an unfavorable light. Mr. Quinn offers £1,000 reward for the production of the original letter alleged to have been sent to Tynan.

SOLEMN WARNINGS.

EXPLANATORY NOTES BY REV. R. S. M'ARTHUR, D. D.

Lesson XII of the International Series (Third Quarter) for Sunday, Sept. 18. Text of the Lesson, Matt. vii, 13-29. Golden Text, Matt. vii, 19.

Vs. 13, 14. Enter ye in, etc.—This is literally through the strait gate: i. e., into the kingdom of the Messiah, here and hereafter, or into life eternal. The figure requires this gate to be placed at the beginning of the journey. Strait, i. e., narrow; opposed to what is wide, as straight, which is another form of stretched, is opposed to that which is crooked. Strait is used but little except in geography, as "the straits or narrows of Gibraltar," and in such phrases as strait laced, strait jacket, and "he is in a strait," i. e., in a narrow or tight place. Destruction, loss, perdition. This will apply with equal propriety to temporal loss or eternal ruin. Jesus here presents the characteristics of the two ways. The exhortation teaches that it is difficult to begin and to continue to serve God, and that it is easy to live a life of sin. The difficulty of being saved and the ease of being lost are used to stimulate all to make the necessary efforts to enter the narrow gates. The fourteenth verse impresses upon us the same truth. Not only is the gate narrow, but the way is so also. Narrow.—This means pressed together, contracted, straitened (Revised Version). It suggests the idea of difficulty; the verb is the root of the word translated tribulation. The strait gates, travelers in the east tell us, are found in retired corners. They are not observed by the careless passer by. They have to be carefully sought; they are opened to those who knock; and, as Dr. Thomson says, "When the sun goes down and night comes on they are shut and locked. It is then too late." Sometimes the larger gate has a small one in itself. Perhaps Christ had these two in mind—the one large and easily found, the other small and discovered only by the earnest seeker.

V. 15. Because of these difficulties in entering the strait gate and walking in the narrow way, we see the need of guarding against false prophets. There are those who will strive to lead us away; such were the Pharisees; such were some who claimed to have been taught by Christ. The word prophet is not only one who foretells, but also one who "foretells" and "forth-tells," one who speaks of and for God, an inspired teacher of religious truth. A false teacher is one who falsely claims to teach in God's name. Sheep's clothing.—This is not to be understood literally, as in the case of the old prophets; the rough costume, however, came to stand for the garments of true prophets. All rascals assume the manner of saints. This is a compliment to the saints. If there were no good men, there would be no motive to assume the character of goodness. Inwardly.—At heart they are selfish, greedy, wicked, devilish. This is a striking representation of a wicked person assuming the appearance of goodness.

Vs. 16-20. Ye shall know them by their fruits.—Their actions will soon reveal their character. No man can long play the hypocrite; let him alone and he will soon reveal his true character. Grapes.—The question here asked is equal to a strong negative assertion. We know that grapes and figs were among the choicest fruits of Palestine. Thorns and thistles were as worthless as they were common; thorns were of various kinds; thistles represent a particular variety of prickly plant. Of course grapes and figs do not grow in this fashion; to ask the question is to answer it. Good tree.—A tree which bears much and good fruit. Corrupt.—This literally means rotten; here it means a tree which bears bad fruit, as opposed to the good fruit. In verse 19 we see what is the destiny of such a tree—hewn down—i. e., cut out of its place in the orchard. That is all it is good for. Trees, like men, get in the end all they are worth. There is no escaping this terrible law. The character must be changed or this destiny is inevitable. These false guides shall be cast into unquenchable fire. In verse 20 Jesus applies the comparison to the false prophets of whom he had spoken. This practical test enables us to distinguish between true and false teachers. By this test we are to judge men today; by it we ourselves are to be judged.

Vs. 21-23.—Here we take a wide reach; not only false teachers but all false professors of religion are here included. He here warns not open enemies, but even his professed disciples. Not every one.—Not all who profess Christ's name shall be among the saved. Lord.—This term recognizes Christ as sovereign. Perhaps thus early this title was given him by his followers. Its repetition gives emphasis to the significance of the title; and also, perhaps, indicates the common practice of the disciples. The practical test of love is obedience. Doeth the will.—From verse 21 it is certain that the number of false professors will be great. That day is clearly the last day of judgment. The term might be applied either to the introduction or the consummation of the kingdom. Prophesied, preached, forth telling rather than foretelling. But even the ability to foretell future events does not necessarily prove that its possessors were godly. Devils, strictly demons. There is but one devil—he is the head of many demons who are his angels. Workers of miracles are not necessarily truly pious. Possibly demons were subject to Judas as well as to the other disciples. There are evangelists and pastors in our own day who have been used by God in the conversion of souls who are at heart bad men.

In verse 23 we see that Christ will publicly repudiate these impostors. He becomes decided in his rejection, and says depart from me, ye that work iniquity. They never were his true followers, and they must now go to their own place.

Vs. 24-27. False teachers are rejected; but those also who stand in a merely negative attitude toward evil, those who are hearers and not doers of the word, are also brought to destruction. Knowledge of the truth, without an observance of its claims, aggravates the doom of men. A rock, literally, the rock; not a fragment of rock broken off, but a bed of rock, of living rock. In its full sense this rock is Christ Rain, a storm. Floods, streams, freshets; common word in Greek for rivers; here inundations. Christ's hearers readily understood this vivid imagery; they were familiar with the sudden fury of the storms in that Oriental land. Rain often descends in torrents, between winter and harvest; it pours down the mountain side in angry streams; rivulets become rivers, whose swollen waters sweep off houses and often cattle. Only a house which had been founded on a rock could stand. This one stood. Now the house of the foolish man totters and falls. Its foundation was sand. He who hears and refuses to obey Christ's sayings is this foolish man; he lacks good sense, foresight, prudence. Sand, which had accumulated in the bed of a mountain torrent. This is the material on which he built; it represents human doctrines, goodness, self righteousness, anything but Christ.

Vs 28, 29. The discourse made a profound impression. No wonder. It has astonished the world ever since. Never such matter never such manner. The controlling element was authority. He did not reflect the opinions of others; he did not quote from other learned rabbins. As an author, he was the best expounder of the law. The law giver was the true interpreter. He spoke as a judge on his seat, as a king on his throne. His "I say unto you" was as the voice of the eternal. Even the prophets usually said. "Thus saith the Lord." It went into the deepest senses of his auditors. The contrast with the scribes was most marked. He went into the profoundest depths of the spiritual requirements of the law; the scribes dealt in trifling traditions.

POINTS TO BE REMEMBERED.

1. We must strive to enter the strait gate. Leave off all sin; men are in the broad road of sin without making any effort.
2. After we have entered our lives must bear the same testimony as our lips. Our practice must agree with our profession. This is an unanswerable argument.
3. Obedience is the true test of discipleship. To prove this is one aim of this discourse.
4. We are all building soul houses for eternity.
5. The storms of life are sure to come.
6. Only those who build on Christ can stand.—Sunday School World.

I SHALL FIND REST.

A little farther on—
There will be time—I shall find rest anon;
Thus do we say, while eager youth invites
Young hope to try her wings in wanton flights,
And nimble fancy builds the soul a nest
In some far crag; but soon youth's flame is gone—
Burned lightly out—while we repeat the jest
With smiling confidence—I shall find rest
A little farther on.

A little farther on
I shall find rest; half fiercely we avow
When noon beats on the dusty field and care
Threats to unjoint our armor, and the glare
Throbs with the pulse of battle, while life's best
Flies with the flitting stars; the frenzied brow
Pains for the laurel more than for the breast,
Where love soft nestling waits. Not now, not now,
With feverish breath we cry, I shall find rest
A little farther on.

A little farther on
I shall find rest; half sad, at last, we say,
When sorrow's settling cloud blurs out the gleam
Of glory's torch, and to a vanished dream
Love's palace hath been turned, then—all depressed,
Despairing, sick at heart—we may not stay
Our weary feet, so lonely then doth seem
This shadow haunted world. We, so unblest,
Weep not to see the grave which waits its guest;
And feeling round our feet the cool, sweet clay,
We speak the fading world farewell and say:
Not on this side—alas!—I shall find rest
A little farther on. —Century

LUCK OF JERSEY FISHERMEN.

While Summer Idlers Sleep the Natives Begin Their Toil of the Sea.

Summer idlers along the Jersey coast seldom rise early enough to see the native fishermen begin their day's work, though the sight is well worth the loss of an hour's sleep. While the sun is still low and the horizon dim with mist, the little boats are launched through the surf and rowed beyond the breakers. Then the sails are set and the little crafts are soon keeled over and making for the open sea. They rise and fall as buoyant as corks, and as they bob up here and lose themselves from sight behind a huge wave then they remind one of the profile boats used in theatrical representations.

As a rule, a fishing fleet consists of about ten boats. They go out and return together. Each boat could easily accommodate six persons, but two is the usual complement. It is regarded as unsafe to carry more. When the spot where the fishing is to be carried on is reached they cast out their anchors about 400 or 500 yards apart, and proceed to fill the bow with all manner of fish. Spanish mackerel, flounders, bluefish and sea bass constitute the major portion of a Jersey fisherman's catch, although they sometimes hook a kingfish or a dogfish. They use the simplest kind of tackle and the flesh of fish for bait. About 10 o'clock they start for home and land always at one place. One after another they come in on the crest of a huge wave and land far up on the sand. It takes science to land a boat in this way, and sometimes the fishermen wait half an hour for a wave to "home them." It pays to be cautious, however, for to upset a boat means to lose the result of a day's work.

The homes of the fishermen stand back from the shore among the knotted and twisted pine trees. They are low, shingled cottages, with ceiling only high enough to permit a man to stand upright. The windows are small and seem to be of use more for ventilation than giving light. Here the fisherman takes his fish. He cleans them and packs them away, ready to be sent to the nearest market. The pay, however, for all this risk of life, all this work and a winter of hardship, is very little. Occasionally a fisherman will bring home a catch that will net him a tidy sum, but it happens more often that he gets only enough to provide himself with the commonest necessities of life. His earnings are less than a laborer's, and were it not for the amateur fishermen who often accompany him, only to get wet, hungry and seasick, the Jersey fisherman would be even worse off than he is.—New York Mail and Express.

Melodies Concealed in Strange Places.

"How did you start that music box playing?" asked a reporter of a dealer.

"I didn't start it," returned the merchant.

"Who did, then?"

"You. You accidentally touched a spring in the end of the box with your coat sleeve as you brushed by. The mechanism of these boxes is very delicately made nowadays, and they are constructed with great ingenuity. But sit down while we talk."

The reporter took a seat and the strains of "Farandall" from "Olivette" floated from beneath the chair.

"Have a cigar?" He turned a cigar stand, and there came out of it the air of the drinking song "Girofle Girofla."

"This is the picture of our Swiss factory."

As the album was opened there came out of it an air from "Fra Diavolo."

"Will you take a pinch of snuff?"

As the lid was raised there was a whisper of "Should Auld Acquaintance be Forgot?"

"We have a customer who has a music box attachment to his front door, and his visitors are always greeted by a tune. A music box can be concealed in a very small compass, and one of the reigning demands is for articles that contain them, so as to create pleasant surprises. Dolls, clocks and books are provided with them. Nearly all of the music boxes are made in St. Croix or Geneva in Switzerland."—New York Mail and Express.

Dogs Killed by Electricity.

In Buffalo, the other day, twenty-seven friendless dogs were killed by electricity. One by one they were placed in a box about two by three, lined with tin, with about an inch of water in the bottom. One by one they were muzzled with a wire, running through the mouth. A simple touch of the wire—a corpse.—Buffalo Express.

Give them a Chance.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

"Did he rave and storm?" I inquired, with interest.

"Yes, he did. He said such abominable things to me that I have very great doubts as to whether I will continue to live with him."

"You will wait, I presume," said I, "until you see whether there is any chance of his having anything to live upon."

Why this remark should have exasperated her I cannot tell; possibly because it expressed nothing more than the simple truth. At all events, she turned upon me quite furiously. "You think it is safe to insult me, do you?" she cried. "You will find yourself mistaken. I have a very good memory, and I am not likely to forget what I owe you. The day will come when you will be sorry for having meddled with me."

That day may come; but it has not come yet, and I am still unrepentant. I believe I am one of the very few people who can boast of having put Lady Bracknell into a passion.

She and her husband drove down to the station together, but, as I understood, parted there, her ladyship making for another country house, to which she had been invited; while Bracknell went up to London. Thither I also betook myself on the following day; and there, shortly afterward, I received a letter from my mother, in which I was begged to run down and see her.

"I am feeling uneasy about our friends at Staines Court," she wrote, "and should be very glad to have a little talk with you. The young man Beauchamp has arrived. I fear, but am not sure, that he has come for the purpose of renewing his most unwelcome attentions."

How this bad behavior of the young man Beauchamp was to be checked by my advent upon the scene did not appear; but of course I hastened to obey my mother's summons, and on reaching my journey's end whom should I find waiting for me upon the platform but Jim Leigh. He said he had heard that I was expected by that train, and had thought he would come down and meet me, which was highly flattering.

"I've got the dog cart here," he added, "so that I can drop you at the house if you like; but don't you think a walk would do you good, after being shut up in that stuffy railway carriage? The cart can take your traps on for you."

It was not exactly pleasant weather for walking, the roads and lanes being deep in mud, and a gusty wind having been blowing all day from the northwest, with occasional showers of cold rain, which seemed likely to be succeeded by snow; but as it was evident that Jim had a great deal to say to me, I would not balk him of his purpose.

The upshot of what he had to say was that he had been unable to refrain from avowing his love to Lady Mildred, and that, to his unutterable joy, he had discovered that his love was returned. She had, however, declared most positively that she considered herself bound in honor to carry out her father's wishes, should it be in her power to do so, and I gathered that the only thing which had hitherto kept this luckless pair from breaking their hearts was a comfortable conviction that, after all, this would not be in her power. Even Lord Staines—who, in accordance with the intention that he had expressed to me, had remonstrated firmly but kindly with his daughter—had acknowledged that there is no known method of marrying a man who won't ask you to marry him. "And I really believe," added Jim, "that if Beauchamp had distinctly refused to come forward, he wouldn't have had any serious objection to me."

"In other words, if he can't get £40,000 a year, he will be graciously pleased to put up with a sixth of that sum," I observed.

"Well, it isn't only a question of income; there's the debt that I have told you about. However, Beauchamp has come forward at last, and I confess to you frankly, Harry, that I'm at my wit's end. I don't see my way at all."

"Has Beauchamp proposed?" I inquired.

"Not yet; but he may do it any day. In fact, it is quite certain that he has come here in order to do it. He wrote to Lady Mildred, offering himself for a week, which he would hardly have done unless he had meant business. From what he has let fall, I suspect he has had a quarrel with Lady Bracknell, and has decided to cut himself off from her. Old Staines is as pleased as Punch; he looks upon the thing as settled. Harry, what the deuce am I to do?"

"Don't you think," I suggested, "that, under all circumstances, Lady Mildred might be your best adviser?"

But he shook his head despondently. "She has made up her mind," he answered; "she has no doubt at all as to what her duty is; she is ready to sacrifice herself for the sake of her family. But am I to stand quietly looking on while this sacrifice is carried out? That's the question."

"Obviously," I said at length, "either the family or Lady Mildred must be sacrificed, and, all things considered, I think the family ought to go the wall."

"But she won't consent to that," answered Jim ruefully.

"Exactly so; and therefore I don't see what course is open to you, except to stand and look on. Have you thought of any alternative plan?"

"None," he replied disconsolately. "I was in hopes that you, who are so much sharper than I am, might be able to suggest something."

I was gratified by the compliment, but conscious of my inability to show myself worthy of it. Certainly I could have devised several excellent schemes, but in order to work them it would have been essential to obtain Lady Mildred's acquiescence. What was to be done, so long as the victim obstinately refused to raise her head from the block? However, not to discourage my unfortunate friend more than was necessary, I promised him I would think the dilemma over very carefully; and, either because drowning men will clutch at straws or because he had really misplaced confidence in my abilities, this assurance seemed to comfort him a great deal.

At my own gate, where he found his dog cart waiting, he bade me good by.

"I shall look you up to-morrow afternoon, old chap," said he. "By that time, I'll be bound to say, you'll have hit upon some idea." In which oversanguine anticipation he drove away.

And now it was that my dear mother showed the spirited stuff of which she is made. Not a word would she listen to of my sober representations as to the danger of intermeddling with our neighbors' affairs, and when I was shabby enough to quote her against herself, reminding her that these things were ordered for us and that all was doubtless for the best, though we, with our limited intelligence, might not be able to see it, she became quite angry.

"Another time," said she, "I will show you the folly and wickedness of such talk. For the present, it is enough to say that I will not have my poor Mildred married to a man whom she detests in payment of anybody's debts."

"I don't think she detests him," I answered, "but let that pass. How are you going to prevent her from being handed over to him?"

Thereupon, to my utter amazement, she coolly informed me that she intended to go up to Staines Court and beard the new Agamemnon in his den. As she had not been outside the limits of our own garden for a matter of twenty years, and as the only conveyance that we possess is a two wheeled pony cart, it may be imagined how this proposition took my breath away.

"Lord Staines," she went on, with a smile, "is too feeble to leave the house. The mountain will not come to Mohammed, so Mohammed must go to the mountain. I shall write and ask him to send a carriage for me, and you must hoist me into it somehow."

This proposed borrowing of the enemy's transport in order to reach the battlefield was a stroke of humor which I appreciated, but I could not, of course, sanction it. It was not, however, until I had assured my mother that she should only leave the house over my prostrate body that she yielded, with a very bad grace, saying: "So be it, then; but please to understand, Henry, that I see my duty plainly marked out for me, and that I shall not be deterred from doing it. You must bring this Mr. Beauchamp to call upon me."

When my mother addresses me as "Henry," it means that she is in no mood to be trifled with. Accordingly I walked up to Staines Court the next morning, asked for Beauchamp, told him what a pleasure it was to meet him again (a pleasure in which he did not appear to participate), and mentioned that my mother, who lived hard by, was most anxious to make his acquaintance. He was a polite young man, and, though evidently much surprised by this sudden development of friendliness on my part, he made no difficulty about returning home with me.

THE MARKET REPORTS.

Wheat is reported from the markets generally as being steady and firm, but heavy stocks of American grain in Europe do not give promise of a rise at present. There is little change as to cheese or butter, except that low grades of the latter are rather weak.

Ingersoll Cheese Market.

INGERSOLL, Ont., Sept. 14.—The offerings to-day were 7,100 boxes, but no sales were reported. Factorymen are still holding August cheese for about 12½c., which buyers are not inclined to pay.

GENERAL.

The union school building in Bowmanville was destroyed on Tuesday night by an incendiary fire.

Important despatches from the Imperial Government on the fisheries question have been received at Ottawa by this week's mail, but absolute silence as to their contents is maintained by members of the Dominion Cabinet.

Headache, Billiousness, Dyspepsia and Indigestion relieved and at once by Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Try it. Samples free.

The increased schedule of fire insurance rates in Montreal risks was officially announced yesterday, to go into force next Monday, up to which day persons holding policies about to expire have the option of renewing them at the existing rates.

The committee appointed to investigate the charges recently made of the prevalence of juvenile immorality in Ottawa have concluded their labours. They find that the charges, while containing a certain amount of truth, have been grossly exaggerated.

Right now is the time to use a good Blood Purifying Medicine. Lose no time in getting a bottle of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It will do you good. Sold by all druggists. 50c.

The Scott Act Convention in Toronto concluded on Wednesday. Arrangements for a campaign against the repeal movement were made, and a resolution passed that the time had arrived for the formation of a third party with prohibition as the principal plank in its platform.

Sir Lionel Sackville West, the British Minister at Washington, states that Mr. Chamberlain, Sir John Macdonald and himself will represent Great Britain in the Fisheries Commission, and are expected to meet in Washington in the latter part of October or early in November. Sir Lionel expresses confidence that the conference will effect an amicable settlement of the fishery dispute.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills, Salts, &c., when you can get Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists.

The appointment of a new commandant at the Royal Military College to succeed Col. Oliver, whose term is nearly expired, is under consideration by the Minister of Militia. It is probable, however, that if the War Office consents, Colonel Oliver will be asked to remain until the end of the current college term, so as to avoid the confusion incident to a change in the middle of a term.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure an ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind

The Kabo corset warranted to wear a year without breaking, is sold only at Turnbull's, the Headquarters for all New and Improved Corsets.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

What he Did.

"And what did you do when you stopped selling?" asked the County Crown Attorney this morning when examining a bartender. "We did'nt sell," was the reply, whereat everybody laughed but the bartender, who preserved a stoic calmness.

Anniversary.

The public anniversary of the Young Men's Christian Association is announced for Thursday, 22nd September, in the George Street Methodist Church. It promises to be a very interesting occasion, several speakers from abroad being on the programme.

Neat and Substantial.

The Millbrook Messenger says:—"The bridge is now a matter of fact, and has been opened to the public, for some days past. It is not only a neat, but a substantial structure, and a credit to the manufacturers—the Peterborough Iron Bridge Co. Though costing much more than an old fashioned bridge, it will last almost a lifetime, and, in the end, will be the cheapest."

OPENED out at Turnbull's, case after case of Fall and Winter Millinery, marked at prices that will suit everybody.

The Federation League.

The Toronto World says:—"The minor annexation organ of this city professes to think that the members of the Peterborough Federation League are nobodies. Mayors of large towns and members of Parliament do not count with the gang unless they are prepared to sell their country for a peck of barley. Every crank and traitor in the land is of that opinion, but they are preparing a rude awakening for themselves."

The Fish.

There was quite a scene at the Simcoe street bridge on Thursday evening, when the people who crowded around saw the novel spectacle of fish being scooped out of the creek. Some lime had been thrown in the creek above the bridge and the fish nauseated by it rose and floated on the surface. Boys were soon on the spot and fairly cleaned the creek of chubs and suckers. Each boy got from half a dozen to a dozen. The fish measured from six to ten inches in length.

Not That Kind.

The Kingston News says:—"Among the gentlemen who spoke at a meeting in Peterborough recently was Mr. James Stevenson, M. P.,—the same James Stevenson, M. P., whom the Detroit News annexation boomster falsely represented as being for commercial union, saying, 'This is a notable accession to the ranks.' The commercial annexationists are delighted when they can find a Conservative who will give even the slightest indication of favoring C. U. But Mr. Stevenson is not that kind of a Conservative. He says that he can see nothing in C. U. that would benefit Canada in any way."

Annual Meeting of the Association—Reports Read and Officers Elected.

The annual business meeting of the Peterborough Young Men's Christian Association was held in the Association rooms on Thursday evening. Tea was provided for the members by members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and a large number of young men enjoyed the dainties set before them by the ladies.

Shortly after eight o'clock Mr. W. G. Yelland was, in the absence of the President, called to the chair. The meeting was then opened with devotional exercises.

The Chairman read the report of the Devotional Committee, of which Mr. H. S. Griffin was Chairman. The report acknowledged the blessings that God had conferred on the work during the. The number of meetings held was as follows:—

	No. Mtngs.	Av. At.	Total
Saturday evening	45	17	752
Sunday afternoon	45	16	735
Sunday eve. song service	49	69	3,380

Evangelistic	5	43	218
Special meetings	2	13	26
Training class	4	6	26
Total	229		8,296

The report expressed appreciation of the services of Mr. Geo. E. Williams and regret because he was leaving. The committee prayed for a rich blessing upon him.

The report was received and adopted.

Mr. GEO. A. SCHOFIELD read the report of the Finance Committee, of which Mr. Bannell Sawyer was chairman The current expenses of the year had been $1,180 77 and at the beginning of the year there was a deficit of $880, making the total required $2,030.77. The total receipts amounted to $1,725.16, leaving $300 still unpaid, which the committee hoped would be raised before the anniversary meeting. Energy which should be applied to the spiritual work was dissipated in the financial work, and an effort should be made to correct this. The people were willing to support the Association. The members were urged to work.

The report was received and adopted.

Mr. GEO. A. SCHOFIELD, Treasurer, read his annual report as follows:—

The Secretary remarked that some of the accounts in the assets had since been paid. The report was adopted.

Mr. CUMMING asked why this Association had to pay taxes?

Mr. G. E. WILLIAMS said it was a shame that they had to pay taxes. Apart from other parts of their work, they had a good reading room open to the public. Applications had been made for exemption, but they had been referred to the Court of Revision and never heard of again.

Mr. MCBURNEY moved, seconded by Mr R. A. SANDERSON,—That a deputation of officers of the Association wait on the Town Council and ask for remission of taxes.—Carried.

The Secretary, Mr. Geo. E. Williams, read his fourth annual report. He carefully reviewed the work of the year in the different branches. We will publish the report in a future issue.

Mr. MCBURNEY moved the reception of the report in a brief speech.

Mr. CUMMING said that they were all thankful for the work by Mr. Williams in Peterborough and their prayer was that God's blessing would always rest upon him.

After further discussion the motion was passed.

The officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:—

PRESIDENT—Geo. M. Roger.

1st VICE-PRESIDENT—D. J. Bannell Sawyer.

2nd VICE-PRESIDENT—W. F. Hilliard.

TREASURER—Geo. A. Schofield.

SECRETARY—W. H. Stevens.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE—I. Richardson, O. C. Rowse, G. J. Early, Geo. S. Bean, Alf. J. Johnston, H. S. Griffin, Jos. H. Fife, Geo McBurney, Arthur Tebb and J. C. Turnbull

The meeting, which was one of the most largely attended annual meetings held for some years, was concluded by a hymn and prayer.

THE SCOTT ACT.

Third Offence Cases Brought Before the Court.

The Scott Act prosecution took a new turn to-day. Inspector Cochrane arraigned the hotelkeepers on third offence charges.

Cochrane vs. Clancy was the first case. The defence, as well as the prosecution, was somewhat novel, inasmuch as the case was contested. About a dozen witnesses went through the mill, the County Crown Attorney turning the crank as follows:—

C. C. A.—Have you been at Clancy's hotel since September 2nd?

WITNESS—Yes, sir.

C. C. A.—Have you had anything to drink there?

WITNESS—Yes, sir.

C. C. A.—What did you have to drink?

WITNESS—Ginger ale.

C.C.A.—Did you have anything intoxicating to drink?

WITNESS—No, sir.

Mr. CLANCY was examined and testified that no intoxicating liquor has been sold. Once a man came in, called for a glass of soda, and pulled out a flask and put a stick in it. He also took a drink, but sold none.

The bartender stated on oath that no liquor had been sold there since August 28th.

The Magistrate dismissed the case, the costs to be paid by the informant.

Cochrane vs. Daly was the next case. The defendant was charged with a second offence, to which he also pleaded not guilty.

The witnesses went through the same stereotyped testimony as those examined in the last. None of them had had "anything" for several weeks.

One witness came up as triumphant as a curler brandishing a besom. He wore a rusty corkscrew for a button hole boquet.

Mr. Daly and the bartender were examined, but no evidence was educed.

The bartender said that the nearest approach to breaking the law was his pulling a cork from a bottle of stout brought in by a gentleman. Another fellow supplied his own "stick" for his ginger ale.

The case was also dismissed.

POLICE COURT.

THREATENING

FRIDAY, Sept. 17.—Peter Phelan was charged by his wife with using threatening language towards her. The matter was settled by the defendant giving his own bond for $500 and another for $500, as an earnest that he would keep the peace for one year. T. Cavanagh was the defendant's surety.

AN OUTBREAK FEARED.

Alarming Predictions Made by British Liberal Newspapers.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The Liberal press of England insists that the rapidly increasing crime in Ireland, including the killing of Constable Whelan, who was murdered by the moonlighters, is directly traceable to the Coercion Act. The predictions made when the act was passed are now being fulfilled, they say, and none but the Government can be blamed. The leaders of the national Irish League threaten to cease their efforts to control the people unless England will alleviate the harshness with which it is now treating Ireland. It is, however, a matter of grave doubt, they say, if the leaders could now control the wrought-up passions of their injured countrymen. The time has almost come and is near at hand when but a slight fanning is needed to make the fire that is now smouldering in the hearts of the Irish break out in a wild, fierce flame that ere it is checked will commit great havoc and widespread ruin. The priests, too, to whom the Irish always have rendered implicit obedience, are losing their influence in checking the people. A crisis seems certainly at hand. It is now apparent that the Government during the recess of Parliament intends to turn loose the dogs of war, and scare no effort to carry out the provisions of the Crimes Act. It is a desperate game the Government is playing, and they propose to force the issue and either win or lose. Mr. Balfour is at present in Dublin preparing for the siege, and the battle, the rumblings of which already begin to be heard, will soon begin in earnest.

A BLAZING METEOR.

The People of Barrington, Nova Scotia Astonished by a Fiery Visitor.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept 16.—A Special from Barrington says a wonderful phenomenon occurred there last night. About 8.30 o'clock a luminious body, looking as large as an elephant, with long tail attached, suddenly appeared in southeastern sky and shot out of sight in a southerly direction. The night was cloudless and without moon, but the stars were out and a strange soft blue and white lights lit up the whole firmament as bright as day. The light was only five or six seconds in duration when all became suddenly dark again. The fiery visitor seemed to strike the ground a short distance away. Afterwards a low whirring sound was heard in the direction where it had disappeared. The sound kept increasing in volum till it became terrible. It seemed as if the bed of ocean was a huge pot and the water was boiling over. Some people fancied they felt a slight tremor of the earth, but most persons felt nothing. The noise which was terrifying lasted fully a minute and a half.

A DRIFTING VESSEL.

A Fishing Schooner Without Life on Board Drifting Before the Wind.

CANSO, N.S., Sept. 16.—A number of provincial fishing vessels have arrived here in the past couple of days, all of which felt the gales of Aug. 26, and Sept 3, but no loss of life from them is reported. The Gloucester schooner Florence B. Parr arrived to day from the Grand Banks and brings the report that on the day after the fearful blow of August 26, another American saw a fishing schooner driving before the wind without any sign of life on board. Her decks had been swept clear of everything, all boats and everything movable having disappeared. No sails were set and she was driving aimlessly ahead at a high rate of speed without any hand to guide her. The vessel was seen by others who mistook it for a phantom ship.

A DREADFUL COLLISION.

An Excursion Train on the Midland Railway in England Wrecked

LONDON, Sept. 16.—A dreadful collision occurred to day on the Midland Railway. A train filled with excursionists who were going to Doncaster to witness the races collided with another train and was wrecked. The accounts of the disaster thus far received are that 20 of the excursionists were killed and many injured.

THE ROYALIST MANIFESTO.

Issued at a Time That it will Embarrass the Ministry.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The manifesto issued by the Count of Paris attracts a deal of attention here and across the channel, where the amazing rapidity with which it was circulated all over the country is a matter of wonder in itself. The manifesto is the topic of the hour. Under ordinary circumstances such a document would have been puerile and futile, but with the acumen of an experienced statesman the Count timed its appearance, and has issued his manifesto at a moment when it will be most potent and more likely to have the desired effect on the minds of Frenchmen. Rouvier's ministry, never strong, holds now a precarious condition, and France is ready any day to hear of its downfall. To the Loyalist party it looks for support, and if this is withheld the influence of the ministry in its feeble condition would speedily dissolve. In fact the Loyalists occupy much the same position in France toward the Government as the Unionists do in England for the Conservative Government. To cut loose altogether from the counsel of the Loyalists and to ignore their suggestions would be to court political death. The appearance of the manifesto at this particular time gives an emphatic check to the exuberance of joy with which France is convulsed over the manœuvres of the seventeenth army corps, which has successfully demonstrated the scheme of mobilization. It diverts the public mind from the absorbing satisfaction it feels in the fancied possession of an army that is now able to punish Germany, and directs it into other channels than those which lead to a desire for revenge. It however threatens the fall of the Rouvier ministry, which cannot openly accept the terms of the manifesto, and between the desire to retain the support of the Loyalists, and its perplexity in regard to pleasing the Republican portion of France, the Government is in sore straits. The count's manifesto may thus have a decided influence on the mind of the fickle Gaul and go a long way towards taking the first step in the direction of a monarchy.

POLICE COURT.

ASSAULT.

SATURDAY, Sept. 18.—Carl Smart charged Wm. C. Springer with having assaulted him

The defendant pleaded not guilty.

The COMPLAINANT was called. He said that himself and Mr. Springer were employees of the Lock Works. On Friday he had occasion to go upstairs to the pattern room for a piece of scrap brass. Mr. Springer told him to go out or he would put him out. He refused to go and the defendant took hold of him and banged him around the room. He struck against a planer, a large iron machine, and his face was cut.

Mr. STRATTON, who appeared for the defence, cross-examined the complainant. The latter stated that Mr. Springer did not strike him. He acknowledged that Mr. Osgoode was the head pattern maker and that Mr. Springer worked with him, but would not admit that Mr. Osgoode had any authority in the department. The manager of the works exercised his authority there.

The DEFENDANT.—Mr. Osgoode is superintendent of that department.

The Magistrate and Counsel for the defense discussed the point whether the law gave one employee a right to eject another from a room in the factory in which they are both workmen.

Mr. STRATTON claimed that the law gave a foreman power to exercise reasonable force to eject intruders.

His WORSHIP said that he did not know of any such law. He would overrule Mr. Stratton on that point. If this were allowed there would be no end to broils. Foremen should report such matters to the manager of the establishment for quiet settlement.

Mr. STRATTON said it was scarcely the manly thing to do to bring such trifling matters into Court.

The COMPLAINANT replied that this was no trifling matter.

His WORSHIP said that considering the circumstances of the case he would impose only a nominal fine $2 and costs.

Football.

Quite a crowd of people went over to the P. A. A. A. grounds on Friday evening to see the football match, Norwood vs. Peterborough, by electric light. The play commenced at a few minutes past eight o'clock, the teams being placed as follows:—

PETERBOROUGH.
Goal,
Kincaid.
Backs,
Halliday, Morris.
Half Backs,
Schofield, Forbes,

Right Wing,	Centre,	Left Wing
Scott.	Brennan, (Capt.)	Allison,
Austin.	Begley.	G. Smith.

NORWOOD.

H. Pearce,	Burgess,	McKelvie,
———	Anderson,	Anderson.
Left Wing	Centre.	Right Wing.

Bewell (Capt.), F. Pearce,
Backs.
Finlay,
Outside Back.
Stephenson,
Inside Back.
Mutchison,
Goal.

It became apparent at once that Norwood would win. Their passing and kicking was much superior to that of the home team, and their team play was also good. During the first half of the time the visitors took three goals, and during the last half, one, the score standing at the close of the match 4 0 in favor of Norwood.

DIED AT THE PIANO.

Peculiar Circumstances Attending the Death of a Musician.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 16.—Prof. Udo Rhodins, a prominent musician of this city, died yesterday under most peculiar circumstances. About 3 o'clock he visited Oddfellows' Hall in the third story of the lodge building for the purpose of regulating and tuning the organ. He was alone in the lodge room, and people in the streets below heard him play two or three airs on the organ. A friend entering the room saw Rhodins sitting before the organ, leaning over a little, grasping a key with his right hand. He spoke to him, but received no reply. Upon closer inspection it was discovered that Prof. Rhodins had been dead fully an hour. The summons must have come instantly, for the dead musician's head was turned with ear towards the key board as though listening for the false note. Death resulted from apoplexy. Although only 32 years of age, the deceased was one of the finest organists in the south.

HIS EYES TORN OUT.

Later Particulars of the Accident at Ste Anne de Beaupre.

QUEBEC, Sept. 16.—The reports that arrived in the city yesterday about the unfortunate accident at Ste. Anne de Beaupre stated wrongly that three persons had been killed instantly by the explosion of the cannon. It is not known that three men were horribly mutilated, and that two of them, Joseph Bilodeau and Sylvain, are not expected to outlive the day. Bilodeau's two eyes were torn out of their orbits, his nose and one ear carried away, and his jaw bone and his right arm shattered to pieces. Sylvain had his arm fractured to pieces and received other grievous bodily injuries. The third victim had his face badly burnt. The three men are under the treatment of Drs. J. P. Deblois and Boldue. Bilodeau and Sylvain possessed their full consciousness last night, but they suffered excruciating pain.

Forest Fires.

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 16.—There have not been in years as destructive bush fires as those which have burned this year. They are still consuming valuable timber, fences, buildings and in some instances the crops of the season. At Egansville, in the next county, fires are raging in every direction. On Sunday morning one fire started below the Cascades, and on night had travelled half a mile towards the village. The fires in the vicinity of Golden Lake are probably the largest. The farmers have been night and day battling against the flames. Mr. Brisco was working between two fires when a heavy wind arose, spreading the fire so rapidly as to encircle him. He made a bold dash through the burning pinery, and lost his hair and whiskers.

Walked off a Train.

LANCASTER, Sept. 16.—At daylight this morning a lady was found lying unconscious alongside of the Grand Trunk track, about one mile east of this place, and was brought here and cared for till noon, when she recovered consciousness. It was then learned that her name was Mrs. Birrall, and that she had been a passenger on No. 4 express going west last night. She knows nothing about how she came to leave the train, and it is supposed that she arose in her sleep, walked out on to the platform and fell off. She is badly bruised and, it is feared, has sustained severe internal injuries. Her friends have been telegraphed to.

Disease Among Cattle.

DUQUOIS, Ill., Sept. 16.—A new and strange disease is affecting cattle in this part of Illinois. Milch cows suffer most. The disease is in the eyes, some cows being reported totally blind. It seems that the cattle running on the commons are most subject to attack. This report includes the range cattle in Jackson and Perry Counties. The eyes are said to assume a blue color. Some cows kept on pastures are affected.

The Toronto Exhibition.

The Toronto fair closed on Friday night at 10 o'clock. The tick of the turnstiles ceased much earlier in the evening with $2,978 to their credit for the day, and a total of $52 949 for the entire Exhibition. This includes the receipts at the Grand Stand and is $11,152 more than the receipts of the fair of 1886.

LATEST CABLE NEWS.

THE ALASKAN SEIZURES.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—In the Commons today Mr. Smith, replying to a question by Mr. Gourley, said the Dominion Government had not reported whether the order for the release of vessels seized by the American cruisers had bee carried out.

THE LIBERAL LEAGUE.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The council of the Liberal League has invited the leaders of the Irish National League to discuss the feasibility of starting branches of the Liberal League in Ireland wherever the National League branches are suppressed by the Government.

PARLIAMENT PROROGUED.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The British Parliament was prorogued to-day.

LEAGUE MEETINGS.

DUBLIN, Sept. 16.—The executive branch of the National League has arranged for meetings to be held on Sunday at Roscommon, Bandon, Newton and Kelmacthomas. Members of Parliament Sheehy, Burner, Hooper, Timothy Healy and Dillon will address the meetings. Mr. Balfour had a conference at the Castle to-day with Lord Ashborne and General Buller, and it is expected that the meetings will be proclaimed.

INQUEST OPENED.

DUBLIN, Sept. 16.—At the inquest over the victims of the recent affray at Mitchellstown, Head Constable Doherty's evidence differed from the statement made by Chief Secretary Balfour in the House of Commons. An unbiased Scotch tourist gave testimony that agrees with the Nationalist version of the affair.

A BRIEF REBELLION.

MADRAS, Sept. 16.—A rebellion which proved to be of short duration broke out in Menihore recently. The rebels penetrated into the Maharajah's palace, but were repulsed with a loss of nine killed and many wounded. No further trouble is expected.

HELP FOR THE DISTRESSED.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—J. I. Burner, Liberal Member of Parliament for the Northwich Division of Cheshire, has given $2,000 for the purpose of starting a fund to meet the material needs of Ireland and relieve the distresss there.

THE QUEEN'S SPEECH.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Parliament was prorogued this afternoon. The Queen's speech, among other matters, referred as follows to the fisheries question and the colonial conference, matters of interest to Canada:—"I have agreed with the President of the United States to refer to a joint commission the difficult question respecting the North American fisheries which have recently been discussed by the two nations. With singular satisfaction I menton the assemblage of the first conference of representatives of my colonies ever held in London. Their deliberations, directed to many matters of deep practical interest to their respective communities and conducted in a spirit of hearty co operation, will, I doubt not, add strength to the affection by which the various parts of my Empire are bound together."

THE KAISER.

STETTIN, Sept. 16.—The Emperor William had a fainting fit after the banquet on Wednesday. On recovering he retired supported by his physicians and valet. He was well to-lay and attended the Nobility banquet.

"COLD BLOODED MURDER."

DUBLIN, Sept. 16.—The Municipal Council at Queenstown has adopted a resolution condemning the Mitchellstown police for "cold blood murder" when they fired on the meeting last Friday. A copy of the resolution was ordered to be presented to Mr. William O'Brien in his cell at the Cork jail.

AYOUB'S HIDING PLACE.

BOMBAY, Sept. 16.—News has been received here that Ayoub Khan had taken refuge in Koi Jamani, Beloochistan. If he remains he will be surrendered to the British authorities.

Reduction in C. P. R. Rates.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 16.—The latest reduction of five cents per hundred pounds in wheat rates on the Canadian Pacific railway simply extends to the all rail routes to Montreal, the reduction having already been made to Port Arthur.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT.

SEPTEMBER 17th is the hundredth anniversary of the present constitution of the United States, a date of great interest to our neighbors, and not without interest in Canada also.

The current number of the Century Magazine contains an article on "The Framers and Framing of Our Constitution," which should be read by all Canadians who wish to learn how the system of the neighboring Federation grew into its present shape, and thereby to obtain valuable light in considering the constitution of our own Dominion.

Even those who know better often vaguely acquiesce in the popular idea that the present constitution of the United States was framed at or soon after the time that the former colonies declared their independence. In reality there was a lapse of 13 years before the constitution was signed, and two years later still ten important amendments, making great changes, were adopted. It is true that in 1781, five years after the Declaration of Independence, a form of Federal Government was accepted by all the States, with a so-called Congress, but it was found to be altogether unworkable. The trouble was that the central government, if such it could be called, had a very restricted and fettered jurisdiction, and even less power to enforce its decisions. Our author gives a graphic account of the manner in which each State did what was good in its own eyes, without the least concern for the common welfare. A small minority could prevent any important measure from passing, indeed three men could ensure its defeat. But not content with such large powers, the several States usurped others when it pleased them, set at naught treaties made by Congress, made treaties for themselves, waged war, maintained armies, settled interstate boundaries, and did other things, all forbidden to them by the articles of confederation, not even stopping short of rebellion. In fact they behaved just as some Canadian politicians would have our Provinces behave.

So impracticable was the system that various attempts were made to grant to Congress a necessary enlargement of its powers. They were all defeated, sometimes by the refusal of only one State against twelve. Again Canada may be interested in observing that at one time the obstruction came from Rhode Island, little then as now, at another time from New York, then one of the smaller States.

At length when the evil became intolerable assent was given to assembling a Constitutional Convention in 1787, after it had several times been refused. Then followed a prolonged struggle in which while the convention sat in secret the extreme upholders of State rights fought in vain against the establishment of a strong national Government though they obtained some concessions such as the equal representation of States in the Senate. New York and New Jersey were then among the small States, which were terrified at the idea of being coerced by a combination between the three larger States, Virginia, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts. At that time Virginia and Massachusetts were each three times as populous as New Jersey. So afraid indeed was New York of being overpowered by more populous States that she withrew in disgust from the convention when representation by population was carried, and was one of the last States to sign the constitution. In this convention also began the disputes as to slavery, which though then settled by a compromise were to break forth again and again till the great civil war decided for ever against the exaggerated pretensions of the party of State sovereignty. Other questions caused some difficulty, but at length they were happily decided and the Convention accomplished its work of framing the present constitution. Thus a national government was formed instead of a loose coalition of sovereign states having no coherence and no united strength. The dying Congress accepted the new constitution, and it was signed one after the other by all the thirteen States, though reluctantly by some. Little Rhode Island which had refused to take part in the Convention amidst the reproaches of the other States for its unpatriotic obstinacy was the last to sign the constitution and then only when the other States were preparing to treat it as a foreign country.

From the experience of our neighbor we may learn the lesson that a strong central government is essential to the well-being of a federated nationality, and is even more favourable to local freedom to manage local affairs than a loose agglomeration of discordant States pulling different ways and disputing with each other. The two great federations of this continent originated differently; in the United States, a number of sovereign states conferred certain powers upon a central government for their common advantage reserving other rights for themselves; in Canada a central power delegated certain definite functions to Provincial legislatures to suit local wants, retaining all others. Yet the erstwhile sovereign states found it expedient and necessary to abandon as injurious and impracticable an exaggeration of state rights and Provincial independence which is being urged in Canada by those, would rather see a group of discordant and wrangling Provinces than a strong and united Dominion. The advocates of disintegration in the United States failed disastrously after working great mischief. They will fail equally in the Dominion, we trust without doing so much harm. We may learn from our neighbors' experience.

Another lesson that we may take to ourselves is the unreasonableness of despairing of our country because there is some little friction in the early working of its constitution. Our neighbors had far more bitter and serious divergencies of opinion, and yet they have not fallen to pieces. If the people of Canada will show an equal amount of reasonableness and patriotism, will work for unity and will firmly discountenance all fomenters of discord, they have no reason to despair of building up a great, prosperous and united country. Union is strength, and those who cause disunion are public enemies.

All should read the article, some of the points of which we have indicated, for they will find in it much information that is both interesting and useful.

DON'T COUGH!

But, Seriously, do you Catch on?

Well, the Great-and-only-Original-Terror to High-Priced-Clothiers, Wonderful-Forepaw dealer, in other words, teddy Cough (Now bring along the Babies, take the name and the gold dollar and be Happy) has issued a Challenge. He has the war paint on, and terror and destruction will come to any of the Baby Clothiers of Peterborough who will pretend to do business in opposition to this wonder of the 19th Century. He says he is TRUTHFUL! Well, let us see. He states positively that SHEPPARD is lying when he says that he got Bags from Peterboro's Great Cheapside. He says that he never advertises that which he will not carry out to the letter. READ CAREFULLY THE FOLLOWING, and see the position it puts this oracle of truth in—Mr. Teddy Cough:

37 Vic 37. C. D.

I HENRY SHEPPARD, of the Town of Peterborough, in the County of Peterborough, do Solemnly Declare that on Saturday evening last past two young men came into my place of business and stated to me that they had one deal with Gough but never wanted another. One said "I purchased goods from Gough, (meaning I suppose the store) and he guaranteed me that he would refund me the money if I "was not satisfied or words to that effect. I had witness to prove this. Afterwards I went back with the goods, stated that I was not "satisfied and wanted my money. He would not give it me. I told him I could make him return me the money if I wanted to, as I "had witness. I did not get the money, so Gough got the money and the clothing too, but, I have the experience."

On Wednesday, August, 31st, 1887, a responsible farmer came into my store and inspected my Grain Bags. He purchased two dozen bags of good quality, looking at the same time at the cheap bags selling at $1.75 per dozen. but, said he, would not buy them for his own use. About two hours after leaving my store he returned and said "I want two dozen of your cheap bags now" and stated that they were not for himself. He afterwards stated to me in the presence of a witness that he took the two dozen cheap bags in the store of one, Gough, a Clothier on George Street, Peterborough, and was paid $3.50 for the same by the said Gough, or one of his salesmen.

And I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the Act passed in the Thirty-seventh year of Her Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act for the suppression of voluntary and extra-judicial oaths."

HENRY SHEPPARD.

Declared before me at the Town of Peterborough, in the County of Peterborough, this 13th day of Sept., in the year of our Lord 1887.

E. A. PECK, A Commissioner, &c.

The above has the contrary ring of truth, seeing that in each case four reputable witnesses can be found to corroborate the above sworn statement, and, when it is necessary, more will follow. Sheppard has no desire to bring any man's business in such a light before the public. But the Back-bone talked about will never be found wanting in Sheppard, and just at the right time and place, Mr. Forepaw dealer may need his $500 or $1,000 to prove his assertions.

So that, at the present moment, Peterboro's great Cheapside will go on selling the Cheapest Clothing in Peterboro' though it raises the wool on this only Original Cough. Sheppard has no brother-in-laws in Muskoka to sell goods to, neither has he relatives or any other person, who at any time endorsed his paper to the extent of one cent. He has, though his stock is small, $10,000 in assets over liabilities, and just so long as this state of affairs exists he will pledge himself to the public to give entire satisfaction.

You can save money on any purchase. Sheppard has reduced Men's $10.00 Suits to $6.00, Men's $15.00 Suits to $10.00. Look out for Slashing Reductions in Men's and Boys' Clothing.

Full Government Deposit for Security of Policy Holders.

During the year 1886 applications for $2,722,450 were received, upon which were issued 1,259 policies for $2,520,950, and seven policies for $16,351, which had lapsed for non payment of premiums, were revived. This is a volume of new business amounting to nearly $500,000 over that of any former year, and sixty per cent. in excess of that done by any other Canadian Company in the same period of its history.

ABSTRACT OF REVENUE ACCOUNT AND BALANCE SHEET.

Income for the year 1886	$194,249 39
Expenditure (including payment to policy-holders of $37,007 66)	107,748 94

BY W. E. NORRIS.

My mother received him in that bright little upstairs sitting room where so much of her life has been spent, and about which there always clings a faint, old fashioned smell of potpourri. She is a very beautiful, refined looking old lady, and it is my belief that she is perfectly aware of the fact. I noticed that she was wearing a little of the treasured Mechlin lace which belonged to her great grandmother, and as soon as she opened her lips I perceived that she had put on her very best manner, which, like the lace, is only assumed upon occasions of importance.

She made me place a chair for Beauchamp beside her sofa and smiled graciously upon him over the top of a large fan, which she swayed gently to and fro while she spoke. "It is very good of you, sir," she began, "to visit a bed ridden old woman whose conversation can have few attractions for you. Indeed, I should not have ventured to put you to so much inconvenience, had I not had a special motive for doing so."

I suppose Beauchamp had never heard anything like this before in all his days. He was quite unaccustomed to being called "sir" and condescended to, and it evidently flustered him.

"Oh, but you really, you know, Mrs. Maynard—upon my word—delighted, I'm sure!" said he, with all the graceful eloquence of the age.

"You are so kind," resumed my mother suavely, "as to say so, but I must not flatter myself that your presence here is due to any other cause than to courtesy, which, as I have always understood, is natural to you."

She went on in this strain for some little time, gradually working up to her point, and anything funnier in its way than the contrast which she presented to her bewildered interlocutor I have seldom witnessed. At length she shut up her fan with a snap, exclaiming, more in sorrow than in anger:

"And can what I hear be true, Mr. Beauchamp? Can it be that you, a gentleman and a man of honor, are not only forcing your attentions upon a lady to whom they are distasteful, but that you have actually made her acceptance of your hand the subject of a pecuniary bargain with her father?"

He assured her earnestly that it was not true; she had been misinformed. Nothing would induce him to force his attentions upon anybody who—who—in short, who didn't want them. "And as for a bargain, there never really was any bargain at all—at least, not in the way that you mean—there wasn't indeed! I'm sure I shall be only too happy to oblige you, Mrs. Maynard, if you'll tell me what you wish me to do, and, if you won't be—excuse me—quite so awfully polite about it."

Thus adjured, my mother consented to unbend and make her meaning plain. Without mentioning Jim's name, she gave it to be understood that Lady Mildred's affections were engaged; after which, she discretely insinuated that although, under such circumstances, Mr. Beauchamp must feel that it would be out of the question to take advantage of her filial submissiveness, yet, in some ways, too abrupt a withdrawal on his part was to be deprecated.

"Lord Staines," said she, "is an old man and in broken health. From what the doctor tells me, I fear that he may not be with us much longer, and we should all wish to spare him, if possible, the shock of a sudden disappointment."

"I see," broke in Beauchamp, with a knowing nod. "After what you've told me, I wouldn't for the world marry poor little Mildred. In fact, to tell the truth, I never was very keen about it. And we'll manage to humbug the old boy as long as he lives."

My mother drew herself up and looked severe. "You surprise me, Mr. Beauchamp," she said. "Surely you do not suppose that I am advising a course of deception!"

Here I judged it opportune to put in my oar. "Nobody," quoth I, from the background, "could suppose anything so unwarrantable. You will not be called upon to use deception, my dear Beauchamp, only a little diplomacy, a little tact."

"Harry," said my mother, "I am quite ashamed of being so troublesome, but would you mind going down stairs and seeing whether my knitting is in the library? If it is not there it may perhaps be on one of the chairs in the drawing room. Or possibly it may have become entangled in Sarah's skirts, as it sometimes does, and been swept down into the kitchen. At any rate, I feel sure that it must be somewhere."

If there is one thing for which I am more remarkable than for my humility I suppose it is my obedience. I was absent for exactly five and twenty minutes, and when I came back to say that the knitting was nowhere to be found, I was not at all surprised to find my mother tranquilly occupied with it, nor was there any need to inform me that the two conspirators had arrived at a perfect mutual understanding.

Upon the morality of the compact thus entered into I made no comment at the time, and forbear from making any now; but I will say for my mother that she had the grace to feel thoroughly ashamed of herself, as was shown by the shortness of her manner during the rest of the day and by the vindictive determination with which she insisted upon reading a long sermon to me and the servants that evening after prayer, although it was the middle of the week.

CHAPTER XVII.

If I were asked to mention the man of my acquaintance whom I consider the least fitted, by nature and by habit, to impose upon a child of average acuteness, I should unhesitatingly name Jim Leigh. Yet such is the power of love, and so prone are the best of us to listen to casuistical arguments, that he embarked upon the career of duplicity suggested to him by his friends with a readiness, not to say a zest, of which he ought certainly to have been incapable. That he and Lady Mildred and Beauchamp were actuated by the best of good motives in behaving as they did I don't deny; but, as a more or less impartial looker on, I felt my sympathies veering round, while I watched them, to the side of the unsuspecting old man who was so completely taken in by their maneuvers. Lord Staines, I believe, looked upon his daughter's engagement as being to all intents and purposes an accomplished fact. He saw that she walked or rode every day with her supposed lover; he did not know that as soon as they were out of sight of the house they were joined by Jim, and that Beauchamp then promptly hurried away to smoke a cigar with me, thereby interfering considerably with my daily labors. He seemed to be satisfied that all would now go well; but in truth the apathy which had fallen upon him after his grandson's death was hardly to be stirred by any event, great or small.

One event, for which he, and indeed all London, must have been fully prepared, took place at this time and created no little excitement in the neighborhood; for we do not study the "society" journals much in our parts, nor does the gossip of the clubs reach us. I say that the financial collapse of the Bracknell establishment can have surprised no one who had lived in or near the fashionable world during the foregoing year or so; yet, if her statement was to be believed, it fell with all the cruelty of an unexpected blow upon the person who, one would have thought, should have been best aware of its imminence. Late one evening, Hilda, bringing with her a stupendous pile of baggage, arrived at Staines Court to cast herself, somewhat dramatically, upon the protection of the head of the house. I happened to be dining there and witnessed her entry upon the scene, which was of a nature to melt the hardest heart. In a voice broken by emotion she told her lamentable tale. She had—so she assured us—no longer a home; perhaps even she had no longer a husband; for to Bracknell's whereabouts she was unable to obtain any clew. On her return to Wilton place, after paying a round of visits, she had found the minions of the law in possession, and her personal property seized. "They have taken everything—everything!" she cried. "Even my Bible and Prayer Book are in their hands!"

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

Members Attend.

Every member of Otonabee Lodge, No. 13, I. O. O. F., is requested to be present at the regular meeting on Monday evening.

Scott Act.

There was a blank in the Scott Act prosecution to-day, but on Tuesday P. M. Edmison will dispose of four cases in Ashburnham.

OPENED out at Turnbull's, case after case of Fall and Winter Millinery, marked at prices that will suit everybody.

Orchestra.

An amateur orchestra was organized on Friday evening, with Mr. J. Butcher conductor. The membership is ample to start with, and it promises to be augmented. The instruments to be used are: violins, picello flute, cornet and harp.

The Kabo corset warranted to wear a year without breaking, is sold only at Turnbull's, the Headquarters for all New and Improved Corsets.

The Cold.

The Emismore weather observer reminds the people that winter is coming on. There was a formation of ice in that Township on Friday evening. At sunrise the thermometer registered 30 degrees. The Rev. V. Clementi's self-registering thermometer showed 4 degrees of frost on Friday night.

Next Year's Canoe Meet.

The Lindsay Post says:—"A meeting of the directorate of the Northern Division is talked of to arrange the locality of the next meet, which it is expected will be held some what further west. In this connection the western bay on Lake Simcoe or Couchiching Lake, have been spoken of as available places. Balsam Lake has been brought forward as a possible location, but the contention that it is too near Stoney Lake, the scene of the last meet must have some weight."

Fine Workmanship.

A specimen of inlaid work is exhibited in the window of Mr. McFriden's furniture store which is highly artistic. The wood used is maple, walnut, shoemach and red cedar, and the central figure represented is a house. The surrounding is checker work, the light and shade of which, done in natural wood, is simply marvellous. The whole piece of wood is very ornamental, and must have entailed much patient labor. Mr. T. Burns, of town, who is disabled by paralysis, is the workman. The piece is valued at $20.

Instantaneous.

Mr. R. M. Roy is a success at taking lightning photographic views. At the Driving Park on Friday afternoon he took photographs of several fliers which were doing the track at a 2.40 gait. He also took a view of Mr. J. Dickson Morgan, who it appears, is now devoting his attention to pedestrianism. The photograph is perfect, even though the subject was travelling the track at a good speed. Seen through magnifying glass the eyeballs are discernable, while the mouth is visible to the naked eye. Mr. Roy, when in Toronto a few weeks ago, took a view of the windmills at the exhibition grounds. The view represents them as standing still, though all were in rapid motion.

The Churches.

The following is a list of services in the several churches to-morrow:—

ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL.—At St. Peter's Cathedral, Roman Catholic, there will be three masses celebrated, the first at 7 a. m. the second at 8 a. m., and the third at 10.30 a. m. Vespers at 7 p. m.

ST. LUKE'S.—The regular services at St Luke's Church will be conducted as follows: Morning Prayer, Litany and sermon at 11 a. m., evensong at 7 p. m.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.—The regular services will be conducted as follows:—Holy Communion at 8.30 a.m.; Morning Prayer, Litany and sermon at 11 a.m.; Evening Prayer and sermon at 7 p.m.

ST. PAUL'S.—The usual services will be held.

BAPTIST CHURCH, Murray Street.—The pulpit will be occupied by the Rev. Mr. Grant, of the Home Missions.

METHODIST CHURCH, Charlotte Street.—The Rev. I. Tovell will conduct the services in the morning and evening. In the evening a sermon will be preached to the young people.

METHODIST CHURCH, George street.—The Rev. F. H. Wallace will conduct the services in the morning at 11.00 o'clock, and at 7 o'clock. Strangers are always welcome.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.—The usual services will be conducted.

METHODIST CHURCH, Mark street (Ashburnham)—The Rev. J. C. Wilson, pastor, will conduct the services.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

Fourth Annual Report of the Y. M. C. A. Secretary.

The following is the fourth annual report of the Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, which was read at the annual meeting:—

FOURTH ANNUAL REPORT.

To the Officers and Members of the Peterborough Young Men's Christian Association:

DEAR BRETHREN,—It is with mingled joy and sorrow that my fourth and last annual report is presented to you to-night. My heart is full of gratitude for the goodness of God to me during my secretaryship, and for the uniformly kind intercourse I have ever had with officers and members of the Association. Though there have been many dark days, there has always been the silver lining to the clouds and I close my term of office with very deep regret. In the course of the four years past I have become warmly attached to the work of this Association and to many kind friends, both in the Association and outside, and to leave both the work and my numerous friends here causes me great sorrow. But I think it is clearly of God's leading that I am leaving you, and I hope and believe that this change, ordered of Him, will work for good to the Association, and that the coming year will be the most prosperous one the Association has ever had.

In looking back over the past year's work there is nothing startling to chronicle, while yet there is abundant cause for thanksgiving.

As you have heard from the Finance Committee's report, the heavy debt of about $300, under which we started our year's work, has been virtually cleared off. This has not been done without a very great amount of effort, and the time and attention given thereto has very seriously injured the aggressive work of the Association. Still there has been progress along nearly every line of work, as will be seen while we consider the work in its fourfold character.

PHYSICAL DEPARTMENT.—In the Physical Department we have done very little, through lack of the proper appliances. Last spring a lacrosse club was organized, and would probably have been successful, but the use of the field which had been granted us, was afterwards refused, and we were unable to get another suitable one. We hope that in the not distant future, the Association will be able to provide effectively for this department of its work. A gymnesium, baths, etc., would not only be very beneficial to our young men, but would be a very effective way of influencing many whom we cannot now reach.

Very important in its bearing upon the physical side of young men's nature is the question of social and personal purity. Considerable attention has been given to this subject in the past year, though still more might be done. We had two meetings, each attended by 100 young men, the one addressed by Mr. Charles James, of England, and the other by the Rev. John Hay, of Campbellford. We believe that many young men were lifted on to a higher plane than they previously occupied by hearing these addresses. Testimonials came to us of help received by means of them.

The SOCIAL part of the work has received a fair share of attention. We had, during the winter, monthly social gatherings of the members. These gatherings, six in number, though not attended as they should have been, have, nevertheless, been of considerable value in drawing the members into closer acquaintance with each other. The refreshments for these socials were provided by a few lady friends. Besides music and social intercourse the proceedings generally included a conversation on some branch of our work.

On New Year's day, assisted by our lady friends, we gave our annual New Year's reception, inviting all the young men of the town to call. A large number accepted the invitation, and passed part of the afternoon in a pleasant social way. The evening was occupied with a musical and literary entertainment. The social gathering we have enjoyed to-night is due to the kindness of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, who, with very great kindness, undertook all the arrangements in providing tea.

In the INTELLECTUAL DEPARTMENT we have made use of the usual agencies, as the reading room, lectures and classes. The reading room, with periodicals on file, has been well patronized, the daily average attendance being about fifty, which would make over 15,000 visits paid in the course of the year. The stock of newspapers and magazines is a very good one, and we have accommodation for a much larger number of readers. A new feature recently added is the correspondence table, where members and strangers may write their letters, stationery being supplied. It has been used very much, showing that it is well appreciated. Some of the best parlor games would be a good addition to our agencies.

The lectures have consisted of the following:—

J. H. Long, Esq., M.A., "Something About Stars;" attendance 20.

Rev. F. H. Wallace, M.A., B.D., "Germany and the Germans;" attendance 35

H. Earl, Esq., "Readings from Tennyson," etc.; attendance 60.

Rev. I. Tovell, "Athletics—Use and Abuse;" attendance 35.

Rev. A. H. Munro, "Tower of London," (Illustrated); attendance 125.

Geo. S. Bean, Esq., "Electricity," (illustrated); attendance 110.

Chas. James, Esq., "Christmas Evans;" attendance 200.

Rev. Ghosn al Howie (2), "Oriental Life;" attendance 200.

Miss Fraine, recital.

Jubilee Singers, concert.

The Peterborough gentlemen who lectured as above kindly gave us their services, for which they deserve our warm thanks. The Rev. Mr. Munro also went to considerable expense in procuring pictures to illustrate his lecture.

Mr. B. Earl, as in former years, conducted a class in English Literature, which was well attended. We owe Mr. Earl a vote of thanks for his willing assistance. A class in phonography was conducted by Mr. John Norton, until his departure from town brought it to a close.

RELIGIOUS WORK.—The religious part of our work has been fully presented in the report of the Devotional Committee. No time should be lost in securing a competent teacher for the Young Men's Bible Class, which is perhaps the most important portion of our work. We have to thank God for some conversions that have occurred, and pray that he will use us yet more and more. Many have taken their first step in public Christian service in our young men's meetings, and others have been strengthened, developed and stimulated to increased effort in Christ's service. We trust that the orchestra which is now being organized will be of great use in our meetings.

MEMBERSHIP.—During the year we have added to our roll 83 new members. We have lost many this year, as in previous years, by removal from town, and among them were some of our best workers. We mourn the loss of one by death, who, though not living here, was very active in our work whenever here on a visit. We refer to Mr. William Gilbert, who died so suddenly in St. Paul, Minn. We have recently made a thorough revision of the membership roll, striking off those who were only nominal members. The names taken off, including removals from town, number 75, leaving us with a present membership of 227.

RECEPTION COMMITTEE.—The duty of this Committee is to have one or more of its members on duty at the rooms every evening. While the work has not been performed as regularly as is desirable, still good work has been done. We hope in the coming year that the Chairman of the Committee, whoever he may be, will resolutely keep the members up to work, and call them together for conference at least once a month.

THE INVITATION COMMITTEE has from time to time gone out on the streets with printed invitations to the Saturday night and Sunday night meetings. For these two Committees we urgently need young men willing to undertake hard work for Christ, and shall be glad if any such will volunteer at once.

ASSOCIATION NOTES.—This bulletin of our work has regularly paid its visits to members and friends. On the completion of the third year of issue, it was decided to enlarge and improve it, and it now makes a handsome appearance under the title of "The Young Men." If well supported by members and friends, it will be self-sustaining, and may ever become in some degree a source of revenue.

CONVENTIONS.—Our Association was represented at the Provincial Convention at Kingston last February by Messrs. John Miller, Alex. Cooper, J. H. Steves, jr. and the Secretary. At this Convention the Province was divided into Districts, and Peterborough was made the centre of one district. The Committee of each of these districts is supposed to develop the work within its bounds, and to hold a district Conference annually. In our District one new Association has been formed at Stirling, one place, Campbellford, is preparing to organize and correspondence has been conducted with a number of other places. Our District Conference was held at Port Hope on April 11th and 12th. It was arranged for by us and was attended by Messrs. H. S. Griffin, Bannell Sawyer, Arthur Tebb, Alex. Cooper and the Secretary. I was also privileged to attend Mr. Moody's Summer Encampment for Bible Study at Northfield, Mass., last July.

BOY'S BRANCH.—Believing that in order to get young men thoroughly trained in Association work we must begin on them while they are boys, we have continued the Boys' Branch with very fair success. A weekly meeting for Bible Study is held, with occasional entertainments and lectures. We have also a good selection of boys' periodicals on file.

PERSONAL WORK.—While good is done by all the agencies already mentioned, perhaps the benefits resulting from the daily personal work are the greatest of all, and the results of their efforts cannot be tabulated. Strangers are met with daily, either in the rooms or by calling on them when their names have been handed in to us. A number come in to ask for boarding houses; others bring letters of introduction from their pastors or from the Associations in their previous places of residence; others again are brought in by members, and in every case we seek to gain an influence over them for good. Nor do we forget those who go out from us, whether members or otherwise. Letters of introduction are given to all young men who apply for them or can be induced to take them, and sometimes where no introduction is given, we write to the Associations in other places about young men who have gone there from Peterborough. We also keep up correspondence as far as possible with our members who go to other places. Many young men come to us out of employment, and seeking our assistance in getting it. Many of these are quite worthy of help, and we shall be very glad if employers of labor will let us know of vacancies that may occur in their establishments.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.—It would take more time than is at our disposal to return thanks for all the favors we have received. We heartily acknowledge our indebtedness to the editors of the daily newspapers of Peterborough for many favors, and especially for editorials bearing on our work, which have been a great help. We thank the ladies for their ready and cheerful help whenever asked for, and especially for the help given by the ladies of the George Street and St. Paul's Churches in connection with our finances. We thank the pastors and trustees of the St. Andrew's George Street, Baptist and St. Paul's Churches for the use of their respective edifices on various occasions, and we also thank such of the churches as took up collections for us last year.

We thank the ladies who have taken an interest in the rooms, and have supplied flowers for the tables from week to week. And lastly we heartily thank our generous subscribers for the means by which the work reported above has been carried on.

THE FUTURE.—We have been considering the past, and from that past we see more clearly than ever some of our needs for the future. One of these is more thorough individual consecration to definite service on the part of workers. We have some noble, willing workers, but this work will never be as it should be till every member learns that he is somewhat responsible for its success. I am glad to resign the reins to one so competent as I believe Mr. Stevens to be. But one man, or a small number of men cannot do the work of an Association with over 150 active members. If every committee man does his work faithfully in the coming year, it will make a wonderful difference in the prosperity of the Association. Another great need that presses strongly on us is a building, a home of our own, where with the proper appliances, we should be able to reach three or four times as many young men as we do now. I hope the time is not far distant when Peterborough will join in the great building movement that is sweeping over our Associations in Canada and the United States. Toward this end, a lot at least should be secured as speedily as possible, as every day will make it harder to secure a suitable site. We have other needs, many of them, but let us be assured that God will supply all our need, in the Association as in the individual if we keep waiting on Him. To Him be all the glory for anything useful that has been done, for of His own have we given Him. And may we each all so conduct ourselves that at the last we shall hear His "Welldone, good and faithful servant."

Major Boulton on Railways.

Major Chas. A. Boulton writes to the Toronto Mail from Russell, Manitoba, to advocate in a temperate manner some reasonable agreement to facilitate railway competition in Manitoba and the Northwest. He looks to this through the Grand Trunk Railway to Canadian markets and ports, and does not like the agitators for disruption in Winnipeg and Ontario, clamour for access to "the natural market" in the United States and the ports of that country. It is this dishonest intention on the part of those whose very country was made for them by the C. P. R., constructed so largely at our cost, that has excited the opposition of the majority of the people of Ontario and the satisfaction of the disloyal portion of the press.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

AN OUTBREAK FEARED.

Alarming Predictions Made by British Liberal Newspapers.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The Liberal press of England insists that the rapidly increasing crime in Ireland, including the killing of Constable Whelan, who was murdered by the moonlighters, is directly traceable to the Coercion Act. The predictions made when the act was passed are now being fulfilled, they say, and none but the Government can be blamed. The leaders of the national Irish League threaten to cease their efforts to control the people unless England will alleviate the harshness with which it is now treating Ireland. It is, however, a matter of grave doubt, they say, if the leaders could now control the wrought-up passions of their injured countrymen. The time has almost come and is near at hand when but a slight fanning is needed to make the fire that is now smouldering in the hearts of the Irish break out in a wild, fierce flame that ere it is checked will commit great havoc and widespread ruin. The priests, too, to whom the Irish always have rendered implicit obedience, are losing their influence in checking the people. A crisis seems certainly at hand. It is now apparent that the Government during the recess of Parliament intends to turn loose the dogs of war, and spare no effort to carry out the provisions of the Crimes Act. It is a desperate game the Government is playing, and they propose to force the issue and either win or lose. Mr. Balfour is at present in Dublin preparing for the siege, and the battle, the rumblings of which already begin to be heard, will soon begin in earnest.

A BLAZING METEOR.

The People of Barrington, Nova Scotia Astonished by a Fiery Visitor.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 16.—A Special from Barrington says a wonderful phenomenon occurred there last night. About 8.30 o'clock a luminious body, looking as large as an elephant, with long tail attached, suddenly appeared in southeastern SKY and shot out of sight in a southerly direction. The night was cloudless and without moon, but the stars were out and a strange soft blue and white lights lit up the whole firmament as bright as day. The light was only five or six seconds in duration when all became suddenly dark again. The fiery visitor seemed to strike the ground a short distance away. Afterwards a low whirring sound was heard in the direction where it had disappeared. The sound kept increasing in volum till it became terrible. It seemed as if the bed of ocean was a huge pot and the water was boiling over. Some people fancied they felt a slight tremor of the earth, but most persons felt nothing. The noise which was terrifying lasted fully a minute and a half.

A DRIFTING VESSEL.

A Fishing Schooner Without Life on Board Drifting Before the Wind.

CANSO, N.S., Sept. 16.—A number of provincial fishing vessels have arrived here in the past couple of days, all of which felt the gales of Aug. 26, and Sept 3, but no loss of life from them is reported. The Gloucester schooner Florence B. Parr arrived to-day from the Grand Banks and brings the report that on the day after the fearful blow of August 26, another American saw a fishing schooner driving before the wind without any sign of life on board. Her decks had been swept clear of everything, all boats and everything movable having disappeared. No sails were set and she was driving aimlessly ahead at a high rate of speed without any hand to guide her. The vessel was seen by others who mistook it for a phantom ship.

A DREADFUL COLLISION.

An Excursion Train on the Midland Railway in England Wrecked

LONDON, Sept. 16.—A dreadful collision occurred to-day on the Midland Railway. A train filled with excursionists who were going to Doncaster to witness the races collided with another train and was wrecked. The accounts of the disaster thus far received are that 20 of the excursionists were killed and many injured.

THE ROYALIST MANIFESTO.

Issued at a Time That it will Embarrass the Ministry.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The manifesto issued by the Count of Paris attracts a deal of attention here and across the channel, where the amazing rapidity with which it was circulated all over the country is a matter of wonder in itself. The manifesto is the topic of the hour. Under ordinary circumstances such a document would have been puerile and futile, but with the acumen of an experienced statesman the Count timed its appearance, and has issued his manifesto at a moment when it will be most potent and more likely to have the desired effect on the minds of Frenchmen. Rouvier's ministry, never strong, holds now a precarious condition, and France is ready any day to hear of its downfall. To the Loyalist party it looks for support, and if this is withheld the influence of the ministry in its feeble condition would speedily dissolve. In fact the Loyalists occupy much the same position in France toward the Government as the Unionists do in England for the Conservative Government. To cut loose altogether from the counsel of the Loyalists and to ignore their suggestions would be to court political death. The appearance of the manifesto at this particular time gives an emphatic check to the exuberance of joy with which France is convulsed over the manœuvres of the seventeenth army corps, which has successfully demonstrated the scheme of mobilization. It diverts the public mind from the absorbing satisfaction it feels in the fancied possession of an army that is now able to punish Germany, and directs it into other channels than those which lead to a desire for revenge. It however threatens the fall of the Rouvier ministry, which cannot openly accept the terms of the manifesto, and between the desire to retain the support of the Loyalists, and its perplexity in regard to pleasing the Republican portion of France, the Government is in sore straits. The count's manifesto may thus have a decided influence on the mind of the fickle Gaul and go a long way towards taking the first step in the direction of a monarchy.

POLICE COURT.

ASSAULT.

SATURDAY, Sept. 18.—Carl Smart charged Wm. C. Springer with having assaulted him

The defendant pleaded not guilty.

The COMPLAINANT was called. He said that himself and Mr. Springer were employees of the Lock Works. On Friday he had occasion to go upstairs to the pattern room for a piece of scrap brass. Mr. Springer told him to go out or he would put him out. He refused to go and the defendant took hold of him and banged him around the room. He struck against a planer, a large iron machine, and his face was cut.

Mr. STRATTON, who appeared for the defense, cross-examined the complainant. The latter stated that Mr. Springer did not strike him. He acknowledged that Mr. Osgoode was the head pattern maker and that Mr. Springer worked with him, but would not admit that Mr. Osgoode had any authority in the department. The manager of the works exercised his authority there.

THE DEFENDANT—Mr. Osgoode is superintendent of that department.

The Magistrate and Counsel for the defense discussed the point whether the law gave one employee a right to eject another from a room in the factory in which they are both workmen.

Mr. STRATTON claimed that the law gave a foreman power to exercise reasonable force to eject intruders.

His WORSHIP said that he did not know of any such law. He would overrule Mr. Stratton on that point. If this were allowed there would be no end to broils. Foremen should report such matters to the manager of the establishment for quiet settlement.

Mr. STRATTON said it was scarcely the manly thing to do to bring such trifling matters into Court.

The COMPLAINANT replied that this was no trifling matter.

His WORSHIP said that considering the circumstances of the case he would impose only a nominal fine $2 and costs.

Football.

Quite a crowd of people went over to the P. A. A. grounds on Friday evening to see the football match, Norwood vs. Peterborough, by electric light. The play commenced at a few minutes past eight o'clock, the teams being placed as follows:—

PETERBOROUGH.

Goal,
Kincaid.
Backs,
Halliday, Morris.
Half Backs,
Schofield, Forbes.

Right Wing,	Centre,	Left Wing
Scott, Austin.	Brennan, (Capt.) Begley.	Allison, G. Smith.

NORWOOD.

H. Pearce;	Burgess, Anderson,	McKelvie, Anderson.
Left Wing	Centre,	Right Wing.

Bewell (Capt.), F. Pearce.
Backs.
Finlay.
Outside Back,
Stephenson,
Inside Back.
Hutchison,
Goal.

It became apparent at once that Norwood would win. Their passing and kicking was much superior to that of the home team, and their team play was also good. During the first half of the time the visitors took three goals, and during the last half, one, the score standing at the close of the match 4-0 in favor of Norwood.

DIED AT THE PIANO.

Peculiar Circumstances Attending the Death of a Musician.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 16.—Prof. Udo Rhodins, a prominent musician of this city, died yesterday under most peculiar circumstances. About 3 o'clock he visited Oddfellows' Hall in the third story of the lodge building for the purpose of regulating and tuning the organ. He was alone in the lodge room, and people in the streets below heard him play two or three airs on the organ. A friend entering the room saw Rhodins sitting before the organ, leaning over a little, grasping a key with his right hand. He spoke to him, but received no reply. Upon closer inspection it was discovered that Prof. Rhodins had been dead fully an hour. The summons must have come instantly, for the dead musician's head was turned with ear towards the key board as though listening for the false note. Death resulted from apoplexy. Although only 32 years of age, the deceased was one of the finest organists in the south.

HIS EYES TORN OUT.

Later Particulars of the Accident at Ste Anne de Beaupre.

QUEBEC, Sept. 16.—The reports that arrived in the city yesterday about the unfortunate accident at Ste. Anne de Beaupre stated wrongly that three persons had been killed instantly by the explosion of the cannon. It is not known that three men were horribly mutilated, and that two of them, Joseph Bilodeau and Sylvain, are not expected to outlive the day. Bilodeau's two eyes were torn out of their orbits, his nose and one ear carried away, and his jaw bone and his right arm shattered to pieces. Sylvain had his arm fractured to pieces and received other grievous bodily injuries. The third victim had his face badly burnt. The three men are under the treatment of Drs. J. P. Deblois and Boldue. Bilodeau and Sylvain possessed their full consciousness last night, but they suffered excruciating pain.

Forest Fires.

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 16.—There have not been in years as destructive bush fires as those which have burned this year. They are still consuming valuable timber, fences, buildings and in some instances the crops of the season. At Eganville, in the next county, fires are raging in every direction. On Sunday morning one fire started below the Cascades, and by night had travelled half a mile towards the village. The fires in the vicinity of Golden Lake are probably the largest. The farmers have been night and day battling against the flames. Mr. Brisco was working between two fires when a heavy wind arose, spreading the fire so rapidly as to encircle him. He made a bold dash through the burning pinery, and lost his hair and whiskers.

Walked off a Train.

LANCASTER, Sept. 16.—At daylight this morning a lady was found lying unconscious alongside of the Grand Trunk track, about one mile east of this place, and was brought here and cared for till noon, when she recovered consciousness. It was then learned that her name was Mrs. Birrall, and that she had been a passenger on No. 4 express going west last night. She knows nothing about how she came to leave the train, and it is supposed that she arose in her sleep, walked out on to the platform and fell off. She is badly bruised and, it is feared, has sustained severe internal injuries. Her friends have been telegraphed to.

Disease Among Cattle.

DUQUOIS, Ill., Sept. 16.—A new and strange disease is affecting cattle in this part of Illinois. Milch cows suffer most. The disease is in the eyes, some cows being reported totally blind. It seems that the cattle running on the commons are most subject to attack. This report includes the range cattle in Jackson and Perry Counties. The eyes are said to assume a blue color. Some cows kept on pastures are affected.

The Toronto Exhibition.

The Toronto fair closed on Friday night at 10 o'clock. The tick of the turnstiles ceased much earlier in the evening with $2,978 to their credit for the day, and a total of $52 049 for the entire Exhibition. This, includes the receipts at the Grand Stand and is $11,152 more than the receipts of the fair of 1886.

LATEST CABLE NEWS.

THE ALASKAN SEIZURES.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—In the Commons today Mr. Smith, replying to a question by Mr. Gourley, said the Dominion Government had not reported whether the order for the release of vessels seized by the American cruisers had bee carried out.

THE LIBERAL LEAGUE.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The council of the Liberal League has invited the leaders of the Irish National League to discuss the feasibility of starting branches of the Liberal League in Ireland wherever the National League branches are suppressed by the Government.

PARLIAMENT PROROGUED.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The British Parliament was prorogued to-day.

LEAGUE MEETINGS.

DUBLIN, Sept. 16.—The executive branch of the National League has arranged for meetings to be held on Sunday at Roscommon, Bandon, Newton and Kelmacthomas. Members of Parliament Sheehy, Burner, Hooper, Timothy Healy and Dillon will address the meetings. Mr. Balfour had a conference at the Castle to-day with Lord Ashborne and General Buller, and it is expected that the meetings will be proclaimed.

INQUEST OPENED.

DUBLIN, Sept. 16.—At the inquest over the victims of the recent affray at Mitchellstown, Head Constable Doherty's evidence differed from the statement made by Chief Secretary Balfour in the House of Commons. An unbiased Scotch tourist gave testimony that agrees with the Nationalist version of the affair.

A BRIEF REBELLION.

MADRAS, Sept. 16.—A rebellion which proved to be of short duration broke out in Menihore recently. The rebels penetrated into the Maharajah's palace, but were repulsed with a loss of nine killed and many wounded. No further trouble is expected.

HELP FOR THE DISTRESSED.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—J. I. Burner, Liberal Member of Parliament for the Northwich Division of Cheshire, has given $2,000 for the purpose of starting a fund to meet the material needs of Ireland and relieve the distresss there.

THE QUEEN'S SPEECH.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Parliament was prorogued this afternoon. The Queen's speech, among other matters, referred as follows to the fisheries question and the colonial conference, matters of interest to Canada:—"I have agreed with the President of the United States to refer to a joint commission the difficult question respecting the North American fisheries which have recently been discussed by the two nations. With singular satisfaction I menton the assemblage of the first conference of representatives of my colonies ever held in London. Their deliberations, directed to many matters of deep practical interest to their respective communities and conducted in a spirit of hearty co operation, will, I doubt not, add strength to the affection by which the various parts of my Empire are bound together."

THE KAISER.

STETTIN, Sept. 16.—The Emperor William had a fainting fit after the banquet on Wednesday. On recovering he retired supported by his physicians and valet. He was well to-day and attended the Nobility banquet.

"COLD BLOODED MURDER."

DUBLIN, Sept. 16.—The Municipal Council at Queenstown has adopted a resolution condemning the Mitchellstown police for "cold blood murder" when they fired on the meeting last Friday. A copy of the resolution was ordered to be presented to Mr. William O'Brien in his cell at the Cork jail.

AYOUB'S HIDING PLACE.

BOMBAY, Sept. 16.—News has been received here that Ayoub Khan had taken refuge in Koi Jamani, Beloocnistan. If he remains he will be surrendered to the British authorities.

Reduction in C. P. R. Rates.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 16.—The latest reduction of five cents per hundred pounds in wheat rates on the Canadian Pacific railway simply extends to the all rail routes to Montreal, the reduction having already been made to Fort Arthur.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT.

SEPTEMBER 17th is the hundredth anniversary of the present constitution of the United States, a date of great interest to our neighbors, and not without interest in Canada also.

The current number of the Century Magazine contains an article on "The Framers and Framing of Our Constitution," which should be read by all Canadians who wish to learn how the system of the neighboring Federation grew into its present shape, and thereby to obtain valuable light in considering the constitution of our own Dominion.

Even those who know better often vaguely acquiesce in the popular idea that the present constitution of the United States was framed at or soon after the time that the former colonies declared their independence. In reality there was a lapse of 13 years before the constitution was signed, and two years later still ten important amendments, making great changes, were adopted. It is true that in 1781, five years after the Declaration of Independence, a form of Federal Government was accepted by all the States, with a so-called Congress, but it was found to be altogether unworkable. The trouble was that the central government, if such it could be called, had a very restricted and fettered jurisdiction, and even less power to enforce its decisions. Our author gives a graphic account of the manner in which each State did what was good in its own eyes, without the least concern for the common welfare. A small minority could prevent any important measure from passing, indeed three men could ensure its defeat. But not content with such large powers, the several States usurped others when it pleased them, set at naught treaties made by Congress, made treaties for themselves, waged war, maintained armies, settled interstate boundaries, and did other things, all forbidden to them by the articles of confederation, not even stopping short of rebellion. In fact they behaved just as some Canadian politicians would have our Provinces behave.

So impracticable was the system that various attempts were made to grant to Congress a necessary enlargement of its powers. They were all defeated, sometimes by the refusal of only one State against twelve. Again Canada may be interested in observing that at one time the obstruction came from Rhode Island, little then as now, at another time from New York, then one of the smaller States.

At length when the evil became intolerable assent was given to assembling a Constitutional Convention in 1787, after it had several times been refused. Then followed a prolonged struggle in which while the convention sat in secret the extreme upholders of State rights fought in vain against the establishment of a strong national Government though they obtained some concessions such as the equal representation of States in the Senate. New York and New Jersey were then among the small States, which were terrified at the idea of being coerced by a combination between the three larger States, Virginia, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts. At that time Virginia and Massachusetts were each three times as populous as New Jersey. So afraid indeed was New York of being overpowered by more populous States that she withrew in disgust from the convention when representation by population was carried, and was one of the last States to sign the constitution. In this convention also began the disputes as to slavery, which though then settled by a compromise were to break forth again and again till the great civil war decided for ever against the exaggerated pretensions of the party of State sovereignty. Other questions caused some difficulty, but at length they were happily decided and the Convention accomplished its work of framing the present constitution. Thus a national government was formed instead of a loose coalition of sovereign states having no coherence and no united strength. The dying Congress accepted the new constitution, and it was signed one after the other by all the thirteen States, though reluctantly by some. Little Rhode Island which had refused to take part in the Convention amidst the reproaches of the other States for its unpatriotic obstinacy was the last to sign the constitution and then only when the other States were preparing to treat it as a foreign country.

From the experience of our neighbor we may learn the lesson that a strong central government is essential to the well-being of a federated nationality, and is even more favourable to local freedom to manage local affairs that a loose agglomeration of discordant States pulling different ways and disputing with each other. The two great federations of this continent originated differently; in the United States, a number of sovereign states conferred certain powers upon a central government for their common advantage reserving other rights for themselves; in Canada a central power delegated certain definite functions to Provincial legislatures to suit local wants, retaining all others. Yet the erstwhile sovereign states found it expedient and necessary to abandon as injurious and impracticable an exaggeration of state rights and Provincial independence which is being urged in Canada by those, would rather see a group of discordant and wrangling Provinces than a strong and united Dominion. The advocates of disintegration in the United States failed disastrously after working great mischief. They will fall equally in the Dominion, we trust without doing so much harm. We may learn from our neighbors' experience.

Another lesson that we may take to ourselves is the unreasonableness of despairing of our country because there is some little friction in the early working of its constitution. Our neighbors had far more bitter and serious divergencies of opinion, and yet they have not fallen to pieces. If the people of Canada will show an equal amount of reasonableness and patriotism, will work for unity and will firmly discountenance all fomenters of discord, they have no reason to despair of building up a great, prosperous and united country. Union is strength, and those who cause disunion are public enemies.

All should read the article, some of the points of which we have indicated, for they will find in it much information that is both interesting and useful.

DON'T COUGH!

But, Seriously, do you Catch on?

Well, the Great-and-only-Original-Terror to High-Priced-Clothiers, Wonderful-Forepaw dealer, in other words, teddy Cough (Now bring along the Babies, take the name and the gold dollar and be Happy) has issued a Challenge. He has the war paint on, and terror and destruction will come to any of the Baby Clothiers of Peterborough who will pretend to do business in opposition to this wonder of the 19th Century. He says he is TRUTHFUL! Well, let us see. He states positively that SHEPPARD is lying when he says that he got Bags from Peterboro's Great Cheapside. He says that he never advertises that which he will not carry out to the letter. READ CAREFULLY THE FOLLOWING, and see the position it puts this oracle of truth in—Mr. Teddy Cough:

37 Vic. 37, C. [illegible]

I, HENRY SHEPPARD, of the Town of Peterborough, in the County of Peterborough, do Solemnly Declare that on Saturday evening last past two young men came into my place of business and stated to me that they had one deal with Gough but never wanted another. One said "I purchased goods from Gough, meaning I suppose the store, and he guaranteed me that he would refund me the money if I "was not satisfied or words to that effect. I had witness to prove this. Afterwards I went back with the goods, stated that I was not "satisfied and wanted my money. He would not give it me. I told him I could make him return me the money if I wanted to, as I "had witness. I did not get the money so Gough got the money and the clothing too, but, I have the experience."

On Wednesday, August 31st, 1887, a responsible farmer came into my store and inspected my Grain Bags. He purchased two dozen bags of good quality, looking at the same time at the cheap bags selling at $1.75 per dozen, but, said he, would not buy them for his own use. About two hours after leaving my store he returned and said "I want two dozen of your cheap bags now" and stated that they were not for himself. He afterwards stated to me in the presence of a witness that he took the two dozen cheap bags in the store of one, Gough, a Clothier on George Street, Peterborough, and was paid $3.50 for the same by the said Gough, or one of his salesmen.

And I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the Act passed in the Thirty-seventh year of Her Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act for the suppression of voluntary and extra-judicial oaths."

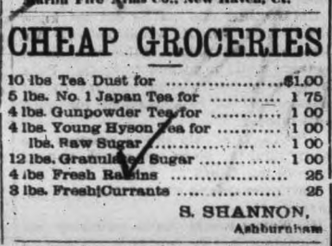
HENRY SHEPPARD.

Declared before me at the Town of Peterborough, in the County of Peterborough, this 13th day of Sept., in the year of our Lord 1887.

E. A. PECK, A Commissioner, &c.

The above has the contrary ring of truth, seeing that in each case four reputable witnesses can be found to corroborate the above sworn statement, and, when it is necessary, more will follow. Sheppard has no desire to bring any man's business in such a light before the public But the Back-bone talked about will never be found wanting in Sheppard, and just at the right time and place, Mr. Forepaw dealer may need his $500 or $1,000 to prove his assertion.

So that, at the present moment, Peterboro's great Cheapside will go on selling the Cheapest Clothing in Peterboro' though it raises the wool on this only Original Cough. Sheppard has no brother-in-laws in Muskoka to sell goods to, neither has he relatives or any other person, who at any time endorsed his paper to the extent of one cent. He has, though his stock is small, $10,000 in assets over liabilities, and just so long as this state of affairs exists he will pledge himself to the public to give entire satisfaction.



You can save money on any purchase. Sheppard has reduced Men's $10.00 Suits to $6.00, Men's $15.00 Suits to $10.00. Look out for Slashing Reductions in Men's and Boys' Clothing.

Full Government Deposit for Security of Policy Holders.

During the year 1885 applications for $2,722,450 were received, upon which were issued 1,260 policies for $2,520,350, and seven policies for $16,555, which had lapsed for non-payment of premiums, were revived. This is a volume of new business amounting to nearly $250,000 over that of any former year, and sixty per cent. in excess of that done by any other Canadian Company in the same period of its history.

ABSTRACT OF REVENUE ACCOUNT AND BALANCE SHEET.

Income for the year 1886	$194,249 39
Expenditure (including payment to policyholders of $37,067 66)	107,748 94

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

My mother received him in that bright little upstairs sitting room where so much of her life has been spent, and about which there always clings a faint, old fashioned smell of potpourri. She is a very beautiful, refined looking old lady, and it is my belief that she is perfectly aware of the fact. I noticed that she was wearing a little of the treasured Mechlin lace which belonged to her great grandmother, and as soon as she opened her lips I perceived that she had put on her very best manner, which, like the lace, is only assumed upon occasions of importance.

She made me place a chair for Beauchamp beside her sofa and smiled graciously upon him over the top of a large fan, which she swayed gently to and fro while she spoke. "It is very good of you, sir," she began, "to visit a bed ridden old woman whose conversation can have few attractions for you. Indeed, I should not have ventured to put you to so much inconvenience, had I not had a special motive for doing so."

I suppose Beauchamp had never heard anything like this before in all his days. He was quite unaccustomed to being called "sir" and condescended to, and it evidently flustered him.

"Oh, but you really, you know, Mrs. Maynard—upon my word—delighted, I'm sure!" said he, with all the graceful eloquence of the age.

"You are so kind," resumed my mother suavely, "as to say so, but I must not flatter myself that your presence here is due to any other cause than to courtesy, which, as I have always understood, is natural to you."

She went on in this strain for some little time, gradually working up to her point, and anything funnier in its way than the contrast which she presented to her bewildered interlocutor I have seldom witnessed. At length she shut up her fan with a snap, exclaiming, more in sorrow than in anger:

"And can what I hear be true, Mr. Beauchamp? Can it be that you, a gentleman and a man of honor, are not only forcing your attentions upon a lady to whom they are distasteful, but that you have actually made her acceptance of your hand the subject of a pecuniary bargain with her father?"

He assured her earnestly that it was not true; she had been misinformed. Nothing would induce him to force his attentions upon anybody who—who—in short, who didn't want them. "And as for a bargain, there never really was any bargain at all—at least, not in the way that you mean—there wasn't indeed! I'm sure I shall be only too happy to oblige you, Mrs. Maynard, if you'll tell me what you wish me to do, and if you won't be—excuse me—quite so awfully polite about it."

Thus adjured, my mother consented to unbend and make her meaning plain. Without mentioning Jim's name, she gave it to be understood that Lady Mildred's affections were engaged; after which, she discreetly insinuated that although, under such circumstances, Mr. Beauchamp must feel that it would be out of the question to take advantage of her filial submissiveness, yet, in some ways, too abrupt a withdrawal on his part was to be deprecated.

"Lord Staines," said she, "is an old man and in broken health. From what the doctor tells me, I fear that he may not be with us much longer, and we should all wish to spare him, if possible, the shock of a sudden disappointment."

"I see," broke in Beauchamp, with a knowing nod. "After what you've told me, I wouldn't for the world marry poor little Mildred. In fact, to tell the truth, I never was very keen about it. And we'll manage to humbug the old boy as long as he lives."

My mother drew herself up and looked severe. "You surprise me, Mr. Beauchamp," she said. "Surely you do not suppose that I am advising a course of deception!"

Here I judged it opportune to put in my oar. "Nobody," quoth I, from the background, "could suppose anything so unwarrantable. You will not be called upon to use deception, my dear Beauchamp, only a little diplomacy, a little tact."

"Harry," said my mother, "I am quite ashamed of being so troublesome, but would you mind going down stairs and seeing whether my knitting is in the library? If it is not there it may perhaps be on one of the chairs in the drawing room. Or possibly it may have become entangled in Sarah's skirts, as it sometimes does, and been swept down into the kitchen. At any rate, I feel sure that it must be somewhere."

If there is one thing for which I am more remarkable than for my humility I suppose it is my obedience. I was absent for exactly five and twenty minutes, and when I came back to say that the knitting was nowhere to be found, I was not at all surprised to find my mother tranquilly occupied with it, nor was there any need to inform me that the two conspirators had arrived at a perfect mutual understanding.

Upon the morality of the compact thus entered into I made no comment at the time, and forbear from making any now; but I will say for my mother that she had the grace to feel thoroughly ashamed of herself, as was shown by the shortness of her manner during the rest of the day and by the vindictive determination with which she insisted upon reading a long sermon to me and the servants that evening after prayer, although it was the middle of the week.

CHAPTER XVII.

If I were asked to mention the man of my acquaintance whom I consider the least fitted, by nature and by habit, to impose upon a child of average acuteness, I should unhesitatingly name Jim Leigh. Yet such is the power of love, and so prone are the best of us to listen to casuistical arguments, that he embarked upon the career of duplicity suggested to him by his friends with a readiness, not to say a zest, of which he ought certainly to have been incapable. That he and Lady Mildred and Beauchamp were actuated by the best of good motives in behaving as they did I don't deny; but, as a more or less impartial looker on, I felt my sympathies veering round, while I watched them, on the side of the unsuspecting old man who was so completely taken in by their manœuvers. Lord Staines, I believe, looked upon his daughter's engagement as being to all intents and purposes an accomplished fact. He saw that she walked or rode every day with her supposed lover; he did not know that as soon as they were out of sight of the house they were joined by Jim, and that Beauchamp then promptly hurried away to smoke a cigar with me, thereby interfering considerably with my daily labors. He seemed to be satisfied that all would now go well; but in truth the apathy which had fallen upon him after his grandson's death was hardly to be stirred by any event, great or small.

One event, for which he, and indeed all London, must have been fully prepared, took place at this time and created no little excitement in the neighborhood; for we do not study the "society" journals much in our parts, nor does the gossip of the clubs reach us. I say that the financial collapse of the Bracknell establishment can have surprised no one who had lived in or near the fashionable world during the foregoing year or so; yet, if her statement was to be believed, it fell with all the cruelty of an unexpected blow upon the person who, one would have thought, should have been best aware of its imminence. Late one evening, Hilda, bringing with her a stupendous pile of baggage, arrived at Staines Court to cast herself, somewhat dramatically, upon the protection of the head of the house. I happened to be dining there and witnessed her entry upon the scene, which was of a nature to melt the hardest heart. In a voice broken by emotion she told her lamentable tale. She had—so she assured us—no longer a home; perhaps even she had no longer a husband; for to Bracknell's whereabouts she was unable to obtain any clew. On her return to Wilton place, after paying a round of visits, she had found the minions of the law in possession, and her personal property seized. "They have taken everything—everything!" she cried. "Even my Bible and Prayer Book are in their hands!"

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth It relieves the little suffer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for Diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

"A THING of beauty is a joy forever." Get a beautiful boot at KIDD'S new store.

Members Attend.

Every member of Otonabee Lodge, No. 13, I. O. O. F., is requested to be present at the regular meeting on Monday evening.

Scott Act.

There was a blank in the Scott Act prosecution to-day, but on Tuesday P. M. Edmison will dispose of four cases in Ashburnham.

OPENED out at Turnbull's, case after case of Fall and Winter Millinery, marked at prices that will suit everybody.

Orchestra.

An amateur orchestra was organized on Friday evening, with Mr. J. Butcher conductor. The membership is ample to start with, and it promises to be augmented. The instruments to be used are: violins, picello flute, cornet and harp.

The Kabo corset warranted to wear a year without breaking, is sold only at Turnbull's, the Headquarters for all New and Improved Corsets.

The Cold.

The Ennismore weather observer reminds the people that winter is coming on. There was a formation of ice in that Township on Friday evening. At sunrise the thermometer registered 30 degrees. The Rev. V. Clementi's self-registering thermometer showed 4 degrees of frost on Friday night.

Next Year's Canoe Meet.

The Lindsay Post says:—"A meeting of the directorate of the Northern Division is talked of to arrange the locality of the next meet, which it is expected will be held somewhat further west. In this connection the western bay on Lake Simcoe or Couchiching Lake, have been spoken of as available places. Balsam Lake has been brought forward as a possible location, but the contention that it is too near Stoney Lake, the scene of the last meet must have some weight."

Fine Workmanship.

A specimen of inlaid work is exhibited in the window of Mr. McFadden's furniture store which is highly artistic. The wood used is maple, walnut, shoemach and red cedar, and the central figure represented is a house. The surrounding is checker work, the light and shade of which, done in natural wood, is simply marvellous. The whole piece of wood is very ornamental, and must have entailed much patient labor. Mr. T. Burns, of town, who is disabled by paralysis, is the workman. The piece is valued at $50.

Instantaneous.

Mr. R. M. Roy is a success at taking lightning photographic views. At the Driving Park on Friday afternoon he took photographs of several fliers which were doing the track at a 2.40 gait. He also took a view of Mr. J. Dickson Morgan, who it appears, is now devoting his attention to pedestrianism. The photograph is perfect, even though the subject was travelling the track at a good speed. Seen through magnifying glass the eyeballs are discernable, while the mouth is visible to the naked eye. Mr. Roy, when in Toronto a few weeks ago, took a view of the windmills at the exhibition grounds. The view represents them as standing still, though all were in rapid motion.

The Churches.

The following is a list of services in the several churches to-morrow:—

ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL.—At St. Peter's Cathedral, Roman Catholic, there will be three masses celebrated, the first at 7 a. m. the second at 8 a. m., and the third at 10.30 a. m. Vespers at 7 p. m.

ST. LUKE'S.— The regular services at St Luke's Church will be conducted as follows: Morning Prayer, Litany and sermon at 11 a. m., evensong at 7 p. m.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.—The regular services will be conducted as follows:—Holy Communion at 8.30 a.m.; Morning Prayer, Litany and sermon at 11 a.m.; Evening Prayer and sermon at 7 p.m.

ST. PAUL'S.—The usual services will be held.

BAPTIST CHURCH, Murray Street.—The pulpit will be occupied by the Rev. Mr. Grant, of the Home Missions.

METHODIST CHURCH, Charlotte Street.—The Rev. I. Tovell will conduct the services in the morning and evening. In the evening a sermon will be preached to the young people.

METHODIST CHURCH, George street.—The Rev. F. H. Wallace will conduct the services in the morning at 11.00 o'clock, and at 7 o'clock. Strangers are always welcome.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.—The usual services will be conducted.

METHODIST CHURCH, Mark street (Ashburnham)—The Rev. J. C. Wilson, pastor, will conduct the services.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

Fourth Annual Report of the Y. M. C. A. Secretary.

The following is the fourth annual report of the Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, which was read at the annual meeting:—

FOURTH ANNUAL REPORT.

To the Officers and Members of the Peterborough Young Men's Christian Association:

DEAR BRETHREN,—It is with mingled joy and sorrow that my fourth and last annual report is presented to you to-night. My heart is full of gratitude for the goodness of God to me during my secretaryship, and for the uniformly kind intercourse I have ever had with officers and members of the Association. Though there have been many dark days, there has always been the silver lining to the clouds and I close my term of office with very deep regret. In the course of the four years past I have become warmly attached to the work of this Association and to many kind friends, both in the Association and outside, and to leave both the work and my numerous friends here causes me great sorrow. But I think it is clearly of God's leading that I am leaving you, and I hope and believe that this change, ordered of Him, will work for good to the Association, and that the coming year will be the most prosperous one the Association has ever had.

In looking back over the past year's work there is nothing startling to chronicle, while yet there is abundant cause for thanksgiving.

As you have heard from the Finance Committee's report, the heavy debt of about $900, under which we started our year's work, has been virtually cleared off. This has not been done without a very great amount of effort, and the time and attention given thereto has very seriously injured the aggressive work of the Association. Still there has been progress along nearly every line of work, as will be seen while we consider the work in its fourfold character.

PHYSICAL DEPARTMENT.—In the Physical Department we have done very little, through lack of the proper appliances. Last spring a lacrosse club was organized, and would probably have been successful, but the use of the field which had been granted us, was afterwards refused, and we were unable to get another suitable one. We hope that in the not distant future, the Association will be able to provide effectively for this department of its work. A gymnasium, baths, etc., would not only be very beneficial to our young men, but would be a very effective way of influencing many whom we cannot now reach.

Very important in its bearing upon the physical side of young men's nature is the question of social and personal purity. Considerable attention has been given to this subject in the past year, though still more might be done. We had two meetings, each attended by 100 young men, the one addressed by Mr. Charles James, of England, and the other by the Rev. John Hay, of Campbellford. We believe that many young men were lifted on to a higher plane than they previously occupied by hearing these addresses. Testimonials came to us of help received by means of them.

The SOCIAL part of the work has received a fair share of attention. We had, during the winter, monthly social gatherings of the members. These gatherings, six in number, though not attended as they should have been, have, nevertheless, been of considerable value in drawing the members into closer acquaintance with each other. The refreshments for these socials were provided by a few lady friends. Besides music and social intercourse the proceedings generally included a conversation on some branch of our work.

On New Year's day, assisted by our lady friends, we gave our annual New Year's reception, inviting all the young men of the town to call. A large number accepted the invitation, and passed part of the afternoon in a pleasant social way. The evening was occupied with a musical and literary entertainment. The social gathering we have enjoyed to-night is due to the kindness of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, who, with very great kindness, undertook all the arrangements in providing tea.

In the INTELLECTUAL DEPARTMENT we have made use of the usual agencies, as the reading room, lectures and classes. The reading room, with periodicals on file, has been well patronized, the daily average attendance being about fifty, which would make over 15,000 visits paid in the course of the year. The stock of newspapers and magazines is a very good one, and we have accommodation for a much larger number of readers. A new feature recently added is the correspondence table, where members and strangers may write their letters, stationery being supplied. It has been used very much, showing that it is well appreciated. Some of the best parlor games would be a good addition to our agencies.

The lectures have consisted of the following:—

J. H. Long, Esq., M.A., "Something About Stars;" attendance 20.

Rev. F. H. Wallace, M.A., B.D., "Germany and the Germans;" attendance 35

B. Earl, Esq., "Readings from Tennyson," etc.; attendance 60.

Rev. I. Tovell, "Athletics—Use and Abuse;" attendance 35.

Rev. A. H. Munro, "Tower of London." (illustrated); attendance 125.

Geo. S. Bevan, Esq., "Electricity," (illustrated); attendance 110.

Chas. James, Esq., "Christmas Evans;" attendance 200.

Rev. Ghosn al Howie (2), "Oriental Life;" attendance 200.

Miss Fraine, recital.

Jubilee Singers, concert.

The Peterborough gentlemen who lectured as above kindly gave us their services, for which they deserve our warm thanks. The Rev. Mr. Munro also went to considerable expense in procuring pictures to illustrate his lecture.

Mr. B. Earl, as in former years, conducted a class in English Literature, which was well attended. We owe Mr. Earl a vote of thanks for his willing assistance. A class in phonography was conducted by Mr. John Norton, until his departure from town brought it to a close.

RELIGIOUS WORK.—The religious part of our work has been fully presented in the report of the Devotional Committee. No time should be lost in securing a competent teacher for the Young Men's Bible Class, which is perhaps the most important portion of our work. We have to thank God for some conversions that have occurred, and pray that he will use us yet more and more. Many have taken their first step in public Christian service in our young men's meetings, and others have been strengthened, developed and stimulated to increased effort in Christ's service. We trust that the orchestra which is now being organized will be of great use in our meetings.

MEMBERSHIP.—During the year we have added to our roll 83 new members. We have lost many this year, as in previous years, by removal from town, and among them were some of our best workers. We mourn the loss of one by death, who, though not living here, was very active in our work whenever here on a visit. We refer to Mr. William Gilbert, who died so suddenly in St. Paul, Minn. We have recently made a thorough revision of the membership roll, striking off those who were only nominal members. The names taken off, including removals from town, number 75, leaving us with a present membership of 227.

RECEPTION COMMITTEE.—The duty of this Committee is to have one or more of its members on duty at the rooms every evening. While the work has not been performed as regularly as is desirable, still good work has been done. We hope in the coming year that the Chairman of the Committee, whoever he may be, will resolutely keep the members up to work, and call them together for conference at least once a month.

THE INVITATION COMMITTEE has from time to time gone out on the streets with printed invitations to the Saturday night and Sunday night meetings. For these two Committees we urgently need young men willing to undertake hard work for Christ, and shall be glad if any such will volunteer at once.

ASSOCIATION NOTES.—This bulletin of our work has regularly paid its visits to members and friends. On the completion of the third year of issue, it was decided to enlarge and improve it, and it now makes a handsome appearance under the title of "The Young Men." If well supported by members and friends, it will be self-sustaining, and may ever become in some degree a source of revenue.

CONVENTIONS.—Our Association was represented at the Provincial Convention at Kingston last February by Messrs. John Miller, Alex. Cooper, J. H. Steves, jr. and the Secretary. At this Convention the Province was divided into Districts, and Peterborough was made the centre of one district. The Committee of each of these districts is supposed to develop the work within its bounds, and to hold a district Conference annually. In our District one new Association has been formed at Stirling, one place, Campbellford, is preparing to organize and correspondence has been conducted with a number of other places. Our District Conference was held at Port Hope on April 11th and 12th. It was arranged for by us and was attended by Messrs. H. S. Griffin, Bannell Sawyer, Arthur Tebb, Alex. Cooper and the Secretary. I was also privileged to attend Mr. Moody's Summer Encampment for Bible Study at Northfield, Mass., last July.

BOY'S BRANCH.—Believing that in order to get young men thoroughly trained in Association work we must begin on them while they are boys, we have continued the Boys' Branch with very fair success. A weekly meeting for Bible Study is held, with occasional entertainments and lectures. We have also a good selection of boys periodicals on file.

PERSONAL WORK.—While good is done by all the agencies already mentioned, perhaps the benefits resulting from the daily personal work are the greatest of all, and the results of their efforts cannot be tabulated. Strangers are met with daily, either in the rooms or by calling on them when their names have been handed in to us. A number come in to ask for boarding houses; others bring letters of introduction from their pastors or from the Associations in their previous places of residence; others again are brought in by members, and in every case we seek to gain an influence over them for good. Nor do we forget those who go out from us, whether members or otherwise. Letters of introduction are given to all young men who apply for them or can be induced to take them, and sometimes where no introduction is given, we write to the Associations in other places about young men who have gone there from Peterborough. We also keep up correspondence as far as possible with our members who go to other places. Many young men come to us out of employment, and seeking our assistance in getting it. Many of these are quite worthy of help, and we shall be very glad if employers of labor will let us know of vacancies that may occur in their establishments.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.—It would take more time than is at our disposal to return thanks for all the favors we have received. We heartily acknowledge our indebtedness to the editors of the daily newspapers of Peterborough for many favors, and especially for editorials bearing on our work which have been a great help. We thank the ladies for their ready and cheerful help whenever asked for, and especially for the help given by the ladies of the George Street and St. Paul's Churches in connection with our finances. We thank the pastors and trustees of the St. Andrew's, George Street, Baptist and St. Paul's Churches for the use of their respective edifices on various occasions, and we also thank such of the churches as took up collections for us last year.

We thank the ladies who have taken an interest in the rooms, and have supplied flowers for the tables from week to week. And lastly we heartily thank our generous subscribers for the means by which the work reported above has been carried on.

THE FUTURE.—We have been considering the past, and from that past we see more clearly than ever some of our needs for the future. One of these is more thorough individual consecration to definite service on the part of workers. We have some noble, willing workers, but this work will never be as it should be till every member learns that he is somewhat responsible for its success. I am glad to resign the reins to one so competent as I believe Mr. Stevens to be. But one man, or a small number of men cannot do the work of an Association with over 150 active members. If every committee man does his work faithfully in the coming year, it will make a wonderful difference in the prosperity of the Association. Another great need that presses strongly on us is a building, a home of our own, where with the proper appliances, we should be able to reach three or four times as many young men as we do now. I hope the time is not far distant when Peterborough will join in the great building movement that is sweeping over our Associations in Canada and the United States. Toward this end, a lot at least should be secured as speedily as possible, as every day will make it harder to secure a suitable site. We have other needs, many of them, but let us be assured that God will supply all our need, in the Association as in the individual if we keep waiting on Him. To Him be all the glory for anything useful that has been done, for of His own have we given Him. And may we each all so conduct ourselves that at the last we shall hear His "Welldone, good and faithful servant."

Major Boulton on Railways.

Major Chas. A. Boulton writes to the Toronto Mail from Russell, Manitoba, to advocate in a temperate manner some reasonable agreement to facilitate railway competition in Manitoba and the Northwest. He looks to this through the Grand Trunk Railway to Canadian markets and ports, and does not like the agitators for disruption in Winnipeg and Ontario, clamour for access to "the natural market" in the United States and the ports of that country. It is this dishonest intention on the part of those whose very country was made for them by the C. P. R., constructed so largely at our cost, that has excited the opposition of the majority of the people of Ontario and the satisfaction of the disloyal portion of the press.

When she was a Child she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

ENGLISH RAILWAY HORROR.

The Accident to an Excursion Train—Fatal and Terrible Injuries.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—The Midland train was crowded with excursionists going to Doncaster to see the race for the Doncaster cup. Suddenly a plate layer was noticed wildly waving a red flag. On looking out the passengers were horrified to see the express coming at full speed. Before realizing the danger there was a terrific shock. The express cut through the excursion train. The express engine was badly damaged, but kept on the rails. The train practically sustained no damage. The scene was horrible. Scores of people lay bleeding or dead, wedged amid the splintered woodwork and debris. Their shrieks and groans were heartrending, but it was impossible to release them till mechanical appliances arrived. Many were taken out shockingly mangled with arms and legs severed. Others were almost decapitated and disemboweled. The dead were laid in adjoining meadows. Some were only recognizable by their clothing. The injured were conveyed in improvised ambulances to the nearest houses. A number of surgeons were speedily in attendance. There were numerous broken legs, some requiring amputation. All that it was possible to remove were taken to an infirmary. The guards of the excursion train had a narrow escape. A mother, with her baby in her arms, was killed, while the child escaped unhurt. In another instance a mother and child were killed, one man had his head torn completely off, and the body was found sitting upright in the carriage. The extrication was conducted by means of a saw and axe, which caused acute suffering to the injured.

A curve in the line hid the express till it was within a short distance of the excursion train when the driver and stoker were seen frantically pulling the levers. The engine driver, C. Taylor, is an old servant of the Company. He has not explained how he ran past the danger signals. He prefers to withhold his statement. It is rumored that the breaks were applied but failed to act. The majority of the victims were residents of Sheffield and Hesthorpe. The latest reports placed the number dead at twenty-three, and the injured at sixty.

AN ALPINE SNOWSTORM.

The Empress of Austria Almost Lost During a Mountain Ascent.

The Empress of Austria had a somewhat unpleasant experience recently. The Empress is almost as ardent a mountaineer as she is a horsewoman, and during her stay at Ischl went in for a great deal of mountain climbing. One day she made the ascent of the Gethfeld, and, according to her usual custom, took with her but a small posse of attendants. When half way up a storm came on, and the Empress and her party were at that moment going along a narrow path a little better than a mere ledge, which wound round the face of the mountain. To advance was impossible, and to return was equally dangerous. So the Empress had to cling to the face of the precipice in the blinding snowstorm for the space of more than an hour. At the expiration of that time the storm abated, and an attempt was made to descend. A relief party, which had been sent up from Ischl, when once the position of affairs became known, finally rescued the Imperial party, and the Empress met with an ovation on her return to her villa after her dangerous experience of Alpine mountaineering.

The Canadian Cattle Trade.

MONTREAL, Sept. 16.—Mr. Marcus M. Poole, of the firm of Poole & Sons, live stock-agents of London, England, who has been here during the summer superintending the shipping of cattle, says that the attacks made in some of the English papers against the Canadian cattle trade are perfectly unfounded, and that the outcry is really only a dodge to keep up the prices of meat in England. The reports of crowding on board vessels, he says, are all nonsense. A very careful inspection is made of each ship after it is loaded. He has never heard complaints from anyone as to the space allowed to cattle. There is no cruelty practised by the drovers in embarking and disembarking the cattle, and shipping of cattle, it is claimed, is now as near perfection as it can be. The number of cattle, however, shipped this year has not been equal to last.

ROPE-MAKING IN CANADA.

Benefits to the Maritime Provinces and Manitoba Through our Policy.

The following account by the Monetary Times on rope-making in Canada refutes on good authority two contentions of the opposition. It is shown that the Maritime Provinces do benefit by intercolonial trade fostered by the N.P. and that the Manitoba farmers are supplied more cheaply than the agriculturalists in the adjoining States, our contemporary says:—

The business of rope-making in Canada is active. The Montreal Cordage Co. is well employed, and the New Brunswick Cordage Works state that their trade is "constantly increasing" and must further increase. In the words of Ald. Connor to a Sun reporter, "the more wheat grown, the more cordage is required for binding it. Canada this year requires 3,000 tons, against 2,200 tons last year. This season the people of Dakota came over the line to Manitoba and bought all the available twine at cheaper rates than this article could be bought in the States." Canada binding twine, it seems, is cheaper than American, because the American duty on the raw material is heavier than the Canadian duty, hemp being admitted duty free into Canada. Over two-thirds of the N. B. Co.'s output goes outside of that province. "The wheat regions of Canada supply us with a market that now more than compensates for the loss caused by the decline in shipbuilding."

HORSES FOR THE ARMY.

A Profitable Market for Canadian Farmers—What is Needed.

Col. Philips is one of the Imperial officers who was sent to investigate the Canadian supply of horses suitable for the British Army. The following are his opinions, expressed to the United Service Institution, as reported by the Canadian Gazette:—

In the first place, the size of the horse in Jamaica is at least a hand under what would be of any use for our cavalry or artillery. Horses 14.2 would for the English cavalry or artillery be utterly useless, for the simple reason that when you meet other regiments they would just ride you down like grass for want of weight. As regards the breeding of big horses in a climate that is mountainous and tropical, naturalists will tell you that even if you imported large horses, in a very few generations they would dwindle back to the animal indigenous to the soil. With regard to the horses in Canada, where I went last summer in conjunction with Colonel Ravenhill, after travelling many thousand miles, and seeing a vast number of horses, we rejected an immense number for that very reason, that they did not come up to the standard measurement. I am quite certain we could have bought hundreds of horses if we had taken 14.2 but we never thought of looking at that height. If we had taken 15 or 15.1 we could have bought a great number, but we took nothing under the standard 15 2, for the reason that in the cavalry and artillery we have that as our standard, and I think it is the minimum standard that would meet the requirements of the service. Of course I am not now discussing mounted infantry; no doubt the smaller and hardier the ponies, the better they go along, and the easier they are for the men to manage. As regards remounts for our cavalry and artillery, I believe on the eastern slopes of the Rockies in a very few years there would be as fine a breed of horses as we have now in Australia. They have an excellent climate, they have water-shed, which so many of the ranches in America and Texas suffer from the want of, and they have magnificent grass for the horses to feed on. Some of the ranche owners at this present moment are going into this business. I know of one gentleman, Mr. Cochrane, who has a thousand picked mares on his ranche, and he is going in for breeding horses for the English cavalry and artillery; he has already made a very great name for himself as a shorthorn breeder. I have not the least doubt that in three or four years, if officers will visit the ranche, they will be able to pick up some thousands of horses suitable for our cavalry and horse artillery. The great difficulty we found there was finding saddle horses. Very few people in Canada ride, in fact in Canada proper there is hardly any riding at all. Nearly every one drives, and consequently where most attention is given to draught horses, there is naturally a want of riding shoulders, which is the most essential thing for cavalry horses. I think in the future the eastern slopes of the Rockies, even without much encouragement from Government, except that they would say they would go out to purchase every year there, would be able to supply us with thousands of horses. Land is let there at a merely nominal rent—two cents an acre for twenty-one year's lease. Magnificent mares can be brought from Montana and Oregon, all of English blood—English sires have been out there over a century, running from fifteen to sixteen hands high, and that is the class of horse we are looking for to supply our cavalry and artillery, and to carry our troops in time of war, and nothing under that height, when it came to the shock of the charge, would be any good at all; in fact you would be simply ridden down as our light cavalry were at Waterloo by the Cuirassiers, who were again in turn ridden down when they met our Life Guards and Blues."

Battery Men for B. C.

KINGSTON, Sept. 17.—This morning an order was received from Ottawa for selection of forty men from A battery to be sent to British Columbia and form part of C battery. A similar number will be taken from B battery, Quebec. This drafting is made necessary because men cannot be got in sufficient numbers for the service in the west.

The Grand Master Workman.

HAMILTON, Sept. 18.—Mr. T. V. Powderly, Grand Master Workman of the Knights of Labour, will be present and probably deliver an address on the occasion of the great labour demonstration to be held here on September 28th.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

LATEST CABLE NEWS.

COST OF WAR.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Truth says: The butcher's bill for the Burmah campaign has been received from Simla. The British Army has lost from disease and in action 35 officers dead, 54 wounded, and 125 invalided. Soldiers: 624 dead, 111 wounded, and 1,592 invalided. Natives of all ranks: 1,004 dead, 381 wounded, and 2,594 invalided.

WANTS BACK HER PROPERTY.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—At the unveiling of a monument to Chausser at Chamouni recently a delegate from Geneva, in proposing a toast to France, jocularly said he knew France had nothoughts of annexation. M. Spuller replied that France had no longings for what does not belong to her, but she will certainly make all efforts to regain her lost property. This in connection with Gen. Breart's vengeful utterances, has caused a sensation at Berlin. The opinion is general that the manifesto of the Count of Paris was published in anticipation of an outbreak of hostilities in Europe.

THE SITUATION IN FRANCE.

PARIS, Sept. 17.—M. De Cassagnac has assured M. Rouvier that notwithstanding the Comte de Paris' manifesto the Right will continue to support the Cabinet, but on the condition that no change be made in the policy of conciliation which the Cabinet has hitherto pursued. Several deputies have decided to petition M. Rouvier to convoke the Chamber at the earliest possible date.

BISMARCK VEXED.

PARIS, Sept. 17.—The Temps relates that during the Berlin Congress Prince Bismark personally proposed to the Turkish plenipotentiary to curtail Bulgaria by making Tirnova the capital instead of Sofia, promising the support of Germany against Russian encroachments in return for the right of Germany to occupy Varna in perpetuity. The Sultan rejected the offer, and Germany has since been less favorable to Ottoman interests.

THE NIHILIST ACTIVE.

ST. PETETSBURG, Sept. 17.—A pamphlet has been circulated here announcing that the re-organization of the Nihilis.s has been fulley successfull, and that the centres of action as fully provided with everything requisite for the carrying out of their plans. Nihilism is fast spreading in Siberia, where, during August, 45 guards absconded and 23 prisoners escaped.

MEETING AT LIMERICK.

LIMERICK, Sept. 18.—The mayor of Limerick and Messrs. T. M. Healy and Edward Pickersgill, members of Parliament, addressed a political meeting here yesterday. One thousand persons attended.

THE LANDLORDS' CONFERENCE.

DUBLIN, Sept. 18.—Archbishop Walsh, in a letter to the Dublin Express, says that as the landlords at the recent meeting failed to adopt a manly attitude on the question of a conference between landlords and tenants, he feares that the opportunity to effect a settlement is now lost.

A RIOT NEAR BELFAST.

BELFAST, Sept. 18.—A party of Orangemen, while passing through Green Castle, a town near Belfast, last night, had an encounter with the Nationalist residents. Three policemen were stoned and driven away. The local authorities being unable to restore order, sent a despatch to this city asking for aid, and a force of police was accordingly sent to Green Castle. The reinforcements had the effect of awing the rioters, and peace was soon established. Ten of the principal participants was arrested.

BISMARCK AND THE SULTAN.

PARIS, Sept. 18.—The Temps relates that during the Berlin Congress Prince Bismarck personally proposed to the Turkish plenipotentiary to curtail Bulgaria by making Tirnova the capital instead of Sofia, promising the support of Germany against Russian encroachments in return for the right of Germany to occupy Varna. The Sultan rejected the offer, and Germany has since been less favourable to Ottoman interests.

MOBBING REPORTERS.

DUBLIN, Sept. 18.—In accordance with the announcement, a meeting of Nationalists was held at Bandon to day. A Government reporter was present and was not molested, but representatives of the Cork Constitution and the Illustrated London News were ruthlessly handled until the speakers on the platform intervened in their behalf. Messrs. Brunner and Hooper, members of Parliament, addressed the meeting.

MARKS OF THIRST.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Ayoub Khan has been tracked to a spring near the waterless district of Dashtiut. Bullets with teeth marks on them were found in the water. It is supposed that the party had been suffering from thirst.

ARREST OF MR. MANDEVILLE.

DUBLIN, Sept. 18.—Mr. Mandeville, who was charged with violating the Crimes Act at the same time that Mr. O'Brien's offence was committed, has been arrested at Mitchellstown.

CHOLERA IN ITALY.

ROME, Sept. 18.—The cholera returns for to-day show 14 new cases and six deaths in Catania, 46 new cases and 16 deaths in Naples, 4 new cases and 3 deaths in Palermo and 21 deaths in Messina.

RUSSIA AND INDIA.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 18.—The Moscow Gazette openly avows sympathy with Dhuleep Singh, the Maharajah, and his claim to succeed his father as Rajah of the Punjaub and says:—"The people of India believe that Russia will sooner or later free them from the British yoke."

A GEORGITE PRIEST.

MITCHELLSTOWN, Sept. 18.—At a public meeting of the National League held here to-day Father O'Leary, of St. Louis, was introduced to the assemblage as a clergyman who had sent tens of thousands of dollars from America to the cause in which the League was engaged. The reverend gentleman announced himself a believer in the doctrines of Henry George, and urged that no rent should be paid. At the Chicago convention he had expressed his readiness to become a chaplain in any army raised to relieve Ireland from the slavery she was enduring. Mr. Condon, M.P., approved of Father O'Leary's remarks, and advised the people to continue in the constitutional paths now pursued for the redress of their grievances.

O'BRIEN IN GAOL.

DUBLIN, Sept. 18.—Mr. T. P. Gill, M.P., who is deep in the confidence of the Home Rulers, particularly the advanced section, says:—William O'Brien is in the best of health in the Cork gaol. When he is tried and regularly sentenced to undergo the ignominies of convict life, as he is sure to be, he will appeal. This will delay the issue of the case a couple of months longer. Mr. O'Brien is determined to mark his sense of the difference between a political prisoner and a common criminal. He will submit to extra punishment, in dark cells, on bread and water, sooner than perform any of their penal labor or degrading duties. This will raise a furious agitation, such as that which Mr. Gladstone in his earlier days aroused against "King Bomba's" treatment of his political prisoners.

FAVOURS OFFENSIVE TACTICS.

PARIS, Sept. 18.—Gen. Boulanger, in an address to the officers of his command, after the manœuvre by his corps at Clermont-Ferrand yesterday strongly urged the necessity of giving a wider exercise of offensive tactics, which were proper to the French army. He concluded his remarks as follows:—"We have to-day more need than ever of the qualities of a warrior. The hour has not yet struck for the disarmament of the peoples of old Europe. It is madness to believe it, a crime to say it, for it points to 'peace at any price' as the goal to which our country should aspire, and our enemies, who often appraise us at our real value better than we do ourselves, know well that we have not got as far as that. More than ever we must continue the work. It is for France."

LOST IN THE ARCTIC SEA.

Terrible Sufferings by the Solitary Survivor from a Wreck.

VICTORIA, B.C., Sept. 18.—Captain Warren, of the schooner Owner, arrived from Sitka yesterday. He stated that by the cutter Rush there arrived a sailor in Sitka who is the only survivor of the whaling schooner Napoleon, which was wrecked in the Arctic two years ago. He tells a terrible tale of suffering. The vessel got crushed in the ice, the crew having to take to their boats, and the man who arrived in Sitka was one of the 18 who were on the ice for thirty days. During this time his 17 companions died from starvation. He was picked up by some Esquimaux, and lived among them until the trip of the Bear into the Arctic, when he was found among his protectors. The cutter brought him down and connected with the Rush in the Behring sea, the latter bringing him to Sitka.

The New Cathedral.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 18.—The Roman Catholic cathedral at St. Boniface was formally consecrated to-day by Archbishop Fabre, of Montreal, assisted by Archbishop Tache and a number of Eastern clergy at present in the province. There was a large attendance of Roman Catholics from the surrounding country.

HORSES FOR THE ARMY.

We publish in another column an interesting account of his experiences by Col. Philips, one of the Imperial officers sent to this country to see if it could supply horses for the British army. His clear account of the shortcomings he noticed, of the methods that should be adopted to remove them, and of his anticipations for the future, afford a fund of valuable information for our farmers. Though the Imperial authorities have for a time postponed their efforts to obtain army horses in the Dominion, it is evident from what Col. Philips says that the attempt will be renewed as soon as there is any available supply, and that this demand will continue whenever it suits us to fill it. The Colonel with apparently good reason looks to the ranches of the North-west as the great field from which the Imperial army will obtain the remounts it needs. But there is no reason why the farmers of Ontario should not participate in the profits that are to be obtained from this source. If they consider Col. Philips' discription of the type of horse that is required, they will see that even if not taken for the Imperial service they would not go begging for purchasers, and even colts that did not quit reach the standard demanded would be more useful at home and more marketable than much of the stock now to be seen in the Province. It is a matter to which our progressive and enterprising farmers should give their careful consideration.

In its constant efforts to induce the people of Winnipeg to defy the law, the constitution, the executive and the will of the people of Canada, the Toronto Mail says of the railway to divert traffic into the United States:—"It is being built under the Provincial Public Works Act, which is perfect valid." If it is perfect valid and applies to such a railway, which we do not believe, the act is a trick on a par with the fraud of those schemers who induce a farmer to sign a promisory note on the pretence that it is only an order for a patent rake or something of the kind, for the measure avoids mentioning railways so as to evade disallowance by a subterfuge, if that is its meaning. But the agitators have no faith in this contention or they would not threaten to defy the courts and gain their end, if necessary, by rebellion.

The Hamilton Times suggests that the Manitoba Provincial Government might enrich the settlers and checkmate the Federal Government by confiscating all the land in the Province by collecting the land rent under the pretence of its being direct taxation. Does our contemporary suppose that Canada would not disallow any legislative attempt at confiscation by one of its Provinces? And even if such a law could be in existence, how would it work? The settler on his own land would pay the rental value to the collector; his neighbor, wise enough to take a perpetually renewable lease at a pepper corn rent from the Crown, would pay nothing. What an exodus there would be from such a country.

The Count of Paris, as the heir of the old Kings of France, having issued a proclamation setting forth his claims to the throne, the Toronto Globe advises the French to murder him if they can catch him. Fortunately the Globe is not likely to have much influence in France, and the Count of Paris may escape the fate of the Archbishop of Paris at the hands of the Globe's friends, the Rouges. It is not quite so sanguinary as regards England, contenting itself with sneering at the monarchical system and vaunting the superiority of a republic.

A Reform journal, the Stratford Beacon incites Manitoba to rebellion and says that the people of Ontario would rebel if they were not cowards. We repel this insult to our Province, but of course we cannot dispute the right of the Beacon to speak for itself and its intimate friends.

THAT OATH!

Business is Business. Dirt is Dirt, and when it comes down to throwing dirt, count GOUGH out.

Supposing on oath, from mere hearsay, I gave the Aurora record of Mr. Sheppard, what would the people say about me? Simply that GOUGH was a coward.

But, never fear, Mr. Sheppard, I am not going to resort to such mean, contemptible personalities However, in your reckless oath there are two things I am compelled to show you up in.

1st. In your advertisement in the Times you positively state GOUGH bought his bags off you, but now, on your own sworn testimony, lo! and behold you give this the lie, for you swear you did not sell GOUGH bags, but that a certain farmer bought two dozen from you, who afterwards stated to you that he re-sold them to GOUGH, or one of his salesmen.

Which is correct? your oath or your advertisement. Answer this, as both cannot be truth, and in either case you stand self-convicted.

The next point in your misleading oath is this: You swear that a certain party stated he bought clothing from GOUGH on conditions that he (GOUGH) would refund the money if the goods were not satisfactory, and that this said party afterwards returned the clothing to GOUGH and that GOUGH refused to refund the money, and kept both clothing and money. I deny this, and I defy you to prove your friend's statement to be true, and now that you have sworn by him, be a man and give his name, and if I don't prove that it is as false as your oath is misleading I will donate $500 to any charitable institution in Peterborough.

Remember, your position is a mean one unless you produce evidence to back it. You have taken an oath full of insinuations only, which is cowardly, and if you cannot give the public more proof than mere heresay, the people will not be slow to judge your oath and your motive. Besides, if your friend will pass in his name and prove what you swear you believed to be true, you will have a chance to take $500 more out of THE WONDERFUL CHEAP MAN. If he cannot prove that it is false.

One more word, Mr. Sheppard, and I am done with you. You state that you are worth, over and above all liabilities, $10,000 (wonder you did not swear this), well, it is an insinuation that I am not—you may be worth $10,000, I don't know; but one thing I do know, the Mercantile Agency rates GOUGH to be worth twice as much money as you, and, moreover, in their July report they say Gough's credit is good, and they don't say this of yours.

Now, Mr. Sheppard, these little personal attacks are not business like, and had you not advertised what you positively knew to be false (your oath proves this) I would never have advertised that I could sell your Clothing cheaper than you can buy it and make a profit out of it. But now that I have stated it I will stand by it or lose $500 or $1000. Do you accept or do you not, for this, and this, only, will prove which, you or I, are in a position to sell Clothing the Cheapest.

Surely this is the right time and the right place for you to prove your "Back-bone."

Now, Mr. Cheapsides, I am done with you unless you accept my challenge, and in conclusion let me assure you the more you bring my business to its true light the better will I like it, for let me tell you since you came here my business has almost doubled, which proves that the people appreciate the man who put down the prices of Clothing and continues to keep them down. It also proves my motto is square dealing, otherwise the people would not so liberally patronize as they do.

Fire in Chicago.

Chicago, Sept. 16.—The extensive candy manufacturies of Milton E. Page & Co., Nos. 211 and 213 Lake street, were totally destroyed by fire last night. The flames spread to the buildings adjoining on either side, one of which is occupied by J. A. Baye & Co., of which Mayor Roche is a partner and manager, doing considerable damage. The flagstaff and eagle on the Page building fell and injured several firemen. Loss, $600,000.

The Centennial Celebration.

Philadelphia, Sept. 16.—Nearly thirty thousand uniformed soldiers passed in review before the chief magistrate and the high officers of this and other governments before noon to day, and at their head rode Gen. Sheridan. The day is beautifully fine.

A Dreadful Position.

Shamokin, Pa., Sept. 17.—Fire was discovered in the shaft of Lake Fiddler Colliery. The mine boss, Bryan Dennin, and his assistant, Mat. Framan, are imprisoned in the mine, and all attempts to rescue them have failed.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

Is sold all over the world. It is far superior to plain Cod Liver Oil, palatable and easily digested. Dr. Martin Miles Stanton, Bury Bucks, Loudon, England, says: "I have prescribed Scott's Emulsion, and taken it myself. It is palatable, efficient, and can be tolerated by anyone, especially where cod liver oil itself cannot be borne. Put up in 50c. and $1 size.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

At this an unfeeling member of her small audience had the bad manners to laugh; but she treated this interruption with the contempt that it deserved, and went on to enlarge upon the pitiable plight in which she found herself. She had nothing left but the clothes she stood up in—those and a few others which she had taken with her to the country. Not a word of warning, not a single direction or suggestion had been vouchsafed to her. After being neglected for years, she was finally abandoned! "And now," she concluded, in a tragic tone, "what am I to do?"

"I should think," answered Lord Staines, rather peevishly, "that you had better go and wash your hands and face, and then have some dinner."

The advice was more practical than sympathetic, but such as it was she acted upon it. She may have had some fear that her father-in-law would recommend her to go straight to the rectory (which was certainly what I should have done in his place), and no doubt she preferred remaining where she was to seeking that refuge.

Staines Court is a large house, but one of its temporary inmates decided without delay that it was not large enough to contain him and Lady Bracknell at the same time. "I shall be off the first thing to-morrow morning," Beauchamp informed me in confidence, after he had beat a precipitate retreat from the drawing room, taking me with him. "Called away on urgent business, don't you know. That woman has brass enough for anything, but I'll be hanged if I can trust myself to speak to her."

Beauchamp, who, as I have already mentioned, had latterly favored me with a good deal of his company, had, in the course of our conversations, taken occasion to express his opinion of Lady Bracknell in the most unequivocal terms. There is no iconoclast so ruthless as an ex-devotee; and, indeed, it must be very unpleasant to discover that a woman whom you have been disposed to worship has not only made a fool of you, but done her best to rob and murder you into the bargain.

So Beauchamp took wing; and whether Lady Bracknell was annoyed or relieved by his flight I cannot venture to say. She was in some respects so sharp and in others so oddly insensible that, for aught I know, she may still have flattered herself that she might be able to lure him back into her net. Be that as it may, it was hardly to be expected that her ladyship's humor should be of the best at such a time, and from the assidnity of her attentions to her father-in-law, as well as from the extreme amiability which she displayed toward Lady Mildred, I felt pretty sure that her heart was full of cursing and bitterness. Also, although upon the whole she was civil enough to me, she favored me with a look every now and then, which I understood to mean, "Wait a little longer, my friend. I haven't forgotten your fussy interference with my schemes, and I mean to be even with you yet."

Now, so far as I myself was concerned, I accepted these silent and smiling threats with a good deal of equanimity, for I really did not see how it was in her power to do me any harm; but of course it was open to her to inflict vicarious trouble upon me, while at the same time serving Lady Mildred, whom she hated, an ill turn, and the stone which she ultimately picked up, wherewith to slay this brace of birds, was one which lay, so to speak, at her feet. It would have been very unlike her to overlook it; nor was I at all surprised when Jim sought me one day, and informed me, with a very long face, that his machinations had been denounced to Lord Staines.

"It was Lady Bracknell's doing," he said. "It seems that she went to the old man and told him that she could not bear to see him hoodwinked, that she felt it her duty to open his eyes—and all that—and she opened his eyes. But I don't think," added Jim pensively, looking down at the ground and then glancing quickly up at me for a moment—"I don't think that her sense of duty had much to say to the matter."

"I will venture," I remarked, "to go along with you as far as that; I don't think her sense of duty had much to say to it. But perhaps this is of no great consequence. What has been the result of this timely intervention of hers?"

"Oh," answered Jim, with a slight shrug of his shoulders, "the result has been that I have been turned out of the house. I couldn't expect anything else, could I? What annoys me is to think that I have deserved it. Lord Staines really behaved uncommonly well. He sent for me at once and told me that I had been accused by Lady Bracknell of systematically deceiving both him and Beauchamp. He said he thought I ought to know what she asserted, though he himself didn't believe her, and was sure that neither Mildred nor I would take advantage of Beauchamp's absence in the way she described. Well, of course, she hadn't got it quite right; still, when he put it in that way, I had to tell him the truth. I never felt so small in my life, and I couldn't get him to understand why Beauchamp should have assumed a false character. The end of it was that he sent for Mildred. It was very hard upon her, poor dear; but she came out of it splendidly. I must say that Mildred is"——

"Oh, yes; I know—an angel," I interrupted, rather rudely. "I don't doubt it; only, if I were in your place, I think I should prefer her being a woman. Filial affection is all very fine, but it seems to me that, having made up her mind to marry you, she ought to say so."

"But, my dear fellow, that's exactly what she did," returned Jim. "There was no persuading poor old Staines that Beauchamp wasn't in earnest, and he wanted her to promise that she would give me up. That she refused to do, so then he said he was very sorry, but that, under the circumstances, he must forbid me his house. I couldn't complain of that. I said I was very sorry, too, which was true enough. I shouldn't have minded so much if he had flown into a rage; but he was quite quiet all the time, and I'm afraid he was a good deal hurt, poor old chap! Mildred says he is getting fidgety about Bracknell, too. They haven't a word from him, and the lawyers wrote the other day to say that he had put his affairs into their hands, and that he spoke of leaving England. I wonder where he is and what he is going to do?"

Hardly were the words out of his mouth when the door of my study, where we were sitting, was flung open, and in walked Bracknell himself. He marched straight up to Jim, laid a hand on each of his shoulders, and said: "Well, you dear, solemn old Jim, so you're going to have your own way at last, are you? About time, too. I saw Beauchamp in town, yesterday, and he told me that it was all right between you and Mildred. I'm heartily glad of it."

It was the voice of the Bracknell of our school days that spoke, and indeed when I looked at him it seemed to me that his eyes, too, had recovered something of their old boyish light. "Give me a cigar, Maynard," said he, seating himself astride upon a chair, "and we'll have a jolly hour together, we three; it's quite on the cards that we may never spend another hour together; for I'm off to the Soudan to fight those black beggars, who seem able to give a pretty good account of themselves. We haven't always been quite as good friends as we once were, but that has been my fault, and as I'm going away now, perhaps you'll forgive and forget, eh, Jim?"

Jim silently stretched out his big brown hand, which the other took; and then I produced my best cigars and rang for brandy and soda. But Bracknell declined that refreshment.

"No drink, thanks," said he, with a laugh. "I've given up drink and cards and everything else that ought to be given up, and I'm going to be a good boy for the future."

He was in wonderfully high spirits. He told us how he had discharged all his debts of honor (which may have had something to do with his inability to discharge the others); how, by working his interest in high quarters, he had managed to get appointed to some queer corps—whether it was the mounted infantry or the dismounted cavalry or the camel marines I can't recollect—and how he was looking forward to a noble fight; "which, after all, when you come to think of it, is the very best use that a hulking brute like me can put himself to." But about his wife he said never a word; nor did either Jim or I care to bring forward her name, the former merely mentioning that he had been forbidden to show himself at Staines Court, without specifying the origin of this decree of banishment.

"Oh, that'll be all right," Bracknell said airily; "the governor will come round if you give him time. Now that the pen has gone through Beauchamp's name, there's nothing but you in the race that I can see."

But he did not seem disposed to dwell upon the subject, nor, indeed, upon any other that was connected with the present or the future. It was about old Eton days that he wanted to talk, and very soon Jim and he were chuckling over the memory of many a bygone escapade, as if they had been schoolboys together once more. At last Bracknell glanced at his watch and pitched away the end of his cigar.

GENERAL.

An extensive candy manufactory in Chicago was fatally destroyed by fire on Thursday night, causing a loss of $600,000.

Headache, Billiousness, Dyspepsia and Indigestion relieved and cured once by Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Try it. Samples free.

It is reported in Berlin that the recent mobilization experiment in France showed that the troops were unable to bear the strain of long marches.

Latest reports received by the Fisheries Department shows that this season has been unusually successful and profitable for Canadian fishermen.

Right now is the time to use a good Blood Purifying Medicine. Lose no time in getting a bottle of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It will do you good. Sold by all druggists. 50c.

The transfer of the St. Martin and Upham Railway to the Central Railway Company, of New Brunswick, has been sanctioned by the Governor-in-Council.

A searching enquiry into Wednesday night's collision between the Exhibition ferry steamers on Toronto Bay has been ordered by the Minister of Marine.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills, Salts, &c., when you can get Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists.

It is understood that an Imperial despatch stating that her Majesty would be greatly pleased to learn that Sir John Mackdonald had been appointed Canada's representative on the Fisheries Commission, has been received at Ottawa.

The North-West Council has been empowered to make ordinances relative to direct taxation for territorial revenue purposes, and for the incorporation of companies with territorial objects.

Bradstreet's reports a total of 168 failures throughout the country during the week ending September 16th, against 150 for the week previous. Twenty-four of the number were in Canada, seven less than the preceding week.

Give them a Chance.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All want to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain.

Billousness and Sick Headache cured by the delightful preparation known as Tarrant's Seltzer Aperient. There is not a Drug Store from the Atlantic to the Pacific nor from the Lakes to the Gulf that does not keep a large stock of this old and valuable medicine. A journey should never be undertaken without a bottle being carried in one's valise. In fact it ought to be in the houses of those who don't travel for time and experience have proved it to be one of the most valuable family remedies extant. The head office is in N. Y. City.—Picayune.

Still Another Victim.

CHATSWORTH, Ill., Sept. 17.—The last of the wounded of the ill-fated Niagara excursionists remaining here, Mrs. S. R. Borden, of Tonica, Ill., died yesterday.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer, it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

The Kabo corset warranted to wear a year without breaking. Is sold only at Turnbull's, the Headquarters for all New and Improved Corsets.

Fell From a Train.

On Saturday afternoon Mr. Alex. McNeely, brakeman on Conductor Morris' train on the Grand Junction Railway, fell from the train at the Central Ontario crossing. He was putting on the brake when the chain broke and he fell off. He was not seriously injured, fortunately.

OPENED out at Turnbull's, case after case of Fall and Winter Millinery, marked at prices that will suit everybody.

Potatoes.

The potatoe crop is a short one and the tubers are said to be small. Mr. Noble Stewart, of Otonabee, has, however, grown some large potatoes. He left at this office on Saturday two samples of the White Elephant variety. One weigned a pound and a half, and the other, a curiosity in shape, appearing like several potatoes grown into one, weighed two pounds.

Scott Act.

Three cases for violation of the Canada Temperance Act came before the Police Magistrate this morning, Inspector Cochrane being the prosecutor in each case. J. Meron was charged with a first offence and was fined $50 and $4.45 costs. J. E. McIntyre and Wm. Snowden were each charged with a third offence. A number of witnesses were examined, but no evidence of sale was educed. The cases were dismissed. Four more third offence cases come up to-morrow.

The Lock Works.

The Toronto Mail says:—"Port Hope is coaxing the Peterborough Lock Works to that town with a bonus of $20,000 cash, a two acre lot and exemption from taxation for twenty years. This is a magnificent offer." The Mail is misinformed. Neither the authorities of Port Hope nor the people of Port Hope have made such an offer, which is only the unauthorised suggestion of some irresponsible busybody who no more represent Port Hope than Messrs. Wiman and Butterworth do the United States.

Salvation Army Troubles.

When the Salvation Army was holding knee drill on the market square on Saturday evening a man drove up with a horse and buggy. He was under the influence of liquor and declared his intention of driving into the Army. He caused considerable excitement by trying to do so, but was finally persuaded to leave. The Army officers complain of some young men who disturbed their meetings at the barracks on Saturday night and Sunday by talking and laughing while the service was going on. They intend to have the Police Magistrate interview some of them and see if such practices cannot be stopped.

Arrested.

On Saturday night word was sent to the police station that a couple of men were misbehaving themselves on Water street, north of Smith. According to the occupant of the house, Mrs. Curry, two men came to the door and endeavored to force an entrance, using, at the same time, abusive language. She refused to let them in, but finally opened the door and sent for the police. When P. C. Pidgeon arrived they were gone, but he arrested S. Beaudry and the woman identified him as one of the men. He was taken to the station and afterwards liberated on bail. This morning no one appeared to prosecute and the case was enlarged.

MISS TULLY, Mantle Cutter at Turnbull's, is now prepared to show all the New Styles in Mantles and Mantle Cloths. Orders executed promptly.

A Card from Mr. Darling.

Mr. Wm. Darling, License Inspector for East Peterborough, publishes the following card in reference to a report in the Toronto World of some remarks made by him:—"Editor World: My attention has been called to your report of the Tuesday session, in which you state that I made a statement 'to the effect that Mr. Manning advised himself (meaning me) and his colleague in that county not to enter a third violation against tavern-keepers, but to make the charge a first offence.' You will kindly permit me to state that I said nothing of the kind. What I did say was that I was advised to proceed for second offences and to repeat them as often as possible, and where there was a defiant violation it would be well to try the effect of thirds. You will observe that this is entirely different from what you give me credit for saying. WM. DARLING, License Inspector, East Peterborough."

A TALK TO CHILDREN.

THE ONE THING THAT IS NEEDFUL IN LIFE.

A Boy's Idea of What is Needful—Four Cardinal Points of Christianity, Knowledge, Faith, Love, Obedience.

On Sunday evening the Charlotte street church was well attended by children of the Sunday school, the pastor, the Rev. L. Tovell, having agreed to preach a special sermon to them. The pastor explained this before beginning his discourse, intimating that though his words would be specially directed so that the little people would understand, yet he hoped lessons helpful to all might be conveyed. It would be well, he said, for people to get good texts grounded into their memories. One, at least, was fixed in his mind so that he would never forget it, and that was the text for this evening's sermon. When he went to the Sunday school next Sunday he would ask the pupils there what it was. It was found in Luke x, 42:—

"But one thing is needful."

These were all simple words and easily remembered. All could remember that, and no doubt the boys and girls in church here were whispering: "Luke 10th chapter and 42nd verse, but one thing is needful," so that they wouldn't forget it. But what is that one thing that is needful? When he was a boy he thought it was money: get an education and use it to get money, buy a farm and use it to make money, learn a trade and use it to make money, learn a profession and use it to make money. And he would venture to say that there were people in this church to-night whose creed went no further than that. Once in a Sunday school he asked the question: "What is this one thing that is needful? and a practical boy stood up up and said, "Bread and butter, sir." (Smiles.) That boy would make his mark in the world. Later in life he, the preacher, thought education was the one thing needful; but he had got farther than that. There was something better than education. He would spell it for the little people: R-e-l-i-g-i-o-n. Not the religion of Mohammed, but the religion to Christ Jesus. In order to make his remarks easy of remembrance he would divide them into four headings. He once asked a little boy how many quarters he could divide an apple into, and Arty replied, eight. Then he told Arty to ask his pa. And Arty asked his pa and found out that he could only divide the apple into four quarters. But Arty never murmured, and by his silence concealed his ignorance from his father. And to-night he would present the practical features of Christianity in four parts.

First—Knowledge of Christ. Something must be known about Him before a person can believe in Him. What a wonderful knowledge it was! What a wonderful knowledge to know of His works and character! How kind He was! There was never a man, no matter how hard and harsh and rough, who was not some time or other susceptible to kindness. Kindness was the strongest power in human society. Christ was kind—a father in the highest and truest sense. Not a father who, coming home vexed with the annoyances of business life, casts off the prattling child when it came to play with him. Such fathers had little influence with their children when they grew up to manhood and womanhood. But Christ was a father full of kindness always. Then something must first be known of Christ, of His works, of His atonement, His resurrection, and His intercession for us.

Second—Faith in Christ. What was faith? He liked to illustrate faith by describing a child learning to walk. The child is stood up against the wall and the father moves away five yards. Then the child is told to come. He moves tentatively out and relapses to the wall again. Several times he does this till the father comes within a yard of him. Then the child steps out from the wall and throws himself into his father's arms. That was faith. He knew his father would not let him fall. Neither would our Father let us fall if we trusted in Him.

Third—Love of Christ. Religion was a wonderfully simple thing. Some people tried to make it mystical and profound, yet it was simple. There were great problems in theology, and questions might be raised which the profoundest philosopher could not solve. But to get right down into the essence of it, and a little child can understand it. Christ did not ask Peter if he understood clearly the deep lessons of theology, neither did he ask Peter if he knew how to apply the great truths of science. He simply said: Peter, lovest thou me?" A person might look at a honey comb and admire the beauty of the structure of it. And he might stand and wonder how it was constructed, and what marvellous instinct the bee had. Yet the honey in the comb was the principal thing, and love was the principal thing in religion. A man that believeth not in love was not humane, and love was the fundamental principle of Christianity.

Faith—obedience to Christ. A father says to his boy: "Johnny, you stay here in the store while I go down te market. I'll be gone just fifteen minutes, and if anybody comes in tell them I'll be back in that time. Now, Johnny, stay at your post. "Yes father." And the father hurries down street. Charlie comes around the corner and says, "Johnny, a game of marbles! Keeps! right back of the store! and they go off. "Knuckle down now. Keeps!" and they keep at it till the father comes back, to find the store full of people and no Johnny. The father calls his boy when the customers is served and says to him: My son, you told me this morning that you loved me, but your professions of love are useless unless it leads you to obey me." Was not that natural? Was it not common sense, and this was true in Christianity. The love of Christ should lead Christians to obedience to Christ's commands. Those who professed to love Christ and did not His bidding were as a flower, after long, careful attention, giving forth no bloom. The plant was set as being profitless and would it not be natural for Christ to do the same with the plants he had watered and tended so long without a sign of bloom apparently?

Concluding, he made an appeal to the young present to form correct habits, for it would be a hard thing to do when age advanced upon them.

Two stones were thrown through the windows of the Salvation Army barracks in Lakefield one night recently. One of them came near striking one of the soldiers.

WITH THE CROSS-CUT.

At a logging bee in Minden, George and John Graham sawed one cut off a log 18 inches through. in 29 seconds; J. Harrison and J. E Bowron, same amount of sawing, in 34 seconds; Alfred Bowron and George Graham in 40 seconds; George Graham and R. Mortimer in 30 seconds.

BURGLARY.

On Thursday night a coat, alarm clock, some jewellery and a handkerchief were taken from the residence of Mr. Jewell, Port Hope. Attempts were made to enter the residences of Mr. R. B. Williamson and Major McLean.

SAVED ARMY.

Capt. Sarah Hayes has returned from England and taken charge of the Cobourg branch of the Saved Army.

CHEESE FACTORY.

Mr. Frank Sandford proposes to start a cheese factory at Fenelon Falls. He asks a guarantee of 300 cows and has been promised 164.

UPSET AND INJURED.

Mr. John Cullis, of Fenelon, was upset out of a buggy on Tuesday. One of his ankles was sprained and he was cut on the head, but not dangerously injured.

DYNAMITE.

There is said to be enough dynamite stored in a shed near the Methodist Tabernacle, in Belleville, to blow the hill away. Residents in the vicinity are uneasy.

FELL INTO A WELL.

A child nineteen months old, son of Mr. Thomas Austin, of Fenelon Falls, fell into a well six feep deed on Tuesday. There was eighteen inches of water in the well, but the child was rescued.

A BURGLAR BRUISED.

Mr. H. N. Macdougall went into his store in Fenelon Falls late one night and found that a man was trying to force the back door. He waited till the burglar thrust his arm in and hit it such a blow with a ruler that the intruder fled.

THRESHING MACHINE FATALITY.

On Friday afternoon Henry Francis Newton, of Hamilton Township, slipped and stepped into the cylinder of a threshing machine. His leg was torn up to the thigh. Death ended his intense sufferings about three hours after the accident.

INCENDIARISM.

Several fires took place in Cobourg within a few days. On Friday night Mr. A. Hewson's stable was burned, and a horse perished in the flames. Loss, $800, insurance, $200. On Saturday night a portion of the stables at the Agricultural Park and the caretaker's house were burned. Thirteen horses purchased for the Imperial army were burned in the stable. On Monday night a large quantity of hay belonging to Mr. T. O'Neill was burned. On Saturday night a double house belonging to Mr. J. Wilson was discovered to be on fire, but the flames were extinguished before much damage was done. All the fires are believed to have been of incendiary origin, and the Town Council has offered a reward for the apprehension of the culprits.

EMIN BEY.

Informations of the Near Approach of the Stanley Expedition.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Advices from Zanzibar have been received to the effects that the messengers sent by the consuls to apprise Emin Bey that an expedition under Henry M. Stanley had been sent to his relief have returned. They state that they reached Lake Albert Nyanza, where they met Emin Bey who was returning from an expedition to the Usungora country. Emin Bey was greatly surprised at the near approach of the expedition and warned his troops occupying posts on the western shores of the lake of the approach of Stanley. Emin Bey than return to Wadelai to await the arrival of the expedition. The messengers report that a fierce war has been waged between the King of Uganda and the people of Unyoro, in which the former was defeated. The country between Lake Nyanza and Lake Mutanzige has been devastated by the belligerents and its passage is difficult.

Twelve Day's Mission.

A twelve days' mission in St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, will begin on Wednesday morning. The mission is a special effort, made systematically and in an orderly way, to stimulate and make more extensively effectual the proper work which belongs to both the Church seasons, Advent and Lent. The mission is intended to be a time of special and frequent prayer, with calm and quiet, but thorough instruction in the solemn truths of man's spiritual need and duty, and also to include occasions of earnest appeal to the disobedient and negligent, to give heed to the things that belong to their peace. The services will be daily from September the 21st to October the 2nd as follows:—7.30 a. m., Holy Communion; 10 a. m., morning prayer and address; 4.30 p. m., instruction, followed by Evening Prayer at 5 o'clock; and 8 p. m., Mission Service and Sermon. Mr. Crawford is desirous of meeting all the members of the congregation who are interested in the mission at the church on Tuesday evening at 7.30 o'clock.

Thrown Out of a Rig.

On Saturday night Mr. Peter Phelan and another man were turning a corner in a dog cart near the Grand Trunk station, when Mr. Phelan was thrown out and fell heavily to the ground. He was stunned and appeared to be seriously injured. He was carried to a surgery near by and afterwards removed to the Nicholls Hospital. This morning he was so far recovered that he left the hospital and is around again.

THE THIRD OFFENCES.

A Quartette of Hotelmen Defeat the Inspector.

There was another reverse in the way Scott Act case decisions usually run at the Court this morning. Four hotel keepers were arraigned by the Inspector: Wm. Croft, T. Cavanagh, Wm. Kennally and A. P. Morgan.

The first case was that of Cochrane vs. Morgan.

He was charged with having committed a third infraction of the Scott Act between Sept. 14th and 19th. The case was short, and sweet for the defendant. The bartender and Mr. Morgan were examined and the case was dismissed owing to no evidence.

Mr. Croft was the next. He pleaded not guilty to an infraction of the Act between September 6th and 16th.

The bartender being examined swore that he had sold no liquor during these dates. He had some in his room for himself and his friends. The liquor did not come from the bar or cellar of the Croft House.

COUNTY CROWN ATTORNEY WOOD—Is there any liquor in the bar?

BARTENDER—Not to my knowledge.

C. C. A.—Do you know what is in all the bottles.

BARTENDER—No sir.

C. C. A.—What? and you the bartender!

BARTENDER—I don't know what are in them all. There's one I know has oil in it.

C. C. A.—How many other bottles do you not know the contents of?

BARTENDER—One, sir.

C. C. A.—Come now, what is in this bottle?

BARTENDER—I don't know, but I saw Mr. Croft cleaning hats with it. (Roars of laughter.)

C. C. A.—(Severely)—Come now, young man, I want no trifling when I'm talking about drinks; I don't want you to talk of something else. Is there any liquor kept in the bar?

BARTENDER—No, sir.

Mr. CROFT was examined.—He presumed that he was the proprietor of Croft's Hotel. There were beer pumps in the bar, but they were hard to move just now. They were attached to empty beer barrels. There was soft stuff in the bar. He did not keep the bar now for it wasn't worth while. The bar was open the same as usual, but no liquor was sold. He was not one of those unlawful beings. He kept the law as strictly as he could.

C. C. A.—But you were convicted twice before, Mr. Croft.

Mr. CROFT—I know it, and I paid sweetly for it, too.

C. C. A.—Then you don't keep the law strictly.

Mr. CROFT—That's an impossibility, but I have observed it pretty good. I've been four months without selling a drop. Isn't that curious to you now? (Laughter.)

After some further testimony was taken the case was dismissed with costs to be paid by complainant.

T. Cavanagh was charged with an infraction of the Act between September 6th and 16th. Nine witnesses were examined, but no evidence was brought out. The case was dismissed.

The case against T. Dunn was dismissed on Mr. Dunn's testimony.

The case against W. Kennedy was also dismissed.

A Big Blaze at Newbury.

NEWBURY, Ont., Sept. 19.—A fire broke out in the dwelling of Mr. Wm. Brown, at 1.45 this afternoon. The wind being very high at the time it soon spread and soon the town hall was in flames. It continued to spread till Mr. Kelly's store and dwelling, Mr. Mitchell's store and dwelling, Mrs. Smith's dwelling, Mr. Guphy's dwelling store and stable, Mr. Robinson's store and dwelling, also four other buildings were consumed. The Bothwell firemen responded very promptly to a call but could do very little on account of the scarcity of water. Every effort was made to save the property. The loss will be heavy though partly secured by insurance.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

BUCKSHOT WAS USED.

A Constable's Evidence as to the Mitchellstown Shooting.

DUBLIN, Sept. 19.—At Mitchellstown to-day the coroner resumed the inquest over the bodies of those slain during the recent conflict between the police and the people.

Sergt. Kerwan, of the constabulary, deposed that buckshot was fired from the barrack windows solely to defend the policemen, who were then running to endeavor to get into the barracks to escape the stones which were all the time coming thick and fast upon them. When the police reached the barrack door they could not get in, the door being blocked. He then ordered the firing, seeing that his own and the lives of the constables were endangered. Since he became a policeman his life was never in more danger. After two rounds of buckshot had been fired there was one round of ball cartridge fired. He was sure that the shots struck somebody.

Timothy Harrington, M P., Secretary of the Irish National League, in the course of the examination denounced the witness as a murderer.

The Crown Counsel protested against the use of such language, and Mr. Harrington answered: "The jury will also call him a murderer."

THE SUPERSTITIOUS CZAR.

It is said He is Afraid of War on Account of a Fortune Teller's Prediction.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The Czar it has always been understood has a superstitious horror of war, and it is to this circumstance that Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria owes the prolongation of his reign. At least, so say the political gossips. The Emperor of all the Russias has been warned by some of the modern soothsayers, upon whose utterances he seems to place reliance, that he and his reign will come to an end during a war, and he dreads the beginning of hostilities. The fate of the present Bulgarian regime may be said to depend on Germany and the existing condition of things will, it is believed, endure until the meeting of the Czar and the Emperor William at Stettin, or more accurately speaking until the date fixed for that meeting, for there is strong doubt of its ever taking place. Meanwhile the Czar desires to prolong peace as long as possible, and postpones a crisis which even his inaction cannot defer much longer. The diplomatic agents of Italy, Austria and England in Bulgaria show a significant degree of fraternization while Turkey remains inactive to the point of stupidity. A decisive action by Germany would precipitate the crisis.

A CONVICTS' END.

Supposed to Have Been Wounded While Escaping.

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 19.—On September 4th the body of an unknown man was found on the lake shore above Oswego, near where the steam yacht "Juno," on which the convicts escaped from the penitentiary was. The remains were buried and descriptions of the man and his clothing published. The penitentiary authorities made inquiries, and to-day they state that the body was that of John Kelly, of Toronto, who had effected his escape with Schoones. He had served two years of five years sentence. His identity was secured by means of his leather suspenders and a white handled knife as well as a comb in his pocket. The cause of his death is not known. It is thought there were no marks of violence on the body. When the escape occurred it was said that Kelly was wounded. This may have been so and death ensuing his body may have been thrown overboard by his comrade.

THE AIR BRAKES.

Their Refusal to Work Caused the English Midland Railway Accident.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The managers of the Midland railway are likely to suffer for their suspension of the block signal system on the day of the Doncaster races which led to the terrible accident involving the loss of over a score of lives. The block system is rigorously insisted upon by the English authorities, and the public have been horrified by the thought that it is likely to be suspended at the caprice of local managers, especially on days of heavy traffic when the most need for its protection from accident exists. The affair has caused a great sensation. The driver of the engine of the express train has not yet made a statement. He is apparently acting under instructions to be reticent. It is said that he will claim the air breakers refused to work and the claim will be made that their was ample time to stop the train had the breakes done their work properly.

A HALF-BREED'S CRIME.

Reported Murder of a Wife and two Children.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 19.—A despatch from Prince Albert says a report has just came from Green lake that a French half-breed had murdered his wife and two children. Their names are not given. It is supposed the murderer was drunk when he committed the terrible crime. Inspector Cuthbert with seven mounted police leave for there to-night.

Fighting a Bush Fire.

OTTAWA, Sept. 19.—The residents of Hintonburg, a village about a mile to the westward of this city, have been engaged since this morning fighting a bush fire which at one time threatened to sweep all before it. There are some grain elevators and valuable dwelling houses in danger.

Pain-Killer has cured cases of Rheumatism and Neuralgia after years standing.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

Is sold all over the world. It is far superior to plain Cod Liver Oil, palatable and easily digested. Dr. Martin Miles Stanton, Bury Bucks, London, England, says: "I have prescribed Scott's Emulsion, and taken it myself. It is palatable, efficient, and can be tolerated by anyone, especially where cod liver oil itself cannot be borne. Put upin 50c. and $1 size.

A Scott Act Case.

KINGSTON, Sept. 19.—The defence of the Frontenac county council, sued by the license commissioners for its share of the expense of the enforcement of the Scott Act, has been put in. The defendants deny that they are bound to pay any part of the expenses, and say that they cannot levy a rate for the amount required. It is held that the law passed by the Ontario legislature, for the payment by county councils of two-thirds of the expence, is ultra vires, and that the Canada Temperance Act is not in force in Frontenac, as the act was repealed when it was consolidated by the Dominion Government. The sum of $150, fines collected and paid to the county treasurer without lawful authority, is brought into court for lawful disposal by the judge.

Oddfellows' Sovereign Grand Lodge.

DENVER, Sept. 19.—The Sovereign Grand Lodge of Oddfellows met in Denver to-day. They were received by the Governor, the Mayor and local Oddfellows. There is a full attendance. The reports of the Grand Officers show a prosperous year. The increase of membership is 13,000, making a total of 547,303; encampment membership, 97,773; militant branches, 15,259. There was a relief expenditure of $2,250,000 and a revenue of over $5,500,000 during the past year. The session will last through the week. Routine business only was transacted to-day.

The Cardinal in Toronto.

TORONTO, Sept. 19.—Cardinal Taschereau, of Quebec, will come to Toronto on October 9th, to lay the corner stone of the new Catholic church in the east end of the city. His Eminence will be the first prince of the Roman Catholic Church to visit Ontario, and His Grace Archbishop Lynch and the Catholics of Toronto are about to make preparations to tender him a magnificent reception. No stone will be left unturned by the Roman Catholics of the city to tender him a grand and fitting reception on the occasion of his visit.

A Big Statue.

QUEBEC, Sept. 19.—At least 20,000 people, yesterday afternoon, attended to witness the difficult but successful operation of hoisting to its position on the summit of the lofty belfry of the church of the Sisters of Charity a gilt statue of the Sacred Heart, measuring fifteen feet high and weighing over 3,000 pounds. The statue was first solemnly blessed by Cardinal Taschereau with much pomp and ceremony, an open air sermon being also preached by one of his clergy.

A Newfoundland Storm.

ST. JOHN, Nfld., Sept. 19.—A gale from the northeast on Saturday night caused considerable damage at Portugal Cove. At Placentia several crafts were driven out to sea and have not been heard from. Grave fears are entertained for their safety. Bonavesta presents a dreadful scene. Wreckage, timber, masts, punts and debris are strewed indiscriminately about the streets. Twenty fishing vessels were driven ashore and seven sunk at their moorings. The loss will be very heavy.

The Jury Disagreed.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—At the assizes here, Walter Stevenson was tried on the charge of manslaughter arising out of the killing of Ralph Saw, a Chatham volunteer, who was attending the recent camp. The evidence on behalf of the Crown was of a very unsatisfactory character. The jury were unable to agree and were discharged. Stevenson was allowed to go on bail.

The Provincial Exhibition

OTTAWA, Sept. 19.—The forty-second Provincial Exhibition opened here to-day. Exhibits are still pouring in, and the directors feel confident that success will crown their labors. The entries in many classes are not as large as would be desired. Cheap excursions are being run to the city.

A Cyclone on the Move.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The cyclone reported south-west of Western Cuba moving westward, on Friday afternoon and Saturday morning as moving forward in the Gulf, is now approaching the Central and Western Gulf coast.

Death of Mr. Brassard, M.P.

WATERLOO, Que., Sept. 19.—Mr. Brassard, M.P. for Shefford, died this morning at one o'clock.

CONSUMPTIVES should try Allen's Lung Balsam; it can be had of any Druggist.

LATEST CABLE NEWS.

AMERICAN CHINESE SYNDICATE.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The Standard's correspondent at Shanghai says: The American-Chinese Bank Syndicate has accepted Li Hung Chang's conditions. An American official will depart for China immediately to complete arrangements. The bank will probably be started in Shanghai and Tientsin, and branches will be opened in Philadelphia and London in the spring.

ABYSSINIA.

FRANKFORT, Sept. 19.—The Papal Romano learns that England urges Abyssinia to give Italy satisfaction, and proposes a settlement of the frontiers, which will remove all pretext for collisions. The continental stock exchanges are quiet and inactive to-day and quotations are unchanged. It is a Jewish holiday.

FLEEING FROM THE CHOLERA.

FRANKFORT, Sept. 19.—The Frankforter Zeitung prints a despatch from Rome today giving dreadful news about the cholera at Messina. Thirty thousand people have fled from the city and business is suspended. Cholera is epidemic throughout the environs of Naples, but the city is still exempt.

HANLAN.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Hanlan, the oarsman, has arrived at Auckland, New Zealand.

A COUNTER MANIFESTO.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The Independence Belge says Prince Napoleon will issue a manifesto in reply to that of the Count of Paris.

A BROKEN ALLIANCE.

FRANKFORT, Sept. 19.—The most important news of to-day is the announcement in the North German Gazette that in consequence of the failure of the Russian Czar during his stay at Copenhagen to offer to visit the German Emperor, it is now fully understood that the alliance of the three Emperers is at an end. "Just as much as Russia," it says, "Germany has recovered her freedom of action, and can now, without further regard to Russia, more closely strengthen her ties of alliance with Austria."

NOT CONVERTED.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The Duke of Devonshire in a written statement in relation to the rumor that he has been converted to the Irish policy of Mr. Gladstone, says the report is without foundation.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—On the reassembling of Parliament the Government mean to confront the Opposition with a programme in which they will seek to repress all legislation for Ireland. The first proposal of this programme will aim at preventing the abuses of free debate which obstructed the session just closed. Conservative members of the House of Commons who have been complaining and fretting of the unprecedentedly protracted session are comforted by assurance of a long holiday, lasting probably to the end of February, followed by a session when a persistent plan will be adopted by the Government to repress the Parnellites, and devote the session exclusively to legislation for the English people. This session the Government promise to prorogue at an early day.

A SLANDERER PUNISHED.

PARIS, Sept. 19.—Maurice Bernhardt today severely wounded an antagonist named Alexis who had written an article reflecting on Mlle. Bernhardt.

CHOLERA IN ITALY.

ROME, Sept. 19.—The cholera afflicting the inhabitants of Messina is of the most violent character, death frequently ensuing an hour after the attack. The mortality is not confined to the lower class. There is great misery among the people. The gravediggers refuse to pursue their calling until compelled to by the troops. The epidemic has appeared in the prisons. The true state of affairs has not yet been published. It is reported that many new cases of cholera are occurring in Rome daily.

THE COUNT'S MANIFESTO.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—M. Rouvier, Premier, will deliver a political discourse before the reopening of the Chamber of Deputies. This discourse will be a reply to the recent manifesto of the Count of Paris. Several of the Extremist deputies propose initiating a movement in the Chamber of Deputies for the expulsion from France of all Orleanist and Bonapartist princes. Deputies Busly and Camelinat will again propose that all property of the above mentioned princes that can be found in France shall be confiscated.

TO SPEAK IN LONDON.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Mr. Chamberlain informs an inquirer that he is not in favor of any alteration of the law of Protestant succession to the throne. Mr. Chamberlain will deliver an address in London in support of his brother on Oct. 25.

UNITED STATES DIPLOMACY.

In an article expressing, not only its own hostility, but that of the United States Senates to the very idea of a joint commission to settle the fishery question, the New York Tribune says:—

"Since the Treaty of Independence, in which historic rights were fully recognized, diplomacy has been a lottery in which the Canadians have always drawn the prizes and the Americans the blanks."

Have they indeed? What about the Alabama swindle, when by fraudulent claims they filched a sum of money for which to this day they cannot find even colorable claimants? Or the robbery of part of New Brunswick by the dishonest suppression of evidence? Or the filching of a wide strip of territory extending from our own Province to the Pacific Ocean by imposing upon the British diplomatists, naturally less informed as to localities, the falsehood that the head of Lake Superior was at Pigeon River, instead of Fond du Lac? Or the trick of excluding the Fenian raid claims from the matters submitted to the Washington commission, by suggesting to the careless Mr. Gladstone dates that shut out the period of the invasions? Or the breach of faith of obtaining a season's extension of free fishing in our waters, and then after receiving the benefit refusing the inadequate compensation agreed upon by their President and his Ministers? Or their agreeing for a consideration to admit certain goods free and then holding themselves at liberty to tax the packages containing them?

The Tribune should read the diplomatic history of its country, and then abstain from making such unfounded statements. The only case in which they made a bargain with us, even approximately fair, was when they had to pay for the use of our fisheries. And then they overreached themselves by terminating the agreement on the ground that our fisheries were valueless to them, though in fact their fishermen are so absolutely dependent upon our property for a living that they have to choose between ruin from a fruitless cruise and the risk of having their vessels confiscated for stealing our fish.

But in spite of the fallacies of the Tribune its utterances are valuable as giving us fair warning that it would be folly for us to enter upon negotiation till the Senate has bound itself, for otherwise it would repudiate the action of its Executive.

Many of the people of the United States are deservedly esteemed by Canadians, but unfortunately the suicidal abstension of many of their best citizens from public affairs has left so much control in the hands of self-seeking adventurers, as to render their politics disgraceful, their legislatures haunts of corruption, and their public morality loose in the extreme.

THE DECALOGUE A GRIEVANCE.

We have been assured within the last few days by several persons from Manitoba that less is heard about the agitation against disallowance in Winnipeg than in Toronto, and that in Manitoba outside Winnipeg there is little sympathy with the movement. The political agitators in Ontario are laboring assiduously to stir up discontent in Manitoba, and in their suggestions to set law at defiance do not even except the Ten Commandments. One of the most active of these fomenters of disorder says:—

"The settler in Southern Manitoba who sees a store just across the imaginary line offering cheap St. Paul goods is entitled to blame geography to some extent whenever he succumbs to the temptation of paying it a visit after dark."

In our view a man is as much a thief who steals from a partnership consisting of all the people of Canada as one who steals from an individual. In Minnesota the people pay for their State expenditures by means of direct taxation. In Manitoba the Provincial expenditures are defrayed mainly from the receipts for Customs duties. Yet we have an Ontario journal, that claims to be respectable, defending a Manitoban who, having received the advantage of freedom from direct taxation which his neighbor in Minnesota has to bear, should endeavor to rob the Customs revenue toward which his fellow-countrymen contribute for his benefit.

In reference to the false report of cattle disease in Nova Scotia, the Reform Montreal Herald, which is now favouring the Commercial Union agitation, says:—

"The telegraph lines of the United States and Canada seem to have lent themselves readily to the dissemination of the falsehood throughout the American continent and, no doubt, the cable has done Canada the same bad service in England."

The Herald cannot be ignorant that Mr. Wiman is one of the monopolist ring that controls the most important telegraph lines in the United States and Canada and that it is now his interest to "bear" Canadian stock in order to get it cheaply, as it was to bear telegraph stock before absorbing rival companies. The Herald warned the public not to be fooled again by him.

In a book zest published more than three centuries and a half ago there appears the following question and answer:—

Q. "How can a farmer prevent the mice from stealing his corn? A. By giving them his corn."

It seems that the idea of the Communists and of the Canadian friends of the New England fish pirates, is not a novelty.

DON'T COUGH!

But, Seriously, do you Catch on?

Well, the Great-and-only-Original-Terror to High-Priced-Clothiers, Wonderful-Forepaw dealer, in other words, teddy Cough (Now bring along the Babies, take the name and the gold dollar and be Happy) has issued a challenge. He has the war paint on, and terror and destruction will come to any of the Baby Clothiers of Peterborough who will pretend to do business in opposition to this wonder of the 19th Century. He says he is TRUTHFUL! Well, let us see. He states positively that SHEPPARD is lying when he says that he got Bags from Peterboro's Great Cheapside. He says that he never advertises that which he will not carry out to the letter. READ CAREFULLY THE FOLLOWING, and see the position it puts this oracle of truth in—Mr. Teddy Cough:

37 Vic. 37. C. D.

I HENRY SHEPPARD, of the Town of Peterborough, in the County of Peterborough, do solemnly Declare that on Saturday evening last past two young men came into my place of business and stated to me that they had one deal with Gough but never wanted another. One said "I purchased goods from Gough, (meaning I suppose the store) and he guaranteed me that he would refund me the money if I "was not satisfied or words to that effect. I had witness to prove this. Afterwards I went back with the goods, stated that I was not "satisfied and wanted my money. He would not give it me. I told him I could make him return me the money if I wanted to, as I "had witness. I did not get the money, so Gough got the money and the clothing too, but, I have the experience."

On Wednesday, August, 31st, 1887, a responsible farmer came into my store and inspected my Grain Bags. He purchased two dozen bags of good quality, looking at the same time at the cheap bags selling at $1.75 per dozen, but, said he would not buy them for his own use. About two hours after leaving my store he returned and said "I want two dozen of your cheap bags now" and stated that they were not for himself. He afterwards stated to me in the presence of a witness that he took the two dozen cheap bags in the store of one, Gough, a Clothier on George Street, Peterborough, and was paid $3.50 for the same by the said Gough, or one of his salesmen.

And I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the Act passed in the Thirty-seventh year of Her Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act for the suppression of voluntary and extra-judicial oaths."

HENRY SHEPPARD.

Declared before me at the Town of Peterborough, in the County of Peterborough, this 13th day of Sept., in the year of our Lord 1887.

E. A. PECK, A Commissioner, &c.

The above has the contrary ring of truth, seeing that in each case four reputable witnesses can be found to corroborate the above sworn statement, and, when it is necessary, more will follow. Sheppard has no desire to bring any man's business in such a light before the public But the Back-bone talked about will never be found wanting in Sheppard, and just at the right time and place, Mr. Forepaw dealer may need his $500 or $1,000 to prove his assertions.

So that, at the present moment, Peterboro's great Cheapside will go on selling the Cheapest Clothing in Peterboro' though it raises the wool on this only Original Cough. Sheppard has no brother-in-laws in Muskoka to sell goods to, neither has he relatives or any other person, who at any time endorsed his paper to the extent of one cent. He has, though his stock is small, $10,000 in assets over liabilities, and just so long as this state of affairs exists he will pledge himself to the public to give entire satisfaction.

You can save money on any purchase. Sheppard has reduced Men's $10.00 Suits to $6.00, Men's $15.00 Suits to $10.00. Look out for Slashing Reductions in Men's and Boys' Clothing.

It is stated by the Toronto Mail that:—

"The alternative suggested by some Conservative journals is Imperial Federation. We are asked to wait until our manufacturers are ready to face British competition on even terms."

Our contemporary has repeated this statement till it may believe it to be true. We ask it to name even one Conservative journal that has suggested that Imperial Federation should involve British competition on even terms with our manufacturers.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver a misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

"Ah, well!" he said, "it has been very jolly seeing you fellows again; but my time's up now and I must go and say goodby to the governor and Mildred. I shall have to get back to London this evening, so as to make an early start to-morrow. You might walk up with me, Jim. Oh, no, by the way, you can't, though. But come down to the station at 5 o'clock and see the last of me, like a good chap, will you?"

Jim promised that he would be there, and presently Bracknell took my arm and walked me off toward Staines Court. I accompanied him very willingly, because I was rather curious, I confess, to see what would happen if he encountered Hilda; and, as luck would have it, when we were within a few yards of the house that ill used lady, in a neat walking dress, came tripping down the steps.

She nodded to Bracknell, without any manifestation of surprise. "Oh," said she, "you have turned up at last. Have you come down to stay?"

"No," answered Bracknell, shortly, "I have come down to say goodby to my father. I'm leaving for the Soudan to-morrow."

"Really? How spirited of you! When will you be back, do you suppose?"

"I'm sure I don't know; never, perhaps. Don't let me keep you standing in the cold."

Hilda smiled and shrugged her shoulders. "I am not much accustomed to being left out in the cold," she remarked. "Nobody has ever yet succeeded in treating me in that way, and I doubt whether you will succeed. I shall stay at Staines Court until you return."

"Shall you?" said Bracknell. "I should think you would find that rather dull work. However, you know best what suits you. Goodby."

"Goodby," returned Hilda. "Take care of yourself."

She nodded again as she turned away; and so they parted, without so much as shaking hands.

This short dialogue had the effect of sobering my companion, whose face was grave enough when he rang the bell and asked for Lord Staines. I waited for him in the drawing room while he went to bid farewell to his father and sister, and a long time I had to wait before he reappeared, looking a little flushed and agitated.

"Come on," he said, hurriedly; "we haven't much more than time to catch the train." And when we were out in the park he drew a long breath. "Well, I'm glad that's over!" he exclaimed. "Poor, dear old boy! I shall never see him again, you know; and dash it all! I wish I had been a better son to him. Not much use saying that now, eh? But I do wish it, all the same."

I made some stupid conventional speech, to which Bracknell replied, "Oh, he's breaking up fast, anybody can see that, and he knows it himself. Besides, it's rather more likely than not that I shall leave my bones in Egypt; and between you and me, Maynard, I sha'n't mind if I do. I've been pretty well sick of life for some time past, and if I could make a fresh start—However, I can't make a fresh start; and as for living with my wife again, I'd sooner go into penal servitude. Upon my word, I think she's the most infernally wicked woman I ever came across!—and I have seen a fairish number of women who are commonly called wicked."

It was neither my business nor my inclination to take up the cudgels on Hilda's behalf, but I said, "You won't make her any better by deserting her, will you?"

"Nor any worse," returned Bracknell. "She'll be glad enough to get rid of me, you may be sure, and she won't have much to complain of, for when I come into the property, if I ever do come into it, she shall have the lion's share of my income. I must pay off Beauchamp too, somehow or other. I say, Maynard, do you believe in Providence? Of course you do though; you're the sort of respectable fellow who would; and your mother brought you up well. I sometimes think Providence may have taken poor little Sunning away for very good reasons. He wouldn't have had your advantages, you see."

Then he suddenly changed the subject and talked about the Egyptian campaign until we reached the station, where we found Jim waiting for us.

The train dashed in immediately afterward, so that our leave taking was a brief one. I remember that Bracknell's last words were: "Goodby, old Jim; don't forget me if I get knocked on the head out there."

CHAPTER XVIII.

I was dining up stairs with my mother that evening when our aged factotum came in to say that Mr. Leigh was at the door in his dog cart, and wished to speak to me.

I ran down stairs, feeling sure that some misfortune had happened, and my fears were confirmed when I stepped out into the windy night and Jim, stooping down over the gleaming lamps of the dog cart, said: "I want you to come up to the station with me, Harry; there's been an accident to the express."

He had heard no particulars, only that a collision had occurred down the line and that a great many lives were believed to have been lost. "I couldn't go to sleep, not knowing whether Bracknell was alive or dead," he said. "Besides, he may be badly hurt, and there's nobody with him."

I agreed that anything was better than suspense, and having sent a message to my mother to the effect that I was going home with Mr. Leigh and might not be back before morning, got into the dog cart; though I had some doubts as to whether we should be able to proceed to the scene of the catastrophe.

However, when we reached the railway it seemed that there would be no difficulty on that score. Lord Staines was a great man in our part of the world, and Jim himself enjoys a certain consideration; so that the station master, on hearing our errand, at once placed an engine at our disposition. It had been a very bad accident, he told us; but he had heard that there was but four killed outright, and didn't see no reason to fear as his lordship was one of them.

I hardly know why both Jim and I should have formed an opposite opinion. We did not communicate it to each other—indeed we scarcely spoke a word during the half hour or so that we spent rushing through the darkness in the teeth of the southeasterly gale which had risen since nightfall—but afterward we compared notes and found that neither of us had had any hope from the first. Perhaps, as far as one of us was concerned, hope would not have been quite the right word to use. A little soonor or a little later death must come to us all; and the future, as poor Bracknell himself had said a few hours before, had had but few bright possibilities to offer him. Yet when among those four silent, stiffened bodies we recognized the one of which we were in search, I own that my philosophy broke down, and that I was just as sorry as if there had been no mitigating circumstances connected with this swift blotting out of a life which was still young and vigorous.

To be continued.

THE TAX PERCENTAGE.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—I have watched with a good deal of interest the correspondence which has been going on in reference to the fine imposed by the Town Council for non-payment of taxes by a certain date—the 15th December I believe being the date fixed.

Now, sir, I have no hesitation in ranging myself on Mr. Moore's side, being convinced that the plan he proposes is the more equitable one to rich and poor alike. A good deal of bunkum has been indulged in by Mr. McNaughton and his brave defender who signs himself "A Poor Man," but who, when the mask is torn from his face, turns out to be, not "a poor man," but a rich lawyer.

This is the first time in my life that I heard of a rich lawyer (bad as the lawyers are) sailing under the poor man's colors to hide his own ulterior purposes, and the fun of the whole business is that this rich lawyer proved to his own satisfaction at least that there were no poor people in our town except those who received charity from the town, and then signs himself "A POOR MAN." Does he then receive charity from the corporation?

I believe that Mr. McNaughton is Chairman of charities for his ward and I am creditably informed that he worked hard on the Court of Revision and in the Council to get this wealthy lawyer's taxes reduced. Was this charity, and did Mr. McNaughton ever work so hard for people who were really poor? I never heard that he did. Mr. McNaughton signs himself "The Poor Man's Friend." Will he point to anything he ever did for the poor man? Will he point to any action or resolution of his in the Town Council or out of it that was in any way calculated to, or did help the poor man? (I don't mean his friend the rich lawyer.) If obstructing so far as he can every thing that tends to advance the interests of the town, to expand its trade and commerce, to increase its capabilities and add to its manufacturing industries, thereby affording more employment and remunerative wages to the working man and business for the artisan and merchant—if obstructing these things is helping the "poor man," then Mr. McNaughton is indeed the poor man's friend. Mr. McNaughton, or rather the person who writes his epistles for him, resorts to the cursing always followed by persons who have no arguments to advance, and by abusing Mr. Moore tries to draw a herring across the track. He says Mr. Moore is aspiring to be Mayor of this Town. What is there wrong in that? Would it not be a great advantage to the Town to have a man of Mr. Moore's broad intelligence, ability and experience at the head of its Council? It is to be hoped that he would at all events keep Mr. McNaughton from making a laughing stock of the Council. Then he seems to consider it a crime in Mr. Moore to have walked into town on foot to get his education, thinking, no doubt, that where ignorance is bliss it is folly to be otherwise. Well, sir, the taxpayers of this town are not much interested in how Mr. Moore got his education or where Mr. McNaughton did not get his, or whether Mr. Moore walked into town on foot or "walked in in a phaeton." What we are interested in is the amount of taxes we have to pay, or rather in this case the amount of fine imposed upon us if we fail to pay by a certain day. Why, then, should the Council impose a fine at all before the end of the year? If a man pays his taxes before the end of the year I think that ought to be sufficient without imposing upon him a fine of over 60 per cent. per annum if he fails to pay on or before the 15th of December. The fine proposed by Mr. Moore—if we must be fined at all—of one per cent. per month is certainly high enough for any taxpayer in this town to pay, be he rich or poor—high enough certainly for the poor, and if Mr. McNaughton was what he claims to be he would have voted for it. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space,

I am, yours,
A LOVER OF FAIR PLAY.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

FIRE.

A Great Blaze on Hunter Street—Warm Work for Firemen.

At ten minutes to twelve o'clock the central alarm called the Fire Brigade out, the fire being on Hunter street. In two minutes two streams were playing on the flames from the Hunter street hydrants and shortly after another was supplied from an Aylmer street hydrant.

The most intense flames issued from the old skating rink, used as an implement wareroom by Mr. W. Bowie. It was at the north end of this building that the fire started. It quickly envelloped the whole of the large frame structure and an immense cloud of flame and smoke went up. It was a marvel that more of the contiguous buildings were not set afire. Only one building, Douglass & Logan's workshop, caught the flame, and was reduced to a wreck.

The firemen worked with great pluck. The boards they carried to shield them from the heat caught fire more than once. They stayed on the ground till half past five this morning, when the fire was effectually extinguished.

The cause of the fire was incendiary, there being no cause accidental, whatever, in the place it started.

The losses and insurance are as follows:—J. Whyte, loss on building $2,000 and on patterns $1,000, insured in the Western for $1,750; W. Bowie, loss on implements $2,000, insured in the Royal for $1,500; W. Paterson & Son, loss on building $1,000, insured in the Guardian for $600; Douglas & Logan, loss on contents of building $1,500, insured in the Royal for $1,160.

CHINA HALL.

This Season's Supplies Drawn from European and American Markets.

At any time of the year China Hall, Peterborough, is a sight worth seeing, but particularly at the beginning of the fall or spring trade. At the present the whole place is ablaze with novelties from both the old world and the new. The long and wide wareroom on the corner of Hunter and Simcoe streets exhibits piles upon piles of goods in the exactest order—china and earthenware from Swansea, Wales; crockery from Staffordshire, England; dinner and tea sets and novelties from Limoges, France; toilet goods from Vienna, Austria; satin chinaware, vases and toilet goods from Bohemia, Germany; cups and saucers and fancy china from Berlin, Germany; lamps from Boston, Mass.; crockery from St. John's, New Brunswick; glassware from Montreal, Quebec and Hamilton, Ontario; elaborate and beautiful silverware from Toronto and Hamilton, Ontario, and many other lines of goods.

Mr. McFarlane Wilson, the proprietor, not content with the large space occupied by China Hall, has succeeded, by constructing a subterranean showroom and another underground wareroom, in more than doubling the size of the establishment. The subterranean showroom is lighted with gas. It is used exclusively for showing off dinner and tea sets. The customers have the advantage of seeing first how a set will look on the table, for a whole range of tables down the centre of the showroom are spread and set. The wareroom which adjoins the showroom is the same size as the showroom. In it is stored a largn reserve stock.

China Hall, that is China Hall above ground, looks best by night. The iris hued china in countless forms gleams and shimmers under the bright rays from the electric lamps: thousands of crystal prisms hang glittering and sparkling like dew-drops in the morning sun; lamps of burnished brass are pendant from bright chains so numerous as to look like a freak of spider work. In fact the whole place is a mass of gorgeous, superb resplendence. Mr. Wilson's enterprise in bringing together such a comprehensive stock is worthy of commendation and no doubt the public will express its approval in a satisfactory way.

The following general references and notes from correspondence from these counties are taken from the report:—

FALL WHEAT.

The close of the spring found the wheat in the East Midland group, a poor fall wheat region at the best, in a very bad condition, winter killing having been almost general. Some of the fields "picked up," however, and although the yield will be small, the sample in the counties of Victoria, Peterborough and Hastings will be of fair quality. In Haliburton hardly any fall wheat was grown. In portions of Peterborough a scarcity of labor was felt during harvest, but, on the whole, the self-binder got over the fields in time. The straw is reported as rather short and brittle. Very little damage occurred to the grain from rust or insects.

A. R. Kidd, Dummer: The fall wheat was mostly killed by the ice last winter and late frosts this spring, and some of what remained was ploughed under. The grain is not as plump as it should be, owing to want of moisture at the time of maturing. It ripened too fast, and as a result will be about second quality.

J. S. Cairnduff, Harvey: Fall wheat was hurt by ice and dry weather, but not by insects. It promised well in the fall, but the spring freezing and thawing, where not sheltered by the forest or by tree planting, caused it to be a light crop. It was all cut in July.

Wm. Armstrong, Otonabee: Fall wheat is better than was expected. It did not fill as plump as might be, but there was no rust. Cutting commenced about the 12th of July, and we got the crop housed in good order. There was a sufficient supply of help, as self-binders supplied the place of manual labor.

John H. Delamere, Lutterworth, Haliburton: There is not any great breadth of fall wheat shown here, but although limited in quantity the quality is excellent.

SPRING WHEAT.

P. Robinson, Smith: Will be an average crop. As the hot weather ripened the grain too rapidly, it will be rather small. All saved in good condition.

D. Anderson, Anstruther: Spring wheat is damaged some by rust, and the grain is small and shrunken. The July drouth and the hot weather helped to make it a failure.

BARLEY.

H. Spence, Dummer: Barley is a medium crop, but will be a small sample and light weight. It is all harvested.

Wm. Armstrong, Otonabee: Barley is very small and light. It was browned by the hot sun, although housed without getting any rain.

S. Kettle, Glamorgan, Haliburton: Barley is generally sown late here, and now looks worse than anything else grown, owing to the drouth.

OATS.

J. S. Cairnduff, Harvey: Oats are short in straw, but will turn out better and yield more than the other grains. They are mostly all cut and housed in good condition.

H. Spence, Dummer: Oats are very light. The straw is so short that many of the farmers are not trying to bind them, but are putting them in loose.

RYE.

Wm. Armstrong, Otonabee: Not much grown here, but what there is is very small.

PEASE.

F. Birdsall, Asphodel: In most places not over half a crop, on account of the dry weather. White marrowfat, where sown, came out the best.

Charles R. Stewart, Dysart, Haliburton: Injured by drouth. About two-thirds of an average crop.

CORN.

D. Anderson, Anstruther: Very little corn is planted here, but what was put in did well this season.

ROOTS.

F. Birdsall, Asphodel: Potatoes in most cases are very small on account of the beetle and the drouth. Turnips are very much hurt by the fly and the dry weather, and will not be over half a crop unless there is a great change in the weather. Mangles and carrots are affected by the drouth.

Thos. Tellford, Ennismore: Potatoes will be 85 per cent. of an average crop. Turnips will be from 15 to 20 per cent., being destroyed by the drouth and the fly. Mangels and carrots promise half an average crop.

John H. Delamere, Lutterworth, Haliburton: The potato crop is usually large here. Early potatoes this year are good, but the late planting, which means the bulk of the crop, is very light, owing to the great drouth. This, however, may be improved if we get any rain; if not, they will not be half a crop. Turnips seem to be doing fairly well, but all our root crops are suffering from the protracted heat and lack of rain.

FRUIT TREES AND FRUIT.

Thomas Telford, Ennismore: Apples will be about half a crop, and the plum is completely destroyed by the curculio. Only a few grapes, which do not look well. Scarcely any cherries. There will be little enough fruit for home consumption.

HAY AND CLOVER.

From the East Midland counties and the Northern districts there are no reports that are particularly discouraging, while many are of the most re-assuring character.

John H. Delamere, Lutterworth, Haliburton: The crops never before promised better until the continued drouth, when they ripened too quickly. The hay crop has been most abundant. There were no frosts after the snow went off, so that in this locality, and in the adjoining townships of Anson, Minden and Snowden, the yield is above the average, and it was saved in excellent order. Of course, on some lots, where there was but little soil covering the rock, it dried right up; but, generally speaking, it is a good crop.

PASTURE, LIVE STOCK AND DAIRY.

A. R. Kidd, Dummer: The pasture at this writing, is almost nil, and should the dry weather continue for any considerable time, stock of all kinds will be seriously affected, as well as the dairy interest, which at present seems to be the mainstay of the farmer.

John H. Delamere, Lutterworth, Haliburton: In many places the pasture is dried up very much, but scarcely as bad as I have noticed it at the front; the bush protects a lot of good pasture, and the live stock are in good condition generally; horses and cattle look well so far, but continued drouth will effect the cattle; sheep are scarcely up to ordinary quality, and scarce; there has been a scarcity of pigs this season also; fat cattle scarcely up to average; our dairy produce is usually excellent in quality, but scarcely up to the average in quantity this season.

BEES AND HONEY.

A. R. Kidd, Dummer: Bees appear to have done remarkably well. There was an unusually large basswood blossom, which is the "pure gold" for bees.

FARM LABOR.

D. Kennedy, Otonabee: The labor supply was quite ample. About two-thirds of the farmers use self-binders.

GENERAL REMARKS.

A. R. Kidd, Dummer: The outlook for the farmer is certainly gloomy; short crops and miserable prices. The dairy only promises anything like remuneration for capital invested.

Charles R. Stewart, Dysart, Haliburton: We want somebody to come here with a pocket full of money to buy our hay, press it and export it. We have more than we can possibly use. I could mention farmers who have from 30 to 70 tons of hay to sell. Send us a Yankee buyer and your Bureau will receive the blessing of this great people.

TURNBULL'S immense stock of Dress Goods in Lovely Styles is now complete. Ladies! look through it. Prices are positively right.

The Drill.

This is the regular drill night for the city battalion.

Arriving Daily

At Ostrom's Fruit market, George street, Oysters by the quart, 40 cents. d59tf

STARTLING but true. TURNBULL has the Finest Line of Dress Meltons in the Trade.

Opened.

Messrs. Dawson Bros. have opened their new dry goods store, Erskine's old stand, carrying a complete line of new fall goods. The store is artistically fitted up and the stock tastefully displayed.

THE way TURNBULL'S Dress Meltons are moving out, proves they are finer than is usually sold at the price.

Sworn Off.

It is something of a wonder to find that so many people have quit drinking. About half of the witnesses examined in the court this morning said that they had sworn off—probably since August 28th.

Now Open.

Chamberlain's oyster parlor is now open for the season. Oysters will be served at all hours in styles to suit the tastes of our patrons. After this week shell oysters will be kept constantly on hand. Porter-house steaks; chops, etc., prepared on the shortest notice. d69-tf

WIDE-awake Buyers! Have you seen TURNBULL'S Fine French Dress Goods, being sold at prices paid elsewhere for coarse, unsightly stuff?

Sentenced to Five Years.

M'GLYNN TO METHODISTS.

He Addresses Five Hundred of Them—Creating a Commotion.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Rev. Dr. McGlynn made an address before the New York Association of Methodist preachers yesterday morning, which lasted an hour and a half and was listened to by 500 ministers and others. Dr. McGlynn referred to his excommunication for preaching the Christianity I was brought up in," and after referring to the peculiar position in which he found himself in facing a body as distinctively representative of the Protestant religion, he presented the Henry George land theories, and defended them as representing the cause of humanity.

When the speaker had concluded a gentleman offered a resolution of thanks to Dr. McGlynn for his "able, eloquent and instructive" address and "wishing him God-speed in his efforts to diffuse the doctrine of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man." This created great confusion, and after a turbulent scene which one clergyman characterized as "resembling a bear garden," the resolution was amended by a clause that allowed the members to reserve the right of individual opinion concerning George's land theorie The ministers seemed to relish what the doctor said, as there were frequent outbursts of applause.

When the resolution was being discussed there was a dozen preachers on their feet at one time. Wild gestures and loud talking were the order of the hour. Some argued against the adoption of the resolution because it would place them in a bad light with their congregations.

The resolution was finally modified and adopted. It read that they had "heard with pleasure and profit the able and instructive lecture of Dr. Edward McGlynn; that while each member reserves his individual opinion concerning the land theories advocated by Dr. McGlynn, we recognize in him a talented and sincere Christian brother and minister with a call to a high duty, and that we bid him God-speed in preaching the gospel of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man."

THE MINERS' MEMBERS.

The Decision of the Miners Regarding Their Representatives.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The Socialists have achieved another victory in English politics. For some time they have been diligently working among the Northumberland miners. Now the vote on the question of the payment from the union funds to Messrs. Burt and Fenwick, the miners' representatives in Parliament, has resulted in a decision to discontinue it. The real reason is that both Burt and Fenwick are moderate men, Mr. Burt being one of the most respected members of the Commons, and that they have not worked on Socialist lines. Mr. Burt got £500 a year for his service, and Mr. Fenwick £200. Unless therefore their constituents make some provisions they will have to retire in November. Probably the miners will choose Socialist candidates in their places, but there is some chance that Mr. Burt, who is personally popular, may continue to sit. The miners' vote is no doubt a serious thing for the Liberal party, who have always been able to count on the labor members. The miners just now are suffering from extreme depression. Their wages have fallen far below the former level, and so they have ready cars for socialist agitators. The Standard says: "The labor candidate is one of those institutions which cannot stand the wear and tear of practical politics. In a fit of fervor the workingmen may agree to make substantial sacrifices for the sake of seeing themselves represented in Parliament by some one whom they can regard as flesh of their flesh, bone of their bone, but sooner or later the illusion must fail and with it the enthusiasm."

They Want Information.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Circulars have been forwrrded to all the United States consuls in Canada, asking for certified returns, according to the sworn statements made before them, of the exports of various articles at each Canadian port to the United States during the past three years. It is supposed that the Government want the information with the view of considering the question of closer commercial relations with Canada.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

EATING GRASS REFUSE.

Thousands of Persons Starving in Asia Minor.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Large numbers of the inhabitants of the Cilician Plain in Asia Minor are starving, and the source of food supply has been almost exhausted. The missionaries of the board at Adana report that since August 500 more families have been added to the list of those who have to be supplied with bread to sustain life, making 1,500 families now being fed. Urgent pleas for aid come from Tassus and the various villages of the Plain, and Rev. Mr. Montgomery writing from the scene on August 13 says: "Large numbers of people are kept alive by eating grass, roots, refuse of the streets, berries and small fruits. There was brought to me this week a kind of nauseous, bitter, puckery bread, made from the pods of a low thorn found upon the plain, which I should think would kill those who eat it, and yet I am told that whole villages eat it and have nothing else. In soliciting aid for the afflicted people the board appeals to all humane people regardless of creed.

IRISH AFFAIRS.

The League Proclaimed—The Mitchellstown Inquest—League Meeting.

DUBLIN, Sept. 20.—The Dublin Gazette published a proclamation suppressing the League and all its branches in County Clare and the Baronies of Leitrim, Loughrea, Galway, Corkaguiney, in Kerry; Condons, Clanglibbon, Dun hallow, and Muskerry, in Cork, and Shelburne in Wexford. The proclamation is signed by Prince Edward of Sax-Weimar, commander of the forces in Ireland; Baron Ashbourne, Lord Chancellor of Ireland: A. J. Balfour, Chief Secretary for Ireland; Henry Bruen, Justice of the peace; J. D. Gibson, Attorney-General of Ireland; and Gen. Sir Redvers Buller. The Gazette announces that Gen. Sir Redvers Buller has been worn in as a member of the Privy Council.

THE MITCHELLSTOWN SHOOTING.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—At to day's hearing on the inquest over the victims of the conflict between the police and the people of Mitchellstown, Constable Doran swore that he fired four times at the crowd, twice with buckshot and twice with ball. The first bullet prostrated a man. The crowd stoned the barracks and he believed the barracks were in danger when he fired. He said his face was wounded. When the coroner asked him to stand up and exhibit the wound Doran refused at first, but finally did rise when ordered to do so. No wound was apparent.

Continuing, Doran said that Police Inspector Irwin ordered six constables to fire in defence of the barracks. A stone thrown from the crowd struck witness and dislocated his right thumb. This, however, did not prevent him from firing again.

Mr. Harrington: "And murdering?"

Witness declined to answer Mr. Harrington's interrogatory.

Mr. Harrington: "Have you any doubt on either your mind or your conscience that you killed Lonergan?"

Witness hesitated and then declined answer.

MEETING AT LIMERICK.

LIMERICK, Sept. 20.—John Dillon presided at a great meeting held in the Limerick town hall under the auspices of the National League. The hall was crowded.

Mr. Dillon made the speech of the day and dwelt at length on the O'Brien case. He said Mr. O'Brien would doubtless be condemned as a felon, but if so he would have the sympathy of the whole civilized world. The Government must not think they could crush the league by any such means as those resorted to in the persecution of Mr. O'Brien. Each arrest of that kind would add but fresh courage and spirit to the people of Ireland in their struggle for Home Rule and increase the gulf of separation between the landlords and populace and put new fuel into the fire now burning.

Mr. Dillon urged the farmers of Ireland to subscribe more fully to the league eviction fund, and declared that the members of the Nationalist party were unanimously determined to carry on the plan of campaign which, he maintained, had ameliorated and improved the condition of the tenants on every estate on which it had been adopted.

Mr. T. Poole (Home Ruler) ex-member of Parliament for South Huntingdonshire, Mr. Jos. Firth, Boltomley Firth (Liberal), ex-member for Chelsea, and a large number of other English Liberals were present. Resolutions embodying the suggestions made by Mr. Dillon were passed by the meeting.

Fatal Railway Smash.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 20.—A Canton, Dak., special says east bound passenger train No. 2, on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road, A. J. Morse, conductor, ran into the rear of a freight train at 4 o'clock this morning three miles east of this place. The freight switch was at Inwood, Ia., and the rear part breaking loose tore down the grade towards Canton for several miles, finally colliding with the passenger train. The following were killed: Andrew Seerath, Rock Valley, Ia.; W. A. Flogg, Michigan, Ia.; Chas. Dunbar, Mason City, Pa. Two bodies are still in the wreck. Thirty passengers escaped uninjured, six cars of wheat, one of cattle, the caboose and passenger coaches were demolished. The accident occurred at the edge of the bridge across the Sioux River, and in a few seconds more both trains would have been thrown into the river from a high embankment and thirty or forty lives would have been lost. The freight conductor is blamed for the accident. Twenty people got out of the smoking car at Canton, 10 miles before the car was smashed to atoms.

The Outlines of the Thistle.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The Herald to-day prints outlines of the yacht Thistle, obtained from a draughtsman who saw her while docked abroad. Messrs. Watson and Bell, in interviews, admit the correctness of the lines, which differ materially from those recently published by the World. The Thistle will be docked in a day or two.

A SCANDAL.

Col. Hughes Hallett Denies a "Pall Mall Gazette" Story.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The Pall Mall Gazette publishes full details of the scandal in which Col. Hughes-Hallett, Conservative member of Parliament for Rochester, was involved, by reason of the exposure of his relations with his stepdaughter. The Gazette states that the Colonel will not resign his seat in the House of Commons and accuses the Government of attempting to whitewash him.

Col. Hughes-Hallett replies as follows;—"The statements of the Pall Mall Gazette are grossly untrue. I have never had any liaison with any stepdaughter of mine. I repudiate the charge. The Pall Mall Gazette has outraged the name of a young lady not my stepdaughter, who is no relative or connection of mine and to whom I have never stood in loco loco parentis. Regarding the money part of the question, Miss Selwyn some time ago asked me to try to get her better interest on £5,000 than she was then getting. She covenanted by a deed in my possession to lend the money for five years. Some weeks ago her solicitors suddenly called this money in. Within twenty-four hours the principal with interest was handed to my solicitors for transference to her solicitors."

Col. Hughes-Hallett does not explain that the mother of Miss Selwyn was the first Lady Selwyn. The late wife of Col. Hughes-Hallett was the second Lady Selwyn, who became a widow five months after marrying Justice Selwyn.

The Pall Mall Gazette assails Col. Hughes Hallett under the supposition that he seduced his step-daughter, accusing him of an unnatural intrigue, for a parallel to which one must go back to Latin mythology. The Gazette demands that the Colonel be dismissed from the army, and declares that no English gentleman could sit on the same bench with him, and that the Ministers must force him to vacate his seat in the House of Commons. The Gazette asserts that the Colonel has seen Mr. Smith, the Government leader in the House of Commons, and the Conservative whips, and that an intrigue is afoot to whitewash him.

The Colonel himself asserts that he has not consulted Mr. Smith, but he has seen one of the whips.

Business Troubles Ahead.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The Sun says: That the business interests of the country are suffering for want of currency accommodation there is no disguising. Stocks would not have declined as they did yesterday and stayed down if the holders of them did not believe that the necessities of the mercantile and commercial communities were very great. A significant feature was the announcement that the Manhattan Dry Dock, East River, Union Dime and Williamsburg Savings Banks had declined to make loans even with Government bonds as collateral. This announcement applied to time as well as to call loans. It was stated for the Savings that their reserves had been depleted by time loans on real estate at six per cent. It was further learned that the banking houses of Boston are daily thronged with New England mill owners and manufacturers asking for discounts. The shipments of currency to the South to move the crop has been enormous and viewing the situation, particularly among merchants, the remark of a director of the Second National Bank was: "If the Government doesn't do something pretty quick, it will break all the merchants." It was stated on what is considered excellent authority that Sub-Treasurer Canda, in recent interviews with Secretary Fairchild, has impressed upon the Secretary the seriousness of the state of affairs among the merchants.

The Bank of London Affair.

TORONTO, Sept. 20.—In the case of Meredith vs. Taylor, ex-president of the Bank of London, the motion for the discharge from custody of Taylor was this morning postponed for a week owing to the death of the wife of Mr. Purdon, of London, who was to have cross-examined Mr. Meredith on his affidavit.

The Perreault Murder.

MONTREAL, Sept. 20.—In the case of the murder of Joseph Perreault at Cote St. Louis, Eusabe Dupuis was tried this morning. No evidence implicating the prisoner was offered, and he will probably be discharged. Perreault, it will be remembered, was found dead, killed by a piece of rock.

LATEST CABLE NEWS.

GERMANY TIRED OF RUSSIA.

BERLIN, Sept. 20.—The Cologne Gazette published an article yesterday, in which it says that Germany will henceforth be independent of Russia. Unless the latter country makes fresh approaches, the paper says, the firm of the three Emperors will be dissolved, and the dissolution will not be followed by a Russo-German alliance.

THAT ROYAL MEETING.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Diplomats have started the rumor that the Czar and Emperor William are to meet after all in October, but the rumor is unfounded and is no more than a mere guess.

DESTSUCTIVE FLOOD IN EGYPT.

CAIRO, Sept. 20.—Official statistics of the damage done by the floods in Egypt show that property was damaged to the extent of £500,000, and 800 families were made destitute.

THE POOR SULTAN.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—It is stated that the Sultan of Turkey, driven half distracted by the conflicting threats and counsels of the European powers, intends to seek a way out of his embarrassment by personally conferring with Emperor William in Berlin.

STEAMSHIP COMPETITION.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—It is asserted that the Cunard Steamship Company has leased the riparian rights of the roadstead in the new harbor at Bremen, and will compete with the German Lloyd Line.

FRENCH STATISTICS.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—The census for 1886, which has just been issued, shows an excess of births over deaths of 52,560 against 85,000 in 1885. The divorces granted in 1886 numbered 2,949 against 4,277 in 1885.

NIHILIST TRIALS.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 20.—Another great trial of Nihilists is about to be commenced here. The prisoners include fifteen officers of all ranks.

THE SIMPLON TUNNEL.

GENEVA, Sept. 20.—The preliminary agreements with reference to the projected tunnel through the Simplon Mountain have been signed. The tunnel will open in Italian territory. The Swiss and Italian Governments each contribute 15,000,000 francs.

A FIASCO.

MADRID, Sept. 20.—The Spanish settlement at Rio Oro, West Africa, has proved a fiasco. There is no trade there and no prospect of any. The colony will probably be abandoned.

BOYCOTTING A PRIEST.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The extent to which the Irish are carrying their warfare against all that savors of England is indicated by the boycott that has been declared against Dr. Healy, coadjutor to the Bishop of Galway. The doctor has given utterance to Unionist ideas, which are obnoxious to the Nationalists, and consequently last week at a confirmation, only a small gathering of children were present, despite the desperate efforts to assemble the people.

RIOTOUS ARTILLERYMEN.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The artillerymen stationed at Hilsa, India, being ordered to prepare to move abroad went on a riot, and after wrecking the canteen or sutler's shop went about breaking windows and spreading terror among the inhabitants of the town. During the melee many soldiers and citizens were seriously injured. Twenty of the artillerymen were placed under arrest.

ANOTHER SCHNAEBLE AFFAIR.

METZ, Sept. 20.—A son of M. Schnaeble, the French Commissary who was arrested at Pagny-sur-Moselle last April, has been arrested and imprisoned by the German authorities for crossing the frontier near Chemenat and affixing a treasonable placard, bearing the tri-color of France, upon a tree by the roadside. Young Schnaeble is 16 years old.

LAUNCH OF AN IRONCLAD.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The Trafalgar, the largest ironclad ever constructed, was successfully launched to-day at Portsmouth.

English-Americans Organizing.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—The committee appointed two weeks ago for the furtherance of the naturalization of English subjects resident in Chicago, reports the most favorable progress. Nine societies, eight Knights of St. George lodges and the St. George's Benevolent Society, have signified their intention of co-operating in the project. The only remaining lodge meets on Wednesday evening and will undoubtedly tender its aid. A general meeting of all the organizations will be called shortly, when arrangements will be made for the first mass meeting, and invitations will be sent to Scotch, Welsh and Canadian organizations.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER, 21, 1887.

CATTLE FOR GREAT BRITAIN.

THE great prevalence of Texas fever in Pennsylvania and the strenuous efforts of the authorities there to suppress it, are facts of more than usual interest to our Canadian farmers, who fortunately are not subject to such disastrous visitations. Any one who has watched the statistics of exports of cattle from this continent to Great Britain is aware that the United States has flooded the English and Scotch markets with far greater numbers than have been sent from Canada, thus seriously depressing and unsettling the market to the loss of our producers or shippers. Unfortunate as it may be for our neighbors, this disease in some of the States, hard winters in others and severe drought in still others, must tend to relieve our farmers from some of the pressure of this competition.

But the chief lesson that may be learned in Canada is the folly it would be to accede to the views of the Commercial Unionists, who by their vaunted Zollverein would leave us exposed to an influx of these diseased cattle and would immediately subject us to be "scheduled" in Great Britain, where the Zollverein cattle would all be placed on the same footing. Then we would lose the exceptional privilege our cattle now enjoy of being taken from the port alive, thus being enabled to be refreshed and fattened after the voyage or being reserved till a temporary glut is diminished. This privilege, not possessed by our neighbors of the United States, adds considerably to the value of our cattle and it should not be hastily resigned for an inadequate compensation.

THE VETO POWER.

ONE of the journalistic instigators of rebellion says:—"The veto question is a difficult problem. The power of veto must reside somewhere, we suppose, if we are to avoid chaos. Yet under the British system, on which is modelled, the only possible custodian of it appears to be the Federal Executive, now on trial for abusing it." Well, bring on the trial. Try the question of law in the courts instead of defying it. Try the question of policy in Parliament, which has pronounced in favor of the Executive action. Try it by the votes of the people at the next general election, and see if they do not pronounce as before against chaos. But do not strive to bring about rebellion, disruption and chaos, by instigating each section to combine in rebelling against the will of the whole, if not allowed its own particular crotchet. To preserve unity and agreement in the general policy of the country, there is a veto power provided and it must be retained as now in the hands of the chosen political chiefs of the whole people. The United States learned the same lesson just a hundred years ago.

THERE is much mischievous nonsense talked about the valuable property held by the shareholders of the C. P. R., much of it presented to them by the public. Let us put this to the simple test of figures. Any of these critics can place themselves in the coveted position of shareholders by buying shares at little more than 50 cents on the dollar. Neither sellers nor buyers estimate the present or prospective actual value of the shares for an investment as placing them at much more than half their face value. The fact is that long railways on this continent do not make enough net profit to pay the interest on the whole cost for construction and plant, and therefore part of the money is found by people dealing the accommodation by means of Government or municipal subsidies. The C. P. R. is in no different position in this regard from other railway companies.

THE advocates of Commercial Annexation are very fond of insulting "Canadian manufacturers and workmen" by asserting that in asking for protection from United States competition they confess their inferiority. If the absence of protection constitutes equal terms, why do the United states manufacturers and workmen and their friends on both sides of the international line insist on maintaining protection against the competition of Great Britain? And why should these advocates of foreign interests think it shameful for Canadian manufacturers and workmen to desire protection against the United States and meritorious for those of the United States to want protection, not only in their own country but in ours also against Great Britain?

WIDE-awake Buyers! Have you seen TURNBULL'S Fine French Dress Goods, being sold at prices paid elsewhere for coarse, unsightly stuff?

THE Winnipeg correspondent of the Toronto Globe says:—

"Major Walsh, who is in the city, denies having anything to do with the alleged interview in Toronto, in which it was said Sir John had threatened to send British Regulars to Manitoba in connection with the boundary railway."

On the strength of this fabrication about Sir John he has been persistently vilified by the Reform press. Though he and the Imperial authorities gave a flat contradiction to the invention, its fabricators claimed that this was not sufficient as Major Walsh to whom Sir John had spoken was away and could not give his version. Now Major Walsh has added his denial, yet the slanderers do not retract the abuse they had founded on the falsehood.

WENT BACK ON THEM.

That Lincoln farmers' institute meeting annoys the Grit annexationists terribly. Farmers' institutes were intended to be Grit machines, to do Grit work, and in the majority of cases they are what they were intended to be. The Lincoln institue refuses to do what the Grits expected it to do, and it is now being clubbed unmercifully by the disappointed annexationists.—Hamilton Spectator.

ALL IN VAIN.

Canadian Members of Parliament are hoisting the Stars and Stripes at political meetings and cheering for the President; certain of our newspaper are smirking at annexation. But all in vain; American Senators thank God that they have the power to prolong international differences which they have, themselves, threatened may result in bloodshed.—Gitawa Journal (Independent.)

THE KIND OF UNION.

We are to-day in Canada a nation of Fair Traders, we are ready to enter into a reciprocity treaty with any one of the nations, but we expect and will exact fair and reciprocal terms, and above all we will have none of a treaty that will favor any people more than our own fellow-countrymen in Great Britain; that is the kind of commercial union we Canadian British subjects desire, and nothing more or nothing less will we Canadians consent to.—Calgary Tribune.

DEPICTING ITS ALLIES.

The condition of affairs in Manitoba is, to say the least of it, disgusting. The Ministers of that Province do not seem to practice the reserve usual with persons of such responsibility, but openly declare their intention of defying the Federal Government, the courts, and anything else that may stand in the way of the construction of the Red River Valley railway. They in fact threaten rebellion, and the suppression of rebellion in their case, they believe to be outside the range of practical politics.—Montreal Herald (Reform.)

WHY BRITISH TRADE FLOURISHED

The Toronto Globe tells its readers that "during the first half of the present century Britain enjoyed an unchallenged industrial supremacy." In the same article it says that now the British people begin to awaken to the disagreeable fact "that if they are not to be hopelessly distanced in the race they must look alive." During the first half of the century British industries enjoyed protection against their rivals. This was broken down, and British manufacturers "must look alive" if they do not wish "to be distanced in the race."—Hamilton Spectator.

A DEMAGOGUE'S MOVEMENT.

We generally judge of the public sympathy with any movement by the support it gets from the people and their leaders. Let any proposition take positive hold on the public mind and you will see the representatives urging it on and supporting it,—not the demagogues who wish to ride into prominence and importance on any particular movement but the real representatives of the people. Can any one point to any leading man in Canada who will advocate Commercial Union pure and simple. Why at this moment no leading public man has dared to speak in favor of it, but many have come out openly against it.—Calgary Tribune.

A MANITOBA OPINION.

Captain Whitla is bound to become notorious. This bellicose gentleman went to the Morris picnic the other day, evidently full of enthusiasm. Amongst other spread-eagle sentiments he got out was, "he was going to fight for the land he was living in, or leave the country, and there was a good many others who would do so." Just so; then the sooner Mr. Whitla and a few more of his ilk leave the country it will be for the country's good. The idea of men like Whitla who have made every dollar they own out of the settlers of this country that has been opened up and developed by the policy of Sir John and the building of the C. P. R., which he to day condemns—talking as he does—is simply outrageous.

How many dollars had Whitla and Shadowa when they came to Manitoba? What would they have been worth to-day if it were not for the C. P. R.?—Brandon Mail

RESULT OF THE C. P. R.

One of the most important results of the opening of the C. P. R. is the increased consumption of Canadian-made articles instead of the American and English goods which previously had this market almost, if not entirely, to themselves.—Vancouver News-Advertiser.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

Jim took the loss of his friend terribly to heart. He had always loved the man, always admired him and wanted to believe in him, even when faith must have been a little difficult, and it was long before he recovered from the shock of that fatal night. To the present day he cannot bear any allusion to Kaiser. I must confess, is it a subject upon which I myself care to dwell. Our first duty, of course, was to break the news at Staines Court; and how we accomplished this I can scarcely remember. The one thing that stands out clearly in my recollection is Hilda's look of horror when she was told in what manner her husband had met his death.

"I can't see him!" she cried. "Are they bringing him here? I won't look at anything shocking!"

It seemed to me amazing that at such a moment the woman's first thought should have been to spare herself; but perhaps, after all, it would have been more amazing if her first thought had been anything else.

Lord Staines was in bed when we reached the house. It was thought best that I should at once tell him what could not long be concealed, and he listened to me with very little apparent emotion. He asked me whether I thought Bracknell's death had been a painful one; and when I replied—as, happily, I was able to do—that it must have been instantaneous, he muttered, "Well, well!" and lay back on his pillows, looking straight before him with sunken, weary eyes.

"So there is an end and a finish of us," he said presently; "maybe it's best so. It seems odd that Bracknell and Sumning should both go before me; but I don't suppose I shall have much longer to wait now. When my poor boy and I parted this afternoon, we knew that it was for the last time, and I'm glad he came to see me—I'm very glad he came to see me. He was in great glee at the prospect of a fight—he has always been like that from a boy. We Henleys may have our faults, but I don't think we have ever been accused of wanting pluck. Bracknell will make himself heard of out there, you'll see. I was a little vexed with him at first for going off and leaving me, but he gave me reasons, and I believe he was right. I wish he didn't hate writing letters so much! The newspapers will tell us all about him, though."

In this way the old man wandered on, until Lady Mildred came softly into the room and made me a sign to leave him. I doubt whether he ever fully realized what Bracknell's fate had been. During the next few days he talked a great deal about his son, sometimes speaking of him as still alive, sometimes as having been killed in Egypt; but he did not seem able to fix his mind upon any subject for more than a few minutes at a time, and often failed to recognize those about him. One duty, fortunately, recurred to his memory, and his performance of it was, I believe, an immense comfort to two simple minded and conscientious people.

"My poor boy," he said, when he had caused Jim Leigh to be summoned and made him take Lady Mildred's hand, "told me that I might consent to your marriage without loss of honor. I had thought differently, but Bracknell assured me that some one—the other man"——

"Mr. Beauchamp?" suggested Lady Mildred gently, when her father came to a long pause.

"Beauchamp, yes — Beauchamp, it seems, withdraws. There is money owing to Beauchamp, and I can't attend to business now; but you will see that he is repaid. Bracknell explained it all to me, but I have forgotten. He promised that the money should be paid, though."

"It shall be paid, papa," said Lady Mildred.

"Thank you, my dear. You have been a good daughter and you will be a good wife. I wish you all happiness."

These were the last intelligible words that he said. He lingered on for some days after this, but soon sunk into a state of semi-consciousness, in which he at last passed quietly away. My mother says he did his duty according to his lights, and will be judged by that standard; and perhaps it may be allowed that in this instance she does not push charity beyond all reasonable limits.

His titles died with him, except that of the barony of Bracknell, which is of ancient creation and which has passed to his daughter. By her also have been inherited his estates, which, although still heavy encumbered, will doubtless recover themselves in time under their present judicious management.

Jim's marriage was a very quiet affair, the bride being in deep mourning at the time for her father and brother; but Lady Petworth, who came to take charge of the orphan after Lord Staines' death, considered it undesirable that the ceremony should be too long postponed; so good Mr. Turner tied the knot, and the young couple have been living at Elmhurst ever since in a seclusion which I dare say is agreeable to both of them, but of which the country does not altogether approve. Jim tells me that the debt of honor bequeathed to his wife has already been paid off and that he hopes in the course of a few years to be able to move to Staines Court, which is at present shut up. In the meantime he is very well satisfied with his less pretentious abode; and indeed, if a man were to be condemned to live in the country from year's end to year's end, I don't know that he could find a pleasanter place to live in than Elmhurst, while I am persuaded that he would search in vain for a fellow exile more amiable and charming than Lady Bracknell.

The other Lady Bracknell—the viscountess of that name—has quite recently decided to put an end to all confusion of identity between her sister-in-law and herself by changing her condition. During the first few months of her widowhood she resided with her father — a touching spectacle to the neighborhood, as she drove about, with lowered eyelids, in her weeds. Whether after a time she became bored with the respectful sympathy of the neighborhood or whether she found herself better off than she had anticipated I do not know; but she moved somewhat suddenly to London, set up house there, discarded crape in favor of pale gray and began to dispense a hospitality of which many people were found ready to avail themselves. Rumor has it that, on recovering her freedom, she made a desperate bid for the Beauchamp property and that the fortunate owner thereof met her advances by requesting her in so many words to omit him from the list of her acquaintances; but I do not believe this story. Hilda has experience enough to be aware that flirting with a married woman and espousing her after she has become a widow are two very different things, and it is not likely that so clear sighted an observer would have wasted time and energy upon a forlorn hope. As a matter of fact, she has done far better for herself than she would have done by marrying Beauchamp; for she is about to be led to the altar by the eldest son of a duke, and I hear that the bridegroom's relatives have received her with marked cordiality. Her career, so far as it has gone, may serve as a warning to impulsive young men and as an encouragement to the daughters of the clergy.

THE END.

There are in Chicago no ambulances for the conveyance of the sick or wounded, and such persons must choose between a hearse and a patrol wagon or walk to the hospital.

MERCIER' METHODS.

It is probable that the question of the imposition of heavier timber dues was worked by the Government for all it was worth in order to secure the vote of the lumbermen and their employees. The change in the vote in Hull, which has increased its majority for the Government candidates by over six hundred voters, is, probably with justice, ascribed partly to expected favors from the Government.—Montreal Witness (Reform).

THEY WANT OUR FISH.

If fish should be put upon the free list it would very much simplify the disputation with the English government in regard to the fisheries, and at the same time be a desirable method of reducing the cost of living. The Record favors a repeal of the duty on fish.—Philadelphia Record.

THE SS. GELLERT.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The steamer Gellert, from New York for Hamburg, has arrived at Plymouth. She lost two of her propeller blades on Tuesday. Her mails and passengers for the continent were landed at Plymouth. The steamer will proceed to Cherbourg.

TO THE POPE BELONGS THE CREDIT.

BERLIN, Sept. 20.—The North German Gazette referring to statements made at the Treves congress, denies that Dr. Windthorst and the Centre party were instrumental in ending the Kulturkampf. To the Pope alone, it says, belongs the merit of having gained such a victory for the Church. Herr Windthorst did his utmost to perpetuate the Kulturkampf. Concessions in religions are of little value to him, because in his opposition to the Government he employs religious conflict as a pretext for the Guelphic and Polish revolutionary ends.

She was Desperate.

He—What had you rather see a friend of yours—me, for instance—a great general, an eloquent preacher, a leading editor, or perhaps a mighty political leader?

She (who has wasted the summer on him)—I think I had rather you were an ear of that light-colored, sharp-pointed corn, that we saw this morning at the grocer's.

He—Great Scott! and why?

She—That kind of corn will pop, you know.—Lewiston Journal.

Wanted to Chop it.

Customer (to waiter, who had just filled his order—Did you say this was a chop?

Waiter—Yes, sir. Anything the matter with it, sir?

Customer—Nothing much. But say, when you are coming around this way again please bring the axe.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, and Hypophosphites.

Is sold all over the world. It is far superior to plain Cod Liver Oil, palatable and easily digested. Dr. Martin, Miles Stanton, Bury Bucks, Loudon, England, says: "I have prescribed Scott's Emulsion, and taken it myself. It is palatable, efficient, and can be tolerated by anyone, especially where cod liver oil itself cannot be borne. Put up in 50c. and $1 size.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth It relieves the little suffer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

A Good Sale.

The sale of farm stock and implements at Mr. Alex. Fitzgerald's, Smith, on Tuesday, was a very satisfactory one. There was a good attendance and the bidding was lively. The implements and farm produce was sold at fair rates, and the stock brought satisfactory prices. Everything was sold, and the aggregate of the sales amounted to $2,250. The sale was conducted in his usual spirited manner by Mr. C. Stapleton.

The Leader.

One of the attractions of Peterborough's great fair will be the baby show. Gough, the well known clothier is donating the prizes: a suit of clothes for the father, a pair of blankets for the mother, and a silver cup for the baby taking first prize. The baby show will come off on September 6th. Messrs. H. LeBrun, Thomas Dunn and E. C. Hill have been appointed judges. The Times suggests that in the event of any of the judges declining to act that the name of Capt. T. Burke, of the Review office, be substituted. Capt. Burke suggests that Mr. W. H. Robertson, of the Times, be appointed to the position.

Lost His Dry Goods.

At the Police station this morning a coat and vest along with an old silver watch, awaited a claimant. The articles were found near the Smith street bridge. At about half past ten o'clock the claimant appeared. He was well moxified and piloted by his wife. The wife enquired for the missing garments, while her lord stood meekly by devoid of coat and vest. P. C. Adams fished out the garments and asked if these looked like the missing goods. They were recognized by the wife at once and handed over to the owner, who, after several struggles succeeded in getting into them. "You want to straighten up now" remarked the P.C. "Yes," said the wife quickly, as if the idea was a brilliant one, "that's just what he wants, isn't it?" P. C. Adams explained that the owner lost his drygoods by throwing them off to attack a shadow and forgetting where he left them.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

A POINT OF LAW.

An Interesting Point to Decide by the County P. M.

The police court in Ashburnham was crowded on Tuesday afternoon, when County P. M. Edmison held a session of the court. A number of Scott Act cases came up, but the chief interest centered in the case Darling vs. Calcutt.

The circumstances were as follows: H. Calcutt, brewer, was charged with having sold intoxicating liquor in the village of Ashburnham between certain dates. He pleaded not guilty through his counsel, Mr. John Burnham. Mr. Calcutt was sworn and admitted a sale of beer between the dates mentioned in the information, but stated that such sales were made in the town of Peterborough, and that he had not made any sales in Ashburnham.

Other evidence was taken, but failed to establish any sale in Ashburnham.

Counsel for the defendant asked for a dismissal on the grounds that the evidence did not support the information, which alleged a sale in Ashburnham.

County Crown Attorney Wood asked to have the information amended so as to charge the defendant with having committed the offence within the town of Peterborough.

The Magistrate declined to comply, on the ground that if the offence was commited within the town of Peterborough the case should be tried by the Police Magistrate of the town, and that if he allowed the amendment and tried the case in Ashburnham he would deprive the town of the fine, which would not be just between the town and county. He added that he understood P. M. Dumble had refused to try county cases for the same reason. He reserved judgment to be delivered on Friday next.

J. O'Connor, who was charged with an infraction of the Scott Act, was acquitted.

H. Beckett, of Norwood, was fined $100 and costs, on conviction of a second offence against the Act.

H Hamilton, Ashburnham, pleaded guilty to a first offence against the Act and was fined $50 and costs.

Two more cases, Darling vs. Faucher and Darling vs. Evans, will be before the County Police Court on Friday.

St. Luke's Mission Services.

The twelve days Mission Services in connection with St. Luke's Church commenced on Tuesday evening, when the Rev. E. P. Crawford addressed the workers and produced a powerful impression upon them. This evening he will address the public in the church. His discourse will of interest. The services will be continued for the next twelve days. There will be four services daily: At 7.30 a.m., 10 a.m., 5 p.m., and 7.30 p.m. The Rev. E. P. Crawford and the Rector, the Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, will be present.

Anniversary.

The programme for the anniversary of the Young Men's Christian Association on Thursday evening is a first-class one. It includes addresses by Messrs. Wm. McCulloch, of Toronto; Geo. M. Roger, president; the new secretary and the retiring secretary. The music will be a special feature. A male choir will sing several selections, and the brass quartette of the Association will lead the congregational hymns. Every one will be welcome. It will be held in the George street church.

Personal.

The London Gazette of Sept. 2nd contains a list of officers specially mentioned for their services in Burmah by the Governor-General, Lord Dufferin, the Commander-in-Chief, Sir Fred. Roberts, and other generals having commands. Among those thus named by Major-General Sir G. S. White, commanding the Upper Burmah Field Force, is Colonel A. C. Toker, 18th Bengal Infantry. Col. Toker, as having a separate command on the Chindwin, also recommends several officers. He has since been appointed Assistant Secretary to the Governor-General.

Mr. P. Morgan, representing the Montreal Star, is at present in our town in the interests of that paper.

Mr. A. R. Kidd, Reeve of Dummer, left town on Tuesday evening for Ottawa, where he will act at the Provincial Exhibition as a judge of cattle, having been appointed to that position.

HAVE you heard it? TURNBULL is selling Heavy Cashmere Hose, according to size, from 12½ cents to 25 cents a pair.

Cricket.

The Buffers and Duffers, alias Wrighton's Lambs will kindly file an appearance on the Cricket ground on Thursday at 2.30 p. m. The object is to have a tossup match which will in all probability be the last for this season.

THAT R. J. KIDD has a larger stock of the BEST ready-made Boots in Peterborough is beyond a doubt.

Fruit.

Grapes by the basket at Ostrom's for 3½ cents per pound. d59tf

THE way TURNBULL'S Dress Meltons are moving out, proves they are finer than is usually sold at the price.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

SCOTT ACTS, Browns Act, Jones and Smiths Act wisely by going to KIDD'S for boots—they are the BEST.

Bush Fires.

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 20.—Bush fires are raging with great force in Palmerston township, and if rain does not speedily fall the property will be all consumed. Already many poor farmers have lost all their fodder as well as their wood and fences. Nightly the sky is lurid with the flames and constant watching is necessary to save families from being burned in their beds. Hundreds are also engaged in fighting back the flames from the mills about Ompah. The loss so far by fire in this section of the country cannot be less than $200,000.

Norquay Unsuccessful.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Premier Norquay, of the Province of Manitoba, who has been in this city for the past month for the purpose of raising money to build the Red River Valley railroad from Winnipeg to connect with the Northern Pacific, started for home this evening. Before going he stated that he was not successful in raising the money in New York. The project, he said, would not be abandoned because New York men refused to buy the bonds.

The Yamaska Contestation.

SOREL, Que., Sept. 20.—The preliminary objections in the contestation of the election of Mr. F. Vanasse, M.P.P. for Yamaska, were maintained yesterday afternoon by Hon. Judge Ouimet. In consequence the contestation was dismissed and Mr. Vanasse will retain his seat.

Bay of Quinte Fair.

BELLEVILLE, Sept. 20.—The Bay of Quinte fair opened here to-day. The weather is fine. Exhibitors are busy getting their goods in order. The entries are a half more than any former exhibition, and the attendance promises to be large. This beautiful city is alive with people.

A Pugilist Murdered.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Henry Woodson, alias the "Black Diamond," the unsuccessful middle weight pugilist, was shot and instantly killed at one this morning by Thomas White, a Pullman car porter. The men quarrelled over White's mistress.

No Water.

WORCESTER, Sept. 20.—Another big break occurred in the L street water main last night, flooding the street from curb to curb. Three-quarters of the city will be deprived of water for two days or more.

A Vagrant Hangman.

MONTREAL, Sept. 20.—Chas. Lawson, the hangman here in 1881, of Harvem, was sent down this morning by the Recorder as a vagrant.

M'GLYNN TO METHODISTS.

He Addresses Five Hundred of Them—Creating a Commotion.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Rev. Dr. McGlynn made an address before the New York Association of Methodist preachers yesterday morning, which lasted an hour and a half and was listened to by 500 ministers and others. Dr. McGlynn referred to his excommunication for preaching the Christianity I was brought up in," and after referring to the peculiar position in which he found himself in facing a body as distinctively representative of the Protestant religion, he presented the Henry George land theories, and defended them as representing the cause of humanity.

When the speaker had concluded a gentleman offered a resolution of thanks to Dr. McGlynn for his "able, eloquent and instructive" address and "wishing him God-speed in his efforts to diffuse the doctrine of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man." This created great confusion, and after a turbulent scene which one clergyman characterized as "resembling a bear garden," the resolution was amended by a clause that allowed the members to reserve the right of individual opinion concerning George's land theorie The ministers seemed to relish what the doctor said, as there were frequent outbursts of applause.

When the resolution was being discussed there were a dozen preachers on their feet at one time. Wild gestures and loud talking were the order of the hour. Some argued against the adoption of the resolution because it would place them in a bad light with their congregations.

The resolution was finally modified and adopted. It read that they had "heard with pleasure and profit the able and instructive lecture of Dr. Edward McGlynn; that while each member reserves his individual opinion concerning the land theories advocated by Dr. McGlynn, we recognize in him a talented and sincere Christian brother and minister with a call to a high duty, and that we bid him God-speed in preaching the gospel of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man."

THE MINERS' MEMBERS.

The Decision of the Miners Regarding Their Representatives.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The Socialists have achieved another victory in English politics. For some time they have been diligently working among the Northumberland miners. Now the vote on the question of the payment from the union funds to Messrs. Burt and Fenwick, the miners' representatives in Parliament, has resulted in a decision to discontinue it. The real reason is that both Burt and Fenwick are moderate men, Mr. Burt being one of the most respected members of the Commons, and that they have not worked on Socialist lines. Mr. Burt got £500 a year for his service, and Mr. Fenwick £200. Unless therefore their constituents make some provisions, they will have to retire in November. Probably the miners will choose Socialist candidates in their places, but there is some chance that Mr. Burt, who is personally popular, may continue to sit. The miners' vote is no doubt a serious thing for the Liberal party, who have always been able to count on the labor members. The miners just now are suffering from extreme depression. Their wages have fallen far below the former level, and so they have ready ears for Socialist agitators." The Standard says: "The labor candidate is one of those institutions which cannot stand the wear and tear of practical politics. In a fit of fervor the workingmen may agree to make substantial sacrifices for the sake of seeing themselves represented in Parliament by some one whom they can regard as flesh of their flesh, bone of their bone, but sooner or later the illusion must fail and with it the enthusiasm."

They Want Information.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Circulars have been forwrrded to all the United States consuls in Canada, asking for certified returns, according to the sworn statements made before them, of the exports of various articles at each Canadian port to the United States during the past three years. It is supposed that the Government want the information with the view of considering the question of closer commercial relations with Canada.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

EATING GRASS REFUSE.

Thousands of Persons Starving in Asia Minor.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Large numbers of the inhabitants of the Cilician Plain in Asia Minor are starving, and the source of food supply has been almost exhausted. The missionaries of the board at Adana report that since August 500 more families have been added to the list of those who have to be supplied with bread to sustain life, making 1,500 families now being fed. Urgent pleas for aid come from Tassus and the various villages of the Plain, and Rev. Mr. Montgomery writing from the scene on August 13 says: "Large numbers of people are kept alive by eating grass, roots, refuse of the streets, berries and small fruits. There was brought to me this week a kind of nauseous, bitter, puckery bread, made from the pods of a low thorn found upon the plain, which I should think would kill those who eat it, and yet I am told that whole villages eat it and have nothing else. In soliciting aid for the afflicted people the board appeals to all humane people regardless of creed.

IRISH AFFAIRS.

The Leagus Proclaimed—The Mitchellstown Inquest—League Meeting.

DUBLIN, Sept. 20.—The Dublin Gazette published a proclamation suppressing the League and all its branches in County Clare and the Baronies of Leitrim, Loughrea, Galway, Corkaguiney, in Kerry; Condons, Clangibbon, Dun hallow, and Muskerry, in Cork, and Shelburne in Wexford. The proclamation is signed by Prince Edward of Sax-Weimar; commander of the forces in Ireland; Baron Ashbourne, Lord Chancellor of Ireland: A. J. Balfour, Chief Secretary for Ireland; Henry Bruen, Justice of the peace; J. D. Gibson, Attorney-General of Ireland; and Gen. Sir Redvers Buller. The Gazette announces that Gen. Sir Redvers Buller has been worn in as a member of the Privy Council.

THE MITCHELLSTOWN SHOOTING.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—At to-day's hearing on the inquest over the victims of the conflict between the police and the people of Mitchellstown, Constable Doran swore that he fired four times at the crowd, twice with buckshot and twice with ball. The first bullet prostrated a man. The crowd stoned the barracks and he believed the barracks were in danger when he fired. He said his face was wounded. When the coroner asked him to stand up and exhibit the wound Doran refused at first, but finally did rise when ordered to do so. No wound was apparent.

Continuing, Loran said that Police Inspector Irwin ordered six constables to fire in defence of the barracks. A stone thrown from the crowd struck witness and dislocated his right thumb. This, however, did not prevent him from firing again.

Mr. Harrington: "And murdering?"

Witness declined to answer Mr. Harrington's interrogatory.

Mr. Harrington: "Have you any doubt on either your mind or your conscience that you killed Lonergan?"

Witness hesitated and then declined answer.

MEETING AT LIMERICK.

LIMERICK, Sept. 20.—John Dillon presided at a great meeting held in the Limerick town hall under the auspices of the National League. The hall was crowded.

Mr. Dillon made the speech of the day and dwelt at length on the O'Brien case. He said Mr. O'Brien would doubtless be condemned as a felon, but if so he would have the sympathy of the whole civilized world. The Government must not think they could crush the league by any such means as those resorted to in the persecution of Mr. O'Brien. Each arrest of that kind would add but fresh courage and spirit to the people of Ireland in their struggle for Home Rule and increase the gulf of separation between the landlords and populace and put new fuel into the fire now burning.

Mr. Dillon urged the farmers of Ireland to subscribe more fully to the league eviction fund, and declared that the members of the Nationalist party were unanimously determined to carry on the plan of campaign which, he maintained, had ameliorated and improved the condition of the tenants on every estate on which it had been adopted.

Mr. T. Coofe (Home Ruler) ex-member of Parliament for South Huntingdonshire, Mr. Jos. Firth, Boltomley Firth (Liberal), ex-member for Chelsea, and a large number of other English Liberals were present. Resolutions embodying the suggestions made by Mr. Dillon were passed by the meeting.

Fatal Railway Smash.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 20.—A Canton, Dak., special says east bound passenger train No. 2, on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road, A. J. Morse, conductor, ran into the rear of a freight train at 4 o'clock this morning three miles east of this place. The freight switch was at Inwood, Ia., and the rear part breaking loose tore down the grade towards Canton for several miles, finally colliding with the passenger train. The following were killed: Andrew Seerath, Rock Valley, Ia.; W. A. Plogg, Michigan, Ia.; Chas. Dunbar, Mason City, Pa. Two bodies are still in the wreck. Thirty passengers escaped uninjured, six cars of wheat, one of cattle, the caboose and passenger coaches were demolished. The accident occurred at the edge of the bridge across the Sioux River, and in a few seconds more both trains would have been thrown into the river from a high embankment and thirty or forty lives would have been lost. The freight conductor is blamed for the accident. Twenty people got out of the smoking car at Canton, 10 miles before the car was smashed to atoms.

The Outlines of the Thistle.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The Herald to-day prints outlines of the yacht Thistle, obtained from a draughtsman who saw her while docked abroad. Messrs. Watson and Bell, in interviews, admit the correctness of the lines, which differ materially from those recently published by the World. The Thistle will be docked in a day or two.

A SCANDAL.

Col. Hughes Hallett Denies a "Pall Mall Gazette" Story.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The Pall Mall Gazette publishes full details of the scandal in which Col. Hughes-Hallett, Conservative member of Parliament for Rochester, was involved, by reason of the exposure of his relations with his stepdaughter. The Gazette states that the Colonel will not resign his seat in the House of Commons and accuses the Government of attempting to whitewash him.

Col. Hughes-Hallett replies as follows:—"The statements of the Pall Mall Gazette are grossly untrue. I have never had any liaison with any stepdaughter of mine. I repudiate the charge. The Pall Mall Gazette has outraged the name of a young lady not my stepdaughter, who is no relative or connection of mine and to whom I have never stood in loco loco parentis. Regarding the money part of the question, Miss Selwyn some time ago asked me to try to get her better interest on £5,000 than she was then getting. She covenanted by a deed in my possession to lend the money for five years. Some weeks ago her solicitors suddenly called this money in. Within twenty-four hours the principal with interest was handed to my solicitors for transference to her solicitors."

Col. Hughes-Hallett does not explain that the mother of Miss Selwyn was the first Lady Selwyn. The late wife of Col. Hughes-Hallett was the second Lady Selwyn, who became a widow five months after marrying Justice Selwyn.

The Pall Mall Gazette assails Col. Hughes Hallett under the supposition that he seduced his step-daughter, accusing him of an unnatural intrigue, for a parallel to which one must go back to Latin mythology. The Gazette demands that the Colonel be dismissed from the army, and declares that no English gentleman could sit on the same bench with him, and that the Ministers must force him to vacate his seat in the House of Commons. The Gazette asserts that the Colonel has seen Mr. Smith, the Government leader in the House of Commons, and the Conservative whips, and that an intrigue is afoot to whitewash him.

The Colonel himself asserts that he has not consulted Mr. Smith, but he has seen one of the whips.

Business Troubles Ahead.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The Sun says: That the business interests of the country are suffering for want of currency accommodation there is no disguising. Stocks would not have declined as they did yesterday and stayed down if the holders of them did not believe that the necessities of the mercantile and commercial communities were very great. A significant feature was the announcement that the Manhattan Dry Dock, East River, Union Dime and Williamsburg Savings Banks had declined to make loans even with Government bonds as collateral. This announcement applied to time as well as to call loans. It was stated for the Savings that their reserves had been depleted by time loans on real estate at six per cent. It was further learned that the banking houses of Boston are daily thronged with New England mill owners and manufacturers asking for discounts. The shipments of currency to the South to move the crop has been enormous and viewing the situation, particularly among merchants, the remark of a director of the Second National Bank was: "If the Government doesn't do something pretty quick, it will break all the merchants." It was stated on what is considered excellent authority that Sub-Treasurer Canda, in recent interviews with Secretary Fairchild, has impressed upon the Secretary the seriousness of the state of affairs among the merchants.

The Bank of London Affair.

TORONTO, Sept. 20.—In the case of Meredith vs. Taylor, ex-president of the Bank of London, the motion for the discharge from custody of Taylor was this morning postponed for a week owing to the death of the wife of Mr. Purdon, of London, who was to have cross-examined Mr. Meredith on his affidavit.

The Perreault Murder.

MONTREAL, Sept. 20.—In the case of the murder of Joseph Perreault at Cote St. Louis, Eusabe Dupuis was tried this morning. No evidence implicating the prisoner was offered and he will probably be discharged. Perreault, it will be remembered, was found dead, killed by a piece of rock.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

LATEST CABLE NEWS.

GERMANY TIRED OF RUSSIA.

BERLIN, Sept. 20.—The Cologne Gazette published an article yesterday, in which it says that Germany will henceforth be independent of Russia. Unless the latter country makes fresh approaches, the paper says, the firm of the three Emperors will be dissolved, and the dissolution will not be followed by a Russo-German alliance.

THAT ROYAL MEETING.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Diplomats have started the rumor that the Czar and Emperor William are to meet after all in October, but the rumor is unfounded and is no more than a mere guess.

DESTSUCTIVE FLOOD IN EGYPT.

CAIRO, Sept. 20.—Official statistics of the damage done by the floods in Egypt show that property was damaged to the extent of £500,000, and 800 families were made destitute.

THE POOR SULTAN.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—It is stated that the Sultan of Turkey, driven half distracted by the conflicting threats and counsels of the European powers, intends to seek a way out of his embarrassment by personally conferring with Emperor William in Berlin.

STEAMSHIP COMPETITION.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—It is asserted that the Cunard Steamship Company has leased the riparian rights of the roadstead in the new harbor at Bremen, and will compete with the German Lloyd Line.

FRENCH STATISTICS.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—The census for 1886, which has just been issued, shows an excess of births over deaths of 52,560 against 85,000 in 1885. The divorces granted in 1886 numbered 2,949 against 4,277 in 1885.

NIHILIST TRIALS.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 20.—Another great trial of Nihilists is about to be commenced here. The prisoners include fifteen officers of all ranks.

THE SIMPLON TUNNEL.

GENEVA, Sept. 20.—The preliminary agreements with reference to the projected tunnel through the Simplon Mountain have been signed. The tunnel will open in Italian territory. The Swiss and Italian Governments each contribute 15,000,000 francs.

A FIASCO.

MADRID, Sept. 20.—The Spanish settlement at Rio Oro, West Africa, has proved a fiasco. There is no trade there and no prospect of any. The colony will probably be abandoned.

BOYCOTTING A PRIEST.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The extent to which the Irish are carrying their warfare against all that savors of England is indicated by the boycott that has been declared against Dr. Healy, coadjutor, to the Bishop of Galway. The doctor has given utterance to Unionist ideas, which are obnoxious to the Nationalists, and consequently last week at a confirmation, only a small gathering of children were present, despite the desperate efforts to assemble the people.

RIOTOUS ARTILLERYMEN.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The artillerymen stationed at Hilsa, India, being ordered to prepare to move abroad went on a riot, and after wrecking the canteen or sutler's shop went about breaking windows and spreading terror among the inhabitants of the town. During the melee many soldiers and citizens were seriously injured. Twenty of the artillerymen were placed under arrest.

ANOTHER SCHNAEBLE AFFAIR.

METZ, Sept. 20.—A son of M. Schnaeble, the French Commissary who was arrested at Pagny-sur-Moselle last April, has been arrested and imprisoned by the German authorities for crossing the frontier near Chemenat and affixing a treasonable placard, bearing the tri-color of France, upon a tree by the roadside. Young Schnaeble is 16 years old.

LAUNCH OF AN IRONCLAD.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The Trafalgar, the largest ironclad ever constructed, was successfully launched to-day at Portsmouth.

English-Americans Organizing.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—The committee appointed two weeks ago for the furtherance of the naturalization of English subjects resident in Chicago, reports the most favorable progress. Nine societies, eight Knights of St. George lodges and the St. George's Benevolent Society, have signified their intention of co-operating in the project. The only remaining lodge meets on Wednesday evening and will undoubtedly tender its aid. A general meeting of all the organizations will be called shortly, when arrangements will be made for the first mass meeting, and invitations will be sent to Scotch, Welsh and Canadian organizations.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER, 21, 1887.

CATTLE FOR GREAT BRITAIN.

THE great prevalence of Texas fever in Pennsylvania and the strenuous efforts of the authorities there to suppress it, are facts of more than usual interest to our Canadian farmers, who fortunately are not subject to such disastrous visitations. Any one who has watched the statistics of exports of cattle from this continent to Great Britain is aware that the United States has flooded the English and Scotch markets with far greater numbers than have been sent from Canada, thus seriously depressing and unsettling the market to the loss of our producers or shippers. Unfortunate as it may be for our neighbors, this disease in some of the States, hard winters in others and severe drought in still others, must tend to relieve our farmers from some of the pressure of this competition.

But the chief lesson that may be learned in Canada is the folly it would be to accede to the views of the Commercial Unionists, who by their vaunted Zollverein would leave us exposed to an influx of these diseased cattle and would immediately subject us to be "scheduled" in Great Britain, where the Zollverein cattle would all be placed on the same footing. Then we would lose the exceptional privilege our cattle now enjoy of being taken from the port alive, thus being enabled to be refreshed and fattened after the voyage or being reserved till a temporary glut is diminished. This privilege, not possessed by our neighbors of the United States, adds considerably to the value of our cattle and it should not be hastily resigned for an inadequate compensation.

THE VETO POWER.

ONE of the journalistic instigators of rebellion says:—"The veto question is a difficult problem. The power of veto must reside somewhere, we suppose, if we are to avoid chaos. Yet under the British system, on which is modelled, the only possible custodian of it appears to be the Federal Executive, now on trial for abusing it." Well, bring on the trial. Try the question of law in the courts instead of defying it. Try the question of policy in Parliament, which has pronounced in favor of the Executive action. Try it by the votes of the people at the next general election, and see if they do not pronounce as before against chaos. But do not strive to bring about rebellion, disruption and chaos, by instigating each section to combine in rebelling against the will of the whole, if not allowed its own particular crotchet. To preserve unity and agreement in the general policy of the country, there is a veto power provided and it must be retained as now in the hands of the chosen political chiefs of the whole people. The United States learned the same lesson just a hundred years ago.

THERE is much mischievous nonsense talked about the valuable property held by the shareholders of the C. P. R., much of it presented to them by the public. Let us put this to the simple test of figures. Any of these critics can place themselves in the coveted position of shareholders by buying shares at little more than 50 cents on the dollar. Neither sellers nor buyers estimate the present or prospective actual value of the shares for an investment as placing them at much more than half their face value. The fact is that long railways on this continent do not make enough net profit to pay the interest on the whole cost for construction and plant, and therefore part of the money is found by people desiring the accommodation by means of Government or municipal subsidies. The C. P. R. is in no different position in this regard from other railway companies.

THE advocates of Commercial Annexation are very fond of insulting "Canadian manufacturers and workmen" by asserting that in asking for protection from United States competition they confess their inferiority. If the absence of protection constitutes equal terms, why do the United states manufacturers and workmen and their friends on both sides of the international line insist on maintaining protection against the competition of Great Britain? And why should these advocates of foreign interests think it shameful for Canadian manufacturers and workmen to desire protection against the United States and meritorious for those of the United States to want protection, not only in their own country but in ours also against Great Britain?

WIDE-awake Buyers! Have you seen TURNBULL'S Fine French Dress Goods, being sold at prices paid elsewhere for coarse, unsightly stuff?

THE Winnipeg correspondent of the Toronto Globe says:—

"Major Walsh, who is in the city, denies having anything to do with the alleged interview in Toronto, in which it was said Sir John had threatened to send British Regulars to Manitoba in connection with the boundary railway."

On the strength of this fabrication about Sir John he has been persistently vilified by the Reform press. Though he and the Imperial authorities gave a flat contradiction to the invention, its fabricators claimed that this was not sufficient as Major Walsh to whom Sir John had spoken was away and could not give his version. Now Major Walsh has added his denial, yet the slanderers do not retract the abuse they had founded on the falsehood.

WENT BACK ON THEM.

That Lincoln farmers' institute meeting annoys the Grit annexationists terribly. Farmers' institutes were intended to be Grit machines, to do Grit work, and in the majority of cases they are what they were intended to be. The Lincoln institue refuses to do what the Grits expected it to do, and it is now being clubbed unmercifully by the disappointed annexationists.—Hamilton Spectator.

ALL IN VAIN.

Canadian Members of Parliament are hoisting the Stars and Stripes at political meetings and cheering for the President; certain of our newspaper are smirking at annexation. But all in vain; American Senators thank God that they have the power to prolong international differences which they have, themselves, threatened may result in bloodshed.—Ottawa Journal (Independent.)

THE KIND OF UNION.

We are to-day in Canada a nation of Fair Traders, we are ready to enter into a reciprocity treaty with any one of the nations, but we expect and will exact fair and reciprocal terms, and above all we will have none of a treaty that will favor any people more than our own fellow-countrymen in Great Britain; that is the kind of commercial union we Canadian British subjects desire, and nothing more or nothing less will we Canadians consent to.—Calgary Tribune.

DEPICTING ITS ALLIES.

The condition of affairs in Manitoba is, to say the least of it, disgusting. The Ministers of that Province do not seem to practice the reserve usual with persons of such responsibility, but openly declare their intention of defying the Federal Government, the courts, and anything else that may stand in the way of the construction of the Red River Valley railway. They in fact threaten rebellion, and the suppression of rebellion in their case, they believe to be outside the range of practical politics.—Montreal Herald (Reform.)

WHY BRITISH TRADE FLOURISHED

The Toronto Globe tells its readers that "during the first half of the present century Britain enjoyed an unchallenged industrial supremacy." In the same article it says that now the British people begin to waken to the disagreeable fact "that if they are not to be hopelessly distanced in the race they must look alive." During the first half of the century British industries enjoyed protection against their rivals. This was broken down, and British manufacturers "must look alive" if they do not wish "to be distanced in the race."—Hamilton Spectator.

A DEMAGOGUE'S MOVEMENT.

We generally judge of the public sympathy with any movement by the support it gets from the people and their leaders. Let any proposition take positive hold on the public mind and you will see the representatives urging it on end and supporting it,—not the demagogues who wish to ride into prominence and importance on any particular movement, but the real representatives of the people. Can any one point to any leading man in Canada who will advocate Commercial Union pure and simple. Why at this moment no leading public man has dared to speak in favor of it, but many have come out openly against it.—Calgary Tribune.

A MANITOBA OPINION.

Captain Whitla is bound to become notorious. This bellicose gentleman went to the Morris picnic the other day, evidently full of enthusiasm. Amongst other spread-eagle sentiments he got off was, "he was going to fight for the land he was living in, or leave the country, and there was a good many others who would do so." Just so; then the sooner Mr. Whitla and a few more of his ilk leave the country it will be for the country's good. The idea of men like Whitla who have made every dollar they own out of the settlers of this country that has been opened up and developed by the policy of Sir John and the building of the C. P. R., which he to-day condemns—talking as he does—is simply outrageous.

How many dollars had Whitla and Ashdown when they came to Manitoba? What would they have been worth to-day if it were not for the C. P. R.?—Brandon Mail.

RESULT OF THE C. P. R.

One of the most important results of the opening of the C. P. R. is the increased consumption of Canadian-made articles instead of the American and English goods which previously had this market almost, if not entirely, to themselves.—Vancouver News-Advertiser.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

Jim took the loss of his friend terribly to heart. He had always loved the man, always admired him and wanted to believe in him, even when faith must have been a little difficult, and it was long before he recovered from the shock of that fatal night. To the present day he cannot bear any allusion to it; nor, I must confess, is it a subject upon which I myself care to dwell. Our first duty, of course, was to break the news at Staines Court; and how we accomplished this I can scarcely remember. The one thing that stands out clearly in my recollection is Hilda's look of horror when she was told in what manner her husband had met his death.

"I can't see him!" she cried. "Are they bringing him here? I won't look at anything shocking!"

It seemed to me amazing that at such a moment the woman's first thought should have been to spare herself; but perhaps, after all, it would have been more amazing if her first thought had been anything else.

Lord Staines was in bed when we reached the house. It was thought best that I should at once tell him what could not long be concealed, and he listened to me with very little apparent emotion. He asked me whether I thought Bracknell's death had been a painful one; and when I replied—as, happily, I was able to do—that it must have been instantaneous, he muttered, "Well, well!" and lay back on his pillows, looking straight before him with sunken, weary eyes.

"So there is an end and a finish of us," he said presently; "maybe it's best so. It seems odd that Bracknell and Sunning should both go before me; but I don't suppose I shall have much longer to wait now. When my poor boy and I parted this afternoon, we knew that it was for the last time, and I'm glad he came to see me—I'm very glad he came to see me. He was in great glee at the prospect of a fight—he has always been like that from a boy. We Henleys may have our faults, but I don't think we have ever been accused of wanting pluck. Bracknell will make himself heard of out there, you'll see. I was a little vexed with him at first for going off and leaving me, but he gave me reasons, and I believe he was right. I wish he didn't hate writing letters so much! The newspapers will tell us all about him, though."

In this way the old man wandered on, until Lady Mildred came softly into the room and made me a sign to leave him. I doubt whether he ever fully realized what Bracknell's fate had been. During the next few days he talked a great deal about his son, sometimes speaking of him as still alive, sometimes as having been killed in Egypt; but he did not seem able to fix his mind upon any subject for more than a few minutes at a time, and often failed to recognize those about him. One duty, fortunately, recurred to his memory, and his performance of it was, I believe, an immense comfort to two simple minded and conscientious people.

"My poor boy," he said, when he had caused Jim Leigh to be summoned and made him take Lady Mildred's hand, "told me that I might consent to your marriage without loss of honor. I had thought differently, but Bracknell assured me that some one—the other man"—

"Mr. Beauchamp?" suggested Lady Mildred gently, when her father came to a long pause.

"Beauchamp, yes — Beauchamp, it seems, withdraws. There is money owing to Beauchamp, and I can't attend to business now; but you will see that he is repaid. Bracknell explained it all to me, but I have forgotten. He promised that the money should be paid, though."

"It shall be paid, papa," said Lady Mildred.

"Thank you, my dear. You have been a good daughter and you will be a good wife. I wish you all happiness."

These were the last intelligible words that he said. He lingered on for some days after this, but soon sunk into a state of semi-consciousness, in which he at last passed quietly away. My mother says he did his duty according to his lights, and will be judged by that standard; and perhaps it may be allowed that in this instance she does not push charity beyond all reasonable limits.

His titles died with him, except that of the barony of Bracknell, which is of ancient creation and which has passed to his daughter. By her also have been inherited his estates, which, although still heavy encumbered, will doubtless recover themselves in time under their present judicious management.

Jim's marriage was a very quiet affair, the bride being in deep mourning at the time for her father and brother; but Lady Petworth, who came to take charge of the orphan after Lord Staines' death, considered it undesirable that the ceremony should be too long postponed; so good Mr. Turner tied the knot, and the young couple have been living at Elmhurst ever since in a seclusion which I dare say is agreeable to both of them, but of which the country does not altogether approve. Jim tells me that the debt of honor bequeathed to his wife has already been paid off and that he hopes in the course of a few years to be able to move to Staines Court, which is at present shut up. In the meantime he is very well satisfied with his less pretentious abode; and indeed, if a man were to be condemned to live in the country from year's end to year's end, I don't know that he could find a pleasanter place to live in than Elmhurst, while I am persuaded that he would search in vain for a fellow exile more amiable and charming than Lady Bracknell.

The other Lady Bracknell—the viscountess of that name—has quite recently decided to put an end to all confusion of identity between her sister-in-law and herself by changing her condition. During the first few months of her widowhood she resided with her father — a touching spectacle to the neighborhood, as she drove about, with lowered eyelids, in her weeds. Whether after a time she became bored with the respectful sympathy of the neighborhood or whether she found herself better off than she had anticipated I do not know; but she moved somewhat suddenly to London, set up house there, discarded crape in favor of pale gray and began to dispense a hospitality of which many people were found ready to avail themselves. Rumor has it that, on recovering her freedom, she made a desperate bid for the Beauchamp property and that the fortunate owner thereof met her advances by requesting her in so many words to omit him from the list of her acquaintances; but I do not believe this story. Hilda has experience enough to be aware that flirting with a married woman and espousing her after she has become a widow are two very different things, and it is not likely that so clear sighted an observer would have wasted time and energy upon a forlorn hope. As a matter of fact, she has done far better for herself than she would have done by marrying Beauchamp; for she is about to be led to the altar by the eldest son of a duke, and I hear that the bridegroom's relatives have received her with marked cordiality. Her career, so far as it has gone, may serve as a warning to impulsive young men and as an encouragement to the daughters of the clergy.

THE END.

There are in Chicago no ambulances for the conveyance of the sick or wounded, and such persons must choose between a hearse and a patrol wagon or walk to the hospital.

MERCIER' METHODS.

It is probable that the question of the imposition of heavier timber dues was worked by the Government for all it was worth in order to secure the vote of the lumbermen and their employees. The change in the vote in Hull, which has increased its majority for the Government candidates by over six hundred voters, is, probably with justice, ascribed partly to expected favors from the Government.—Montreal Witness (Reform).

THEY WANT OUR FISH.

If fish should be put upon the free list it would very much simplify the disputation with the English government in regard to the fisheries, and at the same time be a desirable method of reducing the cost of living. The Record favors a repeal of the duty on fish.—Philadelphia Record.

THE SS. GELLERT.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The steamer Gellert, from New York for Hamburg, has arrived at Plymouth. She lost two of her propeller blades on Tuesday. Her mails and passengers for the continent were landed at Plymouth. The steamer will proceed to Cherbourg.

TO THE POPE BELONGS THE CREDIT.

BERLIN, Sept. 20.—The North German Gazette referring to statements made at the Treves congress, denies that Dr. Windthorst and the Centre party were instrumental in ending the Kulturkampf. To the Pope alone, it says, belongs the merit of having gained such a victory for the Church. Herr Windthorst did his utmost to perpetuate the Kulturkampf. Concessions in religions are of little value to him, because in his opposition to the Government he employs religious conflict as a pretext for the Guelphic and Polish revolutionary ends.

She was Desperate.

He—What had you rather see a friend of yours—me, for instance—a great general, an eloquent preacher, a leading editor, or perhaps a mighty political leader?

She (who has wasted the summer on him)—I think I had rather you were an ear of that light-colored, sharp-pointed corn, that we saw this morning at the grocer's.

He—Great Scott! and why?

She—That kind of corn will pop, you know.—Lewiston Journal.

Wanted to Chop it.

Customer (to waiter, who had just filled his order—Did you say this was a chop?

Waiter—Yes, sir. Anything the matter with it, sir?

Customer—Nothing much. But say, when you are coming around this way again please bring the axe.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, and Hypophosphites.

Is sold all over the world. It is far superior to plain Cod Liver Oil, palatable and easily digested. Dr. Martin Miles Stanton, Bury Bucks, Loudon, England, says: "I have prescribed Scott's Emulsion, and taken it myself. It is palatable, efficient, and can be tolerated by anyone, especially where cod liver oil itself cannot be borne. Put up in 50c. and $1 size.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "bright as a button." It is perfectly harmless. It is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup. Don't take any other kind.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

Memorial Tablet.

A marble tablet has been erected in the vestibule of St. Paul's Church in memory of the late Col. Haultain, a prominent member of the congregation. It is suitably inscribed.

A New Arrival.

The new General Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, Mr. W. H. Stevens, of Montreal, is expected to arrive in town this evening. Members and friends of the Association are asked to call on him at the rooms.

Male Choir, Attention!

The last rehearsal of the male choir of the Y. M. C. A., prior to the anniversary, will take place in the George street church at nine o'clock this evening. Every member is expected to be present.

A Quartette Band.

A quartette band has been organized in connection with the Y. M. C. A., consisting of two cornets, trombone and clarionete. It will appear in public for the first time on Thursday when it will lead the singing at the Y. M. C. A. anniversary.

Prax.

Harry Prax, who eloped with an Oriental Hotel waitress a short time ago, was brought up in Toronto by his first wife for not having supported her and her five children. Mrs. Prax, No. 1, alleges that her gay don was about to commit matrimony for the third time. She called a halt. The case is not yet disposed of.

A Good Sale.

The sale of farm stock and implements at Mr. Alex. Fitzgerald's, Smith, on Tuesday, was a very satisfactory one. There was a good attendance and the bidding was lively. The implements and farm produce was sold at fair rates, and the stock brought satisfactory prices. Everything was sold, and the aggregate of the sales amounted to $2,250. The sale was conducted in his usual spirited manner by Mr. C. Stapleton.

SINGLE FARE! Half fare! In fact it will not cost you anything to see KIDD'S stock of boots and be convinced that his prices are right.

The Babies.

One of the attractions of Peterborough's great fair will be the baby show. Gough, the well known clothier is donating the prizes: a suit of clothes for the father, a pair of blankets for the mother, and a silver cup for the baby taking first prize. The baby show will come off on September 6th. Messrs. H. LeBrun, Thomas Dunn and E. C. Hill have been appointed judges. The Times suggests that in the event of any of the judges declining to act that the name of Capt. T. Burke, of the REVIEW office, be substituted. Capt. Burke suggests that Mr. W. H. Robertson, of the Times, be appointed to the position.

Lost His Dry Goods.

At the Police station this morning a coat and vest along with an old silver watch, awaited a claimant. The articles were found near the Smith street bridge. At about half past ten o'clock the claimant appeared. He was well moxified and piloted by his wife. The wife enquired for the missing garments, while her lord stood meekly by devoid of coat and vest. P. C. Adams fished out the garments and asked if these looked like the missing goods. They were recognized by the wife at once and handed over to the owner, who, after several struggles succeeded in getting into them. "You want to straighten up now" remarked the P.C. "Yes," said the wife quickly, as if the idea was a brilliant one, "that's just what he wants, isn't it?" P. C. Adams explained that the owner lost his drygoods by throwing them off to attack a shadow and forgetting where he left them.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

A POINT OF LAW.

An Interesting Point to Decide by the County P. M.

The police court in Ashburnham was crowded on Tuesday afternoon, when County P. M. Edmison held a session of the court. A number of Scott Act cases came up, but the chief interest centered in the case Darling vs. Calcutt.

The circumstances were as follows: H. Calcutt, brewer, was charged with having sold intoxicating liquor in the village of Ashburnham between certain dates. He pleaded not guilty through his counsel, Mr. John Burnham. Mr. Calcutt was sworn and admitted a sale of beer between the dates mentioned in the information, but stated that such sales were made in the town of Peterborough, and that he had not made any sales in Ashburnham.

Other evidence was taken, but failed to establish any sale in Ashburnham.

Counsel for the defendant asked for a dismissal on the grounds that the evidence did not support the information, which alleged a sale in Ashburnham.

County Crown Attorney Wood asked to have the information amended so as to charge the defendant with having committed the offence within the town of Peterborough.

The Magistrate declined to comply, on the ground that if the offence was commited within the town of Peterborough the case should be tried by the Police Magistrate of the town, and that if he allowed the amendment and tried the case in Ashburnham he would deprive the town of the fine, which would not be just between the town and county. He added that he understood P. M. Dumble had refused to try county cases for the same reason. He reserved judgment to be delivered on Friday next.

J. O'Connor, who was charged with an infraction of the Scott Act, was acquitted.

H. Beckett, of Norwood, was fined $100 and costs, on conviction of a second offence against the Act.

H. Hamilton, Ashburnham, pleaded guilty to a first offence against the Act and was fined $50 and costs.

Two more cases, Darling vs. Faucher and Darling vs. Evans, will be before the County Police Court on Friday.

St. Luke's Mission Services.

The twelve days Mission Services in connection with St. Luke's Church commenced on Tuesday evening, when the Rev. E. P. Crawford addressed the workers and produced a powerful impression upon them. This evening he will address the public in the church. His discourse will of interest. The services will be continued for the next twelve days. There will be four services daily: At 7.30 a.m., 10 a.m., 5 p.m., and 7.30 p.m. The Rev. E. P. Crawford and the Rector, the Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, will be present.

Anniversary.

The programme for the anniversary of the Young Men's Christian Association on Thursday evening is a first-class one. It includes addresses by Messrs. Wm. McCulloch, of Toronto; Geo. M. Roger, president; the new secretary and the retiring secretary. The music will be a special feature. A male choir will sing several selections, and the brass quartette of the Association will lead the congregational hymns. Every one will be welcome. It will be held in the George street church.

Now Open.

Chamberlain's oyster parlor is now open for the season. Oysters will be served at all hours in styles to suit the tastes of our patrons. After this week shell oysters will be kept constantly on hand. Porter-house steaks, chops, etc., prepared on the shortest notice. d69-tf

A Diamond.

A new diamond is being put down at the junction of the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific railway tracks on this side of the river. This is the place where the new locks ling will join the Grand Trunk inside of the town.

Arriving Daily

At Ostrom's Fruit market, George street, Oysters by the quart, 40 cents. d59tf

Personal.

The London Gazette of Sept. 2nd contains a list of officers specially mentioned for their services in Burmah by the Governor-General, Lord Dufferin, the Commander-in-Chief, Sir Fred. Roberts, and other generals having commands. Among those thus named by Major-General Sir G. S. White, commanding the Upper Burmah Field Force, is Colonel A. C. Toker, 18th Bengal Infantry. Col. Toker, as having a separate command on the Chindwin, also recommends several officers. He has since been appointed Assistant Secretary to the Governor-General.

Mr. P. Morgan, representing the Montreal Star, is at present in our town in the interests of that paper.

Mr. A. R. Kidd, Reeve of Dummer, left town on Tuesday evening for Ottawa, where he will act at the Provincial Exhibition as a judge of cattle, having been appointed to that position.

HAVE you heard it? TURNBULL is selling Heavy Cashmere Hose, according to size, from 12½ cents to 25 cents a pair.

Cricket.

The Buffers and Duffers, alias Wrighton's Lambs will kindly file an appearance on the Cricket ground on Thursday at 2.30 p. m. The object is to have a tossup match which will in all probability be the last for this season.

THAT R. J. KIDD has a large stock of the BEST ready-made Boots in Peterborough is beyond a doubt.

Fruit.

Grapes by the basket at Ostrom's for 3½ cents per pound. d59tf

THE way TURNBULL'S Dress Meltons are moving out, proves they are finer than is usually sold at the price.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, we gave them Castoria.

SCOTT ACTS, Browns Act, Jones' and Smiths Act wisely by going to KIDD'S for boots—they are the BEST.

Bush Fires.

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 20.—Bush fires are raging with great force in Palmerston township, and if rain does not speedily fall the property will be all consumed. Already many poor farmers have lost all their fodder as well as their wood and fences. Nightly the sky is lurid with the flames and constant watching is necessary to save families from being burned in their beds. Hundreds are also engaged in fighting back the flames from the mills about Ompah. The loss so far by fire in this section of the country cannot be less than $200,000.

Norquay Unsuccessful.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Premier Norquay, of the Province of Manitoba, who has been in this city for the past month for the purpose of raising money to build the Red River Valley railroad from Winnipeg to connect with the Northern Pacific, started for home this evening. Before going he stated that he was not successful in raising the money in New York. The project, he said, would not be abandoned because New York men refused to buy the bonds.

The Yamaska Contestation.

SOREL, Que., Sept. 20.—The preliminary objections in the contestation of the election of Mr. F. Vanasse, M.P.P. for Yamaska, were maintained yesterday afternoon by Hon. Judge Ouimet. In consequence the contestation was dismissed and Mr. Vanasse will retain his seat.

Bay of Quinte Fair.

BELLEVILLE, Sept. 20.—The Bay of Quinte fair opened here to-day. The weather is fine. Exhibitors are busy getting their goods in order. The entries are a half more than any former exhibition, and the attendance promises to be large. This beautiful city is alive with people.

A Pugilist Murdered.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Henry Woodson, alias the "Black Diamond," the unsuccessful middle weight pugilist, was shot and instantly killed at one this morning by Thomas White, a Pullman car porter. The men quarrelled over White's mistress.

No Water.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Another big break occurred in the L street water main last night, flooding the street from curb to curb. Three-quarters of the city will be deprived of water for two days or more.

A Vagrant Hangman.

MONTREAL, Sept. 20.—Chas. Lawson, the hangman here in 1881, of Harvem, was sent down this morning by the Recorder as a vagrant.

BURMAH.

The Dacoit Raids Commenced Again—Much Trouble Feared.

LONDON, Sept. 21. —Advices from Burmah state that the dacoits are again breaking out in the neighborhood of Rangoon, and troublesome times are again feared. A period of tranquility has apparently been used for recruiting their numbers and for the development of a series of well-laid plans, by which they have reused the whole vicinity of Lower Burmah. Only a few days ago a band attacked the transport lines, two miles from Minbu, making a bold attempt to burn some buildings. They were, however, foiled in the endeavor, being beaten off by the guard and afterwards pursued by cavalry. Still more recently, a small body of police marching from Myotha to Myingyan was attacked by dacoits, who were repulsed with the loss of four killed. On the same day the dacoits burned a Burmese police post, situated about seventeen miles from Myingyan. When they were pursued by the cavalry they escaped into the dense jungle. The whole Yow country continues much disturbed, and frequent raids have been made into the surrounding country. Their private depredations are the most terrible, killing and plundering any lonely traveller who falls into their hands and utterly defying apprehension by making good their flight either to the jungle or to the mountains, where it is impossible for white men to follow. The mountain fastnesses of the Gumadaung range contain many a secret of the Dacoits, who here hold high revel after each successful raid. Here no enemy can reach them, and even if the soldiers were guided to their lairs the robbers could easily defend themselves against a much superior force owing to the admirable natural defences afforded by the mountains. Gen. Low and his brigade, assisted by the police are continually on the alert to surprise the marauders and lose no opportunity of attacking or pursuing them. An organized effort to hunt out the dacoits will soon be made, but it is feared that it will not result in great success. The inhabitants of the smaller towns and villages are in a constant state of alarm and the soldiers stand ready at any moment to receive and properly chastise the desperadoes.

For the People.

For more than fifteen years now the City Clothing Store has regularly supplied to the people of this district clothing that has bore the test of time. If the proprietor had shoved off poor a quantity of goods at high prices (for poor goods are dear at any price) his establishment would not stand in the permanent position it does to-day. In the past Mr. H. LeBrun has competed successfully against all comers ephemeral and otherwise, and he will continue to do so in the future. How he holds his trade and constantly increases it is not hard to see. A customer once purchasing there knows he gets value for his money in the goods, no antiquated styles, and fair treatment. The trade of the City Clothing Store gives ample evidence to the proprietor that his fair, honest mode of doing business is appreciated by the thinking public. This fall the shelves of the City Clothing Store are overloaded by the latest and most complete lines of goods. The proprietor offers a special advantage to those who purchase tweed from the City Clothing Store, inasmuch as he will have such cloth cut into suits ready for making up free of charge.

THE way TURNBULL'S Dress Meltons are moving out, proves they are finer than is usually sold at the price.

Lock Works.

The employees of the Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Co.'s works held their annual picnic on Wednesday. The works were shut down and the hands holidayed themselves in various ways. Some went shooting, some fishing, and a big crowd went on an excursion tour to Stoney Lake and Burleigh. They returned at about nine o'clock in the evening, driving in from Lakefield.

THE BRITISH NAVY

The Building of Great Ironclads Declared to be a Mistake.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The Daily News, commenting on the launch of the warship Trafalgar and the building of the Nile, says: "It is not improbable that these two monsters will be the last of our very big ironclads. No other of first class size have, during the past two years, been laid down and among naval constructors the conviction is now rapidly gaining ground that for practical purposes vessels of moderate tonnage, always provided they are of great speed, will be found more useful than Leviathans. Our present ignorance of the realities of modern naval warfare run us into dangerous risks by investing in the construction of single ironclads, sums which otherwise disbursed would provide a whole flotilla of fast cruisers, armored gunboats and swift torpedo vessels."

DARING TRAIN ROBBERY.

Masked Men Board an Express and Secure $30,000.

FORT WORTH, Texas, Sept. 21.—Two masked men boarded the Texas Pacific East bound express engine last night as it pulled out of Eagbrook, a small station 12 miles west of here. One of the robbers entered the express car and cleaned out the safe and then went into the mail car. Every registered letter was secured by the robbers. The work was done in ten minutes. The train was the through express from San Francisco and the value of the booty secured is placed at thirty thousand dollars. The same train was robbed on the same track last June. Guards were in the passenger coaches but they were left over the trestle. No attempt was made to molest the passengers.

A VILLAGE DESTROYED

Twenty-two Houses Burned—Bush Fires the Cause.

DANBY, P. Q., Sept. 21.—The village of Danby was almost wiped off the face of the earth yesterday, by a fire communicated from bush fires, which have been raging in the neighborhood for some time. Twenty two houses and the station were entirely consumed and many families rendered homeless, some of them losing all their earthly possessions, except what they stood up in. One merchant succeeded in getting most of his stock out of his burning building, only to see it consumed before his eyes ere it could be removed to a place of safety. Narrow escapes were numerous, but no loss of life occurred. The entire community is plunged in the deepest gloom and dejection.

SOUTH DOURO.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ACCIDENT.—While Mr. Joseph Toben was breaking in a colt in a sulky on Saturday on the Dummer road, he was thrown out and had his leg broken. Under the care of Dr. Couch, Warsaw, he is doing well.

MARRIED AGAIN.—John Sheehan and Bridget O'Hare were married in St. Joseph's Church, South Douro, on Sunday last. John is her fourth husband and Bridget is his second wife. She said that she had been told in a dream that she was to have seven husbands. She had four now and three more was her lot. John replied cheerfully: "Not much, unless you get a bill of divorce from me, for I'll put you down, Biddy." A pleasant time was had at the wedding dinner at Mr. Sheehan's, after which the newly married couple went to visit Mr. David Graddy, followed by the well wishes of their many friends.

Almost Burned Alive.

OTTAWA. Sept. 21.—The people of the Gatineau Point were horror stricken yesterday morning to learn that Mrs. Laurin, one of the oldest residents of the village, had been almost burned alive in her cottage during the silent hours of the night. It appears that the old couple, who are 84 and 88 years respectively, prefer to spend the evening of their lives in solitude, and consequently none of their family reside with them. On Monday night they locked the doors at the usual hour and when the old woman was extinguishing the candle her hair took fire and then her clothing. She fell on the floor completely exhausted, while her aged husband, who is childish, was unable to assist her. She was found during the night by some parties who were attracted by the light in the house. She was unconscious and her body was severely burned in several places, and her white locks were nearly all burned off. Rev. Father Champaign was sent for and everything possible was done to relieve the sufferer, but so far there is scarcely any hope of recovery. The old couple are widely known in Ottawa city and county.

An Anarchist Circular.

CHICAGO. Sept. 21.—A circular of deep red anarchistic tendencies is being circulated in Chicago. It is headed, "To the workingmen of the United States and North America." It denounces the action of the Supreme Court in upholding the decision of the lower court in the Anarchist cases. The circular refers to Capt. Bonfield as "the notorious police bandit," and vilifies Judge Gary without stint. The circular is signed, "The Federation of Trade Unions," and was printed in New York. Police Capt. O'Donnell telephoned this afternoon all over the city to have all persons found distributing the circulars arrested.

Interviewed in Montreal.

MONTREAL, Sept. 21.—Hon. John Norquay, Premier of Manitoba, was in the city to-day en route from New York to Winnipeg. He refused to speak to a press correspondent about the Red River railway, but did not deny that he had been unsuccessful in obtaining money in New York. He spoke freely of the harvest which was the finest ever seen in Manitoba. The farmers were very contented and prospects good. He had a long interview with Mr. Ryan the contractor, and Mr. Martin the hardware merchant. He is looking well.

Secured the Money.

Last spring the money deposited in the hands of J. B. Walkem, returning officer for the electoral district of Addington, on behalf of the Liberal candidate, H. T. Shibley, was garnisheed by a citizen of Toronto and the case heard at the March division court before Sudge Wilkison, of Napanee. G. M. Macdonald appeared for the creditor Geo. Michael. The case was ably defended by B. M. Britton, who proved that the money was his, that it was not loaned to Mr. Shibley, and that the candidate having sufficient votes to redeem the deposit the money was returnable to him. Judge Wilkison on Monday gave judgment for Mr. Britton.—Kingston Whig.

Condemning Chamberlain.

NEW YORK, Sept, 21.—Labouchere telegraphs as follows:—"Chamberlain still adheres to his intention to go to Ulster in October. His instructions in regard to the Fisheries Commission are very weak, in fact they appear to be drawn up with a view to render any settlement difficult. It was a mistake to have selected him as our negotiator, for his attitude in regard to the Irish question is so bitterly resented in the United States that it is not probable he will be looked upon as a personal friend of America."

For Forgery and Bigamy.

QUEBEC, Sept. 21.—Fred Litur alias P. A. Wilson has been arrested by detectives on the charge of forgery and altering notes in New York, Albany, Chicago and elsewhere. Chief Tompkins, of Ridgetown, Ont., arrested him on the charge of having forged a cheque in Ridgetown on First National Bank of New York. He is also wanted for bigamy, as he is stated to have a wife in Chicago, another at Mayville, Mich., and a third at Ridgetown.

Charlevoix Election.

ST. PAUL'S BAY, Que., Sept. 11.—The nomination for the county of Charlevoix for the House of Commons took place to-day. The only candidates are Mr. Cimon, Ministerialist (son of the late member), and Tremblay, independent Conservative

A Bloodthirsty Monster.

LOUISA, Ky., Sept. 21.—Wm. Thompson yesterday concealed himself under the house of A. J. Thompson and shot three members of the family, one fatally. The murderer also shot a school teacher and his victims were his own cousins. He escaped.

BUTTER.

One of the most important and remunerative products of our Ontario farms is cheese. While the quality produced has been greatly augmented, it has improved in reputation and has increased in price. It is now in such favor in Great Britain that we can dispose of all that we can spare above home consumption at very satisfactory prices.

With butter it is very different. Our export has by no means so largely increased, instead of being the favourite in Great Britain it ranks low in the market, and neither the demand nor the price are so satisfactory as we would like to see them.

Why is there this difference in two products of similar origin?

Before our cheese industry had attained its present proportions and its satisfactory remuneration, some excellent cheese was made in Ontario. But there was much made that was indifferent or even poor, and this effected the demand for our exported cheese and the price of the whole, good or bad. It is not sufficient that an article for export should be good, but it is also necessary for success that the whole stock should be fairly regular in quality and trustworthy. Now the establishment of cheese factories secured not only an improvement in the make, but what was more beneficial, that regularity and trustworthiness which were before wanting, and we see the result. Now at the present moment every housekeeper knows that there is much good butter made in Ontario and in Peterborough County. They also know that there is much that is not good. Our butter exported to Great Britain cannot be depended upon, the general repute and the prices obtained for the whole are lowered, and Canadian butter, instead of ranking in the mother country the very highest in the market like Canadian cheese, takes almost the lowest place.

When it is so evident that an improvement is required, why should we not adopt the same plan as has proved efficacious in a similar case? Why should not factories do as much for Canadian butter as they have for Canadian cheese? They would remove the admitted evils; they would do away with the inferior product of ignorant or careless makers and packers; with the highest available skill they would give the best possible results; but above all they would ensure the needed regularity of quality and trustworthiness which would make "Canadian" a term not of reproach, but of commendation for butter as it is for cheese.

Why should not some of our enterprising farmers combine to establish creameries, butter factories, as they have cheese factories, and reap the same benefit?

The local market is of course by far the largest and the most remunerative for our farmers, but of their surplus dairy product by far the largest portion goes to Great Britain. A judicious effort to suit their tastes and wishes, would augment their demand and the price they are willing to pay as much in the case of butter as it has done with regard to cheese.

If not the Winnipeg agitators at least their Ontario confederates are beginning to back down. They have been howling for the right of Winnipeg to use United States railways; to buy and sell in the United States markets and to export through the United States ports in preference to dealing with the rest of Canada. But now one of their most zealous organs, the Toronto Globe says:—

"Now the purpose of the Red River Valley railway is to make connections with roads connecting with the Grand Trunk, to set up competition against the C. P. R., and thus to lower freights between east and west."

If this were true, how is it that the Grand Trunk has not been moving in the matter and frankly claiming access to the North-west? Why has the agitation been manipulated by a few political adventurers and land speculators in Winnipeg, who are opposed in other parts of Manitoba, and by those interested in United States railways? We are not inclined to think that such men are working for the Grand Trunk, or that they were speaking falsely a few days ago when the cry was for United States railways, markets and ports. If they own they were speaking falsely then, why should we believe them now?

The advocates of union with the United States are very fond of repeating that as our neighbors are sixty million and we only six million, we must not dare to withstand them or they would coerce us to their will. At the time of the Declaration of Independence there was an even greater disproportion of population, for we have grown more rapidly than our neighbors. Yet our ancestors were not such miserable poltroons as to be influenced by this argument, and we do not believe that their descendants have degenerated except in a few obvious cases.

We find the following paragraph in an opposition journal:—

"The York Farmers' Colonization Company have won the Dominion Diploma for the best collection of grain. The samples shown by them are of this season's growth in York Colony. The display was simply magnificent."

It thus appears that there may be something good in colonization companies, and that one of them at least is not so wholly taken up with speculating in lands, as to have no time left to assist in the development of our agricultural resources.

THE WAR CLOUD BUSTED!

Victory has Perched on the Banner of PETERBOROUGH'S GREAT CHEAPSIDE.

And SHEPPARD, by common consent, will get $1,000 for being the Cheapest Clothier in Peterborough, having knocked the Wonderful Cheap Man completely out. "Business is business; dirt is dirt, and when it comes to throwing dirt, then count" the only original teddy out, and he will hand over that $1,000 like a little man, for the following reasons:—

SHEPPARD sells a full size Man's suit for $2.95, and better goods than a suit to fit a child about nine years old sold by the Wonderful Cheap Man on Saturday for $3.00; but marked $3.50. This is how it was.—A lady purchased a child's suit on Saturday last, Sept. 17th, 1887, at the store of the Wonderful Cheap Man. It was marked thusly:—Lot 5375, Breast 27, Waist 26½, Age 9, Price $3.50. It was pure shoddy, being held together by cotton threads, and Sheppard is free to say that that was the dearest suit sold in the Town of Peterborough for the last two years. Full particulars are given because of the $1,000 involved, and, further, that this decides who is selling the Cheapest Clothing in Peterborough. SHEPPARD would have sold that lady a suit, pure wool, for that money, and worth two of the one she got.

$1,000 to Go to the Charitable Institutions of Peterborough.

I had first decided to give the agencies a chance of jumping up my rating that $1,000, but after considering the matter and finding that never in any case have I been asked for an endorser to my paper, and that no relative or any other persons have ever endorsed my paper to the extent of one cent, I have come to the conclusion my credit is as good as yours, and will ask you to hand over the $1,000 to the Charitable Institutions of Peterborough.

Now, Sir, there is a good story told, the truth of which can be vouched for, but for the honor of at least making an effort to keep up your self-styled name—The Terror of High Priced Clothiers—do not allow the same to be said of you in the case above. A man purchased a suit for $15.00 at the store of one of the largest advertisers in that section of country. It was guaranteed pure wool; but after examining it carefully at home, he came to the conclusion that he had been dealing with some one sharper than himself. Finding a make of wool, differing some from anything he had ever seen, it dawned upon him that he had heard of wool of that kind, so the suit was returned. The merchant bet $25.00 that it was all wool, and the bet was accepted, the decision being left to a neighboring merchant. He found that the $15.00 suit was wool faced and shoddy back, pure unadulterated shoddy; but what of the $25.00 bet? was it paid? Not much—muchly—as it were.

Sheppard is making Wonderful Strides in Securing Marvellous Bargains in Dry Goods, Clothing, Hats and Caps.

GLOBE AND MAIL TACTICS.

Manitoba would still be a wild unexplored territory, instead of a Province, had it not been for the C. P. R., and the impetus given to settlement through that great enterprise; and had it not been for the prospect of reaping decided advantage to Ontario, by the early development of the trade of that Province, our representatives in Parliament would never have pledged the credit of this Dominion to the tune of millions of dollars for the construction of that line. Hence, to see Manitobans ready to forget Ontario's contribution on their behalf, and seek to divert a large portion of their carrying trade and commerce into the lap of another country, is not a pleasing feature to contemplate. Neither do we regard it as altogether the correct thing for leading Ontario journals to sympathize with this kind of opposition to the contemplated advantages held out to this Province as an inducement to undertake the construction of a railway from ocean to ocean.—Newmarket Era (Reform.)

The Secret Drawer.

In idle mood I touched the springs
That opened wide the secret drawer,
To gaze on half-forgotten things
That waked the memories of yore;
Small scraps of letters loosely tied
With silken bands of faded blue,
Containing words of love and pride,
Wrung from my heart when life was new.

A lock of radiant golden hair
That once adorned a glorious head
Of a young angel heavenly fair—
And long since numbered with the dead;
A dark brown tress—the sole remains
Of a brave woman lost and gone,
The partner of my joys and pains,
Whose smile made sunlight where it shone.

I signed, I kissed them like a fool—
Although perhaps the fool was wise
With wisdom learned in sorrow's school—
Who saw the truth through all disguise.
And, taking counsel with my thought
I asked myself, mid haze of tears,
Why these fond relics, fancy-thought,
Should live beyond my span of years?

Live with their tale of thought or deed,
For merchandise is scandal's mart,
To satisfy the clamorous greed
Of scribblers who'd dissect my heart
When I lay slumbering in the mold,
Unweeting of Fame's noisy blast—
And sell for miserable gold
The sacred secrets of the past?

To build romances from my life,
Or weave the life that seem like truth,
From shadows of long-ended strife
And unknown agonies of youth?
Take them, ye flames! such fate is best!
All but the lock of hair I crave
To wear upon my living breast,
And perish with me in the grave.

THE COAL OUTPUT.

The Pennsylvania Coal Ring and its Suicidal Greed.

The Philadelphia Press mentions that Pennsylvania has secured only 12,500,000 tons of the increase of 36,000,000 tons in the coal output for the six years from 1880 to 1886—or, in other words, that while its percentage of the total was 63 per cent. in 1880 it was only 53 per cent. in 1886. In its anthracite, Pennsylvania has the fuel for domestic purposes, and with the aid of the great lakes and the fact that grain cars would have to go back empty, can penetrate further inland than any fuel could under ordinary circumstances expect to go. Until lately the only serious competitor for the steam coal demand of the Atlantic seaboard was Maryland, to which are now added Virginia and West Virginia. With the Ohio and Mississippi rivers as an outlet, Pittsburg coal commands an enormous trade, and its Connellsville coke is as yet unrivalled as a blast furnace fuel. All these advantages have secured to the coal miners of Pennsylvania markets, which, territorially speaking, are unsurpassed in any country not contiguous to the ocean. It is probable that had the corporations which control the mines and the transportations been content with more moderate profits in the past, and had not paid too much for the control they are now exploiting, the development of other districts would not have been so rapid. They have encouraged it in the past and are doing so now.—Iron Age.

Pearl Fishers of the Red Sea.

Some three hundred boats of from eight to twenty tons burthen, and with crews of, in the aggregate, about twenty-five hundred men, mostly negro slaves, are engaged in the pearl fisheries of the Red Sea, which yield from $100,000 to $150,000 dollars a year. One-third of the income the owners of the vessels retain; the remaining two-thirds are distributed among the crews, which makes an average of $30 to $40 a year to every man. In former days Djeddah, near Mecca, in Arabia, was the port where all the pearls were taken and sold. But since the government imposed an import duty of 8 per cent. upon the pearls the fishers commenced carrying their shells to Massowah and Suakin, on the African coast, where they have only 1 per cent. of duty to pay. At present the latter ports receive about three quarters of the entire yield, hardly one quarter of it still going to Djeddah. From these ports the pearls are transported to Cairo and Alexandria, in lower Egypt, whence most of them go to Trieste, upon the Adriatic sea, few only reaching London and Havre directly from Egypt.

The Hero of Belfort.

The telegraph reports the death of Gen. Count von Werder, who is known as the hero of Belfort. He was born in 1808, and greatly distinguished himself in the Prusso-Austrian war of 1866. In the Franco-Prussian war he was commissioned to reduce the fortress of Belfort, which guards the passage from Alsace to the Frenche-Comte. The government of Gambetta made a special effort for the relief of Belfort by dispatching a large army under Gen. Baurbaki, who tried for three days (July 15 to 17 in 1871) to dislodge Werder from the mountain passes in which he had taken up his position. He did not succed in spite of an unusual superiority of numbers. Shortly after Belfort surrendered to Werder, but was given up to France again at the conclusion of peace. Since that remarkable achievement, Werder was considered one of the best generals of the German army.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents

It is understood that the Oka Indian difficulty will be revived soon, the Seminary authorities intending to bring the subject to the attention of the Dominion Government on the return of Mr. Chapleau from Europe.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth It relieves the little suffer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for Diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there was a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—"Civil Service Gazette."

Review Bindery.

This old established bindery is still adding new features and extra facilities in all its departments for turning out all kinds of binding in a neat and workmanlike manner. Particular attention given to binding Knight's Imperial Shakespeare and other superior works of that description.

Anniversary To-night.

Everyone interested in the work of the young men should attend the anniversary of the Young Men's Christian Association, in the George Street Methodist Church this evening at 8 o'clock. The programme is a very attractive one, and includes addresses from the secretary of the Toronto Association, Mr. Wm. McCulloch, the newly elected secretary, Mr. W. H. Stevens of Montreal, and the President and retiring Secretary of the Peterborough Association. The music promises to be specially good.

Mysterious.

In the dark of Tuesday night some mysterious individual tramped down George street leaving at every step the odd impression in black letters on the sidewalk "Follow it." The tracks, which led from several directions converged at Sheppard's Great Cheapside and disappeared through the door. On Tuesday night a second nocturnal shape strode along the sidewalk, each step leaving another impression immediately in front of the mystery "Follow it" which read "For sheddy." The people said that Gough the Terror to high prices had been out. The mystery appeared in broad day light to-day in the shape of a pair of deft hands with a paint pot and letterer. The foot prints of the last nocturnal rambler were blotted out.

In Trouble.

An old Irish lady came into the Police Court this morning, sank into a chair and sighed "Oh, I'm hard up," and then related a tale of her woe to a bye stander. She had arranged with a woman, she said, to keep her in return for her doing house work. She had just been with her two weeks when $6 was demanded, and her things were taken till the bill was paid. She had nothing to live on and every body she went to had nothing but "impudence" for her. She went back to get her things, a velvet dress, a hat, a looking glass, and other things, but she was menaced by the woman who swung a tin dipper and swore "by her maker only not so polite as that" that she would destroy the old lady. Afterwards she got the poker and grasped the old lady by the arm, and used her roughly. Since then the old lady has not been back to the house, and she was waiting in the court room for Mister Dumble to come in.

CENTRAL EXHIBITION

BRIGHT PROSPECTS FOR A VERY SUCCESSFUL FALL SHOW.

The Minister of Agriculture Expected to Open It—Special Features of an Attractive Kind—Comprehensive Prize List.

The success of the previous Central Exhibitions held at Peterborough has inspired confidence in this year's show. The is shown by the fact that the entries are coming in earlier and faster than they did last year. The membership of the Society, also, is considerably larger than last year. This demonstrates that the people feel an increased interest in the fair and that they are more eager to secure the advantages of exhibitors and of membership.

INCREASED INTEREST

It is pleasing to know that this is so. The Society, through its officers and directors, has made strenuous efforts to make the exhibition both in securing attractions that draw the people and procure a large attendance, and in having a show that will be of benefit to those in whose interest it is especially held, namely, the farming community. As an educational medium, the collection of stock and produce, and the exhibits of various kinds of implements shown in such a way that they can be compared, cannot fail to be of benefit. And the exhibition also affords an opportunity for relaxation and amusement.

A PERMANENT SUCCESS,

THE PRIZE LIST

is a comprehensive one. The prizes offered for the best animals and articles in the various classes aggregate $3,000. A number of special prizes, some of considerable value, will be given by business men and others of the town. The prize list is divided into thirty-nine classes, including the different kinds and breeds of farm animals, poultry, agricultuarl products, dairy produce, horticultural exhibits, fine arts, natural history, ladies' work, and agricultural machinery and implements.

IMPROVEMENTS

have been made on the grounds this summer with a view to providing better accommodation for the stalling of horses and cattle brought to the exhibition. The work has been done under the supervision of Mr. Wm. Collins, the General Superintendent, whose practical knowledge and experience is such that he knows just what is required.

PROGRAMME.

On the first day, Tuesday, October 4th, articles in the classes except animals and implements, are to be on the ground by 2 p.m., in order that the judges may complete their work in the departments on this day.

On the second day, Wednesday, the gates will be open to visitors from 9 a.m. to till 10 p.m. All exhibits must be on the ground by 10 a.m. and remain until the close of the exhibition. Some of the exents in the special class (special attractions) will take place at 2 o'clock.

On the third day, Thursday, the gates will again be open as on the previous day Several of the best prizes in the special class will be competed for on this day. Quite a number of the best horses in the district have been entered for these events.

On the fourth and last day, Friday, the remainder of the events in the special class will take place at 1 p.m. The whole of the live stock, including stallions, horses of classes, bulls, &c., will parade at 10 a.m.

SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS.

The special attractions are numerous and are of a character to arouse a great deal of interest. The speeding in the ring includes a stallion trot, a farmers purse for driving horses, a jubilee purse for fast driving horses, an hotel keepers purse for single horses in harness, the brewery cup open to three year old colts, gentlemen's purse for horses in saddle, cheese buyers' purse for trotting horses owned and driven by cheese buyers, and a consolation purse.

MATCHED RACES.

Other attractions will be a matched trotting race between well-known horses, a matched bicycle race between Mr. W. Greatrix, of Peterborough, and Mr. Cooper, of Belleville, for a $50 cup, and a 100 yards foot race in heats by Mr. M. Bird and Mr. D. Miller. A in which prizes will be given for the best looking infant, will be a very interesting event, especially for parents.

BABY SHOW

The celebrated Fire Brigade Band of Peterborough will furnish music during the days and evenings of the exhibition.

THE MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE.

It is expected that the Hon. John Carling Minister of Agriculture in the Dominion Government, will be present to formally open the exhibition.

BRIGHT PROSPECTS.

The prospects for the exhibition are bright. The only thing required to make it a success is fine weather, and, with that, there is no apparent reason to believe that the show will not be even a greater success than the preceeding one. The prize list is a large one, the special features are attractive and the management is in good hands. The railways will issue tickets at reduced rates, and the town may prepare for a large influx of visitors on the days of the fair.

THE MISSION AT ST. LUKE'S.

An Eloquent and Stirring Address by the Rev. E. P. Crawford.

The twelve days' mission at St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, began in earnest on Wednesday evening, there being a good congregation present.

From 7.30 till 8 o'clock the mission hymns were sung, Mr. Crawford, the missioner, being himself a splendid vocalist, leading the people. The music is bright and cheerful and will probably become popular.

At 8 o'clock the mission proper began, the rev. gentleman reading portions of Scripture bearing on the address he was about to deliver. He then gave out a hymn, himself singing the first two lines of each verse, and the people then joining in, with a very pleasing effect. He announced that he wished the singing to be a special feature of the services. He is a man of pleasing address, a fluent and forcible speaker, and was listened to with rapt attention.

After a minute of silent prayer by the congregation, Mr. Crawford began by saying the mission was not intended only for the people of that church, but for all classes. He divided his address into three parts: First, to sinners; second, to indifferent Christians; and third, to those who were really trying to serve God. In addressing sinners he was very earnest and pointed in his remarks, bringing the truths of God's love, and his willingness that sinners should come and reason together with Him, home to the hearts of his hearers. He said that God never made a man to be damned, and that He gave a proof of His love to sinners in sending His Son to die for them, that all might be saved, no matter how deeply dyed in sin. He said that the Man, Christ Jesus, with a heart like us, was pleading for us, and was able to save to the uttermost. He referred to men who were chained to habits, like that of strong drink, who could not resist temptation, and said that the power of God was waiting to save them from their sins. A hymn, "O, come to the merciful Saviour who calls you," was then sung, and he resumed his address to indifferent professing Christians. He pointed out how inconsistently they acted in not giving religion their best and highest thoughts; and to their unwillingness to deny themselves to do anything for Christ, unless, indeed, there was some pleasure or amusement in it. He compared the pleasures of the world and those of serving the Lord and doing good, showing how incomplete and unsatisfactory were the former, in comparison to the pure joy in this world in the latter, and pleasures at the right hand of God for evermore. He then referred to those who were trying to serve the Lord but who had not joy and peace in believing They did not seem to realize that they were God's children, and that He had told them to call Him Father. They did not know the richness of the jewels they possessed.

A request for prayer had been sent in, and after this had been acceded to and a hymn sung. Mr. Crawford pronounced the benediction.

The Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, the Rector, was present.

The daily services will continue as follows: 7.30 a.m.; 10 a.m., at which there are addresses on "The Gifts of the Spirit;" 4.30 p.m., and 7 30 p.m.

There will be a meeting for men only on Sunday.

HON. WILLIAM M'MASTER.

One of Canada's Merchant Princes Dies Suddenly in Toronto.

TORONTO, Sept. 22.—Last night about nine o'clock, while the Hon. William McMaster was addressing a meeting in McMaster hall, he felt apparently in a faint and remained unconscious for some time. A doctor was summoned and deemed it advisable to have him removed at once to his home on Bloor street east. He recovered subsequently, and when a reporter called early this morning he was assured there was not the least cause for anxiety. This morning the symptoms again appeared and although medical aid was at once applied he died about four o'clock. William McMaster was born in 1811, in County Tyrone, Ireland. He came to Canpda when twenty-four years of age and obtained employment in the store of Robert Cathcart, King street, and became a partner in about a year. In a short time he entered into business for himself, establishing a wholesale store on Yonge street. He was one of the pioneers of the commercial movement which was to result in the wresting from the city of Montreal of her monopoly as the great distributing centre. His business grew rapidly, and he took in his nephews under the firm name of W. McMaster and nephews. He was for many years head of the firm. He was representative of the Midland division in the Legislative Council of Canada from 1862 until Confederation. A royal proclamation called him to the Senate in 1867, and since that time he has been one of its most useful members. He was a member of the Senate of the University of Toronto, and was chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Baptist College, in whose halls he was speaking when he first felt the icy hand. He was president of the Freehold Loan and Savings Company, vice-President of the Confederation Life Assurance Association; director of the Canadian Bank of Commerte; director of the Toronto General Trusts Company, and of the Wellington Grey and Bruce Railway. For yeats he was president of the Canadian Board of the Great Western Railway Company. Many other financial institutions have derived impulse from his counsels. In educational matters he has been one of Canada's foremost men. The hall which bears his name was endowed almost exclusively by him. As a dispenser of public and private charity and as a philanthropist of the first order, he was unsurpassed. As a politician he was a steadfast Liberal and a hard worker in committee. He was twice married, first in 1857, to Miss Mary Anderson, of New York city, who died in 1868, and in 1871 to his present widow, Susan Melton, widow of James Fraser, of Newburgh, New York State. He leaves no children.

ALLEGED INVASION.

Venezuela Appealing to the United States Against England.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—A Washington despatch says: Venezuela is appealing to this country for support in the territorial dispute between that country and Great Britain. The quantity of land occupied by the English authorities amounts to about one-seventh of the whole Venezuelan republic. The country is rich in woods and the soil is excellent for agricultural purposes. The various mines also yield immense quantities of gold. The Venezuelan Government complains bitterly of the manner in which it has been treated and naturally then turns to the United States for support. It sent a communication to the British authorities saying that it was willing to submit the matter to arbitration, but the English Foreign Office avoided any settlement on that basis. Should our Government decline to interfere the only course left for Venezuela will be to drive out the British invaders by force of arms if she is able to do so.

Port Arthur's New Railway.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 22.—The contract to build the first forty miles of the Port Arthur, Duluth and Western railroad to the mines has been let to Messrs. Grand and Ross, and was signed yesterday at Port Arthur. Forty miles are to be finished August 1, 1888. The chief promoters of the enterprise are: Sir Alexander Galt, Thomas Marks, Port Arthur, and Alex. McEwen, London, Eng. This road will open up one of the richest mineral fields in the world.

BORODINO AND GETTYSBURG.

Modern Battles in Which a Great Number of Men Were Killed.

It is not uninteresting to state what have been the bloodiest battles of the last hundred years, that is, to compute the percentage of loss to the numbers engaged. Within the alloted time the Napoleonic battles come first. The battle of Lodi, Bonaparte's first brilliant success, was simply the daring passage of a brigade, and does not enter into the computation. Arcola was the most sanguinary struggle of the Italian campaign. The forces engaged numbered about 70,000, and the loss was about 25,000, or about 35 per cent. At Rivoli there were 80,000, men engaged, and the loss was 40,000, but 20,000 of these consisted of Austrians who surrendered to Napoleon, so that the real loss was only 25 per cent.

After Bonaparte's return from Egypt he fought the battle of Marengo. In its results this was one of the most momentous engagements in history, but all accounts agree that it was one of the worst planned and worst fought of Bonaparte's victories. There were 60,000 men engaged, and the loss was 17,000, or about 28 per cent. At the battle of Austerlitz, which by many is considered Napoleon's most brilliant victory, the French and Austro-Russian armies numbered 210,000 men, and the loss was 40,000, or about 18 per cent. At Jewa-Auerstadt there were 325,000 men engaged, and the loss was 40,000, or about 12 per cent. At Borodino there were 170,000 men in battle, and 80,000 were killed and wounded, amounting to more than 47 per cent. At Leipsic there were 500,000 men in the battle, which lasted three days, and the loss was 110,000, or 22 per cent. At Waterloo 140,000 men were engaged, and the loss was 40,000, or 24 per cent. In the Crimean war there were 125,000 men at the battle of Inkermann, and the casualties amounted to 25,000, or 20 per cent. At Magenta there were 225 000 men; the loss was 11 per cent., or about 25,000. At Solferino there were 250,000, and the loss was 40,000, or 16 per cent. At Sadowa the hostile forces numbered 425,000; and 17,000, or 16 per cent, were killed and wounded. At Gravelotte there were 450,000 men in the encounter, of whom 35,000, or about 8 per cent., were killed and wounded. At Shiloh the armies numbered 90,000, and the loss was 30,000, or one-third. At Fredericksburg there were 180,000; and the loss was 20,000, or 11 per cent. At Antietam there were 150,000, and the loss was 30,000, or about 13 perc ent. At Chickamauga there were 150,000, and the loss was 30,000, or 20 per cent. At Chancellorsville there were 150,000, and the loss was 30,000, or 20 per cent. At Gettysburg there were 110,000, and the loss amounted to 57,000, or 39 per cent. Thus the figures show that Borodiuo was the bloodiest battle of modern times, with Gettysburg in the second place.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

CHURCHILL AT YORK.

Predicts that an Advanced Scheme of Local Government Will be Introduced.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—In a speech at York Lord Randolph Churchill said that the era of cultivation of large tracts of arable land was passing away and there was approaching an era in which the holdings would be much smaller. He trusted that with their skill and courage British farmers would quickly succeed in adapting themselves to the changed conditions. Reviewing Parliament's dealings with this question since 1874, he was of the opinion that they had not been Radical or Socialistic, but his hearers might depend upon it that at the next session Parliament would deal with the local Government question, accompanying that with a measure for increased transfer of Imperial resources to local funds. He calculated that if the scheme was as thorough as possible it would make the amount of transfer £6,000,000 yearly instead of £3,000,000 as now. Touching stock and meal he said that prices were artificial owing to under profits of middlemen and that producers might therefore hope for an improvement.

MILITARY AT MITCHELLSTOWN.

No More Meetings Until O'Brien's Trial is Concluded.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—A troop of hussars, a detachment of artillery, and a large force of police have arrived at Mitchellstown. Magistrate Canton has issued a proclamation prohibiting the holding of any public meetings during the sitting of the Police Court, stating that any meetins held in violation of this prohibition will be forcibly dispersed. Copies of the proclamation have been served on John Dillon and Thomas P. Condon (Home Ruler of the House of Commons), both of whom are now in Mitchellstown. Mr. Dillon has declared his willingness to address a public meeting, and to repeat Mr. O'Brien's conduct in spite of the Government. A public meeting is being arranged to hear addresses from Dillon and Condon. A conflict is feared.

A Mitchellstown despatch states that Dillon and Harrington have given pledges that no political meetings shall be held in Mitchellstown during the present trial.

DUBLIN, Sept. 22.—The weekly Nationalist papers throughout Ireland publish the usual reports of the proceedings of the various local branches of the League, despite the fact that under the terms of the new Crimes Act the editors are liable to imprisonment for publishing the reports, which teem with violent denunciations of the Government.

A Fatal Railway Collision.

ARKANSAS CITY, Kan., Sept. 22.—A wreck occurred on the Southern Kansas railway at Gutherie, Indian Territory, yesterday. A light engine and construction train collided. Engineer Chas. Pearson was fatally crushed and his fireman seriously hurt. It is rumored that a large number of workmen were killed, but details are meagre.

DEAD TWENTY-FIVE MINUTES.

A Tennessee Girl Who Wrote a Message After Returning to Life.

The Fayettsville, Tenn., Observer contains the following story:—About the first of February of the current year Miss Street informed her parents that on the 27th of March following, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, she would be taken violently ill; that she would grow worse until the following day at 9 o'clock p.m., at which time she would remain in a state of death for 25 minutes, and that during the period of suspended animation she would visit that "house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." She asked her father not to send for doctors, as human instrumentality could not prevent her journey to Paradise, and also told him not to be alarmed, declaring with implicit confidence that after enduring the sting of death for 25 minutes her mortal and immortal natures would reunite, and she would again become a living soul.

Of course the parents were uneasy about the idol of their fireside and began to think that her reason was abdicating its throne. On the arrival of the day on which she announced she would be taken ill they evinced great solicitude, inquiring hourly as to her condition. She answered cheerily and continued to admonish them not to be alarmed. The hands of the clock tolled around until 4 was finally reached, and to the girl's parents they never seemed to move so rapidly. While the timepiece was upon the stroke of the hour the young lady was prostrated with sickness and violent pains racked her body. Despite her entreaties her father sent for skilled physicians, who vainly administered their most potent remedies, and at 9 o'clock on the 28th day they pronounced life extinct. The sickness and death occurred as she had predicted, and in time so did the resuscitation. The father remembered the declaration that she would return to life and looked at the clock, and lo! the pendulum had ceased to vibrate and the old time-piece that had for years faithfully tolled off the hours had stopped while upon the stroke of 9. When the girl returned to consciousness the clock started of its own accord, finished striking the hour and has run since without interruption. By reference to the watch of one of the doctors it was found that she had been insensible—shall we say dead?—for twenty-five minutes.

After the return of animation her tongue was paralyzed and she indicated by signs that writing material was wanted, which was provided, and she wrote letters which she says were dictated by Christ, and the description previously referred to. The whole covers 19 pages of foolscap paper. She says she is commissioned to read her manuscript wherever she goes.

While in the home of the blest she was asked by a woman to write, after returning to earth, to her great granddaughter, Mrs. Annie B. Shelton, of Kinterbush, Sumter county, Alabama, and tell her how anxiously her great-granddame awaited her coming. Our informant is not positive as to the correctness of these names, but thinks that the old lady was Mrs. Annie Belmont, who said she had been dead 95 years. By writing to the address the girl gave it was learned that a woman of that name had died in that place in 1782, and that she had a great-granddaughter resident there. Miss Street says she will be told in 1889 the date of her death.

The statements as given above are established by impeachable witnesses. We attempt no explanation, but simply give the facts, and all doubting Thomases who want to are left free to cavil.

Texas Fever.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 22.—A week ago a herd of twenty Western bulls were bought at Albany and taken to Warehouse Point, Conn. They are now suffering from Texas fever. Nine died up to yesterday morning and another was killed by the vet. who was called in. The disease is plainly marked.

A Fatal Fire.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—A fatal fire at the corner of Lafayette and Lewis avenues, Brooklyn, last night, resulted in the death of Wm. Geiswein and the fatal burning of Emma Drury and serious injury of Fred Siegel.

North-West Central Railway.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 22.—The contractors outfit started out this morning for the purpose of commencing immediate work on the North-West Central near Brandon.

LATEST CABLE NEWS.

JUSTIN M'CARTHY.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Justin McCarthy in a lecture in Southwark last night said no man in his senses, not even Mr. Smith or Mr. Balfour, could conceal from himself the fact that the Home Rule question was settled and that it only remained to arrange the terms. The Irish would have their Parliament, and he trusted the commercial prosperity of Ireland would be restored.

A CONSTABLE RESIGNS.

DUBLIN, Sept. 22.—Constable McCallaghan, of Castle Island, has resigned, as a protest against the Coercion Act.

A CAR ATTACKED.

DUBLIN, Sept. 22.—A car proceeding to Causewap, County Kerry, to take prisoners from the Petty Sessions to the Tralee gaol, was stopped on the road by three men who beat the driver, threw the car into a ditch and injured the horse. The men have been arrested.

CHARGED WITH MANSLAUGHTER.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The coroner's jury in the case of the Midland Railway accident to day rendered a verdict of Manslaughter against Taylor, the engine deiver, and the fireman of the train from Liverpool.

BELFAST HOME RULERS.

BELFAST, Sept. 22.—Resolutions in favor of Home Rule were adopted at a mass meeting here to-day.

A STEAMER SUNK.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—The British steamer Romeo, Capt. Williams, from New Orleans, Aug. 30, for Rouen, grounded at Villeguiera and capsized. The vessel is submerged at high tide and is dangerous to navigation. An engineer and fireman were drowned and five of her crew and passengers are missing.

A ROMAN OUTRAGE.

ROME, Sept. 22.—During Tuesday's festival, four bombs were thrown in front of the Vatican. One entered the Papal barracks.

THE NILE HIGHER.

CAIRO, Sept. 22.—The Nile is still rising and the country is flood for 45 miles in the North. Forty-five hundred acres of sugar cane, and one thousand acres of cereals at Aboorooras are submerged.

AN AUSTIAN TRAGEDY.

LONDON, Sept 22.—A domestic tragedy is reported from Baulgarten. A Vienna chemist shot his wife and two children there to-day and afterward took his own life.

A Priest's Leap for Life.

Rev. Father Sheehan of Pickering had a desperate encounter with burglars on Wednesday night. About midnight the reverend gentleman was awakened by visitors who demanded his money or his brains. He objected to giving up either, and discharged his revolver at them. Two shots were returned in rapid succession by the marauders, but neither took effect. Father Sheehan finding he was in desperate quarters retreated to the window of his bedroom, which is about twenty feet from the ground, he threw up the lower sash and still covering the burglars, leaped for his life. He ran to a neighbor's house for assistance which he soon obtained, and returned only to find the burglars gone.

BOGUS DEPOSITS.

A JUDGMENT has just been given that throws some light upon Reform election tactics. At the last general election for the House of Commons, Mr. Shibley, the Reform candidate, either could not or would not make the necessary deposit and never qualified. But knowing this, he became a party to the trick of putting the electors and the county to the trouble and expense of a bogus election to prevent a Conservative return by acclamation. To carry out this device, Mr. Britton, a Kingston lawyer and keen Reform politician, himself handed to the Returning-officer $200 on the pretence that it was the Reform candidate's deposit. A creditor of Mr. Shibley, naturally supposing that it was a real and not a bogus deposit, garnisheed the sum. Then Mr. Britton, to save his money, confessed the fraud, declared that Mr. Shibley had nothing to do with the money which was his and contended not only that it could not be garnisheed by Shibley's creditor, but even that it could not have been forfeited as it was only a bogus deposit and a bogus election. The judge has agreed with Mr. Britton so far as to give judgment in his favor.

It is time that the County Judge expressed his own opinion that any elector can make the election deposit, but of course his view being only an obiter dictum is not an authoritative decision on election law, not seeming in accordance with either its letter or its spirit, or with the suggestion made by Mr. Britton at the trial that his deposit could not even be forfeited.

How many other bogus deposits were there thus imposed upon Returning-officers by Reform wire-pullers, and how many more invalid elections were thus held with all the unnecessary trouble and expense to the country, to satisfy the rancour of the Opposition?

This exposure by the bye recalls to mind the Queens, N.B., case. We have always been inclined to the opinion that Mr. Baird was not duly elected and that the Court would have so declared if Mr. King had claimed his legal remedy like a law-respecting man. The only thing that at all shook our conviction was the obstinacy with which Mr. King refused to face a court of law, a reluctance not natural if a man is honest and knows he has a good case. The suspicion was inevitable that Mr. King dared not submit to legal investigation because he knew he had not a good case, that he had himself some blot that he feared might be exposed. Is it not possible that this recently decided case gives a clue to the mystery—that Mr. King knew there was no real deposit, but only a bogus and fraudulent one like that in Addington?

EGGS FOR EXAMPLES.

THE annexationists with that dishonesty which seems to pervade the clique, calmly assume that those who are loyal to Canada have advanced some arguments in regard to eggs and that they have been refuted. The fact is that the annexationists, having founded various arguments on successive contradictory falsehoods about eggs, have had their inventions exposed and their conclusions demolished.

But if they wish to learn some lessons from the egg market we will point out one or two. As is now admitted by them the fact that the United States impose no duty on eggs has not prevented our exports from diminishing and the value falling, in the face of the increased product of the two countries, and so it would be with other things. What becomes of the supply of eggs augmented as it is both by the increased product and the diminished export? They are sold in larger numbers to our own people, who are engaged in manufactures or dependant on them, and as our farmers' wives know, this home market is more remunerative than the foreign one. As to the market of sixty million people, a market comprises producers as well as consumers, and from the example of eggs we may learn that even when the market is free we cannot force upon it more than is wanted, and as the sixty millions produce more eggs, they take less from us. As to most of the product of Canadian farms, the sixty thousand produce even more than they want and they have to export, so free trade would not make them buy from us unless it were to obtain a middle-man's profit between our farmers and their customers in Europe. After all there are some lessons to be drawn from eggs. Mr. Wiman having learnt that there is no duty on eggs, as he first stated, now says, what is also untrue, that the export has increased under free trade and the export of horses would do likewise. He has only found a mare's nest, and there are no eggs in that.

But if the anti-Canadian clique wish to employ eggs for arguments they can only use them with effect when rather ancient as they did in Morris to prevent free discussion.

THE junior Tories have been in session. As nearly as I can make out they convened and gathered together to try to discover why they are Tories. They have adjourned without finishing the business.—Toronto Labor Reformer.

This is very much like the nonsense published by a number of Reform papers, but when it finds its way into a respectable independent journal it requires notice. The young Conservatives met to organize a Provincial Association and did it very satisfactorily.

There are many Cough Mixtures, but only one Allen's Lung Balsam; try it.

IN its floundering efforts to retrace its steps from the unpopular position in which it has placed itself by advocating that Manitoba should deal with the United States instead of old Canada, the Toronto Globe says of the disallowed railway:—

"Thus the country would be greatly developed, its settlers contented, its immigration increased, its productions multiplied and its demand for the productions of Eastern Canada be multiplied in proportion."

Well, if the Globe and its friends would be satisfied on succeeding in this step in favour of foreigners and to the prejudice of Canada, so that acting more patriotically in future they would refrain from their constant efforts to check the settlement of the Northwest, it is possible that there would be such an improvement as to leave more trade for Canada after the United States had seized a share. But how do we know that the Globe and its friends would then desist from warning settlers not to go to to the Northwest, from fomenting rebellion or advocating secession as in the past? How do we know that they are not now instigating the Indians to murder settlers, officials and missionaries as in the Riel rebellion?

THE WORK REVIEWED.

QUESTIONS FOR THE REVIEW BY REV. R. S. M'ARTHUR, D. D.

How to Reconsider the Work of the Quarter That Began with the First Sunday in July—Golden Text, Luke iv, 43.

It is always difficult to prepare and to teach the Review Lesson.

Some schools may prefer the temperance lesson in Romans xiii, 8-14, which is suggested by the committee; other schools the missionary lesson in Matthew iv, 12-16; still other schools may use the occasion as a prayer and inquiry meeting. This we have known to be done with great success. After the texts are recited and the records made the leader may give this direction to the occasion. Recent converts may give brief testimonies, the older Christians may add their riper experience, and those who desire to become Christians may manifest their desire by rising. Then, after prayers have been offered, the general school may be dismissed, while those who wish for religious conversation may meet in some smaller room. It is our firm conviction that occasions of this sort should be more frequent. We often cut down golden grain which we never gather into sheaves. During the past few years we have seen admirable results from the use of these means. Children while young should be encouraged to give their hearts to Christ and connect themselves with his church. But it is fitting that a review should be given for those who wish to go over the lessons in their order.

1. July 3. The Infant Jesus. Matthew ii, 1-12.—The word Jesus is explained for us in the Golden Text of the lesson. It is a precious word to every Christian ear and heart. He was the true Joshua. He came to deliver his people from bondage and to lead them to the true Canaan. The infancy of Jesus brings him near to the hearts of parents and children. He gloried and sanctified the cradle; he honored motherhood. The Christ must have his birth in every heart in order that his coming may bring to each one of us the largest possible blessing.

2. July 10. The Flight into Egypt. Matthew ii, 13-23.—Even as a babe Christ's presence developed hostility. Wherever he comes he excites the wrath of ignorant and wicked men. In our early Christian life we must expect persecution; but as God delivered his infant Son, so he will deliver all who put their trust in him.

3. July 17. John the Baptist. Matt. iii, 1-12.—The character of the noble Baptist is worthy of careful study. We need such stalwart believers and fearless preachers in our day. He rightly divined the word, he lived what he preached, but his highest honor was found in pointing inquirers to the "Lamb of God." He decreased that Christ might increase.

4. July 24. The Baptism of Jesus. Matt. iii, 13-17.—The central thought of this lesson is the obedience of Jesus Christ. He stood in our place; as our representative he submitted to baptism. God commended the act by an audible voice from heaven expressing approval. Afterward Christ gave the commandment to all believers to be baptized. We thus have both his command and example. It becomes us to have due regard to this ordinance as an act of obedience to our ascended Lord. It marked his entrance into his public ministry. It was also the occasion of his receiving fuller conceptions of his earthly work.

5. July 31. The Temptation of Jesus. Matt. iv, 1-11.—From the waters of baptism Christ went to the wilderness of temptation. His whole soul is aglow with holy enthusiasm; but no act of religious obedience, no condition of spiritual joy, can assure us of freedom from temptation. It was a moment of intense interest for the race. Satan had overcome the first Adam. If he can overcome the second Adam his victory will be complete. Christ's example in overcoming Satan is worthy of our imitation. He used no weapon but the "sword of the spirit, which is the word of God." Temptations are sure to come upon us; but Christ won, so we may win. Our Lord knew by experience what the struggle with temptation means; he therefore can sympathize with those that are tempted. We may claim that sympathy, and we may be sure that he will give us his divine help.

6. Aug. 7. Jesus in Galilee. Matt. iv, 17-25.—This is a lesson of great interest. Christ brought light to those who had sat in darkness. We see him here walking by the Sea of Galilee, calling two pairs of brothers into his service. The foundation of his church was thus laid. These men immediately left their daily duties and followed Jesus. Their prompt obedience we should imitate. Christ showed himself to be a great teacher, preacher and healer. All manner of sickness yielded to his power. He still possesses this characteristic. He will heal the souls of all who will come unto him. Our highest honor is to become his disciples.

7. Aug. 14. The Beatitudes. Matt. v, 1-16.—This lesson many Sunday school scholars know by heart. When Christ first opened his mouth, blessings fell upon all who sat at his feet. Never before nor since have such wonderful words been spoken. The world calls those who are rich the happy. Christ contradicts this opinion. He called the poor, the sorrowing, the meek, the hungry, the merciful, the pure in heart, the peace makers, the persecuted, the happy ones of the earth. We need still to learn the lesson which he here teaches. He also commands us to let our light shine. Every boy and girl has some light. We must keep the lower lights burning.

8. Aug. 21. Jesus and the Law. Matt. v, 17-26.—This is a continuation of the sermon on the mount. Many who heard Christ supposed that he had come to destroy the law. This was a great mistake. He had not come to destroy, but to fulfill. He lifted the law to a higher plane; he carried its truths from the outward act to the inward thought. He was its original author; he was, therefore, its best interpreter. This is true still; even to this hour he is the world's greatest teacher.

9. Aug. 28. Piety without Display. Matt. vi, 1-15. There were many errors which Christ was obliged to rebuke. One of them was a tendency to make a display of piety. This was characteristic of the scribes and Pharisees. Christ shows that our good deeds are to be done with a regard for God's approval rather than man's; as in our prayers, so in our almsgiving. The man who prays to be seen of men will not be heard of God. Christ does not here prohibit family or public prayer, but he gives direction regarding our private prayers. "The Model Prayer," which he here gives, we ought all to know thoroughly and repeat often. Our whole lives ought to prove that we are striving to hallow God's great name.

10. Sept. 4. Trust in our Heavenly Father. Matt. vi, 24-34. Our Lord continues to rebuke a lack of trust, as well as hypocritical display. God cares for the fowls of the air, and for the flowers of the field; it is certain then that he will not be indifferent to his children. Distrust of God is unbecoming on the part of his children. Undue anxiety unfits for the duties of today, and borrows also the burdens of to-morrow. We must seek first the kingdom of God. The man who seeks this kingdom shall have all earthly things which God sees best for him to possess.

11. Sept. 11. Golden Precepts. Matt. vii, 1-12.—We now move forward to the more particular instruction given in this lesson. Christ here rebukes the tendency to judge others harshly and ourselves partially. This tendency is as unmanly as it is unchristian. It is as truly a form of hypocrisy as our giving of alms to be seen of men. We are encouraged in this lesson to pray for the good things which we need. These God is more willing to give than our earthly parents are to give good things to their children.

12. Sept. 18. Solemn Warnings. Matt. 7, 13-29.—We are at the opening of the lesson exhorted to enter in at the strait gate. Not all men may walk through this gate and into the narrow way. Much must be left behind before we pass through the gate. This lesson, indeed, abounds in solemn warnings. Men must be judged by their fruits. This is a practical and universal test. A day of trial is coming; the storms of fierce temptation shall beat upon us; only those who have built their character upon the everlasting rock will be able to stand; that rock in its deepest meaning is Christ.

The lessons for the quarter began with Christ, they end with Christ; his name is the believer's joy in life, and will be his hope in death and his song in eternity.—Sunday School World.

An Old Man's Wit.

"Women don't always have their wits about them," said an elderly gentleman the other morning. "A lady friend of mine came into my office with her little girl of 5. The pretty white dress of the latter had a streak of blood upon it, the result of a visit to a dentist. The mother didn't want to return uptown with the child, as she was not through with her shopping. Could I help her out of her quandary? I took the child back to the toilet room, with the idea of washing out the stain, but a better plan occurred to me. The stain was a long, narrow, downward streak, and the white dress was pleated up and down. What do you think I did? I folded over one of the pleats and pinned it, thus hiding the stain from view. The mother asked: 'Why, how did you remove the stain without spreading it and taking the starch out?' Then I showed her that it was still there. Her look was one of pleasure and chagrin. 'I must confess that you didn't help to raise your family in vain,' she said, 'while you must think I am excessively stupid. And I am—for the plan ought to have suggested itself to me.'"—Philadelphia Call.

Antidote for Germs and Fungi.

Dr. A. B. Griffiths, an English physician, has just published a communication which is of great importance to horticulturists and agriculturists. He demonstrates that iron sulphate is an antidote for many of the most virulent epidemics which attack field and garden crops. These diseases are due to microscopic funguses, whose structures are built up in a somewhat different manner to the corresponding parts in other plants. It appears that the cellulose in these funguses is acted upon by iron sulphate, whereas in the higher plants the cellulose of the cell walls is not influenced. The iron sulphate destroys the cellulose of the funguses, but does not affect that of the attacked plant. It is, therefore, an antidote and destroyer of such parasitic germs and funguses as the potato disease, wheat mildew, etc.—Frank Leslie's.

Food of Our Childhood.

"Given your order, sir?" inquired a waiter at one of the down town lunch counters the other day of a customer. "The food of our childhood, please," was the rather mysterious and sententious reply. The next moment the gentleman was tearing a half loaf of bread into shreds and depositing the pieces in a huge bowl of milk. The charge for this is twelve cents, and the waiter explained that there was a pretty good run on the dish daily. A side issue, not nearly so often called for, is dubbed the "grub of our daddies," and consists of milk and mush.—Philadelphia Call.

Preventing Sunstroke.

The best thing to prevent sunstroke is a thoroughly ventilated hat, the ideal hat for summer being that which simply shades the head. If such a one cannot be procured, the lightest and best ventilated one obtainable should be worn, and it should be frequently lifted and held above the head, so as to shade it and let the air circulate around it. The frequent wetting of the head with cold water is, of course, good. Do not wear anything that prevents the free radiation of the natural heat from the head, and the free circulation of air around it. If a person is prostrated by sunstroke, put pounded ice or cold water on the head, and give plenty of fresh air, cool if possible.—American Agriculturist.

Their Novel Adornments.

Two young belles appeared at a Boston dinner a few days ago with serpents apparently tattooed on their arms instead of bracelets, and a circle of strawberries and strawberry leaves round the neck, exquisitely done, both as to color and drawing, and producing a striking effect. Though it resembled tattooing, it was, of course, some thin substance excellently painted, and made to adhere to the skin.—Pioneer Press.

In California surplus apricots are to be made into wine. Experiment shows that they make a richly flavored wine, clear and effervescent as the best champagne.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

THE MARKET REPORTS.

Sellers will note with satisfaction the advance in the price of barley and wheat. As high as 72 cents per bushel was paid on the market this afternoon. Wheat has also made an advance of two points. Owing to a depression in the Montreal market pork has fallen 50 cents per hundred during the past week.

Palmo-Sulphur Soap.
Is Marvelously Efficient in clearing the Skin of Impurities, and keeping it in a perfect state of health. It beautifies the complexion, while as a Healing agent for Sores or Wounds it passes all praise. There is no Form of Eruptive Disease for which this Renowned Soap has not proved efficacious. In the Bath it is as beneficial as the waters of the Renowned Sulphur Springs. Linens and Woolens washed with it are rendered superlatively white, and are disinfected when germs of disease linger in the material. The value of Sulphur as a Cleansing and Purifying agent is everywhere recognized. Ask for Palmo-Sulphur, and refuse all others, and you wont be deceived.

TRANSIENT TRADER.

Mr. Jas. Lyndon Fined $30 for Selling Without License.

At the Police Court this morning Mr. Jas. Lydon, who has been in charge of a silverware store next door to the REVIEW Office, on Thursday and to-day, was brought before the Court this morning by P. C. Adams, charged with selling goods without being possessed of a transient trader's license.

The defendant pleaded not guilty.

Mr. EDWARDS, Town Solicitor, conducted the case for the prosecutor.

E. B. STONE was sworn: He had bought some goods at the store, but the proprietor thought he got them too cheap and gave him $2 on his bargain on his returning the goods.

JAS. G. MACDONALD was sworn: He stated that Jas. Lydon's name was not on the assessment roll and that the premises he was using was assessed to W. H. Chamberlain.

P. C. ADAMS bore testimony that he demanded from the defendent that he take out a license and was met with a refusal to do so. The defendant was in the store explaining the quality of the goods and giving all partiuulars. There was other men present assisting in the work. He heard the defendent use the term "we" when speaking of the sale.

C. STAPLETON, in his testimony, stated that the goods were consigned to him by Mr. Lydon. He warned Mr. Lydon some time ago that he should make the sale a bona-fide auction sale, as the people here were very particular about transient traders. The goods were consigned to him and came and were taken out last Monday. On Monday a man named Charles Jones arrived from Toronto. He helped the witness to unpack, etc. Lydon paid his fare down from Toronto. The witness paid the bills in connection with getting the goods out and receiving all cash for sales, but after Lyden had paid him what he had paid and received the proceeds of the sail. The witness received 5 per cent. commission on the sales.

The MAGISTRATE held that the defendant was the occupant of the building, and was a transient trader.

The DEFENDANT cited a case in defence but the MAGISTRATE held that it had nothing to do with the present case. He would impose a fine of $30 and costs.

Established.

Gough and shoddy. The mark of a large size foot print on the sidewald leading to Sheppard's store, George street, was the talk of the town as a good advertisement for that House. This morning added to it, and immediately in front was the words, For shoddy. Mr. Gough, the clothier, George street, made his boast that he would accomplish this contemptible trick and he has done it, so that Gough and shoddy are inseparable for all time to come. 3d71

GETTING OUT OF DEBT.

A CLEAN SHEET TO BE PRESENTED IN THREE WEEKS.

Fourth Public Anniversary of the Y. M. C. A.—Remarks From the Retiring Secretary and the Newly Appointed Secretary.

The regular anniversaay services in connection with the Young Men's Christian Association were held in the George Street Methodist Church on Thursday evening. There were rbout four hundred people present.

The chair was occupied by Mr. Geo. M. Roger, President of the Association. On the platform were: the Rev. I. Tovell, the Rev. E. F. Torrance, the Rev. F. H. Wallace, Rev. J. C. Wilson, Mr. Geo. E. Williams, the retiring Secretary, and Mr. W. H. Stevens, the incoming Secretary.

The services opened with the singing of a hymn and prayer by the Rev. Mr. Wallace. The Rev. Mr. Wilson read from the scriptures.

The CHAIRMAN made a few remarks. He dwelt upon the discouragements the Association was subjected to and and the lack of sympathy which existed with their work. The reason he assigned for this was, that people did not acquaint themselves with the objects of the Association, and the results accomplished Yet they had no cause to complain. The condition of the Association to-day in comparison with that in which they were at the last annual meeting was one at which they had great reason to be thankful. During the year just closed they had made most marked progress. The occasion of their last anniversary was a critical one in the history of the Association. They had been steadily going behind in their financial arrangements until they had got $800 into debt. It was debated whether it would be well to continue the work of the Association. Perhaps they would get farther into debt and have to give up in such a way as would bring discredit upon themselves. But they trusted in God and continued, and to-night they had the satisfaction of seeing two-thirds of that debt removed, and in good prospects of it disappearing altogether. The religious work had gone on well notwithstanding their being seriously hampered with financial arrangements. Success had crowned their efforts and their hearts were filled with thankfulness, and now that the load of debt had been removed they were going ahead with greater zeal than ever. He considered the present time a critical period in the history of the Association. After great effort sometimes succeeded laxity. They were to guard against that, gird up their loins and go on. It was critical, too, inasmuch as they were about to "swap horses in the middle of the stream," and change secretaries. Everything had been done to retain Mr. Williams, but to no avail. They would gain experience and see if they could hold their present secretary. During Mr. Williams' term of office the Association had prospered. The membership had grown from 50 to 240. He was filled with regret at Mr. Williams' departure, but wished him much success, and bespoke kindly sympathy for the new secretary

The male choir gave a selection of music.

Mr. WILLIAMS, the retiring Secretary, spoke of the financial difficulties in which they had been. It was even more than the President had stated. Their debt was $850, and the amount to be raised for current expenses was $1,100, so that nearly $2,000 was required at the beginning of the year. yet they went at the task, not in their own strength but in God's strength. Nearly the whole debt was wiped out and he hoped to see a clear sheet before he left town. Notwithstanding the difficulties their work had gone on. Eighty-three new members were added during the year. This number was reduced by removals, about twenty going to Toronto alone. The religious work had been kept up and much good had been accomplised. The intellectual and social work too, had progressed well. Not so with the physical work, owing to lack of means. He thought the busines men of the town should put up a good gymnasium for the young men. In speaking of himself he said that he realized that much more might have been done had he been more earnest in the work. He commended the new secretary to the kind friends here and bespoke for him a hearty welcome at the hands of all. He thanked the pastors for their support and encouraging works and said that it would be a long long day before he would forget Peterborough, and the work here.

Mr. MCCOLLOCH, Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of Toronto, congratulated the Association on its magnificent work this last year. He then gave some interesting statistics in regard to the Y.M.C.A. Their branch Associations extended around the habitable globe, Americe, Europe, Africe, Japan, China, India, etc. Three thousand five hundred branch Associations were now in operation. The buildings they owned were worth $5,000,000. There were 499 reading rooms open to the public, and 600 secretaries at work. There were 295 college associations, 69 railway associations and 12 German associations. Business men were putting their money into the work because they knew it paid. It paid in producing a better manhood. The Y.M.C.A. considered the soul and its welfare, the mind and its culture, the body and its health. What would this country be in a few years? Those who lived now were responsible for the future. It behoved all to set all machinery for good at work to prepare for the reception of the coming millions.

Mr. W. H. STEVENS, the newly appointed secretary, spoke briefly and made a favorable impression. He stands erect on the platform and says what he has to say in a clear concise way.

Mr. WILLIAMS announced that on Saturday evening and on Sunday afternoon and evening Mr. Stevens would be at the rooms to meet the friends of the association.

The meeting closed in the usual way.

POLICE COURT.

DISTURBANCE.

FRIDAY, Sept. 23.—Jas McIntosh and R Drewry were chaaged by P. C. Adams with having created a disturbance in the Salvation Army barracks o Sunday night last.

They pleaded not guilty, and elected to be tried by the Magistrate.

One of the Salvation Army officers was called. He said that these two lads had been making a disturbance by talking and laughing.

CROSS-QUESTIONED by Mr. Stratton—He did not know that they were looking after money they had dropped, but he saw them scrambling under the seats. There were no speakers that he knew of on the platform at the time at whom they could laugh, He did not know anything about Mr. Spenceley selling the War Cry and the change having dropped on the floor.

Mr. STRATTON—Do you conduct yourself properly in the barracks?

WITNESS—Yes, sir.

Mr. STRATTON—Then how was it that that young lady pulled you by the ear last Sunday night?

WITNESS—That's got nothing to do with this case. I can't help other people's doings.

His WORSHIP held that perhaps some annoyance had been caused, but he did not think it was intentional. He did not think they would wilfully make a disturbance in a place of public worship. But if they, or anyone else, were proved guilty of such a thing in the future, he would visit them with heavy punishment. He dismissed the case.

D. & D.

Patrick MURRAY acknowledged that he had been drunk and disorderly.

"Two dollars or ten days," remarked His Worship.

Patrick turned around, borrowed $2 and was free.

TIPPOO TIB IN PERIL.

The Arab Slaveholders Refuse to Recognize Him.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—A despatch to the Herald from London says: From a trustworthy source I learn that bad news was to have been received from Stanley falls, the Free State outpost captured by the Arabs ten months ago. Major Bartellot, who was detached from Stanley's expedition to instal Tippoo Tib at the Falls as representative of the Free State, found the Arabs terribly uprourious. They had been for ten months slave raiding and committing horrible atrocities, and they stubbornly refused to recognize the authority of the Free State even in the person of Tippoo Tib. Serious events are expected. Astonishment is expressed that the Free State agents did not long ago forewarn the Brussels administration of the probability of Arab resistence to the Tippoo Tib arrangement.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1887.

SERIOUS.

The Rev. Father Conway Still in a Dangerous Condition.

Up till three o'clock this afternoon the Rev. Father Conway had grown no worse, but was still in a serious condition. All day to-day people have been enquiring anxiously as to his state and a number of the priests of the neighboring parishes have arrived.

When Father Conway was thrown from his horse on Brock street on Friday, he walked home with Mr. J. E. Belcher, but was in a semi-unconscious condition. At noon, two hours after the accident, he became unconscious, and remained so till six o'clock, when he recovered.

On examination by Dr. King there was no of sign external injury, but blood slowly oozed foom the right ear, which is one of the symptoms of fracture of the skull. Other symptoms, however, such as facial paralysis, are wanting.

In the evening a consultation was held, Dr. Brennan being called. No opinion can be given yet as to the ultimate result. If the injury proves to be fracture of the skull the case is hopeless.

There are good grounds for hoping, however, that this is not what he is suffering from.

Father Conway, is the most prominent priest in the Diocese, having been appointed some time ago to the position of Chancellor of this Diocese.

The Churches.

The following is a list of services in the several churches to-morrow:—

ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL.—At St. Peter's Cathedral, Roman Catholic, there will be three masses celebrated, the first at 7 a. m. the second at 8 a. m., and the third at 10.30 a. m. Vespers at 7 p. m.

ST. LUKE'S.—Holy Communion at 8 a. m.; Morning prayer and sermon by the Missioner, the Rev. E. P. Crawford, at 11 a. m.; Children's service at 2.30 p. m.; Service for men only at 4 p. m.; Evening Prayer and Sermon at 7. p. m. All are invited to be present.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.—The regular services will be conducted as follows:—Holy Communion at 8.30 a.m.; Morning Prayer, Litany and sermon at 11 a.m.; Evening Prayer and sermon at 7 p.m.

ST. PAUL'S.—The usual services will be held.

BAPTIST CHURCH, Murray Street.—The pulpit will be occupied by the Rev. Mr. Grant, of the Home Missions.

METHODIST CHURCH, Charlotte Street.—The Rev. F. H. Wallace, M.A., B. D., will conduct the services in the morning and the Rev. I. Tovell in the evening.

METHODIST CHURCH, George street.—The Rev. I Tovell will preach in the morning and in the evening the Rev. F. H. Wallace. M.A., B. D., will deliver a sermon to young men on "The Formation of Character."

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.—The usual services will be conducted.

METHODIST CHURCH, Mark street (Ashburnham)—The Rev. J. C. Wilson, pastor, will conduct the services.

Real Estate.

Mr. John Carlisle has gone into a large real estate enterprise. He has purchased sixteen acres of land in Ashburnham, within ten minutes walk of the new post-office, Hunter street. A plan of the property will be seen in another column in this issue. Mr. Carlisle has had the property surveyed into lots and, though only having them for sale a few days, has sold thirteen. Four fine new residences are now under way and the locality promises to become the most attractive in the village. Mr. Carlisle offers builders surprisingly good terms, and this, together with the fine location of the property, is the reason of the lots selling so rapidly. There are several more lots still not disposed of.

THE DREADED CHOLERA

THE DISEASE BROUGHT TO NEW YORK IN A SHIP.

Eight Passengers Die on the Voyage and Four Now Ill—Even the Physicians Flee from Messina, in Italy.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—The steamship Alesia arrived in the lower bay last night from Mediterranean ports with Asiatic cholera on board. Eight of her passengers died on the passage.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—The Alesia is commanded by Capt. Vallial, and belongs to the Fabree line. She brings 3 cabin and 561 steerage passengers. On her arrival at quarantine, four cases of Asiatic cholera were found among the passengers in the steerage. Eight persons died during the voyage to this port. On September 13th, Luigi Maria, steerage passenger, aged 23, was taken sick and died on the 15th; Paul Antonio Baldyora, another steerage passenger, aged 30, was taken sick and died on the same date; Jean Lenivolin Saila, aged 40, died the following day in less than twenty-four hours from the time he was taken down with the disease. On the 17th Jean Somma, a sailor, aged 30, was taken sick; he died on the 19th. Serafin Delis, aged 21, steerage passenger, died on the 20th. Anna Viltria, steerage passenger, aged 47, died on the 21st. Francisca Mattes, aged 41, was taken sick before coming on board, and died on the 22nd, probably of bronchitis. Maria Antonio Scalareno, aged 59, was also ailing at the time of coming on board and died on the 22nd, though without any symptoms of cholera. All of these were buried at sea. The Alesia is now in the lower bay. Her sick passengers will be transferred to Swinburne Island hospital. All remaining passengers will be transferred to Hoffman Island for observation. The ship will remain in the lower bay until she has been thoroughly fumigated and cleansed.

SCENES IN ITALY.

ROME, Sept. 23.—The successor of the prefect of Messina, who recently died of cholera, has also succumbed to the scourge. The chemists and physicians became panic stricken and fled from Messina. They were pursued by the police and taken back. At Villabata a mob shot a postmaster under the impression that he spread the epidemic through the letters which he distributed. At Modrealo fugitives from Palermo are met by citizens with guns and compelled to camp in the open air. A boy driven by hunger to approach the village was stabbed to death and the body was then burned. The cholera returns for the 24 hours ending last night are: Catania, 12 new cases and 12 deaths; Palermo, 8 new cases and 8 deaths; Messina, 123 new cases and 62 deaths.

THE GRAVENHURST FIRE.

The Business Portion Entirely Destroyed—Public Buildings Burned.

GRAVENHURST, Sept. 23.—The entire business portion of the town was destroyed by fire early this morning, consisting of Mowry's foundry, Brignall's waggon shop, Gregg & Spier's blacksmith shop, LaFranier's hotel, S. Kitchie's tailoring establishment, Tudhope's jewelry store, Keeper's restaurant, McNeil's grocery, Grove's general store, G. F. Marter's general store, Powell's general store, Mrs. Galbraith's restaurant, J. W. Tudhope's restaurant, Melvin's grocery, Gaynor's jewelry store, Shea's boot and shoe store, Passmore's butcher shop, Rorke's jewelry store, Boyd's Grand Central hotel, Brown's grocery, H. H. Martet's furniture and harness store, Allen Bros'. grocery, King's butcher shop, Clif Sham's blacksmith shop and carriage factory, McKim's dry goods store, Post-office telegraph, telephone and express offices, McCarthy, Pepler and McCarthy's law offices, J. F. Young's hardware and tinware, Moody's dry goods, D. Smith's dry goods, Meinarda's grocery, Tolon's drug store, Abbott's barber shop, Dr. Williams' office, Kohn's tailoring establishment, Dr. Cornell's drug and book store, J. P. Cockburn's book and stationery store, Cooper's Royal Hotel, Matt Bauer's shop, Sullivan's boot and shoe store, Cox's dry good's store, John Sharpe's Caledonian Hotel and grocery, Palmer's grocery, R.K. John's law office, Whalen's boot and shoe store, the Albion Hotel, King's bakery, Dowler's dry goods, Mrs. Scott's dressmaking establishment.

In addition to this the Public School, the Church of England, the Banner printing house, the lodge rooms of the A. O.U. W., Oddfellows, Foresters, Sons of Scotland and Masons, and a number of private dwellings leaving fifty families homeless and many of them destitute.

Relief and shelter committees have been organized, and assistance is greatly needed both in supplies and money, particularly the latter, to provide temporary shelter. Donations may be sent to Mayor Harvie, chairman, or J. K. Link, secretary and treasurer of the committee.

THE STORM IN TEXAS.

Millions of Dollars Damage Done to Property and Crops.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 23.—A Brownsville, Tex., special gives a full account of the fearful storm there and at Matamoras. The damage in that section is esitmated at one million dollars. In Brownsville seventy small houses were blown down and 300 others were partially unroofed and rendered untenantable. In Matamoras a dozen houses of the better class and from 150 to 200 small houses were prostrated, while from 300 to 500 others were unroofed. In the country on the American side of the river incalculable damage was done. Countless heads of cattle and sheep have been lost and the crops of cotton, corn and sugar cane were were completely prostrated and destroyed.

A Polar Wave.

ABERCROMBIE, Minn., Sept. 23.—A cold wave struck this place last night and it is now only two degrees below zero.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

"UNITED IRELAND'S" PLAN.

The Government Will Have More Prisoners than it Can Take Care of.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—The Irish cadets have wisely decided not to hold any meetings at Mitchelstown during the sitting of the court which tries O'Brien, so that the Government proclamation of the meeting in advance will not apply. Meanwhile, the general attitude of the people towards the Government is not determined on. United Ireland lays down principles of passive resistance. The suppressed branches are to go on holding meetings, the police seeking to intrude on the meeting indoors to be barred out and open air demonstrations to follow any such invasion of private premises which members of Parliament will be invited to attend. United Ireland concludes that there will be so many prisoners that the machinery of the Government will break down under the strain. There has, however, been no positive declaration from Mr. Parnell. The organ of the Lord Mayor of Dublin advises that until this is obtained no meeting be held.

All About a Convict.

KINGSTON, Sept. 23.—With the finding of a body at Oswego identification of his clothing as that worn by Kelly, the escaped convict, sensation has not ended. The Oswego men who stripped and interred the body say there was no wound as of gun shot on the body, that it was seen floating about the lake long before it was picked up, and that it could not have been Kelly's. The convict was a cute one and may have shed some of his clothing to advantage.

A Victory for the Army.

QUEBEC, Sept. 23.—Recorder Dery this morning fined Napoleon Wagner $40 for having participated in the recent assault upon the Salvation Army. With regard to the constitutionality of the Army, His Honor declared, in substance, that any association whose object was good could not be called illegal, and the Army was undoubtedly in these circumstances.

The Anarchist's Devoted Wife.

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—Lucy Parsons, the wife of the condemned Anarchist, was arrested yesterday for violating the city ordinance against distributing handbills on the streets. The circulars were copies of Parsons' address to the public. She was released on bail.

A Big mistake.

BOSTON, Sept. 23.—Through an error in transmission the Treasury bond purchase offer was printed here as for $124,000,000 instead of $14,000,000. This led to wild speculation and a rise in prices of stocks followed by a thump when the true figures became known. Many brokers suffered.

Dynamite at Chatham.

CHATHAM, Ont., Sept. 23.—The house of Daniel Kerr, formerly county clerk, was partially injured by the explosion of a dynamite cartridge this morning. Very little damage was done. There is no clue to the perpetrators.

The Champion Bicyclist.

LYNN, Mass., Sept. 23.—Frank E Dingley, of Minneapolis, lowered all the world's bicycle records from 50 to 100 miles inclusive, in a race against Knapp, of Denver, here yesterday. Time for 100 miles—5 hrs., 38 mins., 44 1-5 seconds.

A Cyclone.

BROWNVILLE, Tex., Sept. 23.—A cyclone, last night, accompanied by rain, deluged the country for miles, causing enormous loss.

The Manitoba Injunction.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 23.—The Dominion injunction case was postponed to-day until October 7th, an understanding being had not to build across lots meantime.

Horsford's Acid Phosphates.

IN OBSTINATE INDIGESTION.

Dr. F. G. McGAVOCK, McGavock, Ark., say: "It gives me pleasure to bear testimony to its beneficial action in obstinate indigestion."

TURNBULL'S immense stock of Dress Goods in Lovely Styles is now complete Ladies! look through it. Prices are positively right.

SCOTT ACTS, Browns Act, Jones and Smiths Act wisely by going to KIDD'S for boots—they are the BEST.

LATEST CABLE NEWS.

ANARCHY AT STANLEY FALLS.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 23.—Advices received from the Congo Free State show that anarchy prevails at Stanley Falls.

HANLAN IN AUSTRALIA.

SYDNEY, Sept. 23.—Hanlan has arrived after a boisterous voyage. He suffered from sickness and looked thin and worn. There was no demonstration upon his arrival.

A BISMARCK ANNIVERSARY.

BERLIN, Sept. 23.—All the newspapers here publish eulogistic articles on Prince Bismarck's services to the country in connection with the celebration to-day of the 25th anniversary of his appointment to the office of Prussian Prime Minister.

THE ORLEANIST PRINCES.

PARIS, Sept. 23.—A Cabinet Council was held yesterday to consider the expediency of expelling the Orleanist princes. Premier Rouvier has not to await the meeting of the Chambers before deciding the question. One report is to the effect that the Cabinet decided that the manifesto does not justify the expulsion of the princes unless an endeavor be made to circulate it, when the princes will be immediately expelled.

THE NILE FLOODS.

CAIRO, Sept. 23.—It is reported that beyond Wady Halfa hundreds of lives have been lost in the floods caused by the rising of the Nile. The damage to the sugar crop is said to reach £20,000.

THE LOSS OF THE ROMEO.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—Later advice say six sailors and seven passengers of the Romeo were drowned. It is now believed the steamer can be floated.

A RIOT IN CORK.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—During the meeting of the National League in Cork last evening a crowd which had gathered outside the building, made an attack upon the rooms of the Protestant Young Men's Association. The police charged the crowd, but the mob continually gained fresh accessions and resisted and a melee occurred. The police used their batons and the crowd paving stones. The conflict continued until Mr. Tanner, M.P., who was at the League meeting, came out and implored the crowd to desist. After this the police made another charge and dispersed the crowd. Several constables were cut with stones.

A DISABLED STEAMER.

LONDON, Sept. 23—The steamer Atlas from New York for Liverpool, was signalled off Fastenet at seven o'clock last night with the disabled steamer Chateau Margaux in tow.

HOW THE NOTES WERE TAKEN.

CORK, Sept. 23.—Constable Foley admitted in the O'Brien trial that the notes he made of what Mr. O'Brien said in his speech were made the next morning and from memory. The head constable told him to write the report. He was not asked to produce the notes for many days after. He could not swear that O'Brien spoke in the order in which the words appeared in the notes.

DEMOCRATIC GOVERNMENT.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—Lord Randolph Churchill, speaking at Whitby to-day said the present Parliament is a fairly democratic one and is, therefore, strong. If it were otherwise it would be unable to grapple firmly with the National League. The obstruction encountered during the session was due to Mr. Gladstone acting as leader of the Parnellites.

Cigar Makers at Binghampton.

BINGHAMPTON, N. Y., Sept. 23.—The delegates to the cigar makers' international convention yesterday considered two proposed changes in the constitution reported by the constitutional committee and rejected them both. One provided for a special cigar box label for Union No. 218 of San Francisco and the other for the organization of unions in Montreal, Toronto, Brantford, St. Catharines and other places to be known as the "Federation of Canadian Union." The proposition to hold the international convention tri-annually was also rejected.

Failures for the Week.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—The business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days number for the United States 156 and for Canada 27, or a total of 183 as compared with a total of 188 last week and 174 the week previous to the last. For the corresponding week of 1886 there was 187 failures, being 165 in the United States and 52 in Canada.

THE "REFORM POLICY."

WHERE there is constitutional government with organized political parties it is obviously for the public interest that the party in Opposition, when claiming to be placed in office, should have some definite principles of public policy on which to base their invitation to the people to make a change. The London Advertiser, therefore, naturally thinks the charge damaging to its friends that they have no definite policy on which they agree except the desire to get into office. It makes an effort to refute the charge by showing what it claims to be the definite policy of its party. Stript of the persuasive and argumentative verbiage their principles appear to be three only, as follows:—

I. Economy.

II. No disallowance except when the jurisdiction of the Canadian Parliament is infringed.

III. A revenue tariff as against a protective tariff.

This would be a very scant and unsatisfactory programme on which to ask the people to reconsider their choice of constitutional advisers and representatives, even if the planks were sound; but let us examine them a little.

I. Both parties advocate economy, so that is not distinctive. The Conservatives consider it to be true economy to develop the resources of the country so that it can easily bear the cost of the improvements. The Reformers object to such improvements, asking the people to keep their money in their pockets and the country undeveloped. When they succeeded to office with the cry of economy they interpreted it in practice to mean cheeseparing discontinuance or starving of public improvements, and retention of other expenses that they had been decrying. While in power they gave us less public improvements, more rapid increase of the public debt and perennial deficits. Their kind of economy has been tried.

II. When did they come to the conclusion that there should be no disallowance except of unconstitutional legislation? The law courts could determine such points, and the executive veto power in our constitution would be quite unnecessary. While in power they exercised or threatened disallowance for reasons of general policy. Do they now wish to change our constitution by depriving the central authority of the Dominion of Canada of the power given to it to frame and enforce a general policy for our country? If so they should state it plainly.

III. When did they agree to adopting as a party a revenue tariff as against a protective tariff? At the last general election some of their leaders and some of their journals continued to pronounce in favor of leaving our home industries open to outside competition, but the chief authorities among them assured the manufacturers and those employed by them that they contemplated no such change, but would continue to favor them. Which of these two divergent policies is that on which the the Reform party as a body invites the people of Canada to give it control of public affairs?

It will be seen that not one of the three planks that we are told composes the Reform platform is sound. Is it an inviting programme on which to ask the people of Canada to dismiss for their sake advisers and representatives under whom the country is flourishing and is developing its resources and extending its communications to the admiration of the civilized world.

Besides the questions of economy or illjudged parsimony, the veto power and the tariff, there are others on which the people would like to be enlightened as to the views of these aspirants to office, before considering whether they will accept their services.

Does the Reform party as an organized body believe in secession if a province is not allowed to change the policy of the people of Canada, as threatened by some of its leaders in Canada? Does it believe in denouncing with cries of "hangmen" the constituted authorities for putting the laws and the decision of the courts in force against a criminal, as is done by their friends in Quebec to this day. Does it advise a Province to ignore the constitution, to defy the law courts, to set at naught the lawful power of the executive, to override a decision of Parliament, and to disregard the right of property holders, with threats of rebellion if not allowed to set at naught the policy of the majority of the people of Canada, as is being done by their friends in Winnipeg and instigated by their chief journals in other provinces? Does it mean to persist as at present in antagonising by every possible device our great national through route, which is the glory of our country and the admiration of the world? Does it advocate ceasing to protect our home industries, and at the same time give encouragement to those who are agitating for an increase of our duties for the protection of United States industries, as is done by some of its leading journals? Does it adopt the cry of some of its friends that our great railway should be made the feeder of a foreign railway system to convey our produce to foreign ports, cutting off our own traffic and the trade of Canadian ports? Does it prefer a "natural market" abroad to interprovincial trade? Does it intend to continue its practice of belittling Canada and its people, comparing it unfavorably with the United States? Does it wish to build up a united country or to promote sectional feeling to the utmost?

There are other questions as to which the people of Canada would like to know the views, not of individuals, but of the Reform party as a body. This, however, is a good instalment upon which to ask them to come to some agreement, and may suffice for the time.

There is another class of subjects upon which the "great" Reform party has no articulate voice. What does it think of prohibition? What does it think of Commercial Union, with its infallible results according to its foremost advocates and the United States press, of political annexation? What does it think of the proposition to exchange our fisheries for the privilege of having our Canadian industries overwhelmed by an influx of foreign goods? How does it view the idea of discriminating against a man because he is a fellow-countryman and favoring a man because he is a foreigner? We must admit that the Reform party may plead that they are not bound to have a definite and general policy on such subject, that they are not quite ripe for practical legislation and they have not made up their minds. But real Reformers are supposed to be in advance of public opinion, not to wait for it in order to know what is safest to do. And an Opposition seeking office is expected to have some new policy to lay before the people, in plain outline though not necessarily in detail, on questions of the day, in which public interest is being aroused, else what is the inducement for the country to change its responsible advisers?

At present, according to the London Advertiser, which should be an authority in the party, the inducements are economy of the kind they practiced when in power, the permission to each Province of setting at naught the general policy of the people of the whole Dominion, and the abandonment of our home industries to overwhelming foreign competition. Simply this and nothing more. All else is chaos or silence. The inducement is hardly so inviting as to be effective.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth It relieves the little suffer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for Diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

Victory has Perched on the Banner of

PETERBOROUGH'S GREAT CHEAPSIDE.

And SHEPPARD, by common consent, will get $1,000 for being the Cheapest Clothier in Peterborough, having knocked the Wonderful Cheap Man completely out. "Business is business; dirt is dirt, and when it comes to throwing dirt, then count" the only original teddy out, and he will hand over that $1,000 like a little man, for the following reasons :—

SHEPPARD sells a full size Man's suit for $2.95, and better goods than a suit to fit a child about nine years old sold by the Wonderful Cheap Man on Saturday for $3.00; but marked $3.50. This is how it was.—A lady purchased a child's suit on Saturday last, Sept. 17th, 1887, at the store of the Wonderful Cheap Man. It was marked thusly :—Lot 5375, Breast 27, Waist 26½, Age 9, Price $3.50. It was pure shoddy, being held together by cotton threads, and Sheppard is free to say that that was the dearest suit sold in the Town of Peterborough for the last two years. Full particulars are given because of the $1,000 involved, and, further, that this decides who is selling the Cheapest Clothing in Peterborough. SHEPPARD would have sold that lady a suit, pure wool, for that money, and worth two of the one she got.

$1,000 to Go to the Charitable Institutions of Peterborough.

I had first decided to give the agencies a chance of jumping up my rating that $1,000, but after considering the matter and finding that never in any case have I been asked for an endorser to my paper, and that no relative or any other persons have ever endorsed my paper to the extent of one cent, I have come to the conclusion my credit is as good as yours, and will ask you to hand over the $1,000 to the Charitable Institutions of Peterborough.

Now, Sir, there is a good story told, the truth of which can be vouched for, but for the honor of at least making an effort to keep up your self-styled name—The Terror of High Priced Clothiers—do not allow the same to be said of you in the case above. A man purchased a suit for $15.00 at the store of one of the largest advertisers in that section of country. It was guaranteed pure wool; but after examining it carefully at home, he came to the conclusion that he had been dealing with some one sharper than himself. Finding a make of wool, differing some from anything he had ever seen, it dawned upon him that he had heard of wool of that kind, so the suit was returned. The merchant bet $25.00 that it was all wool, and the bet was accepted, the decision being left to a neighboring merchant. He found that the $15.00 suit was wool faced and shoddy back, pure unadulterated shoddy; but what of the $25.00 bet? was it paid? Not much—muchly—as it were.

BUSH FIRES.

Damage Done by Blazing Forests—Farm Buildings Destroyed.

The Minden Echo says:—"Bush fires still continue their rampage on the Bobcaygeon road north, and many of the settlers are suffering from heavy losses. While Mr. George R. Ross was in the village on Monday last, the fire approached his premises and licked up almost everything before it, burning the barn and stables, together with their contents. This will be a serious loss to Mr. Ross, his entire years' crop being in the barn at the time. Although a large amount of damage must have been done in other places, we have not heard of any other buildings being destroyed."

The Omemee Herald says:—"On Saturday Mr. T. Calvert's barn in Ops was destroyed by fire, and on Monday Mr. T. Powers barn and stable were destroyed by fire. Both were caused by bush fires which have been raging during the past two weeks."

The Haliburton correspondent of the Bobcaygeon Independent writes:—"The bush fires which were checked by the rain of ten days ago, have again burst out with fresh fury, and the neighborhood is enveloped in a cloud of smoke. Fires are within a short distance of the village, and may yet threaten its safety. Reports come in on Tuesday of serious losses. Mr. Franklin Austin, of Cardiff, lost hay and fences to the amount of $400. John Sleep and Chas. Main of Glamorgan, lost hay and fences, and Alex. Main, of Glamorgan, was clean swept, losing house, barns, fences, and everything he had; himself and family having to run for their lives." Its Glamorgan correspondent says;—"The fires have again obtained headway, and the woods have been devastated by the most tremendous fires which have ever occurred in this territory." To which the Kinmount correspondent adds:—"There are still heavy fires in the woods throughout this district and the forest is being ravaged. The need of rain is very great."

The Lindsay Post says:—From all parts of the north country come reports of immense damage inflicted by forest fires. The unprecedentedly dry season has converted bush ranges into little better than tinder heaps and fire spreads with great rapidity. Throughout Eldon, Carden and in Fenelon large tracts have been burnt over. Mr. H. Carnegie, of the Indian Point farm on Balsam Lake, had a hard experience early in the week, and his experience in fighting fire has been the experience of many others. It was with some difficulty that the strawstacks and outbuildings on Indian Point farm were saved. Roads at points throughout the north country are in many instances almost impassable, while the thick pall of smoke hanging over the land confines the view of affairs to a very small area. So dense is the smoke that an instance is reported where the bush, fences and outbuildings of a farm property were destroyed, and while the destruction was taking place neighbors not over three hundred yards away were unaware of what was going on. The streets about town have been filled with smoke so dense that it was a positive infliction to one's eyesight, while on Monday flakes of ashes were observed alighting like snow on the ground and buildings. Where the terrible fire scourge will stop its ravages cannot be conjectured unless a fall of rain should take place within a few days.

Another Antiquarian Discovery.

A curious find has been made in connection with the old Portuguese Jewish synagogue, which is being pulled down in Montreal. While the corner stone was being moved from its position a small lead casket with "1835" stamped on its face was noticed, with a number of ancient and modern coins lying on top of it. Amongst these were coins of Spain, Portugal, Great Britain and the United States, and some early Spanish coins which are supposed to have been brought out by Jewish colonists. They are in a good state of preservation, although some of them are dated 300 years ago. On opening the casket a package wrapped in vellum was found, containing an inscription dated 1777. It showed that the first Jewish congregation in Canada was formed in Montreal in that year. A number of copper plates were also found and a copy of the Montreal Herald and Morning Courier of date June, 1835.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order.

Palmo-Sulphur Soap.

Is Marvelously Efficient in clearing the Skin of Impurities, and keeping it in a perfect state of health. It beautifies the complexion, while as a Healing agent for Sores or Wounds it passes all praise. There is no Form of Eruptive Disease for which this Renowned Soap has not proved efficacious. In the Bath it is as beneficial as the waters of the Renowned Sulphur Springs. Linens and Woolens washed with it are rendered superlatively white, and are disinfected when germs of disease linger in the material. The value of Sulphur as a Cleansing and Purifying agent is everywhere recognized. Ask for Palmo-Sulphur, and refuse all others, and you wont be deceived.

Gough and shoddy. The mark of a large size foot print on the sidewalk leading to Sheppard's store, George street, was the talk of the town as a good advertisement for that House. This morning added to it, and immediately in front was the words, For shoddy Mr. Gough, the clothier, George street, made his boast that he would accomplish this contemptible trick and he has done it, so that Gough and shoddy are inseparable for all time to come. 3d71

Sovereign Grand Lodge.

At the session of the Sovereign Grand Lodge of Oddfellows, now being held at Denver, Col., a very important change was made in the law, by which dual membership will be permitted; that is, a member will not be compelled to withdraw from his old lodge to join another. It is believed, however, that this will not apply to lodges in the same locality. The proposition of the Ontario delegates to do away with visiting cards or certificates on visiting a foreign jurisdiction and to substitute lodge receipts, was not accepted. Oddfellows in the west will be disappointed in the decision of the Sovereign Grand Lodge to hold its next session in Los Angeles, California.

M'KENNA'S WONDERFUL EXHIBITION OF BILLIARDS.

Could Keep the Three Balls at the Rail for a Week—Exhibition of Fancy Shots.

Harvey McKenna, the "California wonder," is in town. At the Grand Central Hotel billiard room on Friday afternoon he gave his first exhibition of billiards, when he undertook to play anyone a five hundred or no count game at three-balled billiards.

Mr. E. Brown took the cue to oppose him. The balls were spotted, the two took their places, and the spheres went forward and back. McKenna won the bank. He missed the first shot, and Brown followed with a miss. McKenna missed again and Brown scored one.

The visitor missed still another time and Brown got two. Then the visitor got the balls together at the upper end of the table and began a wonderful game. He gently touched the cue ball, scored rapidly, at the same time moving the object ball and companion along the end rail. By an adroit strok he turned the corner and commenced running up the long rail. At the turn he had scored 29. On the thirty-eighth shot the balls got into a bad position, and he played a twice around the table shot, failing to score by about half an inch. Brown got three more and missed. In two or three shots the balls were attracted to each other and stayed this time. He commenced at the upper end of the long rail. Down the the table they went clicking merrily. In the first five minutes the counter told 90 At the end of ten minutes he had scored 191. At this point Brown put up his cue, put on his hat and and resolved himself into a spectator.

The wonder completed a circuit of the table with 247 to his credit. At the end of 15 minutes he had 301. In the fourth five minutes he scored 140 and completed the 500 amid applause in 23 minutes.

McKenna then gave an exhibition of fancy billiard playing. His first start was placing the balls in a diamond and making a double shot without a cushion. This he did by making a nice double draw. Then he placed the balls in a square and did the same. The next shot was a forced follow, going three quarter lengths of of the table, taking two cushions and scoring double on the balls in right hand corner of the upper end. He then made a brilliant shot. The three balls were placed along the cushion and the cue ball behind about three inches out. With a stroke of a master he drove the object ball against that in front of it and that in turn gave its impact to the next, while both it, the object ball and the cue ball went out to the middle of the table. The cue ball, however, had an immense amount of English on it, and on recovering from the impetus given by the cushion, proceeded to go back and meet the third ball, which by this time was coming back from the lower end of the table. When the draw shot was discovered, they took the discoverer for a wizard. McKenna has out done the draw, for he makes a follow and draw combined. Among the other fancy shots made, was scoring off the object ball into a hat, scoring off the object ball on a ball held three feet above the table, scoring off the object ball on the third at the other end of the table after the cue ball had traversed the entire distance, not on the table, but on the rail. On coming to the end, it rolled off and scored, as if possessed of intelligence. A double kiss that was made showed how the English might be reversed. The grand finale was scoring off the object ball, and sending the cue ball flying across the room to the others. This was greeted with loud applause.

In the evening another exhibition of three-balled billiards was given. Mr. Osgoode, of the Lock Works, was McKenna's opponent. He didn't get a shot. McKenna travelled the balls around the table twice, completing his five hundred in twenty five minutes. An exhibition of the balk line game was given, and he concluded with another exhibition of fancy shots.

McKenna was born at Detroit, Mich, 28 years ago. When but a boy he crossed the Rockies to California, and has lived there until two years ago, when he came east to astonish everybody. He proposed to Maurice Daly, of New York, to play any amateur in the city 500 or no count in three balled billiards. Daly scarcely knew what to think of it but gave McKennan a trial. He was tested and ran 413, 645, and 803 in three consecutive innings. A few days after he played Heiser, spotting the balls at every 100. He defeated his opponent by 500 to 417. After this he played an amateur 1000 or no count, running. He was now famous. His run of 2401 in a few days after gave him the unquestioned championship of the world in three balled billiards, the highest up to that time being 1553 made by Vignaux, of Paris, at the time he defeated Slosson. Since his appearance in New York he has played and defeated Sexton. During the last year he has been giving exhibitions at various places:—Boston, Detroit, Minneapolis, Montreal, and in other cities.

He will give another exhibition in the Grand Central billiard room this evening commencing at 8 o'clock.

THE INTEREST INCREASING.

In the Mission Services Being Held at St. Luke's.

On Friday evening a large and mixed congregation gathered at St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, to hear the address by the Missioner, the Rev. E. P. Crawford.

As usual the first half hour was spent in singing the hymns, which are an attractive feature of the services. The rev. gentleman read three passages from Scripture, as follows:—2nd Corinthians 7, 10; 1st St. John 1,8,10, and 2nd Corinthians 13, 5, on which he based his remarks. His address was on repentance. By apt illustrations he showed the difference between the godly sorrow that led to salvation, which was not to be repented of, and the worldly sorrow that led to death. He was very impressive at times, bringing home to his hearers the fact that they were sinners. He referred to the pharisaical pride of old and said he feared that spirit was still abroad in the Church. Men believed that all others were sinners, but not themselves. They did not know themselves, in a spiritual sense, though in a wordly sense they knew themselves pretty well. Men should stop and take stock with themselves as to how they stood with God. He advised men to let their business go to the dogs for a week, if necessary to find how they stood; they would have to let it go sometime, and they had better do it now. He asked them to look in the mirror of God's Word and compare themselves with the standard there, and that Christ was the true standard. Many who thought they were very good and model Christians, when they examined themselves by the Ten Commandments, found how far short they came.

The Missioner delivers his message in a kind and courteous manner, though not sparing plain and earnest language when necessary. He holds the congregation in rapt attention while he is speaking, they being apparently anxious to catch every word. When he ceased speaking in the middle of his address to give out a hymn the silence was so oppressive that there seemed a great sigh of relief. There is no excitement observable, and it is believed there is good work being done. He announced the services for Saturday, which will be through the day as usual, and the mission service at night, at which he said the address would be a compliment to the one just delivered, being on the motive which leads to repentance, the love of God.

Several requests for prayer had been handed in and were acted upon, making a very solemn and impressive scene.

THE BISHOP'S PROGRESS

Through the North-western Part of the Diocese.

His Lordship, Bishop Dowling, and his secretary, the Rev. Father Rudkins, arrived in the Cathedral City after a month's travelling through the diocese of Peterborough.

His Lordship left Peterborough on August 22nd, and proceeded to Collingwood, where the steamer on the Collingwood line was taken. On the 24th Killarney was reached and the school visited. Manitoulin Island was touched at Wickwenukong, where 30 girls and 25 boys were confirmed on the 29th. Garden River was reached on the same evening, and 15 candidates were confirmed. Sault Ste. Marie was reached on August 30th, and 18 candidates were confirmed. At the Sault the C. P. R. steamer was taken for Port Arthur, which was reached on September 3rd. Here 22 girls, 5 adults and 19 boys were confirmed—46 altogether. On Sunday the Bishop preached in the morning and in the evening. On the following day the boat was taken for Fort William, where confirmation was administered, on September 6th, to 9 girls, 10 boys and 6 adults; all Indians. At Fort William, west, in the same afternoon, the Bishop consecrated a new church, and blessed a bell for Father Baxter. Port Arthur was reached the same evening. The next morning the departure was made for Sudbury, 550 miles distant. This place was reached on September 9th, and 14 boys, 13 girls and 8 adults, 35 altogether, were received into the church. The corner stone of the new church there, St. Ann's, was laid with due ceremony. On September 10th Sturgeon Falls was reached. Here 11 boys, 13 girls and 4 adults were confirmed—all French. North Bay was the next place visited. On September 12th 12 boys, 13 girls and two adults were confirmed. The Bishop preached in the evening. At 5.30 the next morning the journey to Pawassan, a German settlement, was commenced. There on September 13th 5 adults and 3 girls were confirmed. The service was held in a carriage shop, there being no church or school house.

On September 14th Bracebridge was reached, by way of the Northwestern Railway. Both here and in Gravenhurst confirmation services were held and His Lordship and his Secretary went to Western Ontario, visiting Hamilton, London, Paris, and on the way back to the dioceson seat, Toronto.

Character.

The Rev. F. H. Wallace, M.A., B.D., preached an able sermon on "The Formation of Character" in the George Street Methodist Church on Sunday evening, taking his text from Ecclesiastes, vii, 3,—"For by sadness of the countenance is the heart made better." He spoke first of the good offices of adversity, and yet these were never wished for. They were rather admired than desired. Adversity was the fire in which a strong character was forged. After giving a complete definition of, character he said that three things were necessary for the formation of character. The choice of a supreme end in life, decision upon what conduced to that end, and action according to that decision. Water mark character never rose higher than its own level, and if a man wished to have a high character, he must look high. If not he would find his lower nature constantly whispering of pleasures and gains. He asked the question: "Young man, what are you living for?" What did this world mean to him? Was he living for anything. But even if resolving to live, if they would have a high, noble character, let them choose Christ as a model. Doubting was not an element of strong character. Though doubt was good in its place, chronic doubting was a weakness. If doubts should arise, they should be honestly faced and examined, not shrunk from. Concluding he urged young men to decide upon some line of action, to do their duty according as their conscience directed them.

THE GRAVENHURST FIRE.

The Loss Half a Million Dollars—Relief Being Received.

GRAVENHURST, Ont., Sept. 24.—The inhabitants of this prostrated town are facing the great calamity with composure. The homeless ones have been well entertained by their more fortunate neighbors, which with the timely aid received yesterday from Orillia and Bracebridge in the way of provisions, has had a very reassuring effect. The loss will exceed $500,000, which is much greater than the first hurried estimates, and the number of families burned out is at least fifty, and the stores and shops burned exceed forty in number. Contributions for the sufferers are coming in freely, $1859 having been received already.

A TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

Three Children Killed and One Injured by an Explosion.

MONTREAL, Sept. 24.—An occurrence has just been reported from the Island of Orleans. Four little children belonging to the family of Mr. P. Godbout, a farmer living close to the camping ground where the Dominion Artillery Association held their annual competition a few weeks ago, went out to pick up the pieces of exploded shells, which were strewn along the beach in the vicinity of the targets. While engaged in this pursuit they came across a large shell, which undoubtedly had not exploded after being fired from the sixty-four pounder gun during the competition. Their curiosity being aroused, they set to work to dissect the fuse and applied a lighted match, the result being that the shell exploded, killing three of the children instantly and injuring the fourth so seriously that its life is despaired of. The sudden shock given to the parents on hearing of the accident prostrated them and the mother has been unconscious since.

THE DANGER OF CHOLERA.

A Health Commissioner Fears it May be Imported in Clothing.

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—In speaking of the Asiatic cholera at quarantine at New York, Health Commissioner Dewoff said last night:—"This information is very interesting to us if read aright, but we do not need to be alarmed about any immediate danger in this country. The great danger is not from such cases. The clothing, freight, and all the effects of this vessel, as well as all persons on board, will be thoroughly disinfected. There will not be the least possibility of any cases arising from it. Where I fear trouble is from the following sources:—The summer clothing which may be packed in the infected districts in Europe may be sent over to this country in a ship that would have no case of cholera on board to cause any attention to be paid to disinfecting. They are left until spring and then opened. In a short time the whole country is alarmed with new cases of cholera, arising, apparently, without cause. In 1873 there were three cases of this kind where the clothing that had been packed in the autumn in the Old Country was opened here. Cholera germs cannot have any results in cold weather, but I have some fears for next spring, not particularly for this city, but the whole country at large."

O'BRIEN FOUND GUILTY.

Sentenced to Three Months Imprisonment—Popular Outburst Feared.

DUBLIN, Sept. 24.—The case for the Crown against O'Brien is that he recommended the tenants to protect themselves by delaying evictions until the legislature protect them. The Freeman's Journal says of O'Brien, "He did not counsel violence, riot, insurrection or anything that could be called sedition. He merely advised, as their member of Parliament, that they should not allow themselves to be tricked or surprised out of advantages that Parliament already resolved to confer upon them."

A POSSIBLE OUTBURST.

Many believe that the jail in which he is to be confined will be stormed and that not even Parnell will be able to ultimately quiet the popular feeling.

A SUGGESTED REASON.

Some Irish M.P.'s have uttered far more seditious language than O'Brien. Mr. Labouchere's recent advice, for instance, was clearly revolutionary. The universal belief here and throughout Ireland is that Mr. O'Brien's real crime consisted in boarding Lord Lansdowne and that to avenge the latter this pretext of sedition has been selected.

FOUND GUILTY.

CORK, Sept. 24.—The trial of William O'Brien was concluded to-day. The accused was found guilty and sentenced to three months imprisonment. Notice of appeal was given.

A SCENE IN COURT.

CORK, Sept. 24.—At the trial of O'Brien yesterday, Harrington declared that a deliberate attempt had been made to suppress Constable O'Sullivan's report of O'Brien's speech. Mr. Carson said the observation of Harrington was a pure fabrication. Harrington—"You lie." Magistrate Eaton—"I cannot allow such remarks here. If you repeat them you will be removed from the court Harrington (excitedly)—"You need not trouble yourself. I shall remove myself. I shall have nothing more to do with such a solemn farce." An excited crowd followed the car in which O'Brien was taken back to prison, hooting and yelling at the soldiers, who fixed their bayonets and then proceeded. Dillon and a number of priests pacified the crowd.

Gone West.

CHAMBERLAIN SPEAKS.

Thinks the Government Has Acted with Extraordinary Leniency.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—Mr. Chamberlain presided yesterday at a private meeting of the Birmingham Radical Union. He said he had hoped the fued in the Liberal ranks would ere now have been healed, but there was evidence on the Gladstonian side that such was not the case. He characterized the Liberal association's condemnation of the government's interference with meetings in Ireland as an impertinent absurdity. The conflict was between the written law of the land and the unwritten law of the Irish National League, and he hoped the former would triumph. He believed the League was dying a natural death, but on account of arrant agitators whose living depended upon it, the organization must die hard. Regarding the Mitchellstown affair he said that on the whole the police acted with forbearance and in a splendid manner, not firing until the barracks were stormed. He thought the present government rather blamable for their extraordinary leniency. Gladstonians were stumping the country on the Mitchellstown affair, but were dumb regarding the cruel murder of Constable Whelan.

THE UNWELCOME VISITOR.

Four New Cases of Cholera Discovered on the Alesia.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Dr. Smith, the health officer, made a careful examination of all the Alesia's passengers and found four who had escaped the notice of the ship's surgeon also sick with cholora. Three of the four will probably die, while the four reported by the ship's doctor will probably recover. The sick persons, two women and six men, were transferred to the Quarantine hospital at Swinburn Island. The balance of the passengers were landed at Hoffman Island. They will be held till all danger of infection is passed.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Dr. Hamilton, surgeon general of the Marine Hospital service, said that the arrival of a single ship at New York infested with Asiatic cholera need not give occasion for alarm. The desease is not indigenous and our climate and soil are not favorable to its propagation. Orders have been sent by the Marine Hospital service to the national quarantine stations at Cape Charles and Delaware Breakwater, to detain any vessels coming from Italy, and report the same to the Bureau.

Cholera cannot have any results in cold weather, but there are fears for next spring, not particularly for one city but for the country at large.

SCOTT ACTS, Brown's Act, Jones and Smiths Act wisely by going to KIDD's for boots—they are the BEST.

The Persian Housewife.

The Persian lady is a good housewife. She rises with the dawn, she is liberal in her housekeeping, kind to her servants—a little profuse, perhaps, but then living is cheap in the east. The keys of everything are in the keeping of the mistress of the house, and she is usually exact in her accounts. All the vast stock of conserves and sweetmeats, syrups for the preparation of sherbets and pickles in endless variety are either prepared by her own fingers or under her eyes. Nor does she disdain to be confectioner and maker of pastry. As evening approaches—the long and elaborate Persian dinner being partaken of among the upper classes by the sexes apart—she prepares to entertain her husband; she will play to him upon the lute or harmonica; she will sing to him or read him to sleep with poetry, or she will play with him at backgammon or chess, or recite to him long stories in the style of "The Arabian Nights." When he is sick she nurses him, and it is her pride to see that his wardrobe is well supplied and his servants well clad. She will intrigue for him, plead for him, and has been known to die for him. She will even carry her complaisance so far as to find another wife for him.—St. James' Gazette.

A Floating Island.

The floating island on Lake Derwentwater, England, has again made its appearance. It came to the surface of the water a year or two ago near Lodore, after complete submersion for nearly three years. The cause of the phenomenon has never been satisfactorily explained.—Chicago Herald.

LATEST CABLE NEWS.

FRENCH GENERALS REMOVED.

PARIS, Sept. 24.—Much excitement was caused in military circles last night by the news that officers holding high commands in the French army had been removed from their posts. The first is General Grandles, who commanded the cavalry division at the recent manœuvres of army corps with very indifferent success. The second is Brigadier General Allan, who showed his hostility to the present Government by censuring several of his subordinates for going to the railway station at Dreux without express orders to welcome M. Heredia, the minister. A hot altercation took place, it is said, between the minister, the local prefect, and General Allan.

POLICIES IDENTICAL.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—General Redvers Buller has written to J. V. Brunner, complaining of the latter's use of his name in the letter which accompanied Brunner's gift of $5,000 to start a fund to meet the material needs of Ireland. In the letter referred to Brunner bewails the loss of Buller and Hick-Beach's moderating influence in behalf of Irish tenants. This Buller considers a groundless imputation upon Balfour, whose policy, he says, is indentical with that of the former chief secretary.

ILLUMINATED.

CORK, Sept. 24.—Mitchellstown was illuminated to-night, rows of candles being placed in all the windows on Main street. Messrs. O'Brien and Harrington will catch the night mail train at Limerick and proceed to Dublin. When they left Mitchellstown they were followed some distance by a cheering crowd. The streets of the town were alive with people until 10 o'clock, when the crowds quietly dispersed on the advice of Commoner Condon. Mr. Harrington will return to Mitchellstown on Tuesday.

MORE TROUBLE FEARED.

CORK, Sept. 24.—Dr. Tanner, M. P., made a speech at Fermoy to-day. The police in dispersing the crowd used their batons and the mob replied with stones. A worse disturbance is feared.

LESS IRRITATING.

BERLIN, Sept. 24.—The relations existing between Germany and France at the present moment are less irritating than for some time past. Count Von Munster returned to his post at Paris yesterday, charged with a pacific message from Prince Bismarck to M. Flourens. In his interview with M. Flourens, Count von Munster said that the views of the German Government were that the state of Europe justified the hope of the maintenance of peace, which Germany would do her utmost to aid.

Canadian Ports Protected.

OTTAWA, Sept. 24.—The officials of the Department of Agriculture have little fear of the introduction of cholera into Canada from Mediterannean ports, as they believe that the quarantine regulations at Grosse Isle are exceptionally good and the system of fumigation the best known.

Five Men Killed.

PRESCOTT, Ari., Sept. 24.—Sheriff Waddell has received word from Tonto Basin that a faction fight occurred there on Sept. 18, in which Thomas Graham, Joseph Ellingwood and a man named Middleton were killed on the Graham side, and George Newton and James Tewksbury on the Tewksbury side.

Earthquake In Cuba.

HAVANA, Sept. 24.—A severe shock of earthquake was felt in Santiago de Cuba yesterday. This was followed an hour later by two other shocks of less intensity. Two persons were injured and some houses were damaged. The shocks were felt in Jamaica.

Big Balance in the Treasury.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Bonds to the amount of $1,500,000 have been offered to the Treasury to-day up to noon. The weekly statement of the United States Treasurer shows that there are $589,209,000 in the Treasury.

Mr. Bell's Recovery.

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 24.—John W. Bell, M. P. for Addington, deranged through an attack of erysipelas and removed to the Toronto asylum, has recovered and will be home at the end of this month.

A Girl Killed.

KINGSTON, Sept. 24.—A girl named Renn was killed near Deseronto by a log rolling upon her.

GRIT GARBLING.

The Lindsay Post says:—

"The Peterborough REVIEW boldly but firmly denies that Sir John Macdonald ever said "we cannot check Manitoba," and charges the Kingston Whig (which says he did) with having forged the phrase, or "uttered it" knowing it to be a forgery. The REVIEW may now deny that Sir John ever uttered at Peterborough the famous phrase, "I wish to God I could catch him."

Why cannot the Post quote us honestly when criticising us? We have never denied that Sir John Macdonald said "We cannot check Manitoba" for the very sufficient reason that he did say so. We told the Whig, at its urgent request for our opinion, that the statement attributed to Sir John that "the Government could not check Manitoba" was a forgery, and if the Post will observe the context in Hansard instead of repeating the joint-stock Grit falsification, and if it knows anything of English construction, it will see that "we" refers to the Dominion Parliament, not to the Cabinet or the Governor General in Council.

Why should we care to deny that Sir John expressed a wish to be able to catch Riel, and why should he not have expressed such a wish? No doubt many a Lowland Laird wished he was able to catch Rob Roy, instead of having to pay blackmail to save the the country side from being harried.

It might better suit the Post and its friends that Riel should have been pursued and should have slipped away across the border to raise fresh disturbances at a convenient opportunity, for then they would have had an earlier opportunity of lamenting to the people of Canada that they should have to pay the cost of suppressing a rebel—and Reform martyr.

Because the policy and the administration of Sir John Macdonald have given general satisfaction to the great majority of the people of Canada, the Opposition are driven to the device of seizing certain words of his, wrenching them from their context, misrepresenting the circumstances, perverting their meaning, and then repeating in chorus their false version in the hope that ceaseless interation may have at length some effect upon public opinion. It is a small business and not very successful.

EAST NORTHUMBERLAND

AT Warkworth, the so-called Farmers Institute of East Northumberland had a slenderly attended meeting to consider Commercial Union, and even those present were Grit politicians, speculators in search of a market, doctors, lawyers, anything as a rule but farmers. The wire-pullers showed that they could not count upon the disloyalty even of this packed meeting, so they cunning hid their real object by tacking on to their resolution the conditions that the Commercial Union must be proposed by the United States and that it must be "based upon terms consistent with our connection with the Empire of Great Britain," whatever that may be. As if these schemers did not know that the designing foreigners who are their leaders, own that they are agitating in Canada because they think they can, by representing us as favorable, influence their own people, who are unfavorable to the scheme, as is shown by their legislatures and their journals. As if they did not also know that the terms these same leaders offer are avowedly inconsistent with our connection with the British Empire, being insulting to our fellow-countrymen outside Canada, and such as no Canadian could accept unless we were in the position of a conquered country. Yet by such subterfuges only could they carry a resolution which they falsely parade as evidence that the farmers of East Northumberland are in sympathy with their conspiracy.

WE have wondered what could be the object of the Reform press in discribing the recent Young Conservatives Convention as composed of old men, when in reality it was called and conducted by young men without consultation with the party veterans, and certainly without any dictation from them. The following paragraph from the Galt Reformer betrays the motive:—

"It is among the probabilities that we will never see any more able articles in Tory journals poking fun at 'baldheaded young Liberals.'"

So the stupid invention was concocted by the Grit press in the endeavour to silence the jokes at the convention of so-called "Young Liberals" who were largely old political hacks and were controlled by the veteran Reform wire-pullers.

MR. GOLDWIN SMITH and other advocates of Annexation repeat with pertinacity the statement that the agitation is perfectly spontaneous. Will Mr. Smith ask his associate in the work, Mr. Wiman, to tell him what has been the expenditure so far, and whether any portion of it has been directly or indirectly in connection with the Toronto Mail newspaper, its proprietors, its staff, or its stock? "Spontaneity" of this kind, is rather costly.

IF the proportion of the population of the United States to that of Canada at the time of the Declaration of Independence was not ten to one, as it is now, perhaps the Belleville Ontario will kindly inform us what it is. The Toronto Mail and several other advocates of commercial or political annexation have used the argument that we could not withstand the United States.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

COMMERCIAL UNION.

The Far Northwest Sound in its Loyalty.

We take the following from the Calgary Tribune, a Reform journal, published within sight of the Rocky Mountains. Evidently public opinion there is not with the disloyal agitators:—

"'Tis guid to be honest and wise,"
"'Tis guid to be loyal and true.

We have before us the Oxford Professor's account of his visit to Manitoba, written as usual in the chastest of English, and the bitterest of spirit. One of Britain's greatest statesmen had, once for all, to allude to this learned gentleman in words of such scorn and contempt, that they drove him from England, with gall and wormwood in his every thought, but now immunity from fitting reply appears to have emboldened our democratic aristocrat to sniff and scoff at every one who does not sympathise with his crudities and bitterness. Not content with stating the exact position of matters in Manitoba he boldly propounds his own theories as the opinions and desires of the people; were we to believe him the people of Manitoba are on the verge of rebellion and will not be governed by the laws of the country. The natural sourness of the man's mind continually crops out through the whole course of his letter and he constantly travels out of his way to have a fling at any one he fancies is a little more prominent than himself; fortunately the vaporings and assertions of men like him are taken by the general public for what they are worth and so pass off into space without doing any harm; but enough of him, all we shall say is, "It's a dirty bird that fouls its own nest." Men of the vindictive bitter turn of mind of Goldwin Smith can only be looked on as a species of Dirty Bird. We generally judge of the public sympathy with any movement by the support it gets from the people and their leaders. Let any proposition take positive hold on the public mind and you will see the representatives urging it on and supporting it,—not demagogues who wish to ride into prominence and importance on any particular movement, but the real representatives of the people. Can any one point to any leading man in Canada who will advocate Commercial Union pure and simple? Why at this moment no leading public man has dared to speak in favor of it, but many have come out openly against it. Still, says one, the Mail is in favor of it, and the Globe is toying with it. Certainly, the one paper soured against everyone but its manager, is doing all it can to help Mr. Wiman and his friends; and the Globe is boxing the compass so as to trim its sails which ever way the wind seems to set. But the leaders of politics are all against any such monstrous proposition as the giving up of the control of our own affairs to a foreign nation. We are to-day in Canada a nation of Fair Traders, we are ready to enter into a reciprocity treaty with any one of the nations, but we expect and will exact fair and reciprocal terms, and above all we will have none of a treaty that will favor any people more than our own fellow-countrymen in Great Britain; that is the kind of commercial union we Canadian British subjects desire, and nothing more or nothing less will we Canadians consent to. Our feelings towards the United States are most friendly,—we know that there many of our people are settled; and with our cousins on the other side of the line we most cordially and sincerely desire to be on the most friendly terms commercially and in every other way; but the ties of nationality are, thank goodness, still strong and binding in this Canada of ours, and by no specious arguments or flaunting promises will we be induced to enter into relations with the States which would, as inevitably commercial union as now crudely proposed, would lead to our eventually tearing down the Grand Old Union Jack and replacing it by the stars and stripes. Thank God, the Canadian people are loyal to their Queen and country, and no promises of commercial success have power enough to threaten our love and affection for the grand old Mother Land.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little suffer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

THE way TURNBULL'S Dress Meltons are moving out, proves they are finer than is usually sold at the price.

An Ex-Manager's Superstition.

"I'll give you a tip," said J. F. Donnelly, formerly of the management of the Bijou opera house, in New York, recently. "If a man offers you a fair price for your horse or dog, or any favorite or pet of the kind, take it. I am superstitious upon that point. I once lost a valuable horse the day after I had refused a big offer for him, and on Saturday last a man fell in love with my Irish collie, and I actually denied him when he rubbed a wad of $400 under my nose! The dog was a great pet in my household. I brought him from Ireland when a pup. Yesterday he got caught by the cowcatcher of a Sea Beach road locomotive and was instantly killed. I wish now that I had accepted the man's roll of bills. Don't you ever refuse an offer under like circumstances. You watch the papers. You will notice when the death is announced of a great racer that the day before his owner had been offered a fabulous price for him. It isn't any reportorial finishing touch. It's a fact. I know, and I give you the tip."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

He Put Him Out.

George Ashmun used to tell a story about an auctioneer who was provokingly annoyed while in the exercise of his profession by the ludicrous bids of a fellow whose sole object seemed to be to make sport for the buyers rather than himself to buy. At length, enraged beyond endurance, the knight of the ivory headed hammer, looking round the room for a champion to avenge his wrongs, fixed his eyes upon a biped of huge dimensions, a very monarch in strength, and cried out:

"Marlow, what shall I give you to put that fellow out?"

"I take one $5 bill."

"Done! done! you shall have it."

Assuming the ferocious—knitting his brows, spreading his nostrils like a lion's, and putting on the wolf all over his head and shoulders—old Marlow strode off to the aggressor, and, seizing the terrified wretch by the collar, said to him in a whisper that was heard all over the room:

"My good frin, you go out with me I give you half the money!"

"Done! done!" said the fellow.

"Hurrah! hurrah!" shouted the audience. The auctioneer had the good sense to join in the laugh and coolly forked out the V.—Ben: Perley Poore.

A Sketch of Von Moltke.

The great strategist represents in its highest development the modern military mind. His intellect is scientific, cold, mechanical. He was remarkable in his youth for his great powers of sustained thought. Imagination, though not absent, is in abeyance. For all great scientific, even mechanical achievements, a certain amount of imagination is necessary. He is constituted to be the soul of a machine. His genius, which is constructive and not creative, is a faculty for mechanical combination, for scientifically manipulating military forces; combining, dividing, concentrating, launching them in new combinations, rearranging them, and hurling them again so as to thwart, paralyze and decimate systems of opposing forces, according to far reaching, elaborate schemes.

Yet his method is not rigid or bizarre; his plans are not laid down according to mere theory, as were those of the strategist of the Russian army in Turkey—in consequence of which defeat was heaped upon defeat. Moltke's plans are simple and general, essentially vital, flexible, adaptable, giving perfectly free scope for modification. Everything is taken into account; everything calculated for; all is contrived with perfect tact of circumstance, with regard to all contingencies, all situations, with a foresight that has appeared well nigh prophetic. Again and again during the last war he divined the enemy's plans and counteracted them.—Time.

Right now is the time to use a good Blood Purifying Medicine. Lose no time in getting a bottle of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It will do you good. Sold by al druggists. 50c.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

Is sold all over the world. It is far superior to plain Cod Liver Oil, palatable and easily digested. Dr. Martin Miles Stanton, Bury Bucks, Loudon, England, says: "I have prescribed Scott's Emulsion, and taken it myself. It is palatable, efficient, and can be tolerated by anyone, especially where cod liver oil itself cannot be borne. Put upin 50c. and $1 size.

Palmo-Sulphur Soap.

Is Marvelously Efficient in clearing the Skin of Impurities, and keeping it in a perfect state of health. It beautifies the complexion, while as a Healing agent for Sores or Wounds it passes all praise. There is no Form of Eruptive Disease for which this Renowned Soap has not proved efficacious. In the Bath it is as beneficial as the waters of the Renowned Sulphur Springs. Linens and Woolens washed with it are rendered superlatively white, and are disinfected when germs of disease linger in the material. The value of Sulphur as a Cleansing and Purifying agent is everywhere recognized. Ask for Palmo-Sulphur, and refuse all others, and you wont be deceived.

AUTUMN.

Feathery clouds are few and fair,
Thistle down is on the air,
Rippling sunshine on the lake,
Wild grapes scent the sunny brake,
Wild bees murmuring take the ear,
Crickets make the silence dear;
Butterflies float in a dream,
Over all the swallows gleam.

Here and yonder, high and low,
Golden rod and sunflowers glow,
Here and there a maple flushes,
Summer reddens, woodbine blushes,
Purple asters bloom and thrive—
I am glad to be alive.

SOMETHING UNIQUE IN WARFARE.

A Struggle in Which the Old Were Pitted Against the Young Men.

Dr. Wolf, the explorer of the Sankuru river, has just told some curious facts about the Baluba tribe, who are becoming distinguished among all the millions of the Congo basin for their eagerness to accept from the whites all the ways of living and the information that they think will benefit or improve them. Long before the whites knew them they were regarded by the neighboring tribes as a most remarkable people, and they are keeping up their reputation.

Until within the past fifteen years the Baluba kept themselves strictly separate from their neighbors. They had no intercourse whatever with any other tribe. This is very unusual, for the tribes throughout Africa, if not quarreling with their neighbors, generally have many commercial dealings with them, and even in time of war the women of the hostile tribes sometimes mingle in perfect unity, exchanging their commodities.

The young men among the Baluba finally decided that it would be better for their tribe to cultivate relations with their neighbors and open the country to traders with other tribes. They had the support of their chief, but the old men and graybeards of the tribe set their faces sternly against the innovation. With the conservatism of old age they declared that such a step would ruin the tribe. As long as they lived, they said, they would never consent that the Baluba should mix with other peoples.

Each side was determined to have its way, and the quarrel grew more and more bitter, until finally it resulted in civil war. It was one of the most remarkable wars ever waged for on one side were ranked the old men, the fathers and counselors of the tribe, while on the other side fought the youth and lusty strength of the Baluba. The sons were pitted against their elders, but in this case as in others that might be mentioned, conservatism was simply unprogressive narrowmindedness, and wisdom was with the younger party.

The struggle was short and furious. It resulted in the complete overthrow of the old men. The hatred engendered by this unnatural war was so intense that the vanquished were nearly exterminated. Almost all the old men were killed or were thrown with their women into the Lulus. Then the young men opened their doors to commerce.—New York Sun.

Vest Button Photography.

The process of instantaneous photographing is rapidly becoming an evil. We hear talk already about specialists in photography for instantaneous pictures since the "Detective Camera," as it is called, was put upon the market. The box is so small that it can be carried anywhere without the slightest inconvenience, and, as the little lens at the bottom is always ready for use, an instantaneous picture can be taken at any desired moment.

In Germany, Herr Stirn recently produced before a photographic society enlargements to a size of forty centimeters from such pictures, and all were remarkably distinct and well defined. These plates can also be taken at different distances and always sharply outlined. Young men take their lady friends on promenade to be unconsciously photographed. People, young and old, who have never entered an artist's studio or a photographic gallery will be astonished to see their pictures freely circulated. Most of all, it is to be feared that the legitimate business of the photographer will be injured by these cameras. Any possible mania or desire for photos can soon be gratified at trifling expense and after a short term of practice by means of this invention. Photographs can soon be so multiplied as to become a positive nuisance, and from the various considerations that enter into the matter, it does not seem so very easy to answer our query—"What next?"—American Lithographer.

Identity of Mutilated Money.

I am often asked whether this or that piece of mutilated money is redeemable. It is safe to say, unless the money's identity is entirely gone, that it is redeemable. In fact, one may say that money in the shape of ashes can be restored. It is a fact that after the Chicago fire ashes were redeemed. It came about in this way: It is customary in banks to do money up in packages, say of $10,000 each, and in the big fire of course hundreds and hundreds of these packages were reduced to ashes. But the shape of the package remained, and wherever the package could be sent on to Washington without crumbling the ashes, the money was sure to be replaced. It was done by nimble fingered women in the treasury department whose trained touch and sight are wonderfully acute.

It is well known that the ashes of the newspaper if dampened will show traces of the printing. So was it with the bills. These women would moisten the package of apparently useless ashes, and to their experienced eye the number and character of the bill would at once appear as if they had touched it with a magic wand. So thousands and thousands of dollars were redeemed by these patient women. A friend of mine, a country merchant, afraid of banks, placed a large sum of money in bills in a stone jar on a shelf in his store, where he thought it would be quite safe. When he went to look at it one day some time after it was a mass of fragments. Mice had got into the jar and chewed the bills into the minutest parts. Then they had mixed them all up, and altogether it was a fearful looking mess. He sent a cigar box full of it to me. I forwarded it to Washington, and what do you think! Out of the $1,145 originally in the pile a little over $1,000 was redeemed, the parts beyond recall being only the mere fibers of the bills. So the man lost only $100 by his foolishness. The reclamation of such money is done entirely by women, whose patience especially fits them for the monotonous work.—Banker's President in Globe-Democrat.

Asking for a Light.

Americans abroad who stop people in the streets to ask for a light for their cigars are more or less politely directed to the nearest tobacco shop and advised to buy a box of fuses. This apparent incivility has its merits. At the Cortlandt street ferry, last week, I saw a man with a stump of a cigar importuning strangers for a light. The first stranger gave him a match, which blew out. The second reluctantly handed him a freshly lighted cigar, but the stump was ash-headed and would not take the fire. The third handed over his half smoked weed, shrugged his shoulders and walked off. The applicant had now incommoded three persons and spoiled two good cigars. Yet, as he puffed away contentedly at his stump, he doubtless considered himself a gentleman.

Give them a Chance.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain

"Established."

As there seems to be a misapprehension in ragard to the local which appeared under the above heading regarding the "foot marks," it may be pointed out that it was an advertisement, as was shown by the advertising marks attached to it.

Review Bindery.

This old established bindery is still adding new features and extra facilities in al its departments for turning out all kinds of binding in a neat and workmanlike manner. Particular attention given to binding Knight's Imperial Shakespeare and other superior works of that description.

Jewellery Manufacture.

Mr. Z. D. B. Lafleur, Jeweller, Hunter street, has shown us samples of jewellery—a gold ring with opal in claw setting, a gold chain with watch key of the same metal and a silver brooch with gold monogram—of his own manufacture. The work is well and tastily done.

Leech and Stevens' Dramatic Company.

The Syracuse Standard of Sept. 10th, 1887, says:—"'Ten Nights in a Bar Room' will be repeated afternoon and night today at the Wieting. There is more than one good characterization in the cast of the old play, but Baby de Castro is so perfect in her pathetic part that she almost throws her elders in the background. The death of little Mary is very prettily carried out. Mr. Stevens is a clever comedian and Mr. Kearney is an effective hero."

Prize Penmanship.

Mr. Bannell Sawyer has received official notification of his having been awarded the first prize for artistic penmanship and the second prize for Spencerian penmanship at the exhibition at Ottawa of the Ontario Agricultural and Arts Society. In describing this same work when exhibited at the Industrial and Dominion Exhibition the Toronto Globe spoke of it as "the most artistic and ambitious" piece of work ever shown in Toronto.

Personal.

The Ottawa Free Press of Saturday says:—"Mr. Harry Phelan, of the firm of Phelan & Fortye, hardware merchants, Peterborough, is in the city on a visit to his friends."

The Rev. Father Conway rested well on Sunday night. Up to two o'clock this afternoon his condition was unchanged. His nephew, Mr. Conway, agent of the Canadian Pacific railway in Toronto, spent the Sunday with him.

Purchases in Toronto.

At the sale of property known as the Dennis Estate, in Toronto, on Saturday, five parcels were purchased by Mr. Geo. A. Cox. The parcels were: Frontage on King street of 52 feet 10 inches, depth of 60 feet, price $900 a foot; frontage of 18 feet on King street, depth of 112 feet, $950 a foot; 23 feet on King street, depth of 112 feet, $1,000 a foot; 40 feet on King street, depth of 112 feet, $1,000 a foot; the fifth parcel was sold en bloc for $12,800. The Globe says that Mr. Cox made the purchases for the Toronto Real Estate Investment Co.

AT ST. LUKE'S.

The Mission Still Drawing Crowds From Peterborough and Ashburnham.

SATURDAY EVENING.

The Missioner, the Rev. E. P. Crawford, conducted the service on Saturday evening, the subject of his address being "The Love of God." He chose several passages from the Word of God, bearing on His love, and gave a very touching and eloquent address. He drew beautiful illustrations from home life, which were calculated to touch the people's hearts, showing how man can love his children, and reasoning that God, who is higher and greater and better, could love His children, even though they wander far from Him, and even rebel against Him, and would welcome them back again.

ON SUNDAY MORNING

at the regular 11 o'clock services, the rector, the Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, read the lessons and prayers, and the Missioner preached the sermon. The subject was the value of the human soul. He took his text from St. Matthew xvi., 26:—"For what is a man profited if he shall gain the world and lose his own soul; or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul." There was a large congregation present, and all joined heartily in the service. He delivered an awakening address on the carelessness of the majority of people in regard to the welfare of their souls, comparing them to the ignorant Indians of this continent, who, when the white men came, having jewels and gold in their possession, bartered them not knowing their value, for mere glass beads. He used other illustrations, making his meaning so plain that all could understand.

ON SUNDAY AFTERNOON,

at 2.30 o'clock, there was a splendid children's service, the Missioner addressing the little ones in a most interesting manner.

At 4 o'clock there was a meeting for men only, at which there were a large number present. He delivered a powerful and manly address, which seemed to make considerable impression. This meeting will be repeated at the same hour on Sunday next.

ON SUNDAY EVENING

the church was crowded. A short form of Evening Prayer was gone through, and the Missioner again took the service. After a hymn had been sung, and a minute of silent prayer for a blessing on his words, he gave out his text, being from 1st St. John i, 9. The subject was "Forgiveness." He started by saying that we too often looked upon God's forgiveness as being what we would expect from man, forgetting that God was so much above man. He showed by an instance from the Old Testament of how completely and quickly God forgave the greatest sins, though their consequences followed, when sincerely repented of, and also from the New Testament, how God received with open arms and free forgiveness his wandering children. He said that when people truly repented they should take God at His word, that he would forgive them, and go on their way rejoicing; that they should not come back crying about their sins, which had been forgiven, and doubting His word and His love. They would take an honest man's word, and why not believe God's Word? He cautioned the people, however, to be sure they had true repentance, and to remember the Lord's words, "Go and sin no more."

NOTES.

A hymn book is given to each person entering the church, and a tract, bearing on the address, on leaving.

The Missioner appeals to the reason and common sense of his hearers, rather than the emotions.

He has a frank, manly way, and makes the people feel at ease at once.

He tries to draw the people by love rather than to drive them.

The usual services will be held to-day and to-night at 7.30 o'clock.

POLICE COURT.

NON-SUPPORT.

SATURDAY, Sept. 24.—John Welsh, of Douro, was arranged by his wife on a charge of non-support. Mrs. Welsh is the woman who complained the other day of not being able to get her clothing from a woman who had agreed to keep her for her house service. The defendant pleaded not guilty. It appeared that he and his wife had made a settlement some years ago. She got her share and gave it to her daughter, who married a man named Shaver. Shaver committed bigamy and went to serve a term in prison. Thus Mrs. Welsh was left without support. Her husband, however, only had $60 a year to support him.

The MAGISTRATE held that the old man was not bound to support his wife.

SCOTT ACT.

T. Thibideau and F. Lawrin pleaded guilty to first offences against the Scott Act. They were fined $50 and costs each.

ASSAULT.

R. Holland charged E. Roberts with having assaulted him. A fine of $5 and costs was imposed.

New Light.

Mr. Drury, of the gas works, has placed in Mr. A. Mercer & Co.'s clothing store and Mr. Geo. A. Schofield's drug store, a new fashioned gas lamp. The globe is a half sphere, with the concave facing downward. In this the burner stands attended by currents of air, which are thrown upon it in such a manner as to thin the flame and produce a steady, brilliant light. The lamps have been burning for several nights, and gave the utmost satisfaction.

Conundrum.

A LONG WALK.

Mr. Ruttan, of Trent Bridge, 60 years of age, missed a train at Belleville on Saturday evening and walked home, arriving Sunday morning.

A BIG CONTRACT.

The Warder says that a Toronto expert has been considering "the general lie of Lindsay." His contract was large enough without including the individual fibs.

BIG BETHANY.

The cricket match between the Lindsay and Bethany clubs on Saturday resulted in a victory for Bethany by 35 runs.

RUN OVER BY RACERS.

On Wednesday, while coming to Lindsay fair, two young fellows in buggies began racing east of Oakwood, and ran over a woman named Mrs. McArthur. She was not fatally injured.

WENT IN TO DIE.

A middle-aged woman named Mrs. Bridget Normoyle went into a shoe store in Oshawa and told a clerk in a hazy way that she had gone in to die. In a moment she fell in a faint and never rallied. Heart disease caused her death.

BRIDGE BURNED.

The bridge built last year by the Government, at a cost of $300, on the new road between Wilberforce and Haliburton, was burnt on Monday.

HUNG UP.

A drive of logs belonging to Mr. Irwin, of Peterborough, stuck in the river in the north. The men passed through Bobcaygeon on Monday on their way home.

DAM IMPROVEMENT.

Mr. Wm. Kennedy has received instructions from the Dominion authorities to make the repairs necessary in the dam which holds up the waters of Sturgeon Lake Bobcaygeon Council is moving to obtain a new dam.

BEARS.

A bear is reported to have been seen a few days ago some four or five miles north of Stirling, and on Tuesday three bears are said to have passed by the eastern side of the village, on their way south. In the 6th Con. of Rawdon a bear was shot on Tuesday after being pursued by a number of persons.

ANOTHER IRISH MELEE.

A Fight Between the Police and a Mob at Fermoy—Many Injured.

FERMOY, Sept. 26.—Dr. Tanner, the Irish Nationalist member of Parliament, in response to the demands of a crowd, made a speech yesterday from the balcony of his hotel. He denounced the action of the police at Mitchelstown and the trial of O'Brien as brutal, when the police charged upon the crowd and a melee was the result. The crowd stoned the police, many of whom received severe injuries. The police used their batons and injured 14 persons, who were nearly all conveyed to the hospital. Dr. Tanner mingled with the combatants and his hat was smashed by a baton.

O'BRIEN SPEAKS AGAIN.

MITCHELLSTOWN, Sept. 26.—The National League evaded the police and held a meeting to-day at a private house.

Mr. O'Brien, who yesterday drove to Limerick Junction, returned by a circuituous route, deceiving the police. In a speech he said, "We are here to tell Mr. Balfour that the branches of the National League will decline to consider themselves suppressed until every decent man and woman in the community is placed in gaol."

The priests secured order on the police removing their swords. Stones were afterwards thrown, injuring many constables. The mob being clubbed by the police fetched from Mitchelstown pelted them with stones and bottles. Some were disabled. Capt. Plunkett commanded the police and restored order.

THE POLICE BEATEN BACK.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—A force of police and bailiffs at Kilbarry, Ireland, seized a number of cattle belonging to the Hurley family for non-payment of rent. A crowd which had gathered made an attack with stones and pitchforks upon the officers. The police used their bayonets in their attempt to repel their assailants, but were compelled to retreat and leave the cattle behind them.

Archbishop Walsh has issued a pastoral in which he says he hopes the people will refrain from violence and continue in the paths of justice. Such a course only, he says, will bring peace to Ireland.

Everything is quiet at Fermoy this morning.

THE GREAT YACHT RACE.

The Volunteer and the Thistle—The American Yacht Leading.

By Telegraph to the Review

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The international yacht race for the America's cup started to-day. At 12.24 the Thistle was leading.

1 p.m.—The Volunteer is creeping away from the Thistle, and is now leading nearly half a mile.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The Volunteer turn the buoy at 1.25 and the Thistle at 1.29.

SANDY HOOK, Sept. 27., 2.24.—The Volunteer is now five minutes ahead of the Thistle.

2.30.—The Volunteer is now about three miles ahead of the Thistle.

Associated Press Despatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The race is not half finished yet. They passed starting point about 12.35. The Volunteer drew away from the Thistle at first and was about two miles ahead of her competitor, when the Thistle suddenly commenced to gain and is now about three-eighths of a mile behind the Volunteer.

Cars Burned.

OTTAWA, Sept. 26.—The Montreal express on the Canada Atlantic, this evening, left the track near Brearbrook. Bush fires had burned the ties and the fires were raging along the track. The cars upset, but no one was seriously injured. The Pullman, first-class, second-class and postal cars were burned. The mail bags were saved. The loss to the company will be heavy.

Immigrants continue to arrive in Canada in large numbers by every mail steamer. The records of the Department indicate that the total arrivals this year will exceed last year, the majority of the new-comers being well provided with funds.

PROMOTE PROMINENCE.

A SCHEME TO ADVERTISE THE TOWN—ATTRACTING INDUSTRIES.

A Proposal to Spend $40,000 to Erect Buildings for Factories—The Town Buys a Lot.

The Peterborough Town Council cannot be accused of holding hole-in-the-corner meetings, as a rule, but certainly things were kept in the dark on Monday night. At eight o'clock the electric light wouldn't "go" and the chamber looked gloomy. Councillor Cahill suggested that the members of the Council go in and be as lights shining in the darkness. Councillor Stenson hinted that the old councils used to hold meetings, each councillor having a tallow candle. It was decided that this would make them look too much like the Virgins. The Clerk came to the rescue with a coal oil lamp and called on the gentlemen to take their seats. The reporters plied their pencils in the shade.

The members present were: Councillors Hartley, Menzies, Moore, Douglass, McNeil, Stenson, Cahill, Davidson and McNaughton.

Councillor Menzies was elected to the chair.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The following communications were read:

From E. Harris, asking a butcher's license.—License Committee.

From J. Dickson Morgan as follows, written in red ink:—

To Jas. Stevenson, Esq., M. P., and to the most worthy Town Councillors of the Town of Peterborough:

SEPTEMBER 26, 1887.

SIRS,—I, the great English poet, J Dickson Morgan, have done you all the honor of visiting your town, and I am now desirous that you club together and pay my fare right to Wolverhampton, England, as I cannot settle in this country, but want to get back to my native land, where I can get lots of boodle! The fare will be £10, or $40. I shall, therefore, if you cannot provide the money out of the public fund, start a subscription list. I do not want to be hard up, as I was last year, and I like old England because I can live comfortable there; and I am only making a guy of myself here.

I am, yours respectfully,
J. DICKSON MORGAN,
The most unhappy of poets.

P.S.—I have indigestion.

From Wm. Taylor and 45 others, asking for electric lamps on George street.—Fire, Water and Light Committee.

From K. G. Lech and others, in regard to street improvements.—Street and Bridge Committee.

From E. R. Smith, E. J. Hartley and others, asking for street improvements.—Street and Bridge Committee.

From Mrs. Welsh, asking for charity.—Carity Committee with power to act.

From the Chief of the Fire Brigade, reporting as to the condition of the hose, and making a demand for 500 feet.—Received.

The electric light was turned on and there was a good light for the rest of the evening.

From the Toronto Rubber Company in reference to hose.—Received.

From the Women's Christian Temperance Union, requesting aid for the Newburg fire sufferers. Finance Committee.

From E. B. Edwards, in reference to the C. P. R. Co. and Wolfe street, and asking instructions as to future proceedings.—Received.

From A. Anderson, in regard to electrical supplies.—Fire, Water and Light Committee.

From E. B. Edwards, in reference to the Grand Trunk and Bethune street. Received.

ACCOUNTS.

The following accounts were presented:

Gutta Percha Co. (the old boots)	$114 00
Toronto Rubber Co., account	44 00
Central Iron Bridge Works, account	4 80
J. D. Craig, Mr Pell's expenses	16 50
T. Menzies, charity tickets	13 30
J. McFarlane, work in Fire Hall	12 50
Canadian Rubber Co., account	10 60
Peterborough Gas Co., street lights	485 00
Peterborough REVIEW Printing & Publishing Co	47 25

The accounts were all referred to the Finance Committee, except those of J. McFarlane and J. D. Craig.

FIRE WATER AND LIGHT.

Councillor McNEIL read the following report:—

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough:—

GENTLEMEN,—Your Committee beg leave to report that they have taken into consideration the applications for gas lamps:

One on Water street, north.
One on George street, north.
One on Bon Accord street.
One on Elm street.
One on corner Sherbrooke and Rubidge streets.

And would recommend that on account of no appropriation being made for cost of same, that the petitions be not granted.

On account of illness, Mr. James English has been granted one month's holidays from duty from Sept. 21st, and Mr. J. McFarlane has been apointed to perform his duties during his absence.

We would further recommend that your Committee be empowered to purchase 300 feet of reliable hose for use in the Fire Department.

Respectfully submitted,
ANDREW McNEIL,
Chairman.

Councillor McNEIL moved an amendment to the motion for the adoption of the report, that 500 feet of hose be purchased.

Councillor DAVIDSON moved an amendment to the amendment,—That 200 feet of hose be purchased.

The report was adopted as presented after a long discussion had ensued as to the distribution of gas lamps.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE.

Councillor MOORE read the following report of the Special Committee of the Whole Council held on September 23rd:—

To the Mayor and Council:

GENTLEMEN,—At a meeting of the above Committee a resolution was passed accepting the offer of D. W. Dumble, Esq., to sell to the Town the South half of Lot No. 11, north of Murray street, and west of George street, Peterborough, for $250 and as directed by said Committee I caused notice to be served on Mr. Dumble of such acceptance.

All of which is respectfully submitted,
W. H. MOORE,
Chairman.

Councillor CAHILL moved in amendment, seconded by Councillor MCNAUGHTON,—That the lot be not purchased but that the $250 be spent in filling up Spaulding's Bay.

Councillor CAHILL advanced the claims of Spaulding's Bay in his usual eloquent manner.

Councillor DOUGLAS said that he was down at Spaulding's Bay a day or two ago and that considerable filling was being done.

Councillor CAHILL,—Mr. Carnegie done that.

Councillor DOUGLAS said that there was other filling being done.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON thought buying the lot was a good plan. He was pleased that the lot was purchased, but he hoped that a small grant be granted.

The report was adopted.

MANUFACTURY.

Councillor CAHILL moved, seconded by Councillor MCNEIL,—That the Mayor and Councillors Moore and Davidson be appointed a comittee to proceed to Toronto at once to interview gentlemen from England who are reported to be there now with a view, it is said, of establishing screw works in Canada for the porpose of inducing them to locate here and that the Town Treasurer be authorized to issue his cheque for the necessary expenses.—Carried.

ADVERTISING.

Councillor MOORE moved, seconded by Councillor HARTLEY,—That Messrs. Cahill, McNeil, Menzies, Davidson and the mover be a committee for considering and reporting to this Council on the best and most advantageous manner of advertising the town as an industrial and manufacturing centre.

Councillor MOORE thought that it would be of great advantage to Peterborough if it could be suitably advertised in the trade journals in England and the United States. There were industries in England and the United States constantly coming over here either as independent or branch concerns. Not long ago a great waggon factory came over here from New York and settled in Brantford. One of the managers was in town a few days ago and was astonished to find Peterborough was so desirable a place. He said if they had known it they would have given their consideration to the location in Peterborough. This one factory employed some 700 or 800 men.

Councillor CAHILL said they were empowered by Act of Parliament to spend $40 000 on inducing the location of factories. He suggested that the town erect buildings and give them at a nominal rental. As to advertising the town, he thought it a good idea. There was no doubt advertising paid. The Peterborough merchants, who were acknowledged to be an enterprising community, were always advertising. It was a good example to this Council.

Councillor Hartley was another believer in advertising. He also tood the cue from the merchants. He thought it would be a good idea to send a committee to Toronto and hoped it would be acted upon.

The motion was carried.

Councillor MOORE moved for the appropriation of $250 to pay for the lot purchased from Mr. Dumble.—Carried.

CRIBBING.

Councillor MOORE moved, seconded by Councillor DOUGLAS,—That the Street Inspector be directed to proceed with the cribbing of the north side of the Peterboro' creek, continuing what is now being done on Stewart street, south-easterly across lot 11, west of George street and North of Murray street.—Carried.

NINE DOLLARS.

Councillor Davidson moved, seconded by Councillor MCNEIL,—That the sum of $9 be paid the Clerk for assistance in verifying, correcting and preparing collector's roll for the present.—Carried.

FORTY THOUSAND DOLLARS.

Councillor CAHILL moved, seconded by Councillor DAVIDSON,—Whereas this corporation is authorized to spend the sum of $40,000 in exempting manufacturing establishments (after submitting the same to the vote of the ratepayers;) be it resolved, that a special committee be appointed to consider the best means of expending such money with the approval of the ratepayers so as to induce the locating of factories here; special committee to consist of Messrs. Moore, Davidson, McNeil and Kendry, and to consult with such of our citizens as may have an interest in such matters.—Carried.

Councillor CAHILL remarked that it would be a good idea to spend the money in procuring good sites and erecting buildings to lease and at nomtnal rental.

The Council adjourned to meet at the call of the Mayor.

EVERYBODY cordially invited to look through TURNBULL'S Magnificent Stock of Millinery, Mantles, Dress Cloth and General Dry Goods on the 4th, 5th, and 6th of October.

MR. MCMASTER'S WILL.

Two-Thirds of His Personal Property Bequeathed to the Baptist Univer sity.

The will of the late Senator McMaster provides that 40,000 invested in the Standard Publishing Company shall be held in trust for the Baptist demoninational societies, one-quarter to the Superannuated Ministers' Society, and the balance equally between the Home and Foreign missions. The residence on Bloor street, Toronto, is given to his widow during her lifetime and she is also given an annuity of $5,000. Three hundred and forty thousand dollars is given to James Short McMaster, of London, Eng., the head of the firm of McMaster, Darling & Co., and a nephew of the late Senator. The remainder of the estate is given in trust for McMaster University, under which name the Toronto Baptist College and the Woodstock College were united by Act of the last session of the Ontario Legislature. This bequest, subject to the annuity to his widow, and to the payment to the Home Missionary Society of $2,000 for the support of the General Missionary Superintendent, and to the payment of an annuity to his sister, Miss McMaster, of Georgetown, of $1,500, and to Professor MacVicar, of Toronto Baptist College, of $400. The value of the whole estate, including mortgages and securities, is about $1,200,000. It is principally in stocks, debentures and mortgages. The personal bequests are payable out of the real estate. The provision that this makes for the endowment of McMaster University will, subject to the payment of $2,000 to the Home Missionary Society, ultimately amount to $800,000, in addition to what the testator gave for the same objects during his life. The executors are Messrs. D. E. Thomson, Rev. Dr. MacVicar, Dr. Buchan and C. J. Holman. Mr. Thomson is named in the will as solicitor of the estate.

MISTAKEN FOR POACHERS.

A Shooting Incident That May Cause a Great Deal of Unpleasantness.

PARIS, Sept. 26.—The Temps publishes a telegram from Epiral, saying: A lieutenant of dragoons accompanied by a gamekeeper, while out shooting at Raon-Sur-Plaine, near the frontier, was fired at by an invisible marksman in German territory. The keeper was killed and the lieutenant's thigh bone was fractured. Surgeons affirm that the shots were fired by the military, and say that the lieutenant's thigh will have have to be amputated. It is believed that the shots were fired by customs officials.

PARIS, Sept. 26.—It is reported that the shooting at Raon-Sur-Plaine was done by German keepers who had mistaken the Frenchmen for poachers, the latter not heeding the summons to surrender.

PARIS, Sept. 26.—Three per cent rentes have fallen to 81f 35c. The market is flat on account of the frontier incident.

PARIS, Sept. 26.—The following details have been received concerning the shooting incident on the Franco-German frontier at Raous-Sur-Plaine: On Saturday morning a party of five sportsmen and four beaters were following a path on French territery seven yards from the frontier, when a person standing behind a clump of trees on the German side, eighty yards from the frontier, fired three shots at them. The first bullet did not hit anyone, but the second killed one of the beaters named Brignon, and the third severely wounded a gentleman named Wanger, a pupil at the Saumur Cavalry School. The German officials declare that a German soldier named Kauffmann, who was detailed to assist the forest guards in preventing poaching, fired the shots. Kauffmann affirms that he shouted three times for the party to halt before firing at them. He believed that they were on German territory. The sportsmen declare they heard nothing. The officials on both sides of the frontier are making enquiries into the shooting.

SOUTH MONAGHAN.

WONDERFUL SPRING.—Mr. A. Scott, of Bailieboro, while digging a well for Mr. Geo. Hutchinson, lot 1, con. 4, at the depth of 38 feet struck a boiling spring in the evening at 5 o'clock, which roared like thunder, and by the next morning it had risen 21 feet.

The traffic receipts of the Canadian Pacific Railway for the week ending September 21st were $239,000, an increase of $18,000 compared with the corresponding week last year.

The Daily Review

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER, 27, 1887.

AWAIT THE FITTING TIME.

A CONTRIBUTOR to the Montreal Star says in regard to Commercial Union:—

"It is time that its opponents spoke officially. Now that the ministers are returning to the capital from the four corners of the earth, let us hear what they have to say on the subject."

There are two reasons against the adoption of this suggestion. In the first place it would be playing into the hands of Canadian ringleaders of this agitation, one of their objects being to make party capital against the Administration which ever way it might pronounce, while the Opposition leaders remained uncommitted, or spoke on different sides according to their audience, just as they did in regard to the N.P. during the last election campaign.

But more important than the objection from a party point of view is that from the national point of view. It is more than probable that there will shortly be negotiations between the two countries as to the fishery question by means of a joint commission, and question may arise of material concession. It would be not only foolish but wrong for the Canadian authorities to imitate the unpatriotic agitators by pretending that Canada is at such a low ebb as even to be willing to renounce the rest of the Empire if only the United States will take pity upon us in our abject self humiliation. On the other hand it would be injudicious for our authorities to speak in such a way on the eve of negotiations as to leave a chance of being misrepresented as inimical to any arrangement with our neighbours.

There is no necessity for the Macdonald Administration to declare that it is loyal to the Dominion of Canada and the British Empire and has confidence in the future of our country, for every one knows it. Nor is it necessary to make declarations as to our intentions, so as to give undue advantage to the other side in negotiations which must to some extent be of the nature of a bargain.

When the fitting time comes the chosen leaders of the people of Canada will speak with no faltering voice.

CHOLERA DRAWING NEAR.

ASIATIC cholera is now in New York, having been brought there by a vessel from Italy. As the vessel, with its crew and passengers, is in quarantine, there is probably little danger of the disease spreading from that source. But on another occasion the disease may not have yet developed on the arrival of the vessel and the same precautions may not be taken to prevent the passengers from scattering over the land. Old clothes and personal effects may escape fumigation. There is, in fact, a strong probability that cholera may invade this continent next year.

If it comes will it find us prepared? After it has come it will be too late to set our house in order, for any hasty action then would probably only aggravate the mischief.

We now have warning of a very probable danger, and we should not neglect it. The near approach of cold weather prevents there being any immediate risk, but the winter season may well be utilized to consider sanitary arrangements for the future. We are now carelessly content to do without sewers and other precautions required by the laws of health, but it would be very rash to rely upon a continuance of our comparative immunity.

We have our warning and we should profit by it.

It is stated by an advocate of Commercial Annexation that the discontinuance of the purchase of horses in Canada for the Imperial army, was adopted as a measure of retaliation for our increase of the iron and steel duties. If it were true that Great Britain so resented the imposition of duties upon her iron in common with that of the rest of the world, how might she be expected to resent higher duties imposed upon her and not upon a foreign nation which is her rival in this trade. She would indeed be justified in resenting such an insulting and unfair discrimination against her.

THE fact that a number of western cattle, bought at Albany, have died at Hartford, Connecticut, of Texas fever, is another strong argument against tearing down our custom houses on the "imaginary line," and admitting United States live stock freely into Canada. Our cattle would immediately be scheduled and we would lose the advantage we now possess of taking them alive into Great Britain.

MR. GOLDWIN SMITH is a professor of history, and should be well acquainted with its teachings. We defy him to name a Zollverein or Commercial Union that did not end either in warfare or political union.

Give them a Chance.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain

Victory has Perched on the Banner of PETERBOROUGH'S GREAT CHEAPSIDE.

And SHEPPARD, by common consent, will get $1,000 for being the Cheapest Clothier in Peterborough, having knocked the Wonderful Cheap Man completely out. "Business is business; dirt is dirt, and when it comes to throwing dirt, then count" the only original teddy out, and he will hand over that $1,000 like a little man, for the following reasons :—

SHEPPARD sells a full size Man's suit for $2.95, and better goods than a suit to fit a child about nine years old sold by the Wonderful Cheap Man on Saturday for $3.00; but marked $3.50. This is how it was.—A lady purchased a child's suit on Saturday last, Sept. 17th, 1887, at the store of the Wonderful Cheap Man. It was marked thusly :—Lot 5375, Breast 27, Waist 26½, Age 9, Price $3.50. It was pure shoddy, being held together by cotton threads, and Sheppard is free to say that that was the dearest suit sold in the Town of Peterborough for the last two years. Full particulars are given because of the $1,000 involved, and, further, that this decides who is selling the Cheapest Clothing in Peterborough. SHEPPARD would have sold that lady a suit, pure wool, for that money, and worth two of the one she got.

$1,000 to Go to the Charitable Institutions of Peterborough.

I had first decided to give the agencies a chance of jumping up my rating that $1,000, but after considering the matter and finding that never in any case have I been asked for an endorser to my paper, and that no relative or any other persons have ever endorsed my paper to the extent of one cent, I have come to the conclusion my credit is as good as yours, and will ask you to hand over the $1,000 to the Charitable Institutions of Peterborough.

Now, Sir, there is a good story told, the truth of which can be vouched for, but for the honor of at least making an effort to keep up your self-styled name—The Terror of High Priced Clothiers—do not allow the same to be said of you in the case above. A man purchased a suit for $15.00 at the store of one of the largest advertisers in that section of country. It was guaranteed pure wool; but after examining it carefully at home, he came to the conclusion that he had been dealing with some one sharper than himself. Finding a make of wool, differing some from anything he had ever seen, it dawned upon him that he had heard of wool of that kind, so the suit was returned. The merchant bet $25.00 that it was all wool, and the bet was accepted, the decision being left to a neighboring merchant. He found that the $15.00 suit was wool faced and shoddy back, pure unadulterated shoddy; but what of the $25.00 bet? was it paid? Not much—muchly—as it were.

CHAPTER I.

IN ROUSDON BAY.

There are not many places in England which are more beautiful than Lyme Regis, the place where my own childhood was spent. You have long hill slopes, covered with orchards and hanging woods; you have broad valleys, in which are peaceful hamlets and yellow corn fields; you have open spaces on windy hill tops, where tall thistles are crowned with winged balls of feathered spray, ready to be blown to the four corners of the earth by the carrier winds; you have chalk downs, with bare turf, and here and there a bright trout stream, where you may see the quick eyed water rat, or even catch a glimpse of an otter; you have straight and sturdy cliffs, looking out upon the waste of waters; you have here and there a little port with its little town; and you have, as the towering glory and splendor of the whole, the undercliff, with its bracken fields and grassy knolls heaped one above the other, backed by the crags and faced by the sea, telling of fallen rocks and undermining waves.

My name, when I was a child and ran wild among these wonders, learning every day to feel their beauty more, was Pleasance Noel. There are plenty of Noels in Dorsetshire, but none of my kin in Lyme. Nor do I know how I came to be born there, nor anything about my mother, who died when I was born; nor much about my father, who was a ship carpenter by rank and calling. I was born, I believe, in the year one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven. I never had a birthday, because no one cared to remember such an insignificant circumstance as the birth of a sailor's child. My father went down in eighty-nine on board the Invincible, which foundered in a heavy gale off Jamaica, with all hands except two or three. These managed to get to land, or to be picked up, I forget which, and told the disastrous story.

Dan Gulliver came to my help, being always the most kind hearted of men, and, besides, a friend of my father's. He lived at Rousdon, which is three miles and a half from Lyme, being then a widower with two boys living, two or three years older than myself.

There are a good many Gullivers in Dorsetshire, as well as Noels. When I first read "Gulliver's Travels," it was the more real to me, because I was sure that the honest captain must have come from my part of the country, and I was equally sure that in appearance he greatly resembled Dan.

Nobody, except his sons, ever called him anything else but Dan. Not Mr. Gulliver, or Daniel Gulliver, but plain Dan. As early as I can remember him he had gray hair. He was a man of middle height and strong build, with immense hands; he had a face covered all over with crow's foot wrinkles, and it had the kindliest and gentlest expression that can dwell upon human countenance; his light blue eyes rested upon one when he spoke, as if he loved to look upon his friend; he was as incapable of thinking or speaking evil as of doing it. Therefore he was everybody's friend. I suppose he knew very little of evil, living as he did upon his seaboard farm, as remote from the world and as little suspicious of danger as did those poor men of Laish, who "dwelt after the manner of the Zidonians, quiet and secure."

His estate consisted of a patrimonial ten acre slip, lying chiefly along the cliff. It was a poor piece of land, which grew scanty crops, hardly worth the trouble of cultivation; but it gave occupation to the two boys, Job and Jephthah, and to the one farm laborer whom we employed, Isaac Agus; Dan himself looked after the boats, of course. If the land was poor, the farm house and yards showed every sign of prosperity. There were pigs which grunted in the sties or roamed about the yards, grubbing among roots with philanthropic resolve to waste no time in becoming good pork; fowls which laid eggs and chuckled over them; ducks which drove broods of little soft yellow balls, which might have been cocoons had they not been live things, into the pond; geese, on the waste of land, which cackled to each other encouragement to get fat come Michaelmas; and there were the most generous of cows in the matter of milk. The dairy where Mrs. Agus and I made butter was always full of cream and milk; there were hay ricks, plows, flails, carts, harrows and all the signs of successful cultivation.

The twin boys, Job and Jephthah, were, like their father, of middle height, with broad shoulders and big hands; they were as exactly like each other as a pair of Chinamen; but when you came to live in the house, you learned gradually to distinguish certain little differences not apparent to strangers. Outside the farm no one knew Jephthah from Job, and addressed either at random as Job or Jephthah. They had blue eyes, like their father, light brown hair and a gentle way, which they inherited. But they exaggerated the paternal characteristics. His gentleness became, with them, slowness; his taciturnity became absolute dumbness.

The most frequent visitor was Joshua Meech, Dan's nephew. He was a miller at Up Lyme. When I was sixteen he must have been about six and twenty—some seven years older than the boys. He, too, was strongly built and well proportioned, but he had the other Dorsetshire face—not that of the Gullivers. Everybody knows that there are two faces in Dorsetshire—that with blue eyes and brown hair, a round face, and that with dark hair and dark eyes, an oval face; sometimes very beautiful, but sometimes forbidding and harsh. Joshua's face had the latter character. His eyes were too close together; his expression was threatening; his chin too long and square; his manner was imperative. He was a masterful man, a man who always got what he wanted; if he desired a thing, he said he should have it, and he got it. The history that follows, however, is that of a thing which he desired vehemently and did not get. Another visitor, and the only other friend of the family, was the rector of Rousdon, the Rev. Benjamin Burden.

Rousdon parish contained a population of eleven souls, six of whom came from Rousdon Farm. Its yearly value was £35. There was also a house with a bit of glebe land. The house was a cottage; the glebe land was a garden cultivated by the rector himself. He had an orchard, the apples of which he sold for cider, a fruit and vegetable garden, two or three pigs, some fowls, and sometimes, the gift of his church warden, some ducks. He was a bachelor and lived entirely alone in his cottage. His church was a barn with a thatched roof, kept from falling down by Dan and the boys. The old pews were worm eaten; the pulpit was tottering; the broken windows were repaired with oiled paper; the covers were dropping off the church Bible and prayer book; his surplice was in rags; there was no church plate; and the one weekly service was a duet between himself and Dan, who was at once his clerk and his church warden. The old rector wore a wig on Sundays; on other days he tied up his head in a handkerchief; he never forgot his cloth or went without a cassock; though that garment was in rags; he had the dignity of his profession, though he had forgotten all his learning, ceased to take any delight in books, and was nothing but a gardener, a rustic and a peasant priest.

Our house, at the back of which lay the farm yard, was a good sized six roomed house, with a thatched roof. The windows in the front looked out upon Rousdon bay, which lay about eighty feet below us. They opened on hinges, and the small panes, many of which were bull's eyed, were set in heavy laden frames. There was a great porch, beside which flourished the finest fuchsia tree—ten feet high and ten feet across—that ever was seen. There was a sloping garden in front, where I grew beans, peas and cabbages, with all kinds of simple flowers. We were quite rich people. When the distress was deep all over the country we felt none. We lived comfortably; there was no pinching, no talk of economies. I was well dressed and well cared for; the boys had all they wanted.

Now, the most remarkable thing concerning Dan, his two sons and Joshua Meech, his nephew, was that their hands were always brown with tar. There was, besides, a smell of things connected with boats always lingering about his house; and though fishing nets were constantly spread over the garden or on the beach, there was very little fishing done.

Dan, farmer though he was, dressed habitually as a boatman. On Sundays in the summer he wore white ducks, a blue jacket with brass buttons and a straw hat, just as if he was a navy man. On other days he wore great boats, a simple blue shirt and a tarpaulin. Down in the bay there were three boats. One of these was a safe, heavy built fishing smack. Dan called her the "Chace Mary." It was a good many years before I learned to recognize in this name the French chasse maree. Dan picked her up one night abandoned in the channel. His experience decided her origin and her name. The boys and Joshua used now and then to go out fishing in her, bringing home in the morning a rich cargo of bright and beautiful fish. We kept the best for ourselves, and the rector never failed to come for his tithe of John Dory, bass, hake, pilchards or mackerel. The rest went to Lyme to be sold.

The boat which lay beside the Chace Mary was of a very different build. She would be called now—though her lines would no longer find favor—a fifteen ton yacht, sloop rigged. I do not know where Dan bought her; she was long and narrow; she was decked; she carried any amount of canvas, and she was, as Dan often boasted, the very fastest boat in the channel. She was called the Dancing Polly.

Hauled up on the beach was a little dingy, gay with bright paint, and provided with a neat lug sail and a sprit sail and a pair of sculls. She belonged to me, but was, of course, always at the service of the firm.

For, not to delay any longer a confession which must sooner or later be made, we were all of us smugglers by trade, and farmers by pretense. The ten acres of barren cliff land could never have kept us all during those hard times, even in a poor way. We were a gang of smugglers. Dan was the head of the firm, by hereditary succession. His two boys were partners by the same right. Joshua Meech was a partner by grace and free gift of Dan. I, Pleasance Noel, was an accomplice, aider, and abettor.

In the reign of great George the Third it was as impossible to make people believe that smuggling was wrong as to make a rustic believe in the wickedness of knocking over a hare in the field. To evade the duty was meritorious. Then there was the romance about the trade; perils surrounded it on every side; across the water you might be caught by the French authorities, and kept in prison, or even shot as a spy; or you might be picked up by a French privateer; or you might be cut out by a revenue cutter; or you might be arrested while landing your cargo. These things were considered, and went to make a daring smuggler a sort of hero. Lastly, all the country side stood in with him. It was he who brought over the best French brandy, packages of lace, boxes of gloves, or of perfumes; he was the provider of otherwise unattainable luxuries; he was a public benefactor. In no country inn could you get such spirits as came out of the illicit kegs; when a landlord had any, he would whisper its recommendation to a guest; the squires bought it, the magistrates bought it, the revenue officers bought it, the clergy bought it; no one too good, too highly placed, too scrupulous, to buy it. A fine and flattering perfume of universal gratitude perpetually soothed the soul of Dan Gulliver; the sense of a heroic reputation added dignity to a life which, if spent only on the farm, would have been certainly monotonous, and probably ignoble.

Why are all the insurance agents in town down on Wilson & Morrison? (Answer on Saturday.) Look out for it. It will be there sure. 2d74-1w39

Military.

The 57th will march out this evening, parading the principal streets headed by the Battalion Band. Some manœuvers will be performed on the market square.

Brake Up.

On Monday evening, while an express waggon in connection with Mr. W. J. Mason's grocery was being driven down Water street, the axletree broke and the horse went off at a gallop, completely ruining the rig. Another express will, however, be immediately provided, so that customers will not be inconvenienced.

Young People's Association.

At a meeting of the George Street Methodist Young People's Association on Monday evening Mr. G. S. Bean was elected President, in place of Mr. J. W. Flavelle, removed. The other officers were re-elected. Vacancies in the committees were filled and the work for the season laid out. The next meeting will be held on Monday evening, Oct. 10th.

Leech and Stevens' Dramatic Company

The Syracuse Standard of Sept. 10th, 1887, says:—"'Ten Nights in a Bar Room' will be repeated afternoon and night to-day at the Wieting. There is more than one good characterization in the cast of the old play, but Baby de Castro is so perfect in her pathetic part that she almost throws her elders in the background. The death of little Mary is very prettily carried out. Mr. Stevens is a clever comedian and Mr. Kearney is an effective hero."

Established.

GOUGH AND SHODDY.—The mark of a large sized foot print on the sidewalk, leading to Sheppard's store on George street, was the talk of the town, as a good advertisement for that house. This morning added to it, and in front, were the words "for shoddy." Mr. Gough, the clothier, George street, made his boast freely that he would accomplish this contemptible trick, and he has done it. So that Gough and shoddy are inseparable for a long time to come.

Mr. Gough wishes it distinctly understood that the REVIEW is not responsible for the above. Mr. Sheppard has it inserted as an advertisement and was charged the regular rate for it. Facts, and not insinuations, will give any man the confidence of the public. The big foot was a decided mis-step. 1d75

St. Luke's Mission.

A large number of people gathered into St. Luke's Church on Monday evening to take part in the mission services being held there. Singing occupied the time till 8 o'clock, when the missioner, the Rev. E. P. Crawford, gave out the hymn, "Lord, I hear of showers of blessing,' The subject of his address was "Conversion." He dealt with it in a plain and practical way, showing it in a light that will probably be of benefit to his hearers. He likened it to a man going along a road and stopping, and turning around and going the other way. He said there was really only one road, and men were either going one direction or the other: Either from or towards God. Towards God was happiness, blessing, honor and glory; away from Him was misery. He made earnest and loving appeals to the people to return to their loving Heavenly Father. The services will be continued every night during the week.

ON the 4th, 5th, and 6th of October, look out for the New Belmont, Jockey Club, Murray Hill, and Volunteer Hats, at TURNBULL'S Millinery Opening.

SCOTT ACT.

Another Case Before the Court—No Evidence so Far.

I. Meron was before the Court this morning on the charge of a second violation of the Scott Act, between 20th and 23rd, both dates inclusive. He pleaded not guilty. Several witnesses were examined by Crown Attorney Wood. Most of them swore that they had not been near the place for weeks. A young man named Roberts was examined. After giving his testimony he retired. Detective Rossiter and Attorney Wood had a consultation and Roberts was recalled, when the following colloquy took place:

Mr. WOOD—You were drunk last Wednesday?

WITNESS—Yes, sir.

Mr. WOOD—You went to Meron's and got drunk, didn't you?

WITNESS—No, sir, I was drunk when I went there.

Mr. WOOD—Very drunk?

WITNESS—Pretty drunk.

Mr. WOOD—Did you ask for any liquor?

WITNESS—Yes, sir.

The MAGISTRATE—Can you remember what you do when you are drunk?

WITNESS—Yes, sir.

While this was going on John Fry appeared in Court none too sober, as a witness. He gave his testimony swearing that he had nothing to drink at Meron's for three weeks. He couldn't get into the bar the last time he tried. He then asked for his fee. He said that he was losing his time and couldn't afford to come here for nothing.

The MAGISTRATE said he would get 50 cents from Mr. Macdonald.

The WITNESS said that would not pay him. He had just left work. He had a border up on a stepladder ready to put on the wall and the whole thing was spoiled when he was summoned here.

The MAGISTRATE advised the witness, if he valued his life not to climb a stepladder to-day.

WITNESS—(Persuasively) Can't you get Macdonald to give me the 50 cents now?

The DEFENDANT was sworn. He said that he had sold no intoxicating liquor since the 19th, when he was fined. After coming from the court he went home, told his wife he was going to stop selling, and had thrown beer and whiskey into the creek.

The case was enlarged till to-morrow, when more witnesses will appear.

IT is enough, simply, to tell the public that Miss Mahoney has been doing her best to make TURNBULL'S Millinery Opening a Grand Success. Remember the days are Oct. the 4th, 5th and 6th.

Address and Reply.

An address, handsomely engrossed, was sent from the Woman's Christian Temperance Union to Mrs. J. W. Flavelle, formerly Treasurer of the Union, who lately moved to Toronto. It was as follows:—

"PETERBOROUGH W. C. T. U.

"FOR GOD AND HOME AND NATINE LAND!

"Mrs. J. W. Flavelle, Toronto.

"DEAR SISTER,—In your removal from our Union we feel that we lose a staunch supporter. The duties of you office as Treasurer have been faithfully discharged.

"While sometimes prevented by personal affliction from actively participating in different lines of work, we have always felt assured of your abiding devotion to the cause. We pray that in the new sphere into which Providence has guided you, renewed physical strength may be granted by the Great Physician, and that fresh fields of usefulness may be found awaiting your cultivating hand.

"When the sowing and the reaping have been done here, and the faithful gather at Heaven's Harvest Home, may it be yours to bring the trophies of a life and, laying them at the feet of the Great Husbandman, to say, 'Master behold my sheaves.'

"Signed on behalf of the Union,

"M. J. SANDERSON, Pres.
"A. E. PRICE, Secretary.

The following reply has been received by Miss Sanderson, President of the Union:—

"Miss Sanderson.

"DEAR FRIEND.—Your kind letter accompanied by the beautiful and unexpected memorial from the Union reached me some time ago. Please convey to the ladies my heartfelt gratitude for the remembrance and their too great appreciation of my work. It made me feel more lonely than anything that has taken place since I left Peterborough, but at the same time gave me more pleasure than I can express. Please assure the ladies of my continued sympathy in all that interests them. Praying that our God may abundantly bless every every line of work that you may take up.

"I am yours very sincerely,
"C. FLAVELLE."

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

Is sold all over the world. It is far superior to plain Cod Liver Oil, palatable and easily digested. Dr Martin Miles Stanton, Bury Bucks, London, England, says: "I have prescribed Scott's Emulsion, and taken it myself. It is palatable, efficient, and can be tolerated by anyone, especially where cod liver oil itself cannot be borne. Put upin 50c. and $1 size.

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered livers misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existance. It is easily put out of order. Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents

A CAREER OF CRIME.

Short Biography of Edward Gahan, the Vitriol Thrower.

The detectives have, since the arrest of the man who threw vitriol into the face of Louis Sievert, jr., been making inquiries into his antecedents. The first step taken was to forward a portrait of the prisoner to Scotland Yard, London, with an accurate description of him. A farmer named Dudman, living near Peterborough, who was visited by the vitriol thrower just before his visit to Toronto, was also communicated with. The Scotland Yard officers recognized in the picture the features of Edward Gahan, a noted forger and thief, who had been several times convicted. The name he gave to the police here was Graham, and he has also at times assumed the names of Ward, Baker and Preston. His record in England shows a persistency in crime. In 1872 Graham was convicted of forgery, and sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment. In 1874 he was again convicted of forgery, and sentenced to seven years' penal supervision. After being released from penal servitude, and during the years of supervision, he was caught in the act of committing larceny in a dwelling. For this crime he was given seven years' penal servitude. He was discharged on July 14th, 1887.

A communication which has been received from Mr. Dudman, of Peterborough, gives the early history of Graham before he started on his career of crime. His father was a colonel in the Royal Artillery. Gahan was born in Halifax. Col. Gahan was killed in the Crimean war, leaving his son an orphan at the age of seventeen. The widow, not being in sufficiently wealthy circumstances to keep young Gahan in idlensss, put him to learn farming with Mr. Dudman, of Peterborough. Here he stayed for two years, but was not able to do much, as he suffered from St. Vitus' dance and epileptic fits. The doctor who attended him recommended that he be sent to an asylum. Young Gahan was accordingly sent to the asylum in Quebec. Shortly afterwards, through what Mr. Dudman characterizes the mistaken kindness of some friends, Gahan was taken from the asylum and a position was obtained for him in the Union Bank at Quebec. There he soon got into trouble and had to leave in disgrace. He disappeared, a d was subsequently heard of in Chicago, Chatham and then in England. That was twenty years ago. Two days before the vitrol throwing in Toronto, Gahan turned up at Dudman's farm in Peterborough. He met his former employer and implored him to assist him to the Western States. Mr. Dudman gave him a ticket for Toronto, and that was the last he saw of him.

The trial for vitrol throwing will probably take place on Friday at the Police Court.—Toronto Mail.

W. C. T. U.

The regular meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union was held on Monday. It was opened by the President with singing, reading 9th Psalm and prayer. Mrs. Smart read a communication from Mrs. Chisholm, of Ottawa, requesting the appointment of delegates to attend the Provincial Convention to be held on Oct. 11th, 12th and 13th, at Napanee. In response Mesdames Rutherford, Price and Fitzgerald were chosen as representatives of the Union at said convention. A resolution was unanimously carried thanking Mr. W. J. Mason for contribution of sugar, and Messrs. Robinson and Ostrom for grapes for the entertainment at Y. M. C. A. hall on Sept. 15 Another resolution was most cordially endorsed, thanking Mr. John Coob for engrossing a memorial to Mrs. J. W. Flavelle, late Treasurer of the Union. The advisability of securing a tent, providing meals and distributing temperance literature on the grounds during time of Central Exhibition was talked over and a committee appointed to make necessary preparations. Heating the hall was next discussed. Mrs. Hotchkiss, member of a Union in New Haven, Conn., gave an interesting and very instructive address concerning the aspects of work on the American side of the lines, and also concerning the intelligent views which all Christians should cultivate regarding the broadest meaning of the command, "Thou shalt not kill," which command she argued as being constantly violated by those who uphold and carry on the traffic in intoxicating liquors. Election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. A. Rutherford; Vice-Presidents, Mesdames Stratton and Fife; Sec.-Treas., Mrs. J. Kendry, and Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Smart. The thanks of the Union is most heartily tendered to the friends who have so generously contributed literature for the lumbermen.

Carrier Pigeons in war.

Steps have been taken in nearly all European countries to establish military communication by means of carrier pigeons in time of war. England, France, Germany, Belgium and Italy have definitely organized military carrier pigeon services, and some have subsidized the private training establishments with the right to use the pigeons in war.

This method of communicating originated in China, or, at least, in the east, and it was most likely in use by the ancient Arabians. William of Orange and Napoleon I used these messengers during their wars; but the greatest service was that rendered in 1870 between Paris and Tours.—Public Service Review.

The traffic receipts of the Grand Trunk Railway for the week ending September 17th were $426,095, an increase of $35 911 compared with the corresponding week last year.

THE YACHT RACE.

The Volunteer Wins by Over 19 Minutes —Was the Thistle Doctored?

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The Thistle was badly handicapped in the reach by the backwater from the steamers, which was rendered doubly bad by the flood tide setting against her. The lightship was turned as follows:—

Volunteer 3.43.12
Thistle 1.01.15

With booms to starboard the Volunteer came swiftly back to the Hook, and had almost reached the buoy before her rival had rounded the lightship. It was a procession, not a race. The Volunteer rounded buoy 8¼ at 4.35.30, gybed to port and set her spinnaker to starboard amid another deafening cheer.

Accompanied by nearly 500 vessels, the Boston sloop sweeps majestically down to the finish at buoy 15 between two long lines of them, reaching from buoy 10 to the Narrows.

The finish was a sight that all who saw it will remember for years, and the greeting given General Paine, his "skipper" and his crew was a hearty one indeed,

The following table shows actual results:—

	Start	Finish	Elapsed Time	Corrected Time
Volunteer	12.34.58	2.28.23½	4.53.18	4.53.18
Thistle	12.33.06	5.45.52	5.42.46	5.42.41

Thus the Volunteer wins by 19 mins. 23¾ secs. corrected time, she allowing the Thistle 5 seconds.

Mr. Jas. Bell, principal owner of Thistle, said he was not at all satisfied with the result. The Thistle, he declared, had never moved so slowly through the water. He was of opinion that there was something wrong with the cutter's bottom and she would be hauled out of the water to-morrow with a view towards finding out what it was. He did not consider that a race had been sailed for that reason and because the wind was so shifting. The Volunteer had the advantage of a breeze that the Thistle did not feel; besides excursion boats washed the Thistle to a damaging extent.

Capt. Barr of the Thistle held the same views. He said that some of the crew had been notified anonymously that the cutter's bottom had been "doctored" and the truth would be ascertained before Thursday, the day of the next race. Capt. Barr said he had sailed the Thistle every time she had been out, and he never knew her to move so badly on the wind.

Gen. Paine and Mr. Edward Burgess, of the Volunteer, took the victory quietly, but very happily. Capt. Haff said the reason that the Thistle sailed so much faster before the start was that the Volunteer did not have her centre board down, on account of shallow water inside of buoy 18.

Another Smash-Up.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Sept. 27.—The north bound passenger train on the Iron Mountain Railway was wrecked near Walnut Ridge. Among the passengers en route for St. Louis were the Texarkana and Hot Springs Grand Army posts. The list of casualties cannot be learned at this time.

PROTESTANT HOME.

A Change in the Date for Holding the Annual Meeting.

In order to comply with Government regulations, which require the annual reports of charitable institutions like the Protestant Home to be sent in on October 1st, a semi-annual meeting of the Directors of the Home was held on Tuesday afternoon, and hereafter the annual meeting will be held on the third Tuesday in September.

There were present at the meeting: Mrs. Vernon, President, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Hazlitt, Mrs. Dunlop, Mrs. Cox, Treasurer, Mrs. M. Millar, Mrs. Ferguson, Mrs. Beck, Mrs. McWilliams, Miss Roger, Miss Nicholls and Mrs. Hall, Secretary.

The meeting was opened with Scripture reading and prayer.

The minutes of the last annual meeting were read.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The Secretary presented the following report:—

In giving you this brief resume of the doings of the last six months in this institution, little has occurred that was not anticipated to break its monotonous routine. The necessaries of life and clothing have been graciously provided by our Heavenly Father, and the interest sympathy of friends in its welfare we hope not diminished. The only infectious disease amongst its inmates was diphtheria, which we have reason to believe was contracted outside the precincts of the Home, as the patients, the matron and her child, had been absent for a holiday and shortly after their return the malady showed itself. On their removal to to Nicholls Hospital their recovery was speedy. The conduct of the inmates during her absence was all we could desire. Meantime the Home was thoroughly cleansed and disinfected, but, for some weeks we held our meetings at Mrs. Bruce Ferguson's (opposite). During the months of July and August these gatherings were but sparsely attended, partly on account of the intense heat and also that some of the managers sought recuperation in more bracing localities. Two of our aged women have left finding homes elsewhere, one aged 87, the other 62. Three have been snatched away by the messenger of death, Joseph Newbold, aged 88, died 23rd April, his, an eventful life, (being at one time a major in one of Her Majesty's infantry regiments,) a striking example of the uncertainty of wealth and social position. The Free Masons of our town tenderly administered to him during his last illness and at their own expense buried him according to Masonic rites. Nor did their kindness end here, his wife, Anne Newbold, died on 22nd of June, aged 86, and most thoughtfully and generously the Masons paid her funeral expenses. Sarah Hearne, in her 91st year, died 18th September, and her remains were taken on the following day to Gore's Landing by her grandchildren. Peter Whittock, a palsied old man of 84, is in an extremely helpless and feeble condition, and is visibly passing away. Our deep gratitude is due to John Carnegie, Esq., for the interest he manifested in the Home whilst M. P. P., thereby inducing the Local House to give us a small grant. As yet we have only received $128.52. Also we tender our warm thanks to Mrs. Nicholls for the handsome donation of $150, which she sent us on 20th of September. Mr. Brodie, most kindly some weeks ago, sent a large parcel of remnants and samples of flannel, which will make most comfortable underclothing for our aged ones this winter and dresses for the children. The Inspector visited the Home lately and was much pleased with the order, cleanliness and thrift evinced throughout. To Mr. Mason, florist, we are indebted for the pleasing appearance our humble parterre has presented this summer. It is with sincere regret that I announce the contemplated resignation of our able Treasurer, Mrs. Cox. We all have felt her good sense and genuine worth. Her presence amongst us has indeed been a time of pleasure and most reluctantly do we part with her. Donations have been acknowledged to the best of our ability, some names being withheld owing to their objection to appear in print, "content to fill a little place if God is glorified." We hope before another year that our home may present a more commodious appearance, and that the necessary improvements which the Local Government require may be accomplished. Kind friends continue to hold religious meetings, and may we not hope that it shall be said of our unobtrusive home in that Great Day, "This man and that woman were spiritually born there." And the Most High at times delighted to sojourn there.

MRS. J. GIFFORD HALL,
Secretary.

The report was adopted.

Mrs. M. MILLAR moved, seconded by Miss NICHOLLS—That Mrs. Gilmour should be Treasurer in place of Mrs. Cox (should she be willing) she not being present on account of family troubles.—Carried.

After some discussion it was resolved to take in two children out of a family of five, Dr. Barnardo agreeing to look after the other three to allow the mother to work and get a home. It was also resolved to take in an old man 93 years of age, from Haliburton and another old man from Chandos.

The Treasurer, Mrs. Cox, submitted her report which showed a surplus.

The meeting closed in the usual manner.

Father Conway.

The Rev. Father Conway's condition is less hopeful to-day than it has been since the accident. His pulse has sunk to 35 and his temperature to 97, which betokens a serious weakness. Drs. King and Brennan have been almost constantly in attendance. This morning Dr. Sullivan, of Kingston, was telegraphed for. He will probably arrive this evening.

Personal.

Miss A. Delaney has commenced instruction in voice culture, piano, etc., at her new rooms, opposite the Oriental Hotel. The rooms are commodious, central and suitably furnished. Miss Delaney has acquired high proficiency in music and no doubt her class ere long will be large.

THE FRONTIER INCIDENT.

Germany Willing to Indemnify France if a German Official was Responsible.

BERLIN, Sept. 27.—An official order has been sent to Strasburg for a detailed report of the frontier affair. Commissioners have gone to ascertain the exact spot where Brignon and officer Wanger were standing when Kauffman fired. The frontier line where the shooting occurred is very irregular and apt to mislead any one. Count Herbert Bismarck, Secretary to the Foreign Office, has sent a friendly note to the French Embassy, suggesting an early communication of the results of the official enquiry of the French ministers. He is authorized to promise ample justice and an indemnity if a German official be found responsible.

PARIS, Sept 27.—Le Paris says: "Germany will have to pay heavily for the shots fired on the frontier. Unless Prince Bismarck is bent upon a conflict leading to a general war, he will have to give France full satisfaction. Germany never fights unless she believes herself the stronger. Once more she will have to make amends. It is something to find the conquerer compelled twice within six months to humble himself before the conquered."

La Liberte says: "We will get ample satisfaction if it is proved that we are entitled to it. Until the matter is fully sifted, let us keep our temper."

NO DANGER OF WAR.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The Berlin correspondent of the Daily News, referring to the Franco-German frontier incident, says it is clear that the apprehensions felt in some quarters are unfounded. Should the enquiry proze that a German official has exceeded his duty, we take it for granted that Germany will not hesitate to give full satisfaction to France. The present frontier regulations must be changed if the powers really wish to prevent similar occurrences.

YOUNG'S POINT.

From Our Own Correspondent.

FISHING.—The bass fishing is excellent. Local sports may be seen daily returning from the lake, with a large string of the "gamey" fish.

RECOVERED.—The many friends of Capt. Wm. Scollard will rejoice to hear that he has fully recovered from his late illness and is again at his old post on the Fairy.

TERPSICHOREAN.—A dancing club has been organized among the young people of the village and twice a week the light fantastic toe is tripped until the "wee sma hours." The ever-genial Walter Young is master of ceremonies.

BASEBALL.—Our local players are in receipt of a challenge from the commercial nine of Lakefield. A match will probably be arranged, for Saturday the 8th prox.

SCHOOLHOUSE.—The new schoolhouse is completed and school re-opened on Monday last. The building is a large and commodious one and reflects great credit on our trustees for their enterprise in replacing the old shell which did duty for a school by such a splendid building, and also on the contractor, Mr. Abel Hendren, of Lakefield, for the efficient and workmanlike manner in which he has completed his contract. The school has desks sufficient to seat 80 pupils, and the interior is finished in the wood. The outside is yet to have a brick veneer which, when done, will make this school second to no rural school in the county.

PORT HOPE.

ALL FINED.—For months past Mr. and Mrs. W. T. R. Preston and family have been annoyed by some of the young men and boys in Englishtown calling names after them when they appeared in the streets. The thing at last became so unbearable that Mr. Preston, catching one of the boys in the act, cuffed his ears, and yesterday summoned Henry Sanders, an employee of the G. T. R., a young man seventeen years of age, and a couple of other lads, Morley Fallis and Rob Kidner, before the Police Magistrate for the offence. The charge was proven, but at the request of Mr. Preston, who said his only object was to have the nuisance abated, the fine was only nominal. Sanders and Kidner having each to pay one dollar, Fallis, 50 cents. A counter charge had been entered against Mr. Preston for cuffing Fallis' ears for which he was fined one dollar. The Magistrate gave the boys a lecture that they will not soon forget, and if the offence is repeated, the punishment will be much greater next time.—Guide.

LATEST CABLE NEWS.

LABOR LOST.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The Moscow Gazette says:—"If Prince Bismarck and Count Kalnoky have decided on reviving the absurd plan of dividing influence in the Balkans between Austria and Russia, they will be disappointed. Russia will never relinquish her present position."

THE RED CROSS SOCIETY.

BERLIN, Sept. 27.—The Red Cross conference has decided that the prize offered by the Empress shall be awarded for the best plans for the internal arrangements of portable hospitals. A resolution was adopted declaring that in every country party to the Geneva convention there shall be one recognized Red Cross society, the members of which shall have the exclusive right to carry the badge of the central society.

A FRIENDLY SIGN.

BERLIN, Sept. 27.—Advices from Moscow say an official intimation has been received by the whole Russian press to abstain from attacking Germany and Prince Bismarck. This is taken to indicate that the Czar has renewed friendly overtures.

AN IDEA OF FREE SPEECH.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—Mr. Russell, M. P. for South Tyrone, attempted to address a Unionist meeting at Plymouth last evening, but there was so much opposition and hissing and hooting that he could not proceed. On leaving the meeting hall he was hustled and assaulted.

The Anarchist Petitions.

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—Up to to-day the returns on the petitions for clemency to the condemned Anarchists, as far as they have been turned in to the Secretary of the Amnesty Association, show about 15,000 signatures. On the list are the names of two prominent Jewish divines.

Carrying it to Extremes.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—There is much surprise and indignation at the raising of an objection under the contract labor law against the Rev. Dr. Warren, the new rector of Holy Trinity, assuming the pulpit. It is believed to be due to members of the dissentient party.

The Situation in Manitoba.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 27.—The Senkins injunction application has been filed again in the courts here, and this time in another form. The situation here is unchanged. Rolling stock and rails are arriving rapidly, but tracklaying is not being proceeded with. A good deal of dissatisfaction is felt at Mr. Norquay's prolonged absence. At a meeting of the City Council, last night, notice was given of a resolution that the city will apply the $250,000 sinking fund to the purchase of Provincial bonds.

A Rejuvenated Drama.

The Syracuse Journal of Sept. 9th, 1887, says: "The revival of 'Ten Nights in a Bar Room,' at the Wieting last evening, was a theatrical event in which much interest was manifested. The company producing the old melo-drama is a capable one, the comedy and sober parts being well assumed in every case. The Brooklyn church choir quartette is brought into service in a very pleasing manner. The play has been remodeled in several respects, but still retains the prominent features which gave it success in days gone by. It is a rejuvenated drama, with much to commend it to public favor in these days of advanced civilization."

MOUNT PLEASANT.

From Our Own Correspondent.

OFF FOR DAKOTA.—Mr. Richard Thexton and his family, who lived about two miles south-west from here, left for Dakota last Friday, Sept. 23rd. We wish them health and prosperity in the new home they are about to make in the West.

HOME AGAIN.—Mrs. S. Thexton and her daughter Ella, returned from Dakota last week, after about a three months' visit among their friends in that country. They look the better for their trip.

PERSONAL.—Mr. James McIndoo, of this place, spent three days in Ottawa during the Provincial Exhibition, last week, and visited all places of note about the Capital.

A DIFFERENCE IN KIND.

NEXT to his insatiable vanity and his literary ability, perhaps the most distinguishing qualification of Mr. Goldwin Smith is his dishonesty in argument. But he surpasses himself in a long letter to the Mail full of such trickery in advocacy of Commercial Union. He says for instance:—

"I still fail to see the vital and fundamental difference which Mr. Young sees between a restricted and an unrestricted measure of reciprocity. Let him suppose the Reciprocity Treaty, which is the object of his admiration, to have been enlarged, article after article, till it became complete, and ask himself at what point in that process Canada would have ceased to be an independent nation."

Restricted reciprocity meant that we should be freetraders with all the world as to certain articles, chiefly raw materials, not favouring one nation more than another.

Unrestricted Reciprocity, whether reached at a bound or step by step, would on the same lines mean freetrade with all the world, abandoning protection. But its advocates tell us that they do not mean such free trade on equal terms with all nations, but protection for United States goods in Canada and protection against British goods, a discrimination against our own countrymen in favour of foreigners.

Again Restricted Reciprocity did not prevent us from favouring Canadian industries against all the rest of the world and so building up home manufactures.

Unrestricted Reciprocity would prevent us from protecting our Canadian manufactures against their most formidable competitors.

Restricted Reciprocity did not restrict our commerce with the whole world on equal terms.

Unrestricted Reciprocity would restrict as far as possible our commerce with any part of the world but the United States.

Restricted Reciprocity did not place our countrymen of the rest of the Empire in a worse position than foreigners.

Unrestricted Reciprocity would discriminate against our countrymen of other portions of the Empire in favour of a foreign nation, which, as the Mail lately told us in the words of Mr. Andrew Carnegie "must partake of the nature of an offensive act and cause a rupture of cordial relations."

These are differences of kind, not of degree between restricted and unrestricted reciprocity and Mr. Goldwin Smith is acting dishonestly when he debases his literary ability to obscure this difference by a cloud of words, and rhetorical artifices.

ELECTION DEPOSITS.

IT appears that we have excited the ire of the Kingston Whig by remarks as to the Addington election deposit. They were founded upon the evidence and remarks of counsel in the garnishee suit. But we do not claim to be infallible or omniscient, and if the Whig was in the secret and with fuller information can give us a statement of facts presenting the transaction in a different aspect from that of the public proceedings, we will consider it carefully. If our information was defective we will cheerfully modify our views and our statement according to the facts. In the meantime we may say that our law is designed to protect the electors from the expense and trouble of an election, when the candidate knows that there is an overwhelming majority against him. If the candidate cannot hope to secure a third even of the votes or has not credit even to obtain a loan, we protest against the law being evaded and the electors unnecessarily inconvenienced in order to prevent a return by acclamation. The Reformers appear to have done this systematically, judging from Mr. Blake's statement that a considerable fund was collected in order to make deposits for unwilling candidates, and from other indications. If this is within the letter of the law it is not within its spirit, and it is not honest. If the electors wish to be troubled with a hopeless election, whenever any "rabid" partisan is willing to risk $200 for the mere purpose of giving trouble, the law should be changed.

THE fact that United States diplomatists and statesmen are very tricky and economical of the truth would not be so dangerous for Canada, were it not that the Canadian opposition give their support to those tactics if thereby the Canadian authorities can be embarrassed. Secretary Bayard, it is stated on good authority, ordered the release of the Canadian vessels seized in Behrings Seat last year, but the authorities in Alaska would not recognise the telegraphic message as authentic. In pretended reply Secretary Bayard says that he sent no message to release the Canadian vessels seized this year, because he was not fully acquainted with the circumstances. The Canadian Opposition press seize with avidity upon this dishonest evasion and shout that the Washington authorities prove the Ottawa authorities to have spoken falsely. They know that Secretary Bayard did not contradict the Ottawa statement as to last year's seizures, but they gladly unite with him in conveying the false idea.

THE Monteary Times suggests that possibly the cotton companies are paying their dividends partly out of capital by not making sufficient provision for depreciation of machinery. If our contemporary, which should be well informed in such matters, is correct in its supposition, there is not much appearance of the excessive profits of which we have heard so much, though in reality cotton goods are cheaper than they were a few years ago.

"SLUMMING" GONE OUT.

A ONCE POPULAR CRAZE NO LONGER IN FASHION.

A Detective's Experience in Guiding "Society" Young Men and Women Through New York Slums—An Exciting Incident With Serious Results.

"Slumming," said a private detective the other day, "has gone out of vogue almost entirely as a popular recreation for the members of Gotham's 'good society.' Three or four years ago it was all the rage. It was an absurd and never a very healthful custom morally or physically. But it came from London, and that, of course, was sufficient to commend it as a fashionable folly in New York. The pastime was simple enough in itself. A party of half a dozen young women of good social standing, sometimes accompanied by two or three young men of their own set, but more often without the knowledge of their male friends, would decide on a trip through the low quarters of the city. The time selected was always late at night, generally from 11 to 1 o'clock. Often the trip was taken after some evening entertainment at which the more conventional modes of amusement had been exhausted.

"The young women would rendezvous at the residence of one of their number, divest themselves of their jewelry and other finery, and array themselves in the oldest and shabbiest garments to be had. Nearly always, too, they donned hoods, capes or shawls to conceal their faces. When they were all ready they sent for a detective from some of the private agencies to act as guide. Then they set out for their nocturnal jaunt through the slums.

"It was surprising how resolutely nearly all the young women stood the ordeal. The very ones that I should have taken to be the most fastidious seemed to stand it best. Young women who, doubtless, would have fainted dead away at the sight of a drop of blood, and gone to bed for a month if sewer gas had been mentioned at home, would trot along blithely through streets reeking with sidewalk garbage and the varied odors of humanity huddled in 100 tenements. They would peep into 'dives' and 'joints' of the lowest order with unshocked modesty; witness an occasional street brawl, at a safe distance, with apparently as keen a relish as a professional slugger, and sometimes insist on being taken inside a concert garden or an opium den. Probably this interesting phase, or rather paradox, in feminine human nature, is to be accounted for by the sustaining power of a morbid curiosity which temporarily blunted the finer sensibilities. At any rate, that is the way I accounted for it.

"But the experience could hardly have salutary effects upon the young women. Many of the sights witnessed were indelicate, to say the least; and an acquaintance with the dark side of life is not necessary, it seems to me, for the best development of womankind, which, otherwise, might never be obliged to come in contact with it.

"Of course, there were exciting incidents in some of the slumming trips. I remember being out one night, about three years ago, with an unusually 'swell' party. There were five young women who all lived in as stylish houses as any on Fifth avenue. One of them in particular was of very high family. Two especially favored young men were permitted to accompany the party.

"We started about 10:30 o'clock, and made the rounds without incident as far as lower Mott street. As we turned into Mott street a crowd of Chinamen were standing near the corner above. They were gesticulating and jabbering angrily. Just before we reached them one of the heathen drew a long knife and plunged it into another Mongolian's breast. Then the man with the knife uttered a fearful yell and started down the street toward us, brandishing the dripping blade as he ran. The young woman of whom I speak was on the outer edge of the sidewalk. I grabbed at her as the murderous Chinaman rushed down upon us, and tried to get her out of his track. All the rest of the party had cleared the way. This particular young woman wasn't quick enough, and the next instant the almond eyed murderer was upon her.

"I don't think he meant to harm her, but she blocked his path and he was running for his life. Before I could snatch the young woman aside, up went his bloody knife, and flashed down again.

"The young woman dropped to the sidewalk, but before the rampant heathen could rush on I felled him with a heavy walking stick which I carried. The other Chinamen, who were in hot pursuit, then pounced upon him, and bore him, struggling frantically and trying to slash somebody else with his long knife, into a neighboring dive.

"When I picked up the young woman she was unconscious. All the other young women began weeping and wailing that she was killed, and the two dudes stood transfixed with terror. I sent one of them on the run for a cab, wishing to avoid the publicity of calling an ambulance, and, when the cab arrived, drove with the insensible girl to the nearest drug store. There it was found that her dress bore the only actual wound about her, the knife having struck a corset steel and glanced off. She had fainted from fright. She revived in a few minutes, but the episode broke up the party's slumming for that night, and, in fact, I don't believe any of them or their friends, to whom the story was told, ever have indulged in the diversion since.

"By the way, the young woman in question has since been married to a man whose name is well known in Wall street.

"A few experiences like this may have been as effectual as anything else in putting an end to the fad. Anyhow, as I started to say, 'slumming' is now a dead letter with 'good society' in New York."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Carrier Pigeons in War.

Steps have been taken in nearly all European countries to establish military communication by means of carrier pigeons in time of war. England, France, Germany, Belgium and Italy have definitely organized military carrier pigeon services, and some have subsidized the private training establishments with the right to use the pigeons in war.

This method of communicating originated in China, or, at least, in the east, and it was most likely in use by the ancient Arabians. William of Orange and Napoleon I used these messengers during their wars; but the greatest service was that rendered in 1870 between Paris and Tours.—

Nicotine and the Stomach.

I suppose that the least harmful method of smoking is the use of a clean pipe with mild tobacco—a pipe that has not absorbed the nicotine. The harmfulness of a pipe comes from its having absorbed a great quantity of nicotine, so that you are constantly taking more or less of it into the system. The cigar would come next in favor. Of course, the stronger a pipe is the more nicotine there is in it, and the more nicotine you have the greater is the chance of injuring your system. The chief constituents of tobacco smoke are water, carbonic acid, carbonic oxide in a state of gas and nicotine.

When a man smokes too much the excess produces redness and irritation of the stomach, and the membrane secretes irregularly and does not produce the due amount of gastric fluid. Hence, digestion is interfered with. That is the first phase. After a while the stomach gets into such a condition that it tolerates this state of existence, so that there is not the same nausea produced in an old smoker that we find in a younger smoker.

Whether smoking is good for a man depends on his organization. I do not think that smoking is ever really beneficial for a nervous man. Then, again, much depends on how much a man smokes, and when he smokes. There are certain men who, when they are tired, when their nervous system has been on too great a strain, will smoke one or two cigars; they will become quiet. The nervous man should not smoke at all. Phlegmatic persons would be least liable to be harmed.—W. M. Butler, M. D., in The Epoch.

Indignant Indian Princes.

The Indian princes have gone home in high dudgeon because, though they had traveled 6,000 miles to see their empress, the importance that attaches to an Indian prince was not appreciated by the officials in charge of the jubilee ceremonies. On one occasion they had to walk a short distance while the other potentates were lolling in carriages, and again they were jostled by the common herd, while the smallest kinglets of Europe were hedged round by dignity and soldiers.

Oriental rulers of all grades are great sticklers for etiquette and ceremony, and if the sad tale of neglect these princes tell is correct it is not so very strange that the most important among them, who, financially speaking, could buy and sell some European kings, forgot to call at the queen's palace to say good-by when he left London.—New York Sun.

ALL THE WORLD AT WAR.

By WALTER BESANT.

Author of "Shepherds All and Maidens Fair," "By Celia's Arbor," "The Golden Butterfly," etc., etc.

Gratitude among the people naturally took the shape of complicity. It sometimes happened that Dan's carts—those innocent carts laden with poultry, vegetables or fish, which Job or Jephthah drove into Lyme—were stopped and searched. One would think that Dan was regularly warned, because nothing was ever found in them. If the revenue cutter chanced to look in at Rousdon bay, the Dancing Polly was lying at anchor without the least sign of an intended run, and Dan would be calking the Chace Mary or mending fishing nets or painting the dingy, with grave face and a twinkle in his eye.

With a fast boat like the Dancing Polly, with four such handy boatmen as the crew who manned her, the chief danger was that of landing the cargo. It was desirable to know before the run where the revenue cutter was, this information was got by myself, or by one of the boys, from the boatmen of the cove at Lyme or from the fishermen of Beer. She might have been heard of at Weymouth or she might be lying in Bridport. Once when we thought she was away up the Solent, she came out of Lulworth cove and chased Dan for three long days, so that he only got away without throwing his cargo overboard by the swiftness of his heels and the providential interposition of a fog. We had to get news from Weymouth, from Swanage, Poole, Lymington and Yarmouth in the west, as from Beer, Sidmouth, Ladram bay and Dartmouth. The revenue cutter once ascertained to be out of the way, there was little or no danger of interference from any of the shore going folk.

When all seemed safe as regards the excise and a run was resolved on, it was brave to see the little craft, with Dan at the "hellum," Job and Jephthah in the bows and Joshua 'midships, beating her way out of the little narrow bay straight out into the blackness beyond—for Dan never started except at night and when there was a moonless sky. I would stand on the beach, the wind blowing my hair about and the spray flying into my face, to get the last sight of the gallant boat. Then I would go home and stay there quite alone until they returned, in a couple of days or so, laden with the brandy in kegs. I never had any fear for them. Dan knew every inch of the French and English coasts; he could steer blindfold; he could find Rousdon bay in the blackest night; he was not afraid, in his tight little craft, of any reasonable weather, provided only that when he landed there were no revenue men waiting to capture the hero of a hundred runs.

Dan was always a sailor, in manner and dress; Job and Jephthah played two parts: when they wore corduroys and a smock they were farm laborers, and slouched in their gait, lifting their feet heavily and swinging their shoulders, as those do who go much upon clay; when they were on board they dressed like boatmen and they rolled like sailors. Joshua, on the other hand, played three parts. As a miller, he had the reputation of being grasping and greedy of gain, but honest in his dealings. In this capacity he was always floury, like his men; and had it not been for the tar upon his fingers, you would say he had never smelled salt water. As a sailor, he was as daring as Dan, almost as skillful, and as hard to yield as Job and Jephthah. But he had a third character, which he reserved for Saturday evening and Sunday. Then he dressed himself in a black coat and became a primitive Methody; one of a certain very small body so styled by themselves, who met in a chapel about twelve feet square, and took turns to preach and pray. His Methodism has nothing to do with my story, except to show the masterful character of the man. He would be a leader; he wanted people to think as he told them, and he could only do this in a dissenting chapel. Dan, who accepted the authority of the Rev. Mr. Burden and the church, was, in his way, as religious as he was honest. There is nothing, he frequently argued, against smuggling, either in Bible or Prayer Book. At the four great festivals of the church he received the sacrament; he slept every Sunday afternoon over "Holy Living and Dying," and he kept, as I have said, the roof on the parish church.

It was among these people that I spent the first seventeen years of my life. Such education as I had was given me by the rector at odd moments. I could read, but had few books, and those I knew by heart. They were Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress," "Robinson Crusoe" and one or two more. Writing I learned by slow degrees; my spelling has never, I own, been correct, nor can I understand the fuss which is made about that accomplishment. If the writer's meaning is clear, why object to the omission or the addition of a letter or two? There was little encouragement to literature in Rousdon Farm. Job and Jephthah had learned, like myself, to read and write; but as they never practiced either art and supplemented memory only by chalk marks on the cart, I suspect they had forgotten both. Dan regarded writing as useful for commercial purposes and reading on the Sunday as an aid to devotion. In respect to other uses there were instances which he had heard of where a passion for books actually led the victim, by imperceptible degrees, to the gallows. Certainly in those years there were many, many roads to that dismal tree.

I did not read much, my duties at home were soon got through, the rest of my time I spent upon the water, alone or with Dan and on the Undercliff. In the evening there was sewing. But all day long and all the year round, rain or sunshine, I was in the open air, gathering flowers in the Holmbush fields, climbing among the bracken under the Pinhay cliffs, singing all alone in the woods upon the hillsides, out upon the sea in the dingy, or in summer bathing and swimming where the rocks hid me from casual eyes which never chanced to pass that way. It was a lonely place, facing a lonely sea; few ships ever sailed across that great bay save the heavy craft which brought coal from Wales, or the coasters which traded from port to port, or the fishing craft from Lyme and Beer. I had the sea all to myself when I put out in the dingy, ran up the little sail and sat in the stern, tiller in one hand and rope in the other, while the boat slipped through the short crisp waves with a murmurous whish, leaving its little white track behind, while my fancy ran riot, and I had visions such as come to the young and innocent of a golden and impossible future, lying among figures indistinct and misty.

As for the times we were always at war. During the whole of my childhood, and for a good many years afterward, the talk was all of war. For five-and-twenty years England was fighting. On the south coast the war might at any moment become more than a rumor; there was no reason why a French privateer should not cross over and do what mischief she could. Every day, before breakfast, we all solemnly looked out to sea—Dan with his glass—to see if an enemy was hovering over the coast, and once we saw a naval action. The Frenchman was a privateer; the Englishman a brig of war carrying twelve guns. They ran side by side for a while, firing incessantly, the Englishman gradually reducing the distance. At last they came to close quarters, and our men boarded her. Oh, what a sight! It was too far off for us to see the horrors of battle—the dead and wounded; but we could make out, when the smoke cleared away, that the union jack was run up where the French flag had been flying, and Dan solemnly, with tears in his eyes, thanked the God of victory. It was a brave and gallant action; they made the commander of the brig a first lieutenant for it; then they sent him out to Jamaica, where they forgot him altogether, although he did plenty of other things quite as good. This was the way they used to treat our brave sailors. Thirty years afterward he came home, still a first lieutenant, and bald, by reason of the many men who had climbed up over his head.

Heavens! how brave our men were, and what fights they fought! They cut out French ships under the guns of their own batteries. They engaged vessels double their own weight; whenever they saw an enemy's ship they attacked her. The papers were full of naval actions, which were always victories. I never saw the papers, but I heard the news whenever Dan came back from Lyme. Bonaparte was going to invade England, and made enormous preparations; the whole country took up arms, young and old; the war fever possessed the British bull dog. There was no fear in our hearts, nor any hesitation. Looking back upon that time, I can only feel that surely none other than the hand of God was upon us; how else could we, fighting against such odds as never any other nation encountered, have fought so bravely, and finished the struggle with so much honor?

A NEW JERSEY MARL PIT.

The Deposits Near Kirkwood Rich in Fossils of Various Kinds.

But, perhaps, the average excursionist or lot buyer does not know that near Kirkwood is one of the most valuable deposits of marl known. What appears from the railroad like the deep cut of a parallel road is, in reality, a series of pits, marking a broad, straight path through acres of watermelon and cantaloupe fields and swamps overgrown with sedges and cat tails. In time the whole section of the country will probably be seamed and honeycombed, as the deposit shows no signs of exhaustion. The very dust of the ground is filled with particles of the marl, and the foot tracks on the boards of the station platform are green.

The richest layers are only a few feet below the surface of the ground, and it is readily dug out. In color it is of a blackish or grayish green, and it appears to be about the consistency of flour. Its principal use is to make fertilizers. Deposits of marl crop out in various parts of New Jersey, particularly in the neighborhood of Haddonfield. Some of these are rich in fossils—the one at Kirkwood, however, is less so than others. Your correspondent was quite fortunate in securing two squirrels' heads, a tooth, possibly a shark's, and several pieces of bone.

One of the heads is almost perfect and shows plainly the form of the ears, eyes and nose. The mouth was intact, but was accidentally broken after it had been dug out. The head appears as if it had been modeled in putty and is of the same grayish tint. The other head has the ears broken off, but it showed very plainly the hair on the cheek.

The tooth is completely petrified, a greenish tinge varying the dirty ivory brown. The hollow is filled with green marl. The pieces of bone are hard and stony; one bit, which looks like a tooth or a fragment of vertebræ, of the same putty tint as the squirrels' heads, the others being greenish. All show perfectly the spongy structure, the interstices filled with particles of marl.

A few bones and trilobites, or impressions of shells, may be found by any enthusiastic seeker who visits the marl pits. He need not expect to discover anything like the enormous skeleton unearthed some years ago near Haddonfield and now on exhibition in the Academy of Natural Sciences.

Marl is made up of enormous quantities of decomposed shells. All of the eastern and southern parts of New Jersey were once probably the bed of the sea, which latter, as it retreated, left this calcareous deposit behind. The writer did not learn how the heads of land animals, as squirrels, came to be left in the ocean's old bed, or whether these fossils were positively proved to be squirrels' heads. There is no doubt, however, about the pieces of bone. Similar deposits of marl have been found on the Atlantic coasts of South America and Africa, and it is known that the present bed of the ocean is largely made up of minute chalky shells; so it would seem likely enough that the region of peaches and watermelons was once the sporting ground of prehistoric monsters.—Cor. Philadelphia Times.

The Fires.

We are informed by Mr. H. C. Cartwright that from the Nassau Mills to the Dummer road the country is under fire to a great extent, and he and his neighbors have been busily occupied in fighting the destructive element, drawing fences away and defending their outbuildings and residences from its encroachment. It has been a very close call in many instances.

Welcome to Peterborough.

The Belleville Intelligencer of Tuesday says:—"Mr. Thos. L. Bayeur, of Peterborough, late shoe dealer in this city, was married at 5 a. m. to-day to Miss Eliza Slavin, at St. Michael's church. Mr. Jos. Foltz assisted the groom and Miss Page, niece to the groom, assisted the bride. Rev. Mgr. Farrelly officiated. The party left on the 7 o'clock train for Peterborough, followed by the best wishes of a large circle of friends."

Y. W. C. T. U.

The regular meeting of the "Y" was held in the W.C.T.U. hall at 7 30 on Monday evening. The President being absent, the meeting was conducted by the First Vice-President, Miss Keele. After devotional exercises the minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted. It was decided that Miss E. Stenson's name be added to the Executive Committee. The resignation of Miss Ellsworth as Corresponding Secretary was accepted, Miss Frank being appointed to the office. The question of sending a delegate to the Convention at Napanee was discussed. It was decided that the study of the poet Longfellow be entered upon at their next meeting, which will be held on Monday evening, Oct. 10th.

Looking for Locations.

At a meeting of the Port Hope Town Council the following communications were read, as reported in the Times:—"From Charles Lavis, Belleville, enquiring what the offer of the town to the Peterborough Lock Works Company to locate in Port Hope was, and asking if a similar offer would be entertained in connection with a much larger concern in the United States to locate a branch of a much more extended line of goods. He asked for the particulars of the offer to the Lock Works, and thought he could arrange for the location of as good a business employing as many hands, on the same terms. From W. J. Reid, Gananoque, asking if there were any capitalists in Port Hope who would go into the carriage axle business. There were men in Gananoque who thoroughly understand the business who might be induced to start in Port Hope with a little help."

On the 4th, 5th, and 6th of October, look out for the New Belmont, Jockey Club, Murray Hill, and Volunteer Hats, at TURNBULL'S Millinery Opening.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

THE MERON CASE.

The Evidence Taken This Morning—The Case Dismissed.

The Meron case was resumed at the Police Court this morning.

About ten employees of the Lock Works were examined, but all swore that they had nothing to drink at Meron's.

The only evidence against the defendant was that given by D. Moore. He swore that a farmer from Ennismore met him on the street and asked him if he could "get something." The witness replied that he could, and the Ennismore farmer gave him a tin pail. The witness swore he went to Meron's, asked for moxie, and got about three half pints for a quarter. He could not swear what it was as he didn't taste it. He knew that this mixed stuff was enough to craze one, and thinking it was mixed stuff prevented his taking a "good pull at it." He gave the farmer the pail and its contents.

The DEFENDANT was called in defence He swore that since Monday he ha'l sold no intoxicating liquor, not having any in the house. He accounted for the evidence of the last witness by supposing a trick had been played. As for moxie, he sold that, but it was made out of ginger ale and sarsaparilla. If a man wanted a big drink he would put a bottle of each in a glass and charge ten cents. Usually he put a half bottle of each in a glass and charged five cents.

His WORSHIP—You say you sold no intoxicating liquor since November the 19th.

WITNESS—Yes, sir.

His WORSHIP—Then what do you sell?

WITNESS—Pigs feet. (Laughter.)

His WORSHIP—I mean what do you sell to drink?

WITNESS—Soft stuff, such as ginger ale, lemonade and such like.

ROBT. DUNCAN was also called in defence He said that he went down to Meron's the day he was fined and found the bar closed. He was in there since but Meron would not sell anything. Meron said he didn't keep it.

The case was dismissed.

Military.

The 57th Peterborough Rangers had their first march out of the season on Tuesday evening, and as the regiment headed by its splendid Band of 24 instruments marched down George street, it made a splendid martial appearance and many praiseworthy encomums were passed upon the redcoats by the crowds which lined the street. After marching through several streets the Battalion was put through a number of Battalion movements by Lieut-Col. Rogers on the market square, which was kindly lit up by electric light. The "changing of front" and "deploying," as well as the other manoevres performed by the Battalion were remarkably well executed. The marching in line was particularly well done, the dressing in this movement being hard for even the best regular troops to do perfectly. It is quite apparent that the 57th has been recruited by men of good physique, and their drill and development are a credit to their officers and the town. It is, perhaps, worthy of suggestion that the present Glengarry forage cap worn by the men might be improved by a more suitable and pretentious headgear. The well-known shako worn by the British Fusiliers would be very acceptable to the men.

Accident.

This afternoon at a quarter after three o'clock, while the wife and daughter of Mr. John Garbutt, Smith, were driving down Water street, some part of the harness gave way and the horse became unmanageable and galloped away at a furious pace. At the Bank of Montreal the buggy was overturned and the occupants were thrown out. They were taken into Mr. Lewis' house, where Dr. Boucher attended them. Mrs. Garbutt suffers from a deep gash a little below the left knee, and Miss Garbutt received some painful bruises Neither, however, was dangerously hurt

Gospel Meeting.

Mr. Case, from Bournemouth, England, will address a meeting in the Gospel Hall, over China Hall, to-night, Wednesday, Sept. 28th, at 8 o'clock. All are invited. Subject: "Spiritual Photography."

EVERYTHING New, Rich and Rare in Millinery Goods will be on display at TURNBULL'S Millinery Opening.

The Mission in Ashburnham.

The mission is still going on in St. Luke's Church. The address last niget was on "Faith." To-night the subject will be "Obedience." All are welcomed.

TURNBULL'S Millinery Opening days are Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, the 4th, 5th and 6th of Oct.

AN AUGUST TWILIGHT.

Now, while the evening mists above the ground
Rise shoulder high, and spread with swift increase,
How stealthily the twilight steals around,
Infolding all in the sweet zone of peace!
One white star blinks beside the calm faced moon,
And one above the bar of silvery gray
Within the west, which, slowly narrowing, soon
Shows like a chink in the closed doors of day.
And, as for love of these, one passionate bird
Pours forth a passionate song so sad and sweet
From the near dewy brake. The leaves are stirred
With the faint pulsing airs that only beat,
And do not blow; while some sad dog's deep bay
Goes o'er the fields across the night away.

DEATH OF A MEMBER.

Brother Gardner Makes a Few Remarks Concerning the Deceased.

"It ar' my painful dooty to announce another death among de members of dis club," said Brother Gardner as the meeting opened. "Unperceived Watson, an honorary member residin' at Griffin, Ga., ar' no mo' on airth. I hev bin notified by letter dat he passed away a week ago. De steward will drape de red stool wid de usual emblem of mournin', an' if de deceased was behind on his dues he will draw a blue mark fru de account.

"I knowed Brudder Watson. In his death de world has lost a purty fa'r sort o' man. While he paid his debts to de last cent, no white man could keep chickens widin' two miles of him. While you could trust him wid a hoss, he nebber lost an opportunity to pick up a pig. He was skeercely eber absent from de Thursday ebenin' prayer meetin', but you didn't want to leave a bone handled umbrella whar' he could pick it up.

"Brudder Watson was powerful kind to his family, but at de same time he didn't lose sight of de fackt dat his three chill'n war' bowlegged an' his wife crosseyed. He figgered it down dat some of 'em would be sick about once a week an' dat deir shoes would w'ar out about so often.

"Brudder Watson didn't expeck too much of dis cold world. If he traded mules unsight an' unseen he went out to his stables in de mawnin' prepared to see a corpse. If he put up a dollar on de string game he wisely figgered dat de odder fellar had eighty-four chances to his sixteen. He realized dat de winter brought chilblains and de summer musquitoes, an' he sought to put up wid boaf widout complaint.

"I shall pronounce no eulogy ober his remains. While he was anxious to lib on in order to enjoy wattermellyons, green co'n, 'possums an' odder luxuries of life, he knowed dat de sooner he died de longer he could rest Sunday mawnings an' de less wood he'd hev to cut to keep de cabin fiah goin'. It ar' needless to pass resolushuns of sympathy fer his wife. She figgers on our sympathy, while at de same time she doan' reckon on gettin' a cent of our money. It ar' needless to resolve dat our loss ar' Brudder Watson's gain. He took his chances. We doan' know which way he went, an' we probably nebber shall."—Detroit Free Press.

Japanese Jinrickishas.

And now let us take a sampan and go ashore. Landing at the junction of the foreign and native towns the first sight which presents itself to us is a row of about thirty or more jinrickishas (man power carriages), the owners of which crowded around us at once and intimated that their vehiches were at our disposal. The jinrickisha (originally the invention of an American) is the carriage of the country, and is used by all classes. It consists of a light body, similar to that of a baby carriage, with an adjustable top and a neat cushion on the seat, under which is a receptacle for baggage. The body is frequently either finely lacquered or neatly ornamented with brass. It is mounted on two light, high wheels and attached to a pair of shafts which are connected at the ends by a cross piece. Stepping into one the owner lifted up the shafts and started off over the wide, smooth street at a rapid trot.

Many of these men can keep up a trot, with but an occasional short rest, that will carry them over thirty miles a day for several days in succession; but we were informed that such of them as had steady employment in this manner were generally short lived, being carried off at an early age by heart and lung troubles. In rainy weather the top is put up and a covering of oiled silk drawn over the entire front. The jinrickishas look very fine at night, when they all carry fancy colored Japanese lanterns. The men who draw them are odd looking characters in their blue tights, loose cloaks, bare feet and curious looking hats, shaped like inverted punch bowls, but not nearly so much so as they must have been in the olden times—not so many years ago—when they were considered to be almost in full dress, with nothing on but a narrow loin cloth.—Cor. Baltimore Sun.

President Pierce's Fine Horsemanship.

Frank Pierce was a fine horseman, and when the World's Fair was open at New York, in July, 1853, he appeared at the morning review of the troops on the Battery mounted on the full blooded charger Black Warrior, owned by Maj. Merrill, of the United States dragoons, then past 21 years old, and cherished for the long and faithful services he had performed. After the review the procession was formed, and proceeded up Broadway. Everywhere were crowds of people eager to greet the president. The sidewalks were densely thronged, the windows were filled to overflowing and there were multitudes on the housetops. After the troops and the president and his suite came, in carriages, the mayor and common council of the city.

Shortly before the procession reached the park a shower of rain, which had some time threatened to fall, came down with great emphasis, and caused a general scattering of the spectators. Even the well ordered ranks of the military were not proof against it, and many of the soldiers took refuge in the doorways and under awnings. The majority, however, did not flinch, but bravely held on their march, defying the pelting of the rain. Though repeatedly urged to dismount and take refuge, the president refused to break up the line of march. For about two blocks he carried an umbrella which was thrust upon him, but this he soon dispensed with. In company with nearly all in the procession, he got fairly wet through, and had to change his clothes when he reached the Crystal Palace.—Ben: Perley Poore.

SAINTS' PARADOXES

II. Corinthians, iv. and vi., etc.

By honor and dishonor,
Through ill report and true,
For Christ saints live, sole object
They ever have in view.

As dying and yet living,
As dying unto sin,
While life in Christ grows stronger,
Sure victory to win.

Not killed, though sorely chastened,
They patiently abide
Their times of trial, coming
Out of them purified.

On ev'ry side sore troubl'd,
Yet no distress'd are they,
The Lord or Hosts to succor,
On their right hand doth stay.

Perplexed but not despairing,
They who in Christ abide,
Have, through life's tangl'd mazes,
Him as unerring guide.

When to the dust low cleaveth
Their souls, they cry, "O Lord!
May Thy good Spirit quicken
According to Thy Word."

As known and yet as unknown:
The world doth little know
The secret joys and raptures
Of bliss that round them flow.

As poor, yet making merry,
Rich with things new and old,
Which they from hidden treasures
Of God's own word unfold.

Again as having nothing,
Yet they all things possess,
In Christ the world and all things
Are their's, and nothing less.

Cast down yet not destroyed,
For the Almighty One
Upholds, defends and cheers them,
Their Helper, Shield and Sun

When weakest they are strongest;
As trust in self goes down,
The Arm Divine is lifted,
Them conquerors to crown.

Warn'd to be wise as serpents,
While harmless as the dove;
Wise unto good, but simple
To what might evil prove.

Though sorrowful, yet always Rejoicing, can there be
Than this, a state more blessed
While in the flesh are we?

'Tis not sometimes rejoicing,
Then sorrowful alway,
The paradox was written
By Paul in God's way.

THE TELEPHONE CRAZE.

Periodically the public have a craze thrust on their notice, at one time it is a gold mine, at another a lead company that seeks to draw the hard earnings from the people's pockets. In ancient times it was the South Sea bubble that turned the heads of kings and senators who were ultimately engulphed in one grand maelstrom that ruined them by thousands. Montreal just now is quietly being flooded with telephonic schemes as flighty in imagination and as dubious in results an the black angel companies floated in the States, to the financial ruin of those who once prided themselves on being in affluent positions. It is against investing in these imaginary companies that we desire to caution our readers. But yesterday's new scheme was afloat to wipe out the Bell Telephone Company by reducing its tariff to $25 per annum for subscribers; to-day another bubble company which wishes to reduce the price to $12 is floating in the air. It is needless to say there is little room for the next fifty years for any competition such as is perhaps intended or intended for sale. From personal inquiry we find that no person, director or otherwise, in the Bell Co., has ever received any bonus on his stock, and that that company has never sold a share below par for stock gambling purposes. It is not to be supposed therefore that any of the new concerns can place the shareholders in a better condition. Again the Bell Telephone Co., with its 4,000 or 5,000 miles of lines, connecting cities and towns, offers to its subscribers facilities which no other Telephone Co. can furnish. The Bell Telephone Co's. dividends, with the practical monopoly of the past eight years, average about 5 per cent. Therefore it is certain that with its economical and conservative management it has been no special bonanza for its shareholders. Its stock sells to-day at about par. With two or three competitors in the field, and the consequent rate cutting, what prospect is there for dividends for any of them, since it is not to be supposed that the Bell Telephone Company will retire from the field. This, then, is a fair financial view of the matter as to the prospect of a new, poor and untried company paying any dividends. Knowing the large number of our subscribers who are shareholders in the Bell Telephone Company, we should be base to our trust did we not try to protect their interests as well as prevent others losing large amounts of money by investing in new bubbles which cannot by any possibility pay a fair dividend, if any at all. We find on still further enquiry that the Bell Telephone Co., has to-day about 14,000 sets of instruments in use and owns between 4,000 and 5,000 miles of line, connecting cities and towns in Canada and the United States. It has also the exclusive right to connect with the system of the American Bell Telephone Co., in the United States. Any person at all familiar with the business and the cost of construction can readily see that no company could duplicate this construction without a very large capital. Opposition may be a good thing, and where it has a chance of succes a creditable thing, but where in common sense is there anything to be made with three or four companies in such a small population as we have in the Dominion of Canada? We have, therefore, two desires in this matter, the first to protect our friends who have already invested in one company, and the second to protect those who may be solicited to invest in certain losses. Finally, what is there to prevent the Bell Telephone Company, with its wealthy and paid-up organization—in case of a doubtful success of their rivals—reducing the price of their subscription to such a point as would wipe out all and sundry who oppose them by a tariff on which none but themselves could subsist? —The Shareholder and Insurance Gazette.

PUMPS!

Over nineteen years ago I commenced the manufacture of PUMPS in Peterborough, and I take this opportunity of thanking the inhabitants of the town and surrounding country for the very liberal partronage they have accorded me during that time. It has always been my aim to produce and introduce all good improvements in Pumps, and after a two years' trial of the NEW PATENT

MODEL FORCE AND LIET PUMP,

which this cut represents, I believe it to be the BEST COMBINED PUMP IN THE WORLD. It differs from all others in having the sectional stock or head, with its many advantages, and its firm and durable means of holding the attachments. The intermittent or detachable packing is only used in actual forcing, and is off at all other times (say 95 per cent of the service of the pump), unfreezable and unwearable. The hose coupling is very convienent and effective. It can be adjusted in a few seconds, thus quickly changing an ordinary service pump into a Force Pump.

The great advantage to the purchaser is that it possesses a first-class Lift Pump and a good Force Pump in one, for the same price often asked for an ordinary pump.

WM. TULLY, North Monaghan:
"I have had your Model Pump for a year. It gives the greatest satisfaction and is one of the best for watering stock, as it is easy to work and draws a large quantity of water. I can recommend it as the very best I have seen."

"We, the undersigned, having examined Mr. H. Owen's New Model Force Pump, take pleasure in stating that we consider it a great improvement on pumps formerly in use. In our opinion it is one of the best pumps ever introduced to the public, being quickly turned into a pump for fire protection. It is powerful, durable, convenient and easy to work, and it gives us pleasure to recommend it as a first-class article in every way."

OVERWORKED BRAINS.

A POINT AT WHICH LABOR CEASES TO BE STRENGTHENING.

One of the Earliest Indications of Brain Exhaustion—Steps Toward the Verge of Insanity—Burdens Heaped Upon the Minds of the Young.

There is such a thing as mind strengthening work. In truth it is, as every physiologist knows, only by work, minds, or, more correctly speaking, brains can be strengthened in their growth and naturally developed. The exercise of those centers of the nervous system, whose functions what we call consciousness and intellect are associated is as essential to their nutrition as activity is to the healthy growth of any other part of the organism, whether nervous or muscular. Every part of the living body is developed, and enjoys vitality, by the law which makes the appropriation of food dependent upon and commensurate, with the amount of work it does. It feels in proportion as its works, as truly as it works in proportion as it feeds. This canon of organic life is the foundation of those estimates which physiologists form when they compute the value of food in weight lifting power. It is, however, necessary to recognize that, although these propositions are true in the abstract, they need the introduction of a new integer or combining power before any sum of results can be worked out.

We know that food is practically just as truly outside the body after it has been eaten, digested, and even taken in the blood current, as it is when it lies on the table. Nutrition is a tissue function, and its performance depends on the appetite and feeding power, which is something different from the organic need, of the tissue with which the nutrient fluid is brought into contact. Again, any particular part of the organism may be so exhausted by work that it has not power enough left to feed. It is a matter of the highest practical moment that this fact should be recognized. There is undoubtedly a point at which work ceases to be strengthening and becomes exhausting, self exhausting and self destructive so far as the particular issue in activity is concerned.

Work may be carried too far, in fact to such a point that not only the last reserve of power for action, but the ultimate unit, so to say, of the force of the nutrition, which is, as we now believe, identical with the force of general activity, may be expended in work and the organism left so utterly powerless that its exhausted tissues can no longer appropriate the food supplied or placed within their normal reach. We have said that it is necessary this should be understood. It has a special bearing on the question of brain work in childhood and indolence.

Just as extreme weakness and faintness of the body as a whole produce restlessness and loss of control, so extreme exhaustion of the brain produces mental agitation and loss of healthy self consciousness. This is how and why the "overworked" become deranged. One of the earliest indications, or symptoms, of brain exhaustion is commonly irritability; then comes sleeplessness, of the sort which seems to consist in inability to cease thinking either of a particular subject or things in general; next, the mental unrestful or uncontrollable thought gets the better of the will, even during the ordinary hours of wakefulness and activity, which is a step further toward the verge of insanity than the mere persistence of thought at the hour of sleep—this way lies madness; and, finally, the thinking faculty, or, as we say, the imagination, gets the better of the will and asserts supremacy for its phantoms, those of sight or hearing being the most turbulent and dominant which happen to be most commonly used in intellectual work, and therefore most developed by the individual cerebrum—this is madness.

FROM BAD TO WORSE.

Such is the story of overwork of the brain or mind; and it is easy to see that at any stage of the progress from bad to worse the will may be overpowered and the judgment perverted in such manner as to impel the victim of this mind trouble to seek refuge in death, or to so disorder his consciousness that he supposes himself to be acting in obedience to some just and worthy behest, when he commits an act of self destruction or does something in the doing of which he accidentally dies. Such, in the main, is the story of suicide from overwork.

What, then, can be the excuse pleadable by one who heap on the brains of the young or nascent such burdens of mind labor and worry as exhaust their very faculties of self help and leave them a prey to the vagaries of a starved brain? We pity the suffering of those shipwrecked sailors who, after exposure in an open boat, perhaps without food, for hours or days, "go mad," and, raving of feast and pleasures, the antitheses of their actual experience, fall on each other or throw themselves overboard. Have we no pity for brains dying of lack of food because we have compelled them to expend their very last unit of force in work, and now they are distraught in the act of dying?

It may be a sublime ideal, that of a highly educated people; but if it should happen that the realization of this beautiful dream of our philosophic reformers can only be achieved by the slaughter of the weak, it will scarcely console the national conscience to reflect that, after all, "the survival of the fittest" is the law of nature.—Lancet.

Electricity and Ice Cream.

An eastern physician announces that he has solved the mystery of ice cream poisoning and that electricity is at the bottom of it all. He has found that the rapid revolutions of the zinc paddles used in the ordinary ice cream freezers generate electricity, and that the zince is dissolved and disseminated through the cream. I rather doubt this theory, as zine, if present in sufficient quantity to produce poisonous effects, would be easily detected by chemists, and its supposed part in ice cream poisoning would have been announced long ago. That ice cream is sometimes poisonous is settled, but just what causes it no one can definitely state.—Globe-Democrat.

Risk in Running Two Engines.

When two engines are attached to a train of cars it is the hindmost, or engine that is coupled to the train, which controls the air brakes, the leading, or head engine, having no connection with the brakes. Thus you will see the engineer who controls the brakes has got to go it blind, having to depend on the leading engine to whistle for brakes in case of danger, as his view of the road ahead is entirely obstructed by the blinding smoke and sparks from the forward engine. Often a call for brakes by the head engine might be mistaken by the rear engineer for a "road crossing" whistle for a few seconds, which might be ample time to cause or avoid a terrible smash up.—Engineer in Chicago News.

AGRICULTURAL INFORMATION.

Statistics Taken from the Bureau Returns of Aug. 12th.

The agricultural returns to the Ontario Bureau of Industries up to Aug. 12th show the estimated area and yield of the principal grain crops of the Province for the present year to be:—

	Area.	Yield.	Per Acre.
Fall wheat	890,786	14,435,405	16.2
Spring wheat	484,321	6,030,440	12.4
Barley	767,846	17,430,322	22.7
Oats	1,682,463	50,604,500	30.1
Rye	65,362	911,518	13.4
Peas	730,756	13,133,665	18.1
Beans	20,275	283,077	14.0
Hay	2,220,643	3,063,610	1.38

The following table gives the area of the principal crops and their produce as estimated on Aug. 12th in this county and Haliburton:—

PETERBOROUGH.

	Acres.	Bush.
Fall wheat	8,355	139,250
Spring wheat	23,181	267,741
Barley	14,099	255,192
Oats	31,135	705,705
Rye	2,133	38,927
Peas	15,959	223,426
Corn	376
Buckwheat	957
Beans	51	1,020
Potatoes	2,541

There was 37,714 acres in hay, and the estimated crop was 34,697 tons. Number of working horses 5,766, breeding mares 1,688, unbroken horses 2,897, total 10,351; working oxen 187, milch cows 12,737, store cattle over two years 7,536, young and other cattle 13,576, total 34,036; sheep, 22,366; pigs, 13,541; poultry, 127,524; wool—coarse, 93,799 pounds, fine, 6,733 pounds. Wages for farm laborers averaged $165 a year with board and $262 without, and and $16.86 a month with board and $28.15 without.

HALIBURTON.

Fall wheat	118	2,360
Spring wheat	1,334	23,345
Barley	285	3,990
Oats	4,928	110,880
Rye	258	2,580
Peas	1,735	43,375
Corn	99
Buckwheat	143
Beans	30	300
Potatoes	649

Acres in hay, 9,767; estimated crop, 13,478 tons. Number of working horses, 593; breeding mares, 192; unbroken horses, 225; total, 1,010. Working oxen, 458; milch cows, 2,121; store cattle over two years, 1,049; y ung and other cattle, 2,913; total, 6,541. Sheep, 3,935; pigs, 1,657; poultry, 14,701; wool—coarse, 10,940 pounds; fine, 2,630 pounds. Wages, $135 a year with board and $232 without, and $17.50 a month with board and $27.63 without.

The following general references and notes from correspondence from these counties are taken from the report:—

FALL WHEAT.

The close of the spring found the wheat in the East Midland group, a poor fall wheat region at the best, in a very bad condition, winter killing having been almost general. Some of the fields "picked up," however, and although the yield will be small, the sample in the counties of Victoria, Peterborough and Hastings will be of fair quality. In Haliburton hardly any fall wheat was grown. In portions of Peterborough a scarcity of labor was felt during harvest, but, on the whole, the self-binder got over the fields in time. The straw is reported as rather short and brittle. Very little damage occurred to the grain from rust or insects.

A. R. Kidd, Dummer: The fall wheat was mostly killed by the ice last winter and late frosts this spring, and some of what remained was ploughed under. The grain is not as plump as it should be, owing to want of moisture at the time of maturing. It ripened too fast, and as a result will be about second quality.

J. S. Cairnduff, Harvey: Fall wheat was hurt by ice and dry weather, but not by insects. It promised well in the fall, but the spring freezing and thawing, where not sheltered by the forest or by tree planting, caused it to be a light crop. It was all cut in July.

Wm. Armstrong, Otonabee: Fall wheat is better than was expected. It did not fill as plump as might be, but there was no rust. Cutting commenced about the 12th of July, and we got the crop housed in good order. There was a sufficient supply of help, as self-binders supplied the place of manual labor.

John H. Delamere, Lutterworth, Haliburton: There is not any great breadth of fall wheat shown here, but although limited in quantity the quality is excellent.

SPRING WHEAT.

P. Robinson, Smith: Will be an average crop. As the hot weather ripened the grain too rapidly, it will be rather small. All saved in good condition.

D. Anderson, Anstruther: Spring wheat is damaged some by rust, and the grain is small and shrunken. The July drouth and the hot weather helped to make it a failure.

BARLEY.

H. Spence, Dummer: Barley is a medium crop, but will be a small sample and light weight. It is all harvested.

Wm. Armstrong, Otonabee: Barley is very small and light. It was browned by the hot sun, although housed without getting any rain.

S. Kettle, Glamorgan, Haliburton: Barley is generally sown late here, and now looks worse than anything else grown, owing to the drouth.

OATS.

J. S. Cairnduff, Harvey: Oats are short in straw, but will turn out better and yield more than the other grains. They are mostly all cut and housed in good condition.

H. Spence, Dummer: Oats are very light. The straw is so short that many of the farmers are not trying to bind them, but are putting them in loose.

RYE.

Wm. Armstrong, Otonabee: Not much grown here, but what there is is very small.

PEASE.

F. Birdsall, Asphodel: In most places not over half a crop, on account of the dry weather. White marrowfat, where sown, came out the best.

Charles R. Stewart, Dysart, Haliburton: Injured by drouth. About two-thirds of an average crop.

CORN.

D. Anderson, Anstruther: Very little corn is planted here, but what was put in did well this season.

ROOTS.

F. Birdsall, Asphodel: Potatoes in most cases are very small on account of the beetle and the drouth. Turnips are very much hurt by the fly and the dry weather, and will not be over half a crop unless there is a great change in the weather. Mangles and carrots are affected by the drouth.

Thos. Tellford, Eanismore: Potatoes will be 85 per cent. of an average crop. Turnips will be from 15 to 20 per cent., being destroyed by the drouth and the fly. Mangels and carrots promise half an average crop.

John H. Delamere, Lutterworth, Haliburton: The potato crop is usually large here. Early potatoes this year are good, but the late planting, which means the bulk of the crop, is very light, owing to the great drouth. This, however, may be improved if we get any rain; if not, they will not be half a crop. Turnips seem to be doing fairly well, but all our root crops are suffering from the protracted heat and lack of rain.

FRUIT TREES AND FRUIT.

Thomas Telford, Eanismore: Apples will be about half a crop, and the plum is completely destroyed by the curculio. Only a few grapes, which do not look well. Scarcely any cherries. There will be little enough fruit for home consumption.

HAY AND CLOVER.

From the East Midland counties and the Northern districts there are no reports that are particularly discouraging, while many are of the most reassuring character.

John H. Delamere, Lutterworth, Haliburton: The crops never before promised better until the continued drouth, when they ripened too quickly. The hay crop has been most abundant. There were no frosts after the snow went off, so that in this locality, and in the adjoining townships of Anson, Minden and Snowdon, the yield is above the average, and it was saved in excellent order. Of course, on some lots, where there was but little soil covering the rock, it dried right up; but, generally speaking, it is a good crop.

PASTURE, LIVE STOCK AND DAIRY.

A. R. Kidd, Dummer: The pasture at this writing, is almost nil, and should the dry weather continue for any considerable time, stock of all kinds will be seriously affected, as well as the dairy interest, which at present seems to be the mainstay of the farmer.

John H. Delamere, Lutterworth, Haliburton: In many places the pasture is dried up very much, but scarcely as bad as I have noticed it at the front; the bush protects a lot of good pasture, and the live stock are in good condition generally; horses and cattle look well so far, but continued drouth will affect the cattle; sheep are scarcely up to ordinary quality, and scarce; there has been a scarcity of pigs this season also; fat cattle scarcely up to average; our dairy produce is usually excellent in quality, but scarcely up to the average in quantity this season.

BEES AND HONEY.

A. R. Kidd, Dummer: Bees appear to have done remarkably well. There was an unusually large basswood blossom, which is the "pure gold" for bees.

FARM LABOR.

D. Kennedy, Otonabee: The labor supply was quite ample. About two-thirds of the farmers use self-binders.

GENERAL REMARKS.

A. R. Kidd, Dummer: The outlook for the farmer is certainly gloomy; short crops and miserable prices. The dairy only promises anything like remuneration for capital invested.

Charles R. Stewart, Dysart, Haliburton: We want somebody to come here with a pocket full of money to buy our hay, press it and export it. We have more than we can possibly use. I could mention farmers who have from 30 to 70 tons of hay to sell. Send us a Yankee buyer and your Bureau will receive the blessing of this great people.

PUNISHMENT FOR BRIBERY.

An Assemblyman of the Empire State Thinks Confiscation the Right Thing.

Assemblyman McCarthy, of Syracuse, who is a manufacturer, has given law a practical study, and has ideas on that subject which are frequently expressed forcibly in groups where public affairs are discussed.

In talking about the Sharp trial Mr. McCarthy said: "There is a growing conviction in my mind that the punishment for bribery is inadequate in that it does not seize the plunder. Now, take Jacob Sharp as an example. His accumulation of wealth at his age could have only one object—to leave a big property for his family. He was willing to run the risk of a year or two in prison and a small fine to insure them a great fortune. Even if he serves his time in prison the money will be theirs and his. There will be no special public condemnation of them. The public will hardly regard them as disgraced by the old man's imprisonment. But, suppose the law provided that for such a crime all his plunder and all his property should be confiscated. Do you think he would then make any attempt to bribe anybody? Not much. There would be a risk he would not care to incur. While I was abroad a few years ago I was told of a family of Americans living in Belgium in affluence. The father held an important financial trust. He deliberately stole $250,000 under circumstances that made the maximum punishment for his crime a year's imprisonment in the penitentiary. He was willing to serve that length of time to make such a provision for his family for life. Of course, in such cases if the money can be identified it can be recovered. But a shrewd rascal will take care of that. So I think confiscation would be about the right thing."

Another man told of a case that had come to his knowledge. A firm had a bookkeeper embezzle $3,000. He had been working for $750 a year. He was sentenced to two years' imprisonment. The firm offered to petition for his pardon if he would restore the money. The man told them he thought $1,500 a year was better than $750, even if he was obliged to spend the time in prison, and refused their offer.—New York Tribune.

Millionaires at Lunch.

Four or five men, worth collectively money enough to buy Bulgaria, or the Union Pacific road, or Murray Hill, meet and eat luncheon together every afternoon between 1 o'clock and 2 o'clock in the Western Union building, on Broadway. They would not be likely to attract attention in a crowd. One looks like a country storekeeper in town on a visit, one like a college professor of a slightly church turn, one like a sharp little Cuban tobacconist, and the other two like ordinary, well fed, solid city business men. Their names will show, however, that they really answer no such description at all, for one is Jay Gould, another is Cyrus W. Field, a third is Sidney Dillon, a fourth is Russell Sage and the fifth is ex-Governor Alonzo B. Cornell. One is the richest man on the continent, one has been governor of the Empire state, one was a great man and world famous before the others were heard of, and one, Russell Sage, lost seven millions three years ago without being able to see much difference in his pile afterward. Altogether, they are supposed to be worth two hundred and fifty or three hundred millions of dollars by men to whom the Babel of Wall street is not uproar and confusion.

One reason why all meet in this way every day is that by doing so they get their luncheon for nothing. That may sound ridiculous to any one who supposes that rich men after getting their money by thrift suddenly become dead to their early training, but, however that may be, the friends of at least two of this little company declare it to be a fact that they are glad to economize in this way. There is no such daily conclave in the world. It is really a grand daily inquisition at which railroads and great corporations of many kinds are apt to be discussed in a manner most important to investors the world over—tragically, it may be, or happily or desultorily.—Julian Ralph's Letter.

The Queen's Spanish Oxen.

The great feature of the Isle of Wight Agricultural show was a pair of magnificent Spanish oxen in beautifully embroidered harness, which were shown, with their cart, by the queen, who also sent a number of entries for competition from her farm at Osborne. This Spanish oxen cart, with its oxen and harness, is a recent present to her majesty from Spain. They are beautiful beasts, and the whole turnout was most picturesque.—London Truth.

ONE COFFIN TOO MANY.

A CASE WHERE A SUPERSTITION SQUARED WITH THE FACTS.

A Story of the Time When Things Had Just Begun to Boom in the Old Tuolumne Camp—"One Coffin Short" at the Funeral.

"It was at the old Tuolumne camp when things had just begun to boom. A few rich strikes that some of the lucky ones had made had encouraged the rest of us to hang on. The Jumping Jehoshaphat claim had got in some of the new fangled powder and was blasting away for all that was out. Most of us looked askance at the new powder, and when Uncle Billy Grimes prophesied that the camp would be blown up with the stuff or get poisoned with its fumes, as his partner had at Red gulch, we made the Jumping Jehoshaphat boys move it out of harm's way. So when a blast went off one fine morning, when nobody was expecting it, and laid out five of the best men in the camp, we were all able to say, 'I told you so,' as we rushed up to the claim.

"The camp was intensely excited, for there were the first deaths since we came in, not counting two sluice robbers and a horse thief that we had hung for luck. We stood off a little bit, for no one but the five boys in the pit knew whether there were half a dozen more to go off. But we sailed in pretty soon and hauled out what was left of the boys, and it was a sight to make you sick. We were pretty badly cut up about it, and when we had cleaned them up and laid them out decently in their cabin we went down in front of Dutch Dave's saloon, and Si Hawkins called the meeting to order.

"'Boys,' he said, in a husky voice, 'we've got our first chance to start a graveyard and no town ever had a better. There boys that,' and he jerked his thumb over his shoulder, 'would do any graveyard proud, and we ought to start 'em off in style. It's a rotten shame if we don't give 'em the best send off the market's got, and d—n the expense.'

"We cheered the sentiment, in spite of the occasion, and he continued: 'What we want to do is to send for coffins. Any man that's in favor of this sentiment, can just walk up here and plank down his dust.'

"No one could refuse this appeal, and the needed sum was soon raised. An order was written to the Simpsonville undertaker and given to the driver of the down stage, with the verbal message:

"'If they ain't here by to-morrer night a committee of ther boys'll be down ther ter find out why, an' they'll need their coffins for hum.'

"About sunset next evening a wagon turned off the main road and came into camp. It brought the coffins. They were unloaded, one after the other, and shone with all the splendor that fresh varnish could give them.

"'Thar's style for ye,' said Hawkins, with pardonable pride. 'How the boys would enjoy 'em if they were here. By the Lord Harry!' he shouted, suddenly, 'there's six here. Who ordered six?'

"Jim Davis was the man that wrote the letter. He turned deathly pale and said: 'By —, there's bad luck coming. There's a sixth man in this crowd. I ordered five coffins, an' that extra one hasn't come for nothing.'

"There was a sudden silence, and the most of the crowd turned as pale as Jim. It did look mighty plausible that that there coffin was looking for some one, and each man felt a uncomfortable suspicion that he was the one. The only one that was bold enough to resent the idea was Five Fingered Jack, who had been born with five fingers on his left hand, and had evened matters up by shooting off his thumb.

"'You're a good one, Jim,' he says, 'you're the scholard of the crowd, but you can't write straight yet.'

"'See here,' said Jim, getting riled, 'I am no scholard, but I don't knuckle down to no man when it comes to orderin coffins. I kep' a copy of the letter, so's the undertaker don't cut any shines with us.' He pulled out the letter, and he had written 'five' as plain as life.

"'That coffin has come for one of us,' he continued, 'an' it means business. It stands to reason that when a coffin travels twenty-five miles it's goin' to git its man.'

"'We gathered round, looking about as solemn as we felt, and some of the boys kept a looking over their shoulders suspicious like to the cabin where the dead men lay, as though they were afraid the night might encourage 'em to come out an' pick their company for the next day's journey.

"'Si Hawkins tried to pump the fellow that drove the team up to the camp, but he didn't know anything about it. The coffins had been loaded in by the undertaker, and he brought them up as they were given to him. Si Hawkins told us to come into Dutch Dave's, and the boys began to get their courage out of a bottle, in the natural way. After they'd livened up they began [illegible] fears and recommend [illegible] for the event honor.

"'Mebbe it's after the fellow that stole Simpson's horse,' said Five Fingered Jack, in a sort of hantering tone. 'If so, he'll need it mighty bad.'

"The crowd laughed—all but [illegible] took it seriously and tried to [illegible] 'He won't git no coffin [illegible] lucky ter git buried at all [illegible] yer want ter, but there'll be no funerals to-morrow [illegible]

"'There's a dead coffee-cooler [illegible] gulch. Mebbe yell like to [illegible] with the boys,' pointing [illegible] him.

"Jim began to get [illegible] Hear that,' he said, [illegible] the mountain owl, but [illegible] dead man the cold [illegible] little off color. [illegible] mean bad luck [illegible]

"Some of the [illegible] again.

"'Shet up, cuss ye!' said Jack, contemptuously. 'Ye'd make more hoot owl yerself. A scared fool like you is a regular Jonah in camp. Ye'd break it up in a week of ye had yer way.'

"'Who's a scared fool?' says Jim, firing up like a fighting cock.

"'You air,' says Jack.

"'Yer a liar,' says Jim.

"The boys began to climb behind boxes and anywhere else they could to get out of the way. There had been bad feeling between the two ever since they came into camp, and we knew it meant business when they began passing compliments like that. About as soon as you could say Jack Robinson the popping began. The two men walked toward each other firing as fast as you could count. Jim dropped to the floor. Five Fingered Jack wavered a moment and then fell across Jim's body.

"We crawled out of our hiding places to view the remains. Si Hawkins was the first to get to them, and he looked down mournfully as we gathered around.

"'God, boys,' he said, regretfully, 'we've one coffin short.'"—San Francisco Post.

PUMPS!

Over nineteen years ago I commenced the manufacture of PUMPS in Peterborough, and I take this opportunity of thanking the inhabitants of the town and surrounding country for the very liberal partronage they have accorded me during that time. It has always been my aim to produce and introduce all good improvements in Pumps, and after a two years' trial of the NEW PATENT

MODEL FORCE AND LIFT PUMP,

which this cut represents, I believe it to be the BEST COMBINED PUMP IN THE WORLD. It differs from all others in having the sectional stock or head, with its many advantages, and its firm and durable means of holding the attachments. The intermittent or detachable packing is only used in actual forcing, and is off at all other times (say 95 per cent. of the service of the pump), unfreezable and unwearable. The hose coupling is very convienent and effective. It can be adjusted in a few seconds, thus quickly changing an ordinary service pump into a Force Pump.

The great advantage to the purchaser is that it possesses a first-class Lift Pump and a good Force Pump in one, for the same price often asked for an ordinary pump.

WM. TULLY, North Monaghan:
"I have had your Model Pump for a year. It gives the greatest satisfaction and is one of the best for watering stock, as it is easy to work and draws a large quantity of water. I can recommend it as the very best I have seen."

"We, the undersigned, having examined Mr. H. Owen's New Model Force Pump, take pleasure in stating that we consider it a great improvement on pumps formerly in use. In our opinion it is one of the best pumps ever introduced to the public, being quickly turned into a pump for fire protection. It is powerful, durable, convenient and easy to work, and it gives us pleasure to recommend it as a first-class article in every way."

OVERWORKED BRAINS.

A POINT AT WHICH LABOR CEASES TO BE STRENGTHENING.

One of the Earliest Indications of Brain Exhaustion—Steps Toward the Verge of Insanity—Burdens Heaped Upon the Minds of the Young.

There is such a thing as mind strengthening work. In truth it is, as every physiologist knows, only by work, minds, or, more correctly speaking, brains can be strengthened in their growth and naturally developed. The exercise of those centers of the nervous system, whose functions what we call consciousness and intellect are associated is as essential to their nutrition as activity is to the healthy growth of any other part of the organism, whether nervous or muscular. Every part of the living body is developed, and enjoys vitality, by the law which makes the appropriation of food dependent upon and commensurate with the amount of work it does. It feels in proportion as its works, as truly as it works in proportion as it feeds. This canon of organic life is the foundation of those estimates which physiologists form when they compute the value of food in weight lifting power. It is, however, necessary to recognize that, although these propositions are true in the abstract, they need the introduction of a new integer or combining power before any sum of results can be worked out.

We know that food is practically just as truly outside the body after it has been eaten, digested, and even taken in the blood current, as it is when it lies on the table. Nutrition is a tissue function, and its performance depends on the appetite and feeding power, which is something different from the organic need, of the tissue with which the nutrient fluid is brought into contact. Again, any particular part of the organism may be so exhausted by work that it has not power enough left to feed. It is a matter of the highest practical moment that this fact should be recognized. There is undoubtedly a point at which work ceases to be strengthening and becomes exhausting, self consuming and self destructive so far as the particular tissue in activity is concerned.

Work may be carried too far, in fact to such a point that not only the last reserve of power for action, but the ultimate unit, so to say, of the force of the nutrition, which is, as we now believe, identical with the force of general activity, may be expended in work and the organism left so utterly powerless that its exhausted tissues can no longer appropriate the food supplied or placed within their normal reach. We have said that it is necessary this should be understood. It has a special bearing on the question of brain work in childhood and indolence.

Just as extreme weakness and faintness of the body as a whole produce restlessness and loss of control, so extreme exhaustion of the brain produces mental agitation and loss of healthy self consciousness. This is how and why the "overworked" become deranged. One of the earliest indications, or symptoms, of brain exhaustion is commonly irritability; then comes sleeplessness of the sort which seems to consist in inability to cease thinking either of a particular subject or things in general; next, the mental unrestful or uncontrollable thought gets the better of the will, even during the ordinary hours of wakefulness and activity, which is a step further toward, the verge of insanity than the mere persistence of thought at the hour of sleep—this way lies madness; and, finally, the thinking faculty, or, as we say, the imagination, gets the better of the will and asserts supremacy for its phantoms, those of sight or hearing being the most turbulent and dominant which happen to be most commonly used in intellectual work, and therefore most developed by the individual cerebrum—this is madness.

FROM BAD TO WORSE.

Such is the story of overwork of the brain or mind; and it is easy to see that at any stage of the progress from bad to worse the will may be overpowered and the judgment perverted in such manner as to impel the victim of this mind trouble to seek refuge in death, or to so disorder his consciousness that he supposes himself to be acting in obedience to some just and worthy behest, when he commits an act of self destruction or does something in the doing of which he accidentally dies. Such, in the main, is the story of suicide from overwork.

What, then, can be the excuse pleadable by those who heap on the brains of the young or crescent such burdens of mind labor and worry as exhaust their very faculties of self help and leave them a prey to the vagaries of a starved brain? We pity the suffering of those shipwrecked sailors who, after exposure in an open boat, perhaps without food, for hours or days, "go mad," and, raving of feast and pleasures, the antitheses of their actual experience, fall on each other or throw themselves overboard. Have we no pity for brains dying of lack of food because we have compelled them to expend their very last unit of force in work, and now they are distraught in the act of dying?

It may be a sublime ideal, that of a highly educated people; but if it should happen that the realization of this beautiful dream of our philosophic reformers can only be achieved by the slaughter of the weak, it will scarcely console the national conscience to reflect that, after all, "the survival of the fittest" is the law of nature.—Lancet.

Electricity and Ice Cream.

An eastern physician announces that he has solved the mystery of ice cream poisoning and that electricity is at the bottom of it all. He has found that the rapid revolutions of the zinc paddles used in the ordinary ice cream freezers generate electricity, and that the zince is dissolved and disseminated through the cream. I rather doubt this theory, as zinc, if present in sufficient quantity to produce poisonous effects, would be easily detected by chemists, and its supposed part in ice cream poisoning would have been announced long ago. That ice cream is sometimes poisonous is settled, but just what causes it no one can definitely state.—Globe-Democrat.

Risk in Running Two Engines.

When two engines are attached to a train of cars it is the hindmost, or engine that is coupled to the train, which controls the air brakes, the leading, or head engine, having no connection with the brakes. Thus you will see the engineer who controls the brakes has got to go it blind, having to depend on the leading engine to whistle for brakes in case of danger, as his view of the road ahead is entirely obstructed by the blinding smoke and sparks from the forward engine. Often a call for brakes by the head engine might be mistaken by the rear engineer for a "road crossing" whistle for a few seconds, which might be ample time to cause or avoid a terrible smash up.—Engineer in Chicago News.

AGRICULTURAL INFORMATION.

Statistics Taken from the Bureau Returns of Aug. 12th.

The agricultural returns to the Ontario Bureau of Industries up to Aug. 12th show the estimated area and yield of the principal grain crops of the Province for the present year to be:—

	Area.	Yield.	Per Acre.
Fall wheat	890,780	14,435,405	16.2
Spring wheat	484,821	6,730,440	12.4
Barley	767,846	17,490,322	22.7
Oats	1,682,483	54,604,589	30.1
Rye	68,267	925,518	13.4
Peas	750,756	13,133,665	18.1
Beans	20,275	283,077	14 0
Hay	2,280,644	3,073,610	1 36

The following table gives the area of the principal crops and their produce as estimated on Aug. 12th in this county and Haliburton:—

PETERBOROUGH.

	Acres.	Bush.
Fall wheat	8,355	139,250
Spring wheat	25,181	26,741
Barley	14,000	285,592
Oats	31,135	705,705
Rye	2,433	38,927
Peas	15,959	223,426
Corn	376
Buckwheat	967
Beans	51	1,020
Potatoes	2,541

There was 37,714 acres in hay, and the estimated crop was 34,697 tons. Number of working horses 5,766, breeding mares 1,688, unbroken horses 2,897, total 10,351; working oxen 487, milch cows 12,737, store cattle over two years 7,536, young and other cattle 13,576, total 34,336; sheep, 22,366; pigs, 13,541; poultry, 127,521; wool—coarse, 93,799 pounds, fine, 6,733 pounds. Wages for farm laborers averaged $165 a year with board and $262 without, and $16 86 a month with board and $28.15 without.

HALIBURTON.

Fall wheat	118	2,369
Spring wheat	1,334	25,345
Barley	285	3,990
Oats	4,628	110,880
Rye	258	2,580
Peas	1,755	45,575
Corn	90
Buckwheat	143
Beans	30	300
Potatoes	649

Acres in hay, 9,767; estimated crop, 13,478 tons. Number of working horses, 593; breeding mares, 192; unbroken horses, 225; total, 1,010. Working oxen, 458; milch cows, 2,121; store cattle over two years, 1,049; young and other cattle, 2,913; total, 6,541. Sheep, 3,935; pigs, 1,657; poultry, 14,701; wool—coarse, 10,940 pounds; fine, 2 630 pounds. Wages, $155 a year with board and $252 without, and $17.50 a month with board and $27 63 without.

The following general references and notes from correspondence from these counties are taken from the report:—

FALL WHEAT.

The close of the spring found the wheat in the East Midland group, a poor fall wheat region at the best, in a very bad condition, winter killing having been almost general. Some of the fields "picked up," however, and although the yield will be small, the sample in the counties of Victoria, Peterborough and Hastings will be of fair quality. In Haliburton hardly any fall wheat was grown. In portions of Peterborough a scarcity of labor was felt during harvest, but, on the whole, the self-binder got over the fields in time. The straw is reported as rather short and brittle. Very little damage occurred to the grain from rust or insects.

A. R. Kidd, Dummer: The fall wheat was mostly killed by the ice last winter and late frosts this spring, and some of what remained was ploughed under. The grain is not as plump as it should be, owing to want of moisture at the time of maturing. It ripened too fast, and as a result will be about second quality.

J. S Cairnduff, Harvey: Fall wheat was hurt by ice and dry weather, but not by insects. It promised well in the fall, but the spring freezing and thawing, where not sheltered by the forest or by tree planting, caused it to be a light crop. It was all cut in July.

Wm. Armstrong, Otonabee: Fall wheat is better than was expected. It did not fill as plump as might be, but there was no rust. Cutting commenced about the 12th of July, and we got the crop housed in good order. There was a sufficient supply of help, as self-binders supplied the place of manual labor.

John H. Delamere, Lutterworth, Haliburton: There is not any great breadth of fall wheat shown here, but although limited in quantity the quality is excellent.

SPRING WHEAT.

P. Robinson, Smith: Will be an average crop. As the hot weather ripened the grain too rapidly, it will be rather small. All saved in good condition.

D. Anderson, Anstruther: Spring wheat is damaged some by rust, and the grain is small and shrunken. The July drouth and the hot weather helped to make it a failure.

BARLEY.

H. Spence, Dummer: Barley is a medium crop, but will be a small sample and light weight. It is all harvested.

Wm. Armstrong, Otonabee: Barley is very small and light. It was browned by the hot sun, although housed without getting any rain.

S. Kettle, Glamorgan, Haliburton: Barley is generally sown late here, and now looks worse than anything else grown, owing to the drouth.

OATS.

J. S Cairnduff, Harvey: Oats are short in straw, but will turn out better and yield more than the other grains. They are mostly all cut and housed in good condition.

H. Spence, Dummer: Oats are very light. The straw is so short that many of the farmers are not trying to bind them, but are putting them in loose.

RYE.

Wm. Armstrong, Otonabee: Not much grown here, but what there is is very small.

PEASE.

F. Birdsall, Asphodel: In most places not over half a crop, on account of the dry weather. White marrowfat, where sown, came out the best.

Charles R. Stewart, Dysart, Haliburton: Injured by drouth. About two-thirds of an average crop.

CORN.

D. Anderson, Anstruther: Very little corn is planted here, but what was put in did well this season.

ROOTS.

F. Birdsall, Asphodel: Potatoes in most cases are very small on account of the beetle and the drouth. Turnips are very much hurt by the fly and the dry weather, and will not be over half a crop unless there is a great change in the weather. Mangles and carrots are affected by the drouth.

Thos. Telford, Ennismore: Potatoes will be 85 per cent. of an average crop. Turnips will be from 15 to 20 per cent., being destroyed by the drouth and the fly. Mangels and carrots promise half an average crop.

John H. Delamere, Lutterworth, Haliburton: The potato crop is usually large here. Early potatoes this year are good, but the late planting, which means the bulk of the crop, is very light, owing to the great drouth. This, however, may be improved if we get any rain; if not, they will not be half a crop. Turnips seem to be doing fairly well, but all our root crops are suffering from the protracted heat and lack of rain.

FRUIT TREES AND FRUIT.

Thomas Telford, Ennismore: Apples will be about half a crop, and the plum is completely destroyed by the curculio. Only a few grapes, which do not look well. Scarcely any cherries. There will be little enough fruit for home consumption.

HAY AND CLOVER.

From the East Midland counties and the Northern districts there are no reports that are particularly discouraging, while many are of the most re-assuring character.

John H. Delamere, Lutterworth, Haliburton: The crops never before promised better until the continued drouth, when they ripened too quickly. The hay crop has been most abundant. There were no frosts after the snow went off, so that in this locality, and in the adjoining townships of Anson, Minden and Snowdon, the yield is above the average, and it was saved in excellent order. Of course, on some lots, where there was but little soil covering the rock, it dried right up; but, generally speaking, it is a good crop.

PASTURE, LIVE STOCK AND DAIRY.

A. R. Kidd, Dummer: The pasture at this writing, is almost nil, and should the dry weather continue for any considerable time, stock of all kinds will be seriously affected, as well as the dairy interest, which at present seems to be the main stay of the farmer.

John H. Delamere, Lutterworth, Haliburton: In many places the pasture is dried up very much, but scarcely as bad as I have noticed it at the front; the bush protects a lot of good pasture, and the live stock are in good condition generally; horses and cattle look well so far, but continued drouth will affect the cattle; sheep are scarcely up to ordinary quality, and scarce; there has been a scarcity of pigs this season also; fat cattle scarcely up to average; our dairy produce is usually excellent in quality, but scarcely up to the average in quantity this season.

BEES AND HONEY.

A. R. Kidd, Dummer: Bees appear to have done remarkably well. There was an unusually large basswood blossom, which is the "pure gold" for bees.

FARM LABOR.

D. Kennedy, Otonabee: The labor supply was quite ample. About two-thirds of the farmers use self-binders.

GENERAL REMARKS.

A. R. Kidd, Dummer: The outlook for the farmer is certainly gloomy; short crops and miserable prices. The dairy only promises anything like remuneration for capital invested.

Charles R Stewart, Dysart, Haliburton: We want somebody to come here with a pocket full of money to buy our hay, press it and export it. We have more than we can possibly use. I could mention farmers who have from 30 to 70 tons of hay to sell. Send us a Yankee buyer and your Bureau will receive the blessing of this great people.

PUNISHMENT FOR BRIBERY.

An Assemblyman of the Empire State Thinks Confiscation the Right Thing.

Assemblyman McCarthy, of Syracuse, who is a manufacturer, has given law a practical study, and has ideas on that subject which are frequently expressed forcibly in groups where puplic affairs are discussed.

In talking about the Sharp trial Mr. McCarthy said: "There is a growing conviction in my mind that the punishment for bribery is inadequate in that it does not seize the plunder. Now, take Jacob Sharp as an example. His accumulation of wealth at his age could have only one object—to leave a big property for his family. He was willing to run the risk of a year or two in prison and a small fine to insure them a great fortune. Even if he serves his time in prison the money will be theirs and his. There will be no special public condemnation of them. The public will hardly regard them as disgraced by the old man's imprisonment. But, suppose the law provided that for such a crime all his plunder and all his property should be confiscated. Do you think he would then make any attempt to bribe anybody? Not much. There would be a risk he would not care to incur. While I was abroad a few years ago I was told of a family of Americans living in Belgium in affluence. The father held an important financial trust. He deliberately stole $250,000 under circumstances that made the maximum punishment for his crime a year's imprisonment in the penitentiary. He was willing to serve that length of time to make such a provision for his family for life. Of course, in such cases if the money can be identified it can be recovered. But a shrewd rascal will take care of that. So I think confiscation would be about the right thing."

Another man told of a case that had come to his knowledge. A firm had a bookkeeper embezzle $3,000. He had been working for $750 a year. He was sentenced to two years' imprisonment. The firm offered to petition for his pardon if he would restore the money. The man told them he thought $1,500 a year was better than $750, even if he was obliged to spend the time in prison, and refused their offer.—New York Tribune.

Millionaires at Lunch.

Four of five men, worth collectively money enough to buy Bulgaria, or the Union Pacific road, or Murray Hill, meet and eat luncheon together every afternoon between 1 o'clock and 2 o'clock in the Western Union building, on Broadway. They would not be likely to attract attention in a crowd. One looks like a country storekeeper in town on a visit, one like a college professor of a slightly church turn, one like a sharp little Cuban tobacconist, and the other two like ordinary, well fed, solid city business men. Their names will show, however, that they really answer no such description at all, for one is Jay Gould, another is Cyrus W. Field, a third is Sidney Dillon, a fourth is Russell Sage and the fifth is ex-Governor Alonzo B. Cornell. One is the richest man on the continent, one has been governor of the Empire state, one was a great man and world famous before the others were heard of, and one, Russell Sage, lost seven millions three years ago without being able to see much difference in his pile afterward. Altogether, they are supposed to be worth two hundred and fifty or three hundred millions of dollars by men to whom the Babel of Wall street is not uproar and confusion.

One reason why all meet in this way every day is that by doing so they get their luncheon for nothing. That may sound ridiculous to any one who supposes that rich men after getting their money by thrift suddenly become dead to their early training, but, however that may be, the friends of at least two of this little company declare it to be a fact that they are glad to economize in this way. There is no such daily conclave in the world. It is really a grand daily inquisition at which railroads and great corporations of many kinds are apt to be discussed in a manner most important to investors the world over—tragically, it may be, or happily or desultorily.—Julian Ralph's Letter.

The Queen's Spanish Oxen.

The great feature of the Isle of Wight Agricultural show was a pair of magnificent Spanish oxen in beautifully embroidered harness, which were shown, with their cart, by the queen, who also sent a number of entries for competition from her farm at Osborne. This Spanish oxen cart, with its oxen and harness, is a recent present to her majesty from Spain. They are beautiful beasts, and the whole turnout was most picturesque.—London Truth.

ONE COFFIN TOO MANY.

A CASE WHERE A SUPERSTITION SQUARED WITH THE FACTS.

A Story of the Time When Things Had Just Begun to Boom in the Old Tuolumne Camp—"One Coffin Short" at the Funeral.

"It was at the old Tuolumne camp when things had just begun to boom. A few rich strikes that some of the lucky ones had made had encouraged the rest of us to hang on. The Jumping Jehoshaphat claim had got in some of the new fangled powder and was blasting away for all that was out. Most of us looked askance at the new powder, and when Uncle Billy Grimes prophesied that the camp would be blown up with the stuff or get poisoned with its fumes, as his partner had at Red gulch, we made the Jumping Jehoshaphat boys move it out of harm's way. So when a blast went off one fine morning, when nobody was expecting it, and laid out five of the best men in the camp, we were all able to say, 'I told you so,' as we rushed up to the claim.

"The camp was intensely excited, for these were the first deaths since we came in, not counting two sluice robbers and a horse thief that we had hung for luck. We stood off a little bit, for no one but the five boys in the pit knew whether there were half a dozen more to go off. But we sailed in pretty soon and hauled out what was left of the boys, and it was a sight to make you sick. We were pretty badly cut up about it, and when we had cleaned them up and laid them out decently in their cabin we went down in front of Dutch Dave's saloon, and Si Hawkins called the meeting to order.

"'Boys,' he said, in a husky voice, 'we've got our first chance to start a graveyard and no town ever had a better. Them boys thar,' and he jerked his thumb over his shoulder, 'would do any graveyard proud, and we ought to start 'em off in style. It's a rotten shame if we don't give 'em the best send off the market's got, and d—n the expense.'

"We cheered the sentiment, in spite of the occasion, and he continued: 'What we want to do is to send for coffins. Any man that's in favor of this sentiment, can just walk up here and plank down his dust.'

"No one could refuse this appeal, and the needed sum was soon raised. An order was written to the Simpsonville undertaker and given to the driver of the down stage, with the verbal message:

"'If they ain't here by to-morrer night a committee of ther boys'll be down thar ter find out why, an' they'll need their coffins ter hum.'

"About sunset next evening a wagon turned off the main road and came into camp. It brought the coffins. They were unloaded, one after the other, and shone with all the splendor that fresh varnish could give them.

"'Thar's style for ye,' said Hawkins, with pardonable pride. "How the boys would enjoy 'em if they were here. By the Lord Harry!' he shouted, suddenly, 'there's six here. Who ordered six?'

"Jim Davis was the man that wrote the letter. He turned deathly pale and said: 'By ——, there's bad luck coming. There's a sixth man in this crowd. I ordered five coffins, an' that extra one hasn't come for nothing.'

"There was a sudden silence, and the most of the crowd turned as pale as Jim. It did look mighty plausible that that there coffin was looking for some one, and each man felt an uncomfortable suspicion that he was the one. The only one that was bold enough to resist the idea was Five Fingered Jack, who had been born with five fingers on his left hand, and had evened matters up by shooting off his thumb.

"'You're a good one, Jim,' he says, 'you're the scholard of the crowd, but you can't write straight yet.'

"'See here,' said Jim, getting riled, 'I ain't no scholard, but I don't knuckle down to no man when it comes to orderin coffins. I kep' a copy of the letter, so's the undertaker don't cut any shines with us.' He pulled out the letter, and he had written 'five' as plain as life.

"'That coffin has come for one of us,' he continued, 'an' it means business. It stands to reason that when a coffin travels twenty-five miles it's goin' to git its man.'

"We gathered round, looking about as solemn as we felt, and some of the boys kept a looking over their shoulders suspicious like to the cabin where the dead men lay, as though they were afraid the night might encourage 'em to come out an' pick their company for the next day's journey.

"Si Hawkins tried to pump the fellow that drove the team up to the camp, but he didn't know anything about it. The coffins had been loaded in by the undertaker, 'and he brought them' up as they were given to him. Si Hawkins told us to come into Dutch Dave's, and the boys began to get their courage out of a bottle, in the natural way. As they got livened up they began to talk about their fears and recommend each other for the vacant honor.

"'Mebbe it's after the feller what stole Simpson's horse,' said Five Fingered Jack, in a sort of bantering tone. 'If he comes he'll need it mighty bad.'

"The crowd laughed all but [illegible] took it seriously and tried to [illegible] 'He won't git no coffin [illegible] lucky ter git buried at all [illegible] yer want ter, but [illegible] funerals to-morrow.'

"'Ther's a dead coyote [illegible] the gulch. Mebbe you'd like [illegible] with the boys,' [illegible] him.

"Jim began to get [illegible] Hear that,' he said, [illegible] the mountain owl, but [illegible] dead man the cold [illegible] little off color. [illegible] mean bad luck. [illegible] again.

"'Shet up, can't yer,' [illegible] contemptuously. 'Ye're wuss nor [illegible] scared fool like you is a regular Jonah in camp. Ye'd break it up in a week of ye had yer way.'

"'Who's a scared fool?' says Jim, firing up like a fighting cock.

"'You air,' says Jack.

"'Yer a liar,' says Jim.

"The boys began to climb behind boxes and anywhere else they could to get out of the way. There had been bad feeling between the two ever since they came into camp, and we knew it meant business when they began passing compliments like that. About as soon as you could say Jack Robinson the popping began. The two men walked toward each other firing as fast as you could count. Jim dropped to the floor. Five Fingered Jack wavered a moment and then fell across Jim's body.

"We crawled out of our hiding places to view the remains. Si Hawkins was the first to get to them, and he looked down mournfully as we gathered around.

"'God, boys,' he said, regretfully, 'we've one coffin short.'"—San Francisco Post.

TABOR'S THREE MINES.

FROM PLODDING STOREKEEPER TO SUCCESSFUL SPECULATOR.

The Romances of Little Pittsburg, Chrysolite and Matchless—The Luck Which Lay in a "Grub Stake"—Not Broken in Fortune.

At length came the realization of the carbonate wealth hidden in these hills. Where Oro had been established in 1860 Leadville was laid out in 1878. Even in this period of new excitement Tabor's head was not turned from his routine of storekeeping. His trade boomed naturally with the growth of the camp, which added to its population as many as 500 a day during the big rush. Lawyers, gamblers, everybody, flocked to the hills and laid out claims, and strained their backs at the pick and windlass. Tabor was not so carried away. He stood behind the counter and weighed out the bacon and the meal. "He was a steady going—you might say plodding—storekeeper," is the description given by the pioneers. "That was all there was to him. Nobody ever thought of him as a mining man."

Occasionally the impecunious prospector came to Tabor with a proposition for a "grub stake." The storekeeper usually fell in with the suggestion, and weighed the supplies. The miner shouldered the pack and went over the hill. And Tabor entered up so many pounds of bacon and so many pounds of flour to profit and loss. How many miners Tabor has "grub staked" in his time Leadville does not pretend to say. Probably the number is well along in the hundreds. If anything came of this "grub staking" for nearly twenty years no record has been kept of the fact. But Tabor accumulated a few thousands and a good name during this plodding period of his life. No ill word is spoken of him as a storekeeper.

One day a miner named Rische made the usual credit arrangement with Tabor for "grub," walked up the hill as so many others had done before him, and went to work. He came down town of evenings, and got a tailor interested with him in the prospect. The tailor was George Hook, who, after listening to Rische's speculations about the claim, chucked his goose under the table, followed the miner up the hill, and went to work at the shaft. For some time Tabor would have resigned that "grub stake" claim for fifty cents on the dollar, and George Hook secretly regretted the day he left the bench to become a mining man.

But the time came when two of the partners sold out their thirds for $100,000 apiece, while Tabor, true to his character for hanging on, stayed in and saw that claim yield $8,000 a day, half of which he put in his pocket as the interest on his "grub stake" principal.

This is the romance of Little Pittsburg. Tabor, the plodding storekeeper, became another man entirely. He and Jerome B. Chaffee held on to Little Pittsburg until it yielded $8,000 a day. Then they stocked it. One day when they had just received returns from the latest shipment to the smelter and were sitting in the back room of the bank, Tabor said to Chaffee: "We'll stock this mine for $10,000,000."

"Oh, no," protested Chaffee, "that's too much. Make it $2,000,000, or something reasonable like that."

"Come to think of it, though," said Tabor, paying no attention to the interruption, "I believe we'll make it $20,000,000."

And they did. The 200,000 shares at $100 par value were issued, and climbed until they reached $35, representing a capital of $7,000,000. And then Tabor showed that besides possessing a capacity for holding on, he knew when to let go. Telling people plainly that while Little Pittsburg was a great mine, he didn't believe it was a fair equivalent for that valuation, he let go of his stock. There were plenty of takers, for the reports made by experts could not have been more glowing if the whole Fryer hill was of solid silver. Little Pittsburg was a grand producer for awhile, and has yielded $7,000,000, just 100 per cent. on the investment represented by the stock at $35 a share. But the date of the last dividend is ominous—"March 1880."

In four months Tabor made out of Little Pittsburg $1,300,000. But his luck didn't stop there. There used to be a character in Leadville known as Chicken Bill. His mother knew him as William Lovell. Chicken Bill took up a claim on Fryer hill and worked it industriously for some weeks. But after the shaft got down to such a depth that it was quite tiresome to haul the dirt up in a bucket, he became disgusted. In the language of Leadville, "he hadn't a smell of ore." Bill left his shaft one night and walked down the hill. As he came to George Fryer's New Discovery mine his eyes fell on some very good ore, which had just been taken out. Bill looked around. That was before the days of watchmen at the dumps and when all Leadville was supposed to be honest. Bill gathered up a lot of ore, what he could carry comfortably, walked back to his shaft, and threw the chunks in. Then he went down town in a very good humor. The next morning bright and early he was down his shaft pounding away among the rocks. About noon he went down town and told Tabor and others that he had "struck it" at last. Tabor, flushed with his Little Pittsburg experience, was then on the lookout for anything and everything, and he sent a man up to see what Chicken Bill had got. The investigator came back and reported "several inches of nice looking ore in sight." Tabor asked bill what he wanted for his find, and Bill said he owed $100 for "grub," which must be wiped out, and on top of that he wanted $50 for spending money. Tabor paid $150 and took possession. He sank that salted shaft five feet from where Bill had stopped and struck ore that yielded over $1,000,000.

This is the romance of the discovery of Chrysolite. Chicken Bill couldn't stand it. Prosperity by proxy was too much for him. He told the whole story on himself. Chicken Bill's claim and those of the Chrysolite Mining company consolidated with it have yielded $4,250,000, but no dividends have been paid since December, 1884.

The Matchless was another illustration of Tabor's wonderful luck. Tim Foley and his partners, Wiggs and the others, worked this claim until they had discovered some ore and sold out to Tabor for $112,000. They went around Leadville shaking hands and receiving congratulations on having "put it up on the old man this time." But Tabor held the property and kept on with development work. When he had taken out $1,000,000, sentiment began to change decidedly as to the wisdom of the investment. But the production kept right on up to $2,000,000. Then people began to wonder why Tabor didn't stock the mine and unload. Still he held on. The Matchless last year passed the $3,000,000 point, and today it is still producing. Tabor is the sole owner. He has never parted with a dollar's interest in the property. He enjoys the distinction of being the only Leadville man who has bought a big mine and developed it, and held on to it without forming a company or taking in a partner. Matchless is the only prominent mine in the district the title to which rests in a single name.

The impression has gone out that Tabor is broken in fortune. He has lost heavily in his numerous ventures, but there are few men in Leadville who wouldn't trade even today for what Tabor has got left. "Huh!" one of them said, "I wish I was as near broke as Tabor is."—Globe-Democrat.

AUTUMN.

Feathery clouds are few and fair,
Thistle down is on the air,
Rippling sunshine on the lake,
Wild grapes scent the sunny brake,
Wild bees murmuring take the ear,
Crickets make the silence dear;
Butterflies float in a dream,
Over all the swallows gleam.

Here and yonder, high and low,
Golden rod and sunflowers glow,
Here and there a maple flushes,
Summer reddens, woodbine blushes,
Purple asters bloom and thrive—
I am glad to be alive.

SOMETHING UNIQUE IN WARFARE.

A Struggle in Which the Old Were Pitted Against the Young Men.

Dr. Wolf, the explorer of the Sankuru river, has just told some curious facts about the Baluba tribe, who are becoming distinguished among all the millions of the Congo basin for their eagerness to accept from the whites all the ways of living and the information that they think will benefit or improve them. Long before the whites knew them they were regarded by the neighboring tribes as a most remarkable people, and they are keeping up their reputation.

Until within the past fifteen years the Baluba kept themselves strictly separate from their neighbors. They had no intercourse whatever with any other tribe. This is very unusual, for the tribes throughout Africa, if not quarreling with their neighbors, generally have many commercial dealings with them, and even in time of war the women of the hostile tribes sometimes mingle in perfect unity, exchanging their commodities.

The young men among the Baluba finally decided that it would be better for their tribe to cultivate relations with their neighbors and open the country to traders with other tribes. They had the support of their chief, but the old men and graybeards of the tribe set their faces sternly against the innovation. With the conservatism of old age they declared that such a step would ruin the tribe. As long as they lived, they said, they would never consent that the Baluba should mix with other peoples.

Each side was determined to have its way, and the quarrel grew more and more bitter, until finally it resulted in civil war. It was one of the most remarkable wars ever waged for on one side were ranked the old men, the fathers and counselors of the tribe, while on the other side fought the youth and lusty strength of the Baluba. The sons were pitted against their elders, but in this case as in others that might be mentioned, conservatism was simply unprogressive narrowmindedness, and wisdom was with the younger party.

The struggle was short and furious. It resulted in the complete overthrow of the old men. The hatred engendered by this unnatural war was so intense that the vanquished were nearly exterminated. Almost all the old men were killed or were thrown with their women into the Lulus. Then the young men opened their doors to commerce.—New York Sun.

Vest Button Photography.

The process of instantaneous photographing is rapidly becoming an evil. We hear talk already about specialists in photography for instantaneous pictures since the "Detective Camera," as it is called, was put upon the market. The box is so small that it can be carried anywhere without the slightest inconvenience, and, as the little lens at the bottom is always ready for use, an instantaneous picture can be taken at any desired moment.

In Germany, Herr Stirn recently produced before a photographic society enlargements to a size of forty centimeters from such pictures, and all were remarkably distinct and well defined. These plates can also be taken at different distances and always sharply outlined. Young men take their lady friends on promenade to be unconsciously photographed. People, young and old, who have never entered an artist's studio or a photographic gallery will be astonished to see their pictures freely circulated. Most of all, it is to be feared that the legitimate business of the photographer will be injured by these cameras. Any possible mania or desire for photos can soon be gratified at trifling expense and after a short term of practice by means of this invention. Photographs can soon be so multiplied as to become a positive nuisance, and from the various considerations that enter into the matter, it does not seem so very easy to answer our query—"What next?"—American Lithographer.

A Fine Melon.

"I want the biggest and best watermelon in that lot," he said as he surveyed a great pile of watermelons in front of a Woodward avenue grocery.

"Yes, sir—here it is—best melon I've seen this year."

"Plug it," was the brusque command.

"Yes, sir—splendid red core. Shall I put it on ice?"

The purchaser drew from his pocket a flask of port wine and proceeded to pour the contents into the orifice. The melon readily absorbed the liquid, and when the plug was replaced the man chuckled: "Ha! ha! ha! I want that melon sent to ——, the temperance fanatic! Say nothing, and it will be a big joke on him."

A couple of days later the man came around to the store again and asked:

"Well, the melon was sent up?"

"Oh, yes."

"And the boy didn't give my little plot away?"

"Oh, no, but we heard from it."

"You did! Ha! ha! ha! What did he say?"

"He and his family were off up the lake, but the hired girl and coachman said it was the finest melon they ever put tooth into!"—Detroit Free Press.

An Ex-Manager's Superstition.

"I'll give you a tip," said J. F. Donnelly, formerly of the management of the Bijou opera house, in New York, recently. "If a man offers you a fair price for your horse or dog, or any favorite or pet of the kind, take it. I am superstitious upon that point. I once lost a valuable horse the day after I had refused a big offer for him, and on Saturday last a man fell in love with my Irish collie, and I actually denied him when he rubbed a wad of $400 under my nose! The dog was a great pet in my household. I brought him from Ireland when a pup. Yesterday he got caught by the cowcatcher of a Sea Beach road locomotive and was instantly killed. I wish now that I had accepted the man's roll of bills. Don't you ever refuse an offer under like circumstances. You watch the papers. You will notice when the death is announced of a great racer that the day before his owner had been offered a fabulous price for him. It isn't any reportorial finishing touch. It's a fact. I know, and I give you the tip."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Asking for a Light.

Americans abroad who stop people in the streets to ask for a light for their cigars are more or less politely directed to the nearest tobacco shop and advised to buy a box of fuses. This apparent incivility has its merits. At the Cortlandt street ferry, last week, I saw a man with a stump of a cigar importuning strangers for a light. The first stranger gave him a match, which blew out. The second reluctantly handed him a freshly lighted cigar, but the stump was ash-headed and would not take the fire. The third handed over his half smoked weed, shrugged his shoulders and walked off. The applicant had now incommoded three persons and spoiled two good cigars. Yet, as he puffed away contentedly at his stump, he doubtless considered himself a gentleman.

THE WEED IN PERSIA.

AN ORIENTAL LAND, SAID TO BE THE SMOKER'S PARADISE.

The Persian's Social Position Shown by the Number and Value of His Pipes. The Eternal Water Pipe—The Etiquette of Smoking.

Persia is the smoker's paradise. In the first place, tobacco is cheap; fourteen pounds of it in the cured leaf cost from three to ten shillings. There is no middleman or manufacturer to mix, chop, scent, flavor and adulterate it. The grower cures it and packs it in bags of skin. In these bags the merchant sells it to the retailer; and then the smoker, pipe in hand, samples the various lots, and purchases from a pennyworth to a bagful, as seemeth to him good. There are various kinds of tobacco in Persia: the leaf tobacco, which is smoked in the kalian, for bubble-bubble; the Kurdish tobacco, which is almost white, and consists of the leaves and stalks of the plant coarsely pulverized. This is a very fragrant pipe tobacco, and may be obtained mild or excessively strong, and it is smoked in chibouques or in the Arab short clay pipe. The only recommendations of the Arab pipe are its cheapness and its portability. It is a simple tube of clay about six inches long, with a bore an inch in diameter; it is constructed in the middle, and bent at nearly a right angle. It is essentially the poor man's pipe. Crammed with a Kurdish tobacco, of which it will hold half an ounce, it is passed from hand to hand until it is smoked out.

In the north of Persia and in the capital the papiros, or cigarette, is rapidly gaining ground; the commonest Samsoon tobacco is used as a rule, or a very similar article grown in Ghilan and rather superior to it. But the real national pipe of Persia is the kalian. Among the merchant and tradesman class the kalian is ever between the lips. The peripatetic vender of smoke is seen in Persia in every place where men congregate for business or pleasure. Even at executions the criminal will ask for and receive a farewell whiff of the eternal water pipe before he is blown from a gun. I have seen a man undergoing the long agonies of crucifixion seeking solace in the kalian.

THE PERSIAN AND HIS PIPES.

The social position of the Persian is shown by the number and the value of his pipes. The pipebearer to a great man is a highly paid domestic, who may have in his care from fifty to a hundred pipes, varying in value from £5 to £500. The pipes of the king and of the royal princes are often made entirely of gold incrusted with a profusion of gems; the middle and upper classes generally content themselves with kalians whose reservoirs and stems are of solid silver, the bowl only being of gold ornamented with gems or enamels. The religious classes mostly affect a kalian of the simplest kind; the water reservoir being a wide mouthed bottle of coarse porous clay, the stem being composed of curiously turned wood stained a bright crimson, and the bowl made of a black porcelain resembling ebony in appearance. But in the privacy of their own harems the holy men do not disdain to smoke the costly pipes of their wives; for everybody smokes in Persia—old men and maidens, young men and children—and the old women are the most inveterate smokers of all.

Among the middle classes the water reservoir is often composed of glass, elaborately cut and often decorated with the florid colored and gilt ornamentation which Turkish art has rendered familiar to us. These glass reservoirs, for which there is an enormous market throughout Persia and central Asia, are made in Russia. Rose water is frequently used in place of the vulgar fluid; rose leaves, tiny rosebuds, and the immature fruit of the almond or plum are tossed into it, and as the smoker at each inhalation sets the liquid in violent motion a pleasant sight is thus offered for his contemplation, much resembling the pretty toys that may be seen in some of the filter shops in London. In the hot weather a porous clay reservoir is affected by all classes, as it is supposed to cool the water that purifies the fragrant smoke; they will even ice the water. The water is changed every time the pipe is lighted, and is itself not without its uses; for it is an ever handy and never failing emetic—a useful thing in a country where poisoning is not infrequent.

ETIQUETTE AND PUNCTILIO.

Probably the Persians are the most poetical as well as the most practical people in the world. All through the summer the stems of their pipes are decorated with circles of tiny moss rose buds; or, the interstices having been filled with grass seeds or grains of corn, the pipe is handed to the smoker covered with rows of sprouting verdure an inch and a half long. This decoration of pipes is part of the duty of the pipe bearer or of the ladies of the harem, and the pipe bearer's office is no sinecure. He has several stocks of tobacco of varying quality.

The etiquette and punctilio of pipe smoking are endless. When a visitor is offered a pipe, and there is not a second one, he declines it at once; his host must smoke first. This, if the entertainer be much superior in position, he will actually do, but otherwise he declines, and the guest, having first offered the pipe to the other visitors, who decline it as a matter of course, proceeds to smoke, and then it is handed round to everybody in order of rank.

No business in the east can be done without the smoking of many water pipes; it forms a large portion of the enjoyment of the Oriental bath, it fills up the pauses of conversation, and, when a man is at a loss for an answer, it gives him time to think. The very sound of the bubbling water in a hot country is soothing to the ear. That it is not smoked in Europe is probably due to the fact that he who would smoke the Persian water pipe would need to keep a Persian servant to fill it for him.—Foreign Letter.

"Yes, I just sent for one."

CLYSDALE COLT

3 mon hs old on the 6th. Sept. inst. and of the following excellent pedegree, viz:—

HIS SIRE was Wellwood (4109) imported by Jeffry Bro's, Whitby, when a 2 year old in 1885. Wellwood was bred by Robt. Williams (Green, Wishaw Lanarkshire, Scotland, and had for his sire, Baron Renfrew (37), and for his dam, Salley of Wishaw. (3102) by Farmer (286), a winner of numerous prizes; His G dam was Nancy (83) by Young Willie, (1883); G. G. Dam, by Samson (741); and his G. G. G. Dam, by Farmers Fancy, (298), the winner of the Crief premium in 1823, and a son of the famous Glancer, (335). Wellwood as a two year old took second prize at the Provincial Exhibition in London in 1885, and third prize the same year at Toronto, in a ring of 22 competitors. Owing to the death of Mr. Henry Jeffry, he was not exhibited in 1886 and he died in February 1887. In a letter just received from Jeffry Bro's. they say that they "never had a horse that got such good stock."

THIS COLTS DAM is Fannie of Coboconk (186) bred by Thos. Jansen Greenbank Ont. She was sired by Highland Chief (imp) (382); her Dam was Nelly of Greenbank (140) by Scotland's Glory (imp) (845); G. Dam Jessica by Canada Farmer (175); G. G. Dam by Loudon Tom (imp) (1482); G. G. G. Dam, by Rob Roy (imp) (3185); G. G. G. G. Dam by Grey Clyde (imp) (78). It will be observed that although Canadian bred, this colt's pedegree is very pure and that through his dam he inherits the blood of the leading clydsdale horses imported into the Whitby district—the home of the clydsdale in Canada—and that he traces back to "Grey Clyde" of whom Mr. McCrae of Guelph in his history of the clydsdale horse, now being published in the Canada Stock Journal says:—"Grey Clyde was bred in Cumberland, England, and was sired by Young Clyde. This horse was a great prize winner. His sire was Lofty, and it is on record that Lofty never was beaten in a show ring but by his son Young Clyde. The dam of Grey Clyde was by Stitcher and he by old Stitcher. Grey Clyde was therefore well come and his produce in Canada did credit to his breeding." This colt may be seen, and his price ascertained on application to MR. JOHN CARNEGIE, Peterboro', or to J. H. CARNEGIE.

ALSO OUR CELEBRATED

WHYTE'S PATENT No. 3 and No. 4 PLOUGHS,

Which we are fully warranted in saying are the best general ploughs in Canada, as heretofore. They are fitted up with the very best Black Diamond Steel Mould Boards and Landsides, specially imported for our own use; and with our new process of tempering, will be found this fall superior to any we have ever turned out. Every board is guaranteed to be hard all over—no soft spots—and will clean in any soil. We may say here the standard of Whyte's Patent No. 4 is heavier and stronger than the No. 3, and better adapted for rough, stony land. Our points and soles, being made from a mixture of American car wheel iron, are hard, strong and durable. Repairs of every description will be promptly attended to at the foundry and executed in a satisfactory manner, and at moderate prices.

Our customers will please note that we have changed our office from Hunter street to the foundry, where all accounts and notes will have to be paid, and as we have had to lay out a large amount of money rebuilding our shops, we trust all those whose accounts for 1886 have not been paid will call and settle either by cash or note on or before 1st September.

We beg to call the attention of manufacturers, millers and contractors to the following articles, which we are now manufacturing, and which can be obtained at the foundry, west end of McDonnell Street:—

The Dawson Rotary Lune Force Pump,

The simplest, cheapest and most effective fire pump for factories ever invented. Is specially adapted for tanneries, paper mills, etc.

MILL GEARING, SHAFTING, HANGERS, PULLEYS

And all kinds of Brass and Iron Castings. House Castings of every description made to order. Balcony, Cemetery, and Fence Railing, House Cresting. SWEET EYES.

See those sweet eyes, those more than sweetest eyes;
Eyes whom the stars exceed not in their grace;
See love at gaze, love that would fain devise,
But cannot speak, to plead his wondrous case.
Love would discharge the duty of his heart
In beauty's praise, whose greatness doth deny
Words to his thoughts, and thoughts to his desert;
Which high conceit since nothing can supply,
Love here constrain'd the conquest to confess,
Bids silence sigh what tongue cannot express.
—Leisure Hour.

NOT FOR THE MONEY.

In the drawing room of a small house—one of a very long terrace in a northern suburb of London—sat a girl by the firelight. The room, a long narrow one, with folding doors, was shabbily and poorly furnished. The furniture and cheap ornaments, however, had been carefully dusted and brushed. Evidently their owners had endeavored to make the best of their threadbare appearance. The girl lay almost at full length on a low American chair placed straight across the hearthrug, seemingly for the purpose of getting the greater amount of benefit from the poor fire burning in the grate. She was tall, slight and fair, and certainly good looking. And a wealth of chestnut hair crowned the top of an exceedingly well shaped head. The eyes, large and well opened, looked dreamily into the fire.

The door opened, and a lady entered. Shutting the door softly, she stepped with a gliding motion to the girl in the American chair, and stood looking down at her. The relationship was evident. The mother was the image of the daughter, grown older, petrified, as it were, into a distinctly unpleasant looking middle age. The chestnut hair had faded, without becoming gray; her eyes, large and well opened, like her daughter's, had a stony stare in them; and her mouth the same discontented and sarcastic droop, ten times intensified. Not a pleasant old lady to look upon by any means.

The girl had not removed her eyes from the fire on her mother's entrance. She remained in precisely the same position, apparently oblivious of the fact that Mrs. Grenoble's stony gaze was fixed upon her face.

At last the mother broke the silence.

"I hope, Paula, you have read the letter carefully, and have come at last to a sensible conclusion on the matter."

"Which letter, and what conclusion?" asked the girl, with a sarcastic inflection of her low, clear voice.

"Don't be foolish, Paula," said her mother testily. "You know perfectly well what I mean. You have a chance that not one girl in ten thousand has—the chance of a rich, fortunate life, without worries, without cares, without"—

"Love," murmured the girl softly.

"Love!" said her mother, scornfully. "What is love without money? or what is love worth in comparison to money? Love is a mere word without substance, without reality, without meaning. And you have the opportunity of lifelong enjoyment of a princely fortune—£50,000 that will be yours as long as you remain single. And you hesitate!"

"Naturally," said Paula, a gleam of mischief lighting up the weariness of her pale face. "Most girls object to the prospect of being an old maid."

"Listen to reason, Paula. You are very young, only just turned 20. Your whole life up to the present moment has been spent in weary, hopeless poverty. Not the poverty of the very poor, who often want daily bread, but who, the bread once gained, have no appearances to keep up. Ours is the poverty of the well born, the well bred, the daily striving to keep our shabby clothes presentable, our shabby house and furniture from getting even more worn and threadbare. Think what you might do with that £50,000. The dresses you could have to wear, the jewels you might buy; think how you would have the chance of traveling in foreign countries, of seeing places and things you can only sigh and long for now in vain. And then think of your life, married to Charles Etheridge on his paltry £300 a year, with no prospect of its ever much increasing."

When her mother spoke of the £50,000, Paula's eyes gleamed with a strange light, and her mouth lost its sarcastic droop, and quivered with excitement. At the mention of Charles Etheridge's name she slightly brushed her lips with the letter she held in her left hand.

"Well!" said her mother interrogatively.

"Ah," said Paula, lazily changing her position in the American chair, so as to face her mother, "you were saying something to me just now. It seemed rather long. I can't quite remember it all. Ah, yes; about the £50,000, and Uncle Dick's insane will. By the way, I suppose he wasn't mad when he made it, was he? It couldn't be disputed or anything of that kind, could it? What a pity! £50,000 is worth having."

"Yes," said Mrs. Grenoble, "and if you have a grain of sense in your composition, you'll keep it, and send Charles Etheridge about his business. You will be able to ride in your carriage and"—

"Dress like the Princess of Wales," said Paula languidly. "Yes, there is something tangible about ready money, after all. Oh! to have something else to wear but this rag of a gown! Let me think. I would have a tailor made costume. One tailor made costume! No, I'd have half a dozen, one for every day in the week, and a tight fitting jacket trimmed with sable, and a plush mantle for the theatre, and, and—oh, if it could only be!" and the girl's eyes sparkled, and a covetous longing look came over the fair face.

Her mother with a few more words of caustic persuasion left the room. She thought she knew her daughter's character better than the girl herself. She knew that the life of pinching poverty had brought out all the worst traits in Paula's disposition, and she hoped to make capital of them for her own especial benefit. If Paula accepted the conditions of her uncle's will and lived single, she would naturally live at home, and Mrs. Grenoble would naturally become partaker of all the good things that Paula with her money would be able to procure.

In the meantime Paula was lying back in the American chair musing. Presently she lifted the letter with the closely written four pages, and went once more over the well known lines. As she read her eyes darkened and softened with a tender light, and the droop at the corner of her mouth became less marked.

At the end she laid it in her lap, and, without changing her position, read the other letter. The reading took the lovelight out of her eyes and brought back a covetous gleam which shone like bright steel through her thick lashes.

Then she spoke to herself in a low tone.

"Which is it to be? Love or money? And I must decide to-morrow. Charlie and his £300 a year—and—the £50,000."

The next morning, when Paula came down rather late to breakfast, she found her mother busily reading a very long and closely written letter whilst uttering grunts of strong disapproval.

"What is the matter?" asked Paula, sitting listlessly down at the table, and lazily buttering her toast.

"Why, I have just had a letter from Miss Price and her companion asking me to take her in for a few days. She wants to do some shopping, or make some calls, or something of the kind, and our house is convenient, so she says. I should have thought, too far from town. But then she has her own carriage, or hires one, and we shall not see much of her, that is one comfort. I wonder she does not go to her own relations. She has plenty of them."

"Possibly she is afraid," said Paula languidly. "She is so alarmingly rich, she might think it too much of a temptation to her dear relations to stay with them."

"Paula, you are ridiculous, and you have such strange notions for so young a girl. It is really very impolitic to talk in the way you do. However, I'm too busy to scold now"—

"For small mercies let us be grateful," murmured Paula.

"Miss Price may be here at any moment, and I must see about her room," and Mrs. Grenoble bustled out of the room.

Half an hour afterward there was a meek little rap at the street door. In a few minutes Miss Price and her companion were ushered into the room.

Miss Price was a little thin old lady of over 60 years old. She wore her light hair, which was streaked with gray, in tiny little curls on each side of her cheeks. Her face was little and shrunken, her figure pinched and small, her hands and feet small. But the worst thing about her was the utterly careworn and miserable expression of her face. A listless wretchedness had, as it were, eaten itself into her withered countenance, and was shown in every gesture of her knotted, veined hands and bony neck.

"And yet she has four thousand a year," said Paula to herself.

Miss Price appeared in mortal dread of her companion, and yet totally unable to do without her. Mrs. Mount tyrannized over her in the most shamefaced manner, and poor Miss Price submitted meekly in the listless, hopeless way her face betrayed.

"Will there ever be a time when a companion will be necessary to my well being?" thought Paula.

The next morning was fine, and Miss Price elected to do her shopping. A carriage was ordered, for Miss Price was not strong, and the rattle and noise of omnibuses did not agree with her. But she grumbled at the expense, and feared she was ruining herself. Paula and Mrs. Mount accompanied her. And what a time they had of it! Miss Price wanted dresses, but nothing suited her. The cheap ones were too common, and the better ones too expensive. Her unhappy face was bent over the goods, comparing them, finding fault now with the color, now with the texture, but generally with the price. Finally she chose an expensive silk and some brown cashmere, and her face looked more miserable still after she had paid the bill. And then to the milliners, and the same scene enacted over again. Paula watched, as in a dream, the pretty tasteful bonnets changed, as if by magic, into dowdy commonplace constructions as soon as they surrounded Miss Price's discontented old face. It seemed to occur to Miss Price also that it did not much matter which she chose, for she kept her face turned resolutely from the mirrors, and deferred, at last, to Mrs. Mount's judgment. Paula shuddered as she thought that she might come to just such an unpleasant old age. To be dependent on the taste of a companion for the selection of one's clothes! To look so wretched and woe begone as to come to shun the sight of one's own countenance!

Paula was thoughtful that evening and very silent. Mrs. Grenoble told her it was time, full time, to send an answer to the letters. Paula said she would write them tomorrow before breakfast. Her mother said, of course, there was no doubt as to her choice. No child, blessed with such a mother as she had to advise her, would hesitate a moment. Paula answered gravely that the advent of Miss Price had left no doubt in her mind as to which course she would pursue. Her mother looked at her doubtfully as she made this last remark, lighting her bedroom candle meanwhile, but Paula gave a prodigious yawn, which entirely destroyed any expression her face might have possessed at the time, and vanished from the room.

When Paula reached her bedroom she placed her candle on the toilet table, and, sitting down with her elbows on the table and her cheeks resting in her two hands, calmly surveyed her reflection in the glass. It was certainly pleasant to look upon, with its piles of chestnut hair crowning the pale oval face and its steady, clear eyes shining in the dim light. But as she looked Paula, as through a mist, seemed to see the chestnut hair grown scanty and streaked with gray, the face thin and lined, the mouth with its, alas! already too discontented droop, intensified and hardened by years of loneliness and unhappiness. Of what use would fine clothes be then with a face like that? To live alone, uncared for, unloved, would soon sour the young face, and then—she would grow like Miss Price!

"No," said Paula resolutely, "no—I cannot do it. Not for £50,000 can I consent to run the risk of growing like Miss Price. I dare say when I am as old as she is I shall be fat and have a red face, but then Charlie will be old, too, and probably fat also, so we shan't be able to reproach each other. And we shall be together, and we shall have got over all our little quarrels and misunderstandings, and we shall by that time understand each other's peculiarities. We shall be horribly poor, 'beastly poor,' as Bella Wilfer used to say; but for all that I would rather be with Charlie than with mamma all my life. And then the fine clothes—what good are they after one has grown old and ugly? And as to traveling about and seeing things—why, I would rather stay at home than have to go about alone or with—a Miss Price. I wish—I wish I could choose Charlie and the £50,000, too. I don't suppose that anybody with more money than Charlie would ask me to marry him. It wouldn't do to run the risk of waiting. No. It is my fate to be Mrs. Etheridge; and—well, it's a better fate than to be Miss Price."

The next morning Paula went down to breakfast with a demure countenance. She and her mother were alone. Miss Price was breakfasting in bed, and Mrs. Mount was bearing her company. Mrs. Grenoble looked at her daughter inquisitively, but Paula subsided languidly into a chair and asked for a cup of coffee. Then she took up the paper and became apparently immersed in the political crisis.

At last Mrs. Grenoble's patience gave way.

"Have you written those letters, Paula?"

"What letters?"

"You know as well as I do. The letters to Mr. Etheridge and the lawyer."

"Yes. I have written them."

"And your decision is what was to be expected?"

"Precisely."

"You have written to Mr. Etheridge, breaking off your engagement?"

"I have written to Mr. Etheridge, telling him I would marry him when he pleases," returned Paula, calmly.

"What! What!" burst forth Mrs. Grenoble in a fury.

"Well, that was what was to be expected, wasn't it? We have been engaged two years, and a wedding is generally expected after that length of time, and Charlie wants me to fix the day, and so I've fixed it, and there's an end of the matter."—Margaret Cresswell in Belgravia.

Preventing Sunstroke.

The best thing to prevent sunstroke is a thoroughly ventilated hat, the ideal hat for summer being that which simply shades the head. If such a one cannot be procured, the lightest and best ventilated one obtainable should be worn, and it should be frequently lifted and held above the head, so as to shade it and let the air circulate around it. The frequent wetting of the head with cold water is, of course, good. Do not wear anything that prevents the free radiation of the natural heat from the head, and the free circulation of air around it. If a person is prostrated by sunstroke, put pounded ice or cold water on the head, and give plenty of fresh air, cool if possible.—American Agriculturist.

THE DEPREDATING HEN.

Of all the things in nature that afflict the sons of men,
There is nothing that I know of beats the depredating hen;
If you see a wild eyed woman firing brickbats from the shed,
You can bet a hen has busted up her little flower bed.
She plunders and she scratches, she cackles and she hatches,
And forty thousand cowboys couldn't keep her in a pen;
She was sent on earth to fret us, to excoriate the lettuce;
She's a thoro' going nuisance, is the depredating hen.

I threw a brick and missed her, as she hustled out my beans,
But Julius Cæsar's statue was smashed to smithereens;
I saw her digging rifle pits where I'd put my pansies in,
I fired a good sized rock and hit my hired man on the shin.
She busts all bounds and shackles, she giggles and she cackles,
She makes me say some earnest things I haven't time to pen.
I never used bad language, but now I'm filled with anguage.
Alas! I've broke the record, thro' that depredating hen.

But now thro' out my cabinet there floats a pleasant smell,
And the reason for that perfume isn't hard to tell;
For when I rose this morning, saw my cabbage bed a wreck,
I caught that depredating hen and fiercely wrung her neck:
I hear her fizz and crackle, no more she'll scratch and cackle,
Or make my summer garden look like some hyena's den,
She far too long has bossed me, she far too much has cost me,
I'll eat at luncheon time today a hundred dollar hen.

TRICK OF "TICKLING" TROUT.

A Process Well Known Among the Boys of Ireland—Its Success.

"I was astonished to learn by Mr. Thorndyke's statement that the bears on the shores of Carbon river, at the base of the precipitous Mount Tacoma, have mastered the process of catching the hook nosed salmon by the art of 'tickling,'" said a gentleman who was born on the Emerald Isle, and is proud of it. "I wonder whether the boys in Ireland taught it to them or learned it from them? I know when I was a youngster we Irish lads carried on the sport to an extent that led the gamekeepers to suspect that there were more and shrewder poachers in that part of the country than had ever been hounded out of it; but they never suspected that the ragged, barefooted boy, who whistled as he plucked the blackberries from the hedges, and would have been as familiar with the mariner's compass, had it been placed before him, as with a trout rod, creek reel line and cast of flies, was one of the licenseless culprits who caused the scarcity of trout.

"Yet so it was. When the keeper was well out of sight the small boy would throw away the blackberries which he had collected, but did not care to eat, and knowing by long experience where the big speckled fellows loved to lurk, he would, dart to a deep still spot, well shaded, and where the bank overhung the water. Then, crawling to the edge, he would look cautiously over. If a trout was basking near the surface the dirty little hand, making no perceptible ripple in the stream, so carefully was it put in, was soon under it. The fingers were then raised until, with almost incredible gentleness, their points touched the trout's stomach, when a slight oscillation was commenced. This was the 'tickling' part of the maneuver. The boys thought the trout enjoyed it, but perhaps they supposed that it was only the weeds softly brushing them. Anyhow, it rarely disturbed them, and the hand gradually assumed a surer position, until, with a dexterous movement, swift as the lightning flash, the fish was cast out of the water, generally on the opposite bank. The probability is that the trout so captured is asleep, and, though its eyes are of course open, it can see nothing.

"I have often caught two dozen fine trout in a day after this fashion, and all the time kept a bright lookout that I was not caught myself; and while I was 'tickling' them I was carefully avoiding sportsmen who, not far away, were fruitlessly whipping the stream.

"The bear seems to capture his prey, as it were, by main strength. He just puts his claw under the fish and casts it out. The hook nosed salmon must be a stupid fellow to be so easily taken. The Irish boy has to be more artistic, so, perhaps, he taught the mode of fishing to the bears."—San Francisco Examiner.

Triumph of the Divining Rod.

One of the most recent triumphs of the divining rod in Britain has been at the Avondale docks. The company owning the docks having received an intimation that an American company proposed establishing a sugar factory near the docks, provided a good water supply could be secured, a certain Mr. Lawrence—who has the reputation of success as a water finder—was engaged to examine the neighboring ground. In this case the rod employed was a piece of spring steel, which was bent to the shape of a horseshoe, as the searcher, holding his elbows close to his sides, began to walk slowly over the field. After a while the steel became so violently agitated, and twisted itself with such force, that one of Mr. Lawrence's fingers was cut. He directed the company to commence boring at the spot thus indicated by the shedding of his blood, and the work was accordingly commenced. At the depth of 107 feet water was struck, and has since flowed at the rate of a thousand gallons per hour.

In New England, also, the location of wells is said to be frequently decided by the aid of the water twig. And moving westward, we are told that the Southern Pacific and Central Pacific railroad companies have, in crossing arid plains, been glad to avail themselves of the services of the divining rod in order to successfully locate their artesian wells.

Doubtless ere long this seemingly mysterious power will be scientifically explained. For the present, however, it remains among the number of unfathomed mysteries, of which a few still remain, to puzzle our wisest men and to provoke contemptuous sneers of those who (forgetting how little our great-grandparents knew of the forces of steam and electricity and how certain it is that nature still holds many a secret which science has yet failed to discover) believe that whatever is beyond their own power of understanding must necessarily be foolishness.—Miss Gordon Cumming in The Quiver.

Antidote for Germs and Fungi.

Dr. A. B. Griffiths, an English physician, has just published a communication which is of great importance to horticulturists and agriculturists. He demonstrates that iron sulphate is an antidote for many of the most virulent epidemics which attack field and garden crops. These diseases are due to microscopic funguses, whose structures are built up in a somewhat different manner to the corresponding parts in other plants. It appears that the cellulose in these funguses is acted upon by iron sulphate, whereas in the higher plants the cellulose of the cell walls is not influenced. The iron sulphate destroys the cellulose of the funguses, but does not affect that of the attacked plant. It is, therefore, an antidote and destroyer of such parasitic germs and funguses as the potato disease, wheat mildew, etc.—Frank Leslie's.

In California surplus apricots are to be made into wine. Experiment shows that they make a richly flavored wine, clear and effervescent as the best champagne.

NOTE.—Now is the time to send in your old furniture for repairs.

Unless the boiling be,
Filling the spoils the tea.

HOUSEWIFE SOLILOQUIZING:—Just think of the conceit of these men. Because they buy and sell Tea, they must, forsooth, also give directions as to how it should be made, as if every woman didn't know that water should be applied to the Tea only while in a boiling condition. Of course, any woman, or girl, for that matter either, knows that Tea is ruined when water is poured on which has not come to the boil, and more, that it is just as completely spoiled when water is applied which has been a long time boiling.

Madam, with such an expression of your knowledge, we can rely on your judgment on the subject of testing Tea; but the fact is, so many need to be almost daily reminded of this cardinal principle that we have adopted the Rebus method at the head of our advertisement to convey the hint as delicately as we know how. We protest we meant no offence, and beg to apologise for having unintentionally hurt your feelings.

But, seriously, we want your trade for Tea. We feel confident in the ability to supply you with a superior article at the minimum price. We always carry a large line of Young Hysons, Blacks in various grades, and Japans.

Just now Teas are very cheap. Considering the price, we are able to show you astonishing value in Japan at 20c. per pound. This Tea is slightly broken, otherwise it would bring 30c. in any market. Got anything better? Oh, yes. We can give you better at 25c. and still better at 30c., while at 35c. you can have as good Tea as is sold by many at 45c., on time. Have we good value in Blacks? Yes; Blacks are a specialty with us. In selecting them we avoid those of a tarry flavor, or, as described by some, with a taste like senna. We never keep them in any case.

Our choice for Black Tea is one that is full flavored, good body and bright, clear liquor.

In Blacks, we say it confidently, we can give you satisfaction as to quality and price.

You wish to know what we do in Young Hysons? Well, we quote prices in this grade at 25, 30, 40 and 50 cents, giving extra value as compared with prices in each line.

Sugars, do you ask for? Well, just now, owing to scarcity of raw crop, the burning of one refinery, and a combination on the part of the other with the leading wholesale houses, prices have been somewhat advanced, still we are cutting prices so close there is no money in it for us. Competition in a town like Peterborough keeps us in comparatively a healthy condition.

Fruits? Yes, these goods always secure our best attention. We buy nothing of that kind because it is cheap; it must have quality as well. Raisins, Currants, Prunes, Candied Peels are right in price, quality and condition. No wormy trash for us at any price.

Yes, we do a good deal in China, Crockery and Glassware, and make it a point to sell at the closest living prices. We don't take back water from any house in the trade. Anything special in pattern, do you say? Yes, we refer to one only at this time. It is a fine China Tea Set, and is known as the Queen's Jubilee Pattern. It is in various colors—Light Blue, Light Brown, Hair Brown and Dark Grey. It is worth your while to see the figure before buying elsewhere. To describe briefly, the figure shows the head of the Queen as she appears in later life. Below is a wreath of Rose, Shamrock and Thistle, and the words "1837 to 1887," and "Queen's Jubilee." Taken altogether, it should be a wedding gift that any young couple starting out in life ought to be proud to have, always indicating that their happy life dates from the Jubilee Year, and can only be bought in Peterborough from

EXHIBITION NUMBER.

PETERBOROUGH, SEPTEMBER, 1887.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT.

SEPTEMBER 17th is the hundredth anniversary of the present constitution of the United States, a date of great interest to our neighbors, and not without interest to Canada also.

The current number of the Century Magazine contains an article on "The Framers and Framing of Our Constitution," which should be read by all Canadians who wish to learn how the system of the neighboring Federation grew into its present shape, and thereby to obtain valuable light in considering the constitution of our own Dominion.

Even those who know better often vaguely acquiesce in the popular idea that the present constitution of the United States was framed at or soon after the time that the former colonies declared their independence. In reality there was a lapse of 13 years before the constitution was signed, and two years later still ten important amendments, making great changes, were adopted. It is true that in 1781, five years after the Declaration of Independence, a form of Federal Government was accepted by all the States, with a so-called Congress, but it was found to be altogether unworkable. The trouble was that the central government, if such it could be called, had a very restricted and fettered jurisdiction, and even less power to enforce its decisions. Our author gives a graphic account of the manner in which each State did what was good in its own eyes, without the least concern for the common welfare. A small minority could prevent any important measure from passing, indeed three men could ensure its defeat. But not content with such large powers, the several States usurped others when it pleased them, set at naught treaties made by Congress, made treaties for themselves, waged war, maintained armies, settled interstate boundaries, and did other things, all forbidden to them by the articles of confederation, not even stopping short of rebellion. In fact they behaved just as some Canadian politicians would have our Provinces behave.

So impracticable was the system that various attempts were made to grant to Congress a necessary enlargement of its powers. They were all defeated, sometimes by the refusal of only one State against twelve. Again Canada may be interested in observing that at one time the obstruction came from Rhode Island, little then as now, at another time from New York, then one of the smaller States.

At length when the evil became intolerable assent was given to assembling a Constitutional Convention in 1787, after it had several times been refused. Then followed a prolonged struggle in which while the convention sat in secret the extreme upholders of State rights fought in vain against the establishment of a strong national Government though they obtained some concessions such as the equal representation of States in the Senate. New York and New Jersey were then among the small States, which were terrified at the idea of being coerced by a combination between the three larger States, Virginia, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts. At that time Virginia and Massachusetts were each three times as populous as New Jersey. So afraid indeed was New York of being overpowered by more populous States that she withrew in disgust from the convention when representation by population was carried, and was one of the last States to sign the constitution. In this convention also began the disputes as to slavery, which though then settled by a compromise were to break forth again and again till the great civil war decided for ever against the exaggerated pretensions of the party of State sovereignty. Other questions caused some difficulty, but at length they were happily decided and the Convention accomplished its work of framing the present constitution. Thus a national government was formed instead of a loose coalition of sovereign states having no coherence and no united strength. The dying Congress accepted the new constitution, and it was signed one after the other by all the thirteen States, though reluctantly by some. Little Rhode Island which had refused to take part in the Convention amidst the reproaches of the other States for its unpatriotic obstinacy was the last to sign the constitution and then only when the other States were preparing to treat it as a foreign country.

From the experience of our neighbor we may learn the lesson that a strong central government is essential to the well-being of a federated nationality, and is even more favourable to local freedom to manage local affairs that a loose agglomeration of discordant States pulling different ways and disputing with each other. The two great federations of this continent originated differently; in the United States, a number of sovereign states conferred certain powers upon a central government for their common advantage reserving other rights for themselves; in Canada a central power delegated certain definite functions to Provincial legislatures to suit local wants, retaining all others. Yet the erstwhile sovereign states found it expedient and necessary to abandon as injurious and impracticable an exaggeration of state rights and Provincial independence which is being urged in Canada by those, would rather see a group of discordant and wrangling Provinces than a strong and united Dominion. The advocates of disintegration in the United States failed disastrously after working great mischief. They will fail equally in the Dominion, we trust without doing so much harm. We may learn from our neighbors' experience.

Another lesson that we may take to ourselves is the unreasonableness of despairing of our country because there is some little friction in the early working of its constitution. Our neighbors had far more bitter and serious divergencies of opinion, and yet they have not fallen to pieces. If the people of Canada will show an equal amount of reasonableness and patriotism, will work for unity and will firmly discountenance all fomenters of discord, they have no reason to despair of building up a great, prosperous and united country. Union is strength, and those who cause disunion are public enemies.

EGGS.

THERE are, it is said, a hundred and one receipts for cooking eggs, but surely never before have they been cooked so thoroughly and diversely as by the Commercial Annexationists. At first its advocates said to the Canadian farmers "you export more than 14,000,000 dozen of eggs to the United States, and you are being robbed every year of the duty paid upon them." When gently reminded that there is no duty on eggs these schemers try another plan for making their omelet. "Yes," they say, "we were wrong when we said you were robbed of the amount of the duty, but see what a magnificent export you have, fourteen million dozen of eggs because they are free, and why should you not increase your export of other produce by making them free also?' There figures are not quite correct for less than thirteen million dozen of eggs are exported from Canada to the United States, but this is so unusually near the mark for these gentlemen that the cooking is hardly worth notice. What is more important is the fact that our export of eggs to our neighbor has under this free trade fallen off largely in four years, and the value per dozen has decreased 20 per cent., so this argument in favor of reciprocity is a boomerang. The truth is our eggs are required by our neighbors, not so much for food, but because the albumen is needed in large quantities for certain manufactures. They need our eggs and if there was a duty they would have to pay at least the larger portion of it, so they have taken it off.

The agitators do not confine their cookery to eggs or chicken in the shell, but pursue them when they are hatched. Their oracle, Mr. Wiman, again told our farmers they were robbed as to their spring chicken because "broilers" were sometimes worth $2.50 a pair in New York city, and they ought to get this price. Well Mr. Wiman is wrong again for there is no duty on spring chickens, so the duty cannot rob our farmers as it does not exist. The truth is that "broilers" are not worth $2.50 a pair even in the most aristocratic purveyor's of New York city, at the time when our farmers have spring chickens for sale, but only at such an early season that they have to be imported from the South or artificially incubated. Our farmers can get precisely the same wholesale price for their "broilers" as the farmers of the United States at an equal distance from a large city. They have a rather better profit in their local market now that they have a Canadian manufacturing population to supply, but the agitators wish our farmers to resign this advantage to the farmers of the United States.

These cookers of figures cannot successfully cook egg or broilers.

UNITED STATES DIPLOMACY.

IN an article expressing, not only its own hostility, but that of the United States Senates to the very idea of a joint commission to settle the fishery question, the New York Tribune says:—

"Since the Treaty of Independence, in which historic rights were fully recognized, diplomacy has been a lottery in which the Canadians have always drawn the prizes and the Americans the blanks."

Have they indeed? What about the Alabama swindle, when by fraudulent claims they filched a sum of money for which to this day they cannot find even colorable claimants? Or the robbery of part of New Brunswick by the dishonest suppression of evidence? Or the filching of a wide strip of territory extending from our own Provinces to the Pacific Ocean by imposing upon the British diplomatists, naturally less informed as to localities, the falsehood that the head of Lake Superior was at Pigeon River, instead of Fond du Lac? Or the trick of excluding the Fenian raid claims from the matters submitted to the Washington commission, by suggesting to the careless Mr. Gladstone dates that shut out the period of the invasions? Or the breach of faith of obtaining a season's extension of free fishing in our waters, and then after receiving the benefit refusing the inadequate compensation agreed upon by their President and his Ministers? Or their agreeing for a consideration to admit certain goods free and then holding themselves at liberty to tax the packages containing them?

The Tribune should read the diplomatic history of its country, and then abstain from making such unfounded statements. The only case in which they made a bargain with us, even approximately fair, was when they had to pay for the use of our fisheries. And then they overreached themselves by terminating the agreement on the ground that our fisheries were valueless to them, though in fact their fishermen are so absolutely dependent upon our property for a living that they have to choose between ruin from a fruitless cruise and the risk of having their vessels confiscated for stealing our fish.

But in spite of the fallacies of the Tribune its utterances are valuable as giving us fair warning that it would be folly for us to enter upon negotiation till the Senate has bound itself, for otherwise it would repudiate the action of its Executive.

Many of the people of the United States are deservedly esteemed by Canadians, but unfortunately the suicidal abstension of many of their best citizens from public affairs has left so much control in the hands of self-seeking adventurers, as to render their politics disgraceful, their legislatures haunts of corruption, and their public morality loose in the extreme.

HORSES FOR THE ARMY.

WE publish in another column an interesting account of his experiences by Col. Philips, one of the Imperial officers sent to this country to see if it could supply horses for the British army. His clear account of the shortcomings he noticed, of the methods that should be adopted to remove them, and of his anticipations for the future, afford a fund of valuable information for our farmers. Though the Imperial authorities have for a time postponed their efforts to obtain army horses in the Dominion, it is evident from what Col. Philips says that the attempt will be renewed as soon as there is any available supply, and that this demand will continue whenever it suits us to fill it. The Colonel with apparently good reason looks to the ranches of the North west as the great field from which the Imperial army will obtain the remounts it needs. But there is no reason why the farmers of Ontario should not participate in the profits that are to be obtained from this source. If they consider Col. Philips' discription of the type of horse that is required, they will see that even if not taken for the Imperial service they would not go begging for purchasers, and even colts that did not quit reach the standard demanded would be more useful at home and more marketable than much of the stock now to be seen in the Province. It is a matter to which our progressive and enterprising farmers should give their careful consideration.

TO KEEP COOL AND WELL.

VIEWS OF DR. CYRUS EDSON, CHIEF INSPECTOR OF FOOD.

What an Official of the New York Sanitary Bureau Writes About Keeping One's Self in First Class Physical Condition.

The causes of sunstroke, which attacks so many persons during the summer, are prolonged exposure to dry heat, nervous exhaustion, breathing contaminated air and a sudden rise in temperature after a long spell of dry heat. The Pagan notion that the stroke came through the eye is not true.

As these are the causes, the preventatives would be to keep one's self in the most healthy condition possible; to avoid all kinds of excess, to be loosely and lightly clad, to keep the system up to its highest and best pitch. Anything that would tend to debilitate or run down a man would put him in a condition to be sunstruck. Sunstroke, like almost any other disease, selects the weak and debilitated. It is one of the factors that operate to produce the survival of the fittest. The history of people who have been sunstruck shows them to have been debilitated from disease, or to have been improperly nourished; persons whose systems were not supplied with sufficient fuel to properly maintain them, or whose digestive organs were deranged by the use of impure and unwholesome food.

The person who adulterates food or sells contaminated food aims a deadly blow this time of the year at the innocent consumer of his wares.

Breathing impure air is also a factor that may contribute to produce sunstroke. People who overtax their systems by too close attention to work or who use alcoholic beverages too freely are "tempting Providence.". I have seen cases where the effect of prolonged exposure to heat has first manifested itself in the middle of the night. Where people have lived in a malarial atmosphere I have seen cases of mild sunstroke followed by intermittent fever.

It is best to wear dark clothing in the summer. The black absorbs heat when it is in the sun's rays. On the other hand, the heat will pass out through the black textures rapidly, so that the radiation of the heat, from the body would be much freer in a person clothed in black than white. This statement is forcibly illustrated by the white coats of animals who live in the Arctic regions. They are clothed that way for the reason that the color holds the bodily heat and does not allow it to radiate as rapidly as black.

Thin flannel shirts are good for summer wear, and it is best to wear them next to the skin.

As a preventive of sunstroke there is nothing like recreation. The meaning of this word is very suggestive; it means to re-create, the creating anew of the system, so to speak. We know that there are certain germs in the air that produce disease. Experiments of the most interesting nature have recently been conducted in Paris. It has been noticed that when the air, taken at a certain point at the edge of the city, was from the country, it was practically free from these little germs known as bacteria, but when the air was taken from the city, there were millions of germs found in it. When persons are taken with summer complaint they are benefited by a change to a purer atmosphere. They are taken from where the bacteria thrive to the back country where there are practically no bacteria.

The proper thing is to take recreation where the air is pure. People should make frequent trips from the city and disinfect their systems by breathing pure air. Yachting is an excellent form of recreation. Nothing is so good for a man whose brain is overworked as to go to the theatre. That is a good mode of recreation that will relieve brain congestion and recreate him better than any other thing, but it should be avoided during summer on account of the heat. In hot weather we should bathe in the open air.

Too much perspiration is bad; night sweats debilitate. The accumulation of heat in the system is like the accumulation of heat in a steam boiler. We know that water will store up heat under steam pressure until the critical point is reached, when it suddenly vaporizes and there is an explosion. It is the same with the system; the heat accumulates until the critical point is reached and there is an explosion in the shape of sunstroke.

People eat too much meat in summer. If Americans ate more vegetables and fruit during summer it would be better for them.

Lemonade is a good drink for hot weather, but, taken in excess, it has a scorbutic effect. The first effect of alcoholic drinks is to cause a rise in temperature. The blood vessels of the brain are congested, the heart is stimulated. The secondary effect is to lower the temperature slightly. But you never find alcohol used in moderation. People who use it invariably use it to excess. When taken to excess, nothing could be used that would produce sunstroke or heat exhaustion quicker. Lager beer and ale open the pores and cause perspiration. These drinks are not as bad as whisky, because alcohol is the deleterious ingredient; and of course substances that contain more of it are more deleterious.

The best and the most wholesome drink is cold water. It should be freely used, and should be cooled by keeping it on the ice, and not by putting ice in it. A few bottles placed in the refrigerator every morning would be sufficient to supply the family during the day.

An excellent practice for those in cities where soda water fountains are numerous is to occasionally make use of that beverage. Soda taken when thirst calls for it is healthful and refreshing. The flavored syrups sold at these fountains should never be taken in hot weather, as they are very heating.—Dr. Cyrus Edson in The Epoch.

Boston Baked Beans.

In the Boston bakeries the method of cooking beans is as follows: After being washed clean they are placed in barrels or tubs and soaked for several hours, after which they are put in large iron kettles and parboiled for half an hour or so. Then they are flooded with cold water to reduce the temperature and put into earthen pots holding ten quarts each, with about five pounds of salt pork sunk to the general level in each pot. At night they are placed in ovens, from under which the fires are drawn, and are thus baked slowly ten or twelve hours. The slower the baking the better taste do the beans get. The ordinary price at the best places is fifteen cents a quart baked, but they are also sold for twelve cents. Quite a number of people prepare their own beans and send the pots to the baker, who charges five cents for baking them. Most of the smaller bakeshops get their beans from large bakers, who also supply many of the restaurants.

Wanted in "The Panhandle."

The northwest corner of Texas is called "The Panhandle," and there is a town there with the same name, and in the town a newspaper in which appears this notice: "Wanted, immediately, 100 single young women who are prepared to rough it for a time, to come to the Panhandle and marry our thrifty young men who have located on 640 acres of land and are now living in dugouts, tents and cabins. We can speak a good word for every one of the boys; they are all noble American citizens except one, and he is a little unfortunate in being the son of an English lord. Girls, this is a good chance. Besides this, married life will beat blessed singleness every time. In a few months' time the dugouts will be turned into cellars, and comfortable houses erected when the railroads bring in lumber."—New York Sun.

I SHALL FIND REST.

A little farther on—
There will be time—I shall find rest anon;
Thus do we say, while eager youth invites
Young hope to try her wings in wanton flights,
And nimble fancy builds the soul a nest
In some far crag; but soon youth's flame is gone—
Burned lightly out—while we repeat the jest
With smiling confidence—I shall find rest
A little farther on.

A little farther on
I shall find rest; half fiercely we avow
When noon beats on the dusty field and care
Threats to unjoint our armor, and the glare
Throbs with the pulse of battle, while life's best
Flies with the flitting stars; the frenzied brow
Pains for the laurel more than for the breast,
Where love soft nestling waits. Not now; not now,
With feverish breath we cry, I shall find rest
A little farther on.

A little farther on
I shall find rest; half sad, at last, we say,
When sorrow's settling cloud blurs out the gleam
Of glory's torch, and to a vanished dream
Love's palace hath been turned, then—all depressed,
Despairing, sick at heart—we may not stay
Our weary feet so lonely then doth seem
This shadow haunted world. We, so unblest,
Weep not to see the grave which waits its guest;
And feeling round our feet the cool, sweet clay,
We speak the fading world farewell and say:
Not on this side—alas!—I shall find rest
A little farther on. —Century

LUCK OF JERSEY FISHERMEN.

While Summer Idlers Sleep the Natives Begin Their Toil of the Sea.

Summer idlers along the Jersey coast seldom rise early enough to see the native fishermen begin their day's work, though the sight is well worth the loss of an hour's sleep. While the sun is still low and the horizon dim with mist, the little boats are launched through the surf and rowed beyond the breakers. Then the sails are set and the little crafts are soon keeled over and making for the open sea. They rise and fall as buoyant as corks, and as they bob up here and lose themselves from sight behind a huge wave then they remind one of the profile boats used in theatrical representations.

As a rule, a fishing fleet consists of about ten boats. They go out and return together. Each boat could easily accommodate six persons, but two is the usual complement. It is regarded as unsafe to carry more. When the spot where the fishing is to be carried on is reached they cast out their anchors about 400 or 500 yards apart, and proceed to fill the bow with all manner of fish. Spanish mackerel, flounders, bluefish and sea bass constitute the major portion of a Jersey fisherman's catch, although they sometimes hook a kingfish or a dogfish. They use the simplest kind of tackle and the flesh of fish for bait. About 10 o'clock they start for home and land always at one place. One after another they come in on the crest of a huge wave and land far up on the sand. It takes science to land a boat in this way, and sometimes the fishermen wait half an hour for a wave to "home them." It pays to be cautious, however, for to upset a boat means to lose the result of a day's work.

The homes of the fishermen stand back from the shore among the knotted and twisted pine trees. They are low, shingled cottages, with ceiling only high enough to permit a man to stand upright. The windows are small and seem to be of use more for ventilation than giving light. Here the fisherman takes his fish. He cleans them and packs them away, ready to be sent to the nearest market. The pay, however, for all this risk of life, all this work and a winter of hardship, is very little. Occasionally a fisherman will bring home a catch that will net him a tidy sum, but it happens more often that he gets only enough to provide himself with the commonest necessities of life. His earnings are less than a laborer's, and were it not for the amateur fishermen who often accompany him, only to get wet, hungry and seasick, the Jersey fisherman would be even worse off than he is.—New York Mail and Express.

Melodies Concealed in Strange Places.

"How did you start that music box playing?" asked a reporter of a dealer.

"I didn't start it," returned the merchant.

"Who did, then?"

"You. You accidentally touched a spring in the end of the box with your coat sleeve as you brushed by. The mechanism of these boxes is very delicately made nowadays, and they are constructed with great ingenuity. But sit down while we talk."

The reporter took a seat and the strains of "Farandall" from "Olivette" floated from beneath the chair.

"Have a cigar?" He turned a cigar stand, and there came out of it the air of the drinking song "Girofle Girofla."

"This is the picture of our Swiss factory." As the album was opened there came out of it an air from "Fra Diavolo."

"Will you take a pinch of snuff?"

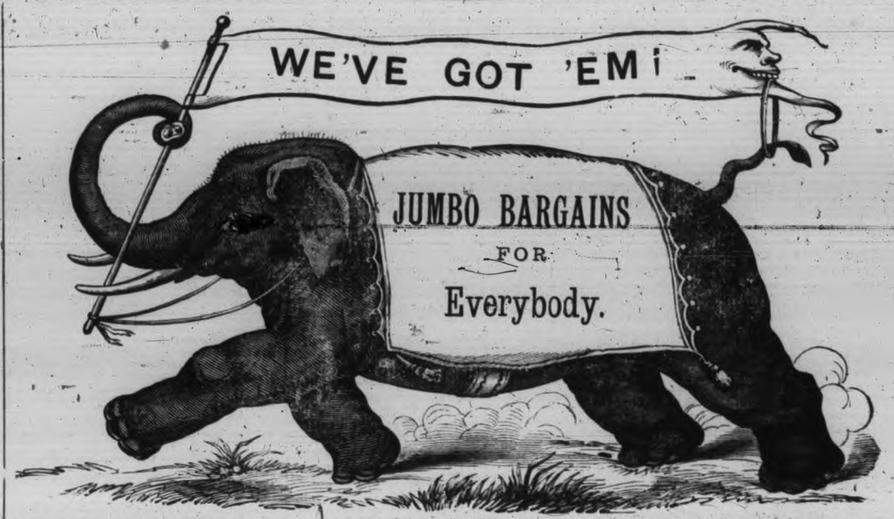
As the lid was raised there was a whisper of "Should Auld Acquaintance be Forgot"

"We have a customer who has a music box attachment to his front door, and his visitors are always greeted by a tune. A music box can be concealed in a very small compass, and one of the reigning demands is for articles that contain them, so as to create pleasant surprises. Dolls, clocks and books are provided with them. Nearly all of the music boxes are made in St. Croix or Geneva in Switzerland."—New York Mail and Express.

A Gambler Decorated.

The French government, which some time ago seemed to sympathize with the efforts of the adversaries of Monte Carlo, that academy of suicide, has evidently changed its opinion on this subject. It has just decorated the president of the Societe des Jeux. It is hard to explain why the government refuses to authorize the establishment in France of a society similar to that at Monaco, the president of which it decorates. The gamblers of the whole world might be attracted to Paris, which for some time has complained of being less visited than it was, and they would bring with them the animation and the profits now taken to Monaco. But instead of that the government forbids at Nice, which is at the very door of Monaco, even the small horse game, in which, with a run of bad luck, one can lose twenty-five francs in a day, while at Monaco one can ruin himself and his whole family in fifty minutes.

It is to be hoped, then, that the decoration of the Legion of Honor, bestowed on the resident of the Society of Suicides at Monte Carlo, is the prelude to freedom of gambling in France and to the conferring of a right on all Frenchmen to open gambling houses, and by this means to win a title to the decoration of the Legion of Honor.—St. James' Gazette.



Dogs Killed by Electricity.

In Buffalo, the other day, twenty-seven friendless dogs were killed by electricity. One by one they were placed in a box about two by three, lined with tin, with about an inch of water in the bottom. One by one they were muzzled with a wire running through the mouth. A simple touch of the wire—a corpse.—Buffalo Express.

Prepared to Catch Him.

"What have you got in all those trunks?" asked one fashionable girl of another at the station the other day as her friend was going off to Narragansett. "Oh, bait," was the ready answer.—Boston Globe.

A Curious Point of Law.

An application was the other day made by Judge Bartlett, in the Kings County supreme court, for an order authorizing the payment of money out of an estate, the petitioner having become of age and entitled to it under the provisions of a will.

"A man cannot know his own age," observed the judge, as he looked up after reading an affidavit.

"Can't he swear to it?" asked the petitioner's lawyer.

"No. He will have to get some one who knows."

"Well, I think his mother will be able to swear to it," said the lawyer, as he gathered up his papers. "The boy was there at the time, I presume, but possibly his memory is defective."

"Anyway, it's a point of law," said another lawyer.—New York Journal.

An Example of Economy.

Out of what trifles does poverty contrive to extract a living! A decently dressed man with one arm sold me some fuses at a cent a box the other day. I asked him what he made on them, and he told me that he cleared two cents on every five boxes. He sold from 100 to 150 boxes a day. "And you can live on this?" I asked. "Yes," said he, cheerfully. "I hire a room for $1 a week and cook for myself. I live and save money. I've got a savings bank account, and, please God, I'll have a stand next winter if I can get a permit." And he showed me a bank book with a credit for fifty odd dollars in it—fifty odd dollars filched from his actual necessities out of an income never greater than sixty cents a day. —Alfred Trumble in New York News.

HORSES FOR THE ARMY.

A Profitable Market for Canadian Farmers—What is Needed.

Col. Philips is one of the Imperial officers who was sent to investigate the Canadian supply of horses suitable for the British Army. The following are his opinions, expressed to the United Service Institution, as reported by the Canadian Gazette:—

In the first place, the size of the horse in Jamaica is at least a hand under what would be of any use for our cavalry or artillery. Horses 14.2 would for the English cavalry or artillery be utterly useless, for the simple reason that when you meet other regiments they would just ride you down like grass for want of weight. As regards the breeding of big horses in a climate that is mountainous and tropical, naturalists will tell you that even if you imported large horses, in a very few generations they would dwindle back to the animal indigenous to the soil. With regard to the horses in Canada, where I went last summer in conjunction with Colonel Ravenhill, after travelling many thousand miles, and seeing a vast number of horses, we rejected an immense number for that very reason, that they did not come up to the standard measurement. I am quite certain we could have bought hundreds of horses if we had, taken 14.2 but we never thought of looking at that height. If we had taken 15 or 15.1 we could have bought a great number, but we took nothing under the standard 15.2, for the reason that in the cavalry and artillery we have that as our standard, and I think it is the minimum standard that would meet the requirements of the service. Of course I am not now discussing mounted infantry; no doubt the smaller and hardier the ponies, the better they go along, and the easier they are for the men to manage. As regards remounts for our cavalry and artillery, I believe on the eastern slopes of the Rockies in a very few years there would be as fine a breed of horses as we have now in Australia. They have an excellent climate, they have water-shed, which so many of the ranches in America and Texas suffer from the want of, and they have magnificent grass for the horses to feed on. Some of the ranche owners at this present moment are going into this business. I know of one gentleman, Mr Cochrane, who has a thousand picked mares on his ranche, and he is going in for breeding horses for the English cavalry and artillery; he has already made a very great name for himself as a shorthorn breeder. I have not the least doubt that in three or four years, if officers will visit the ranche, they will be able to pick up some thousands of horses suitable for our cavalry and horse artillery. The great difficulty we found there was finding saddle horses. Very few people in Canada ride, in fact in Canada proper there is hardly anyriding at all. Nearly every one drives, and consequently where most attention is given to draught horses, there is naturally a want of riding shoulders, which is the most essential thing for cavalry horses. I think in the future the eastern slopes of the Rockies, even without much encouragement from Government, except that they would say they would go out to purchase every year there, would be able to supply us with thousands of horses. Land is let there at a merely nominal rent—two cents an acre for twenty-one year's lease. Magnificent mares can be brought from Montana and Oregon, all of English blood—English sires have been out there over a century, running from fifteen to sixteen hands high, and that is the class of horse we are looking for to supply our cavalry and artillery, and to carry our troops in time of war, and nothing under that height, when it came to the shock of the charge, would be any good at all; in fact you would be simply ridden down as our light cavalry were at Waterloo by the Cuirassiers, who were again in turn ridden down when they met our Life Guards and Blues."

THE SCIENCE OF SAILS.

Points That Yachtsmen and Catboatmen May Value.

Like a bird's wing, the first need for all effective sail is a rigid leading edge or weather leech; obtained in the square and lugsails by the drag of a bowline, in the lateen sail by the yard or bone of the sailwing itself, in staysails by the rigidity of the mast or supporting stay and in jibs by the powerful hoisting purchase and use of chain for halyards. Before the introduction of chain, the jib, like the first string of a violin, was constantly getting out of tune and in want of setting up. Another point in a good sail is that the after edge, when held in place by the sheet, should be as nearly upright or vertical as the seams of the sail, and, like the after edge of a wing, unconfined by anything more than a hem or lightest of rope, save where a reefband requires strength.

The cloth at this end of a jib is at times seen shaking while the rest of the canvass is still as though frozen, and it is better the wind should pass it freely so than be girt in or held by it. The cloths of a jib are cut a little convex upon the leading edge, and unless the position of the sheets were carefully fixed with respect to this convexity, the luff of a jib would be concave instead of straight when roped and hoisted.

There is an old sea saying, often used, too, by landsmen without knowing why, viz.: "I know him by the cut of his jib," a jib really having more cut about it than other sails.

Though few practical sailmakers or users of them know really much about algebraic formula, they have their rules, handed down to them from old time, for cutting out sails; and, as wind and water are very conservative elements, they seldom go far wrong. Among these rules is that working by thirds—that is, when at a loss as to the best proportion for one thing toward another, to take a third. The boat always takes her third of the fish caught, a yard of a lug sail is slung a third from the end, the most convex part of the jib is at one-third of the luff from the tack, and the sheet exactly opposite the point. A pious adherence to his old mystery saves much calculation and trouble, and when shipbuilders thought a third a good proportion of beam to length, a fair amount of stability was insured to our ships. Sailors speak of a sail as lifting or pressing quite independently of its power of driving a vessel ahead. All jibs are lifting sails, which do their work with least tendency to force a vessel's lee side down. They are safe sails to jibe or veer round under the wind; hence, perhaps, the term "jibe." The angle at which the weather edge of a jib stands has much to do with this lifting quality, for a cutter's foresail, though triangular, is not found a lifting sail. Next to a jib, the sail which has most of this power is no doubt the lateen (latin) sail of the south, particularly as set upon the foremast of a felucca, while the splendid lifting power of the lanteen sail may have led to its being retained as the head sail in the strange combination of rigs seen in the Turkish vessel which is known as a xebec.—Robert Leslie in Harper's.

Wild Game at the Capital.

Not long ago a great commotion was observed in the White House grounds, directly back of the conservatory. All the workmen in the establishment were dodging about in a violent manner, and the object of their attention was presently seen to be a wild rabbit, which soon disengaged himself from his pursuers and made good his escape into the White lot and adjacent wilderness. Inquiry shows that this is not an unusual phenomenon in Washington. There is considerable game in the public reservations here at times. Opossums, coons, rabbits, foxes and squirrels are sometimes seen in them, and it is said that in the more secluded portion of the mall, near the Smithsonian Institution, several wild rabbits have established their permanent home.—New York Sun.

CHICAGO'S CHINATOWN.

ODD AND INTERESTING THINGS SEEN DURING A RAMBLE.

The Stock of a Chinese Store—Celestial Scales and Calculating Machines—Chicago's Only Chinese Baby—Superstitious Wearing of a Bracelet.

The San Franciscan and the genial policeman started off together, but soon stopped in front of a window bearing a sign announcing that the combined laundry business and restaurant was carried on within. The door was locked, however, and loud knocks of the policeman's club failed to develop any signs of life. "They aren't up yet," said the Californian. "None of those fellows go to bed before 2 o'clock in the morning, and they don't get up till late. Come across the street."

Across the street they went, and entered the door of a Chinese merchant. The announcement that one of his visitors was from California, and was acquainted with an enterprising and well known Celestial there by the name of Tin Loy, gained for them the freedom of the place and the most hospitable treatment. Cigars were produced by the host, and accepted with a promise to smoke them after the next meal. The stock of his store was found to consist entirely of goods imported from China. It comprises, among other things, queer nuts and dried fruits, jars and bottles of rice vinegar, great packages of herbs of supposed medicinal value, cocoanut made into long strips and dipped in sugar, dried sea fish, flat and almost transparent, China melons from New Orleans, egg plant, etc. The proprietor claims that the only reason Americans do not buy these articles is that they do not know how to use them. If you ask the use of almost any of the green or dried stuff found in a place of this kind the almost invariable answer is, "To make soup." It is feared that, queer looking jars or bottles in such an establishment occasionally contain whisky made from rice. At least the Chinamen seem to be familiar with such an article. "Heap stong. Makee drunk, allee same Melican whisky."

The only weighing apparatus to be found in a Chinese grocery is very primitive. The article to be weighed is put in the basket. One of the strings is taken in one hand, and the suspended weight is slipped along with the other until it balances the article in the basket. Little marks along the arm indicate different weights, and the ring from which he iron balance is suspended marks the number to be read off. This contrivance, of course, gives the exact weight, and hence in this respect is a great improvement on some of the more modern devices in use by many American grocers.

"John," said the Californian, "there is one thing I wish you would explain to me, and that is your system of counting. I have heard it explained, but could never understand it."

The first lesson was cheerfully given, and in so skillful and intelligent a manner that it was understood. The American, who has a decent reputation for expertness in figures, was given a column of dollars and cents to add. There would be a little rattling and a flying of fingers, and before he could even get the figures down he would be given the correct sum by the Chinaman.

In the back room breakfast was in progress. In addition to the rice there were several mysterious looking dishes discussed with spoons made of chinaware. The merchant informed his visitors that everything on the table except the bowls came from China.

"How many Chinawomen are there in town, John?" asked the San Franciscan, remembering his own city and her unspeakable plague spot. He was informed that there are only three or four, and a very ingenious reason was given, but he was unable to tell whether it was founded on truth or on the pride of the wily Celestial. It was, in substance, this: The reputation of the Chinawomen who come to this country is, as every one knows, in one sense of the term, unquestionable. The men who come to New York and Chicago are a more moral class, and they will not allow the women here.

Speaking of women reminded the officer that he knew the abode of a celebrated Benedick, and he proposed a visit thither. In the basement of a house on Van Buren street the family man was found asleep upon a peculiar couch made of four short posts, covered with bamboo matting imported from China. In his arms was a bundle that looked like a small bag filled with something, and that's about what it was. When the man started up somewhat suddenly, the bundle proved to contain, among other things, as cute and ridiculous little piece of humanity as ever cried in the middle of the night. When you said it was pretty its father immediately ceased to be John Chinaman, and became a man. He made it show off in a manner that would have caused a white father of an eighteen months' old baby to turn green with envy. It said things in Chinese and English, threw kisses, made gurgling sounds with its hand to its mouth, and performed other baby feats of a high order. While the father was thus engaged, its mother, who is generally invisible, and who does not speak English at all, was forced into view by her maternal pride and by the fear that the baby was not being shown off to the best advantage. The mother is a Chinawoman, a statement that is not so unnecessary as might at first thought appear. It is a pretty baby—a girl. Its name is Kum Lien, which, when properly pronounced by its mother, sounds musical. Its eyes and long hair are black, and its unformed childish face, as is generally the case, has not taken on yet the distinguishing features of the race.

The father wore on his wrist a ring or bracelet of some kind of Chinese stone, which he has worn for over twenty years.

"You see velly many thing," said he in explanation, "in the day time. Slam loud all night. You sabee slam? Slam 'alle same dleam. Wear this ling, no slam."

This was something new. "Do you mean to say," he was asked, that so long as you wear this ring you won't dream?"

"Well," he replied cautiously, intent upon defending his superstition, "slam some, no slam velly much. No wear ling, slam more."—Chicago Herald.

Peculiar Actions of Drowning Persons.

"I believe I can tell just by the clutch how many times a drowning person has been down," musingly remarked Edward Horn, of the ferry company, and the man who has saved sixty-four lives. "The first trip down they go for you with a firm, decided clutch that means they still know what they are about. The second immersion causes a shaky, uncertain grip, which can be easily broken if you so choose. It is the last time down that the grasp becomes a convulsive, bewildered one, and but few swimmers can save a person after the unfortunate man has descended for the third time. Almost invariably the drowning man on his final journey below the water will seize his preserver by the legs. It seems to be a law of nature, and one I cannot account for. It would be easier to save a whole river full of men than one drowning woman. The odd feature of the latter's struggle in the water is that she will seize your hands if she can get hold of one or both of them. A woman will drown quicker than a man. She opens her mouth from the time she first strikes the water and never closes it, and so loses her senses more easily. Yes, I saw one person die of strangulation while we were under water together. His eyes were wonderfully fascinating as he stared helplessly at me. You may not believe it, but they shone like two balls of fire."—Detroit Tribune.

AN ALPINE SNOWSTORM.

The Empress of Austria Almost Lost During a Mountain Ascent.

The Empress of Austria had a somewhat unpleasant experience recently. The Empress is almost as ardent a mountaineer as she is a horsewoman, and during her stay at Ischl went in for a great deal of mountain climbing. One day she made the ascent of the Gethfeld, and, according to her usual custom, took with her but a small posse of attendants. When half way up a storm came on, and the Empress and her party were at that moment going along a narrow path a little better than a mere ledge, which wound round the face of the mountain. To advance was impossible, and to return was equally dangerous. So the Empress had to cling to the face of the precipice in the blinding snowstorm for the space of more than an hour. At the expiration of that time the storm abated, and an attempt was made to descend. A relief party, which had been sent up from Ischl, when once the position of affairs became known, finally rescued the Imperial party, and the Empress met with an ovation on her return to her villa after her dangerous experience of Alpine mountaineering.

CANADA'S CHOICE.

Imperial Federation or Union With the United States.

Mr. Alfred Morris, who signs himself "Secretary British Union, Royal Exchange, Manchester," in a letter to the Toronto Mail combats Commercial Union, and declares that it must lead to political union. He then continues:—

We sometimes hear that Canada would never have thought of Commercial Union with the United States if a similar union with the Mother Country had not been unattainable.

But is it unattainable? Has Canada ever seriously tried to get it? Has she even ever earnestly asked for it? Not of governments, but of the British people? Canada, in common with the rest of the colonies, has looked coldly on while, during the last six or seven years, a little band of earnest, but prominent, men in this country have been educating public opinion in favour of the commercial federation of the Empire. Snubbed at first as akin to madmen, stifled next with silence, then damned with faint praise, the work has steadfastly been carried on until the people of Great Britain are on the point of waking from their fatuous dream, that cheapness in price is more important than a plentiful supply. Let Canada and Australia give us a clear, plain, definite mandate to declare to our fellow countrymen that they are and are willing to enter into a Commercial Union with the Mother Country on the basis of differental customs duties, and within twelve months we will light up such a fire from Land's End to John O'Groats as shall illumine the world as to the future policy of the British race.

Nothing which is in its nature within the reach of human grasp is unattainable to those who are determined to attain it.

DOMESTIC AND USEFUL.

A very complete filling for open cracks in floors may be made by thoroughly soaking newspapers in a paste made by one pound of flour, three quarts of water, and a tablespoonful of alum thoroughly boiled and mixed; make the final mixture about as thick as putty, a kind of paper putty, and it will harden like papier-mache.

To make Victoria cake rub six ounces of butter well into a pound of flour, then mix six ounces of sugar; beat two eggs and make with the above into a paste. Roll it very thin, and cut with the top of a glass; prick them with a fork, and cover with caraway seeds, or wash with the white of an egg, and dust a little white sugar over.

A good way to make pot pourri is to put into a jar rose leaves and buds, a little mint, lemon, thyme, a few bay leaves, a little lavender, and rind of a lemon, a few cloves, and sprinkle some powdered bay salt between the layers of the sweet-smelling flowers. Fill the jar as you get the flowers, sprinkling salt as you fill it up.

In making sponge cream take one pint of fresh milk, three tablespoonfuls of gelatine, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, three eggs. Put the gelatine into cold milk, let it stand a little while, put on stove and bring to boiling point, then add the sugar and yolks of eggs well beaten together; remove from the fire and stir in the whites, also beaten stiff; add a little salt, flavour to suit, and pour into moulds, wet first, so that the cream will turn out easily.

To clean lace, fill a bottle with cold water; draw a stocking tightly over it, securing both ends firmly. Place the lace smoothly over the stocking and tack closely. Put the bottle in a kettle of cold water containing a few shavings of soap, and place over the fire to boil. Rinse in several waters, and then drain and dry. When dry remove and place smoothly in a large book and press with weights. Very nice lace can be made to look like new by this process.

In making bread pudding fill a breakfast cup quite full with grated bread, broken up in small pieces will do, and put it into a bowl; put on to boil 1½ breakfast cups of milk, and pour it boiling over the bread; cover the whole with a plate and let it soak for 10 minutes; add to it 1 large tablespoonful of sugar, and mix it thoroughly with a fork, also a little flavouring, then add two eggs well beaten up. When mixed enough, pour the whole into a pie dish, and put into an oven, not too hot, till it is firm.

FARM AND GARDEN.

A good horse is worthy of the best that man can bestow upon him.

The color of pure Devon cattle is red varying from a rich dark to a pale chestnut

There is no season of the year when chicks can be raised so cheap as when hatched out early in September.

It is a mistake to suppose that sour, fermented slop for hogs is better than a fresh mixture that is sweet and clean.

The newest remedy for the cabbage worm is a tablespoonful of saltpetre in a pailful of tepid water. The plants should be sprinkled well two or three times.

Plants for blooming indoors should be potted as soon as they are well set with buds, placing them in the shade until they recover from the effects of the removal.

Thistles, dandelion, or dock roots, can only be removed by cutting them out with a knife. There is no necessity, however, for cutting the whole root out. If cut below the crown the root will not start again into growth.

Hungarian grass, proper, has black seed, mainly. The millets have yellow seed. Hungarian grass has less head and more stalk than leaf, and is less liable to rust, and hence is a better hay crop, and not so good a grain or seed crop.

Care of Vegetables in Autumn.—Though work does not press now as it does in the spring months, and the gardener can take a vacation, yet there are several important things that must not be overlooked. Sow spinach, and German greens are sprouts, to winter in the open ground; also onion sets and shallots. Sow early cabbages, cauliflowers and lettuce, to raise plants to be wintered in cold frames. The plants must be neither too large nor too small, hence the date of sowing is important. Near New York many sow on the 13th; others find it safer to make two sowings, one on the 11th, and the other on the 16th of this month. How the weeds will grow! Hoe between the rows of root crops until the leaves prevent. Hoe, cabbages and cauliflowers often. Help any backward ones with manure water, or a slight dressing of guano. Keep celery clear of weeds and hoe to promote growth, which should be rapid these warm days and cool nights.—American Agriculturist.

The Secret Drawer.

In idle mood I touched the springs
That opened wide the secret drawer,
To gaze on half-forgotten things
That waked the memories of yore;
Small scraps of letters loosely tied
With silken bands of faded blue,
Containing words of love and pride,
Wrung from my heart when life was new.

A lock of radiant golden hair
That once adorned a glorious head
Of a young angel heavenly fair—
And long since numbered with the dead;
A dark brown tress—the sole remains
Of a brave woman lost and gone,
The partner of my joys and pains,
Whose smile made sunlight where it shone.

I signed, I kissed them like a fool—
Although perhaps the fool was wise
With wisdom learned in sorrow's school—
Who saw the truth through all disguise.
And taking counsel with my thought
I asked myself, mid haze of tears,
Why these fond relics, fancy-thought,
Should live beyond my span of years?

Live with their tale of thought or deed,
For merchandise is scandal's mart,
To satisfy the clamorous greed
Of scribblers who'd dissect my heart
When I lay slumbering in the mold,
Unweeting of Fame's noisy blast—
And sell for miserable gold
The sacred secrets of the past?

To build romances from my life,
Or weave the life that seem like truth,
From shadows of long-ended strife
And unknown agonies of youth?
Take them, ye flames! such fate is best!
All but the lock of hair I crave
To wear upon my living breast,
And perish with me in the grave.

BUTTER.

One of the most important and remunerative products of our Ontario farms is cheese. While the quality produced has been greatly augmented, it has improved in reputation and has increased in price. It is now in such favor in Great Britain that we can dispose of all that we can spare above home consumption at very satisfactory prices.

With butter it is very different. Our export has by no means so largely increased, instead of being the favourite in Great Britain it ranks low in the market, and neither the demand nor the price are so satisfactory as we would like to see them.

Why is there this difference in two products of similar origin?

Before our cheese industry had attained its present proportions and its satisfactory remuneration, some excellent cheese was made in Ontario. But there was much made that was indifferent or even poor, and this effected the demand for our exported cheese and the price of the whole, good or bad. It is not sufficient that an article for export should be good, but it is also necessary for success that the whole stock should be fairly regular in quality and trustworthy. Now the establishment of cheese factories secured not only an improvement in the make, but what was more beneficial, that regularity and trustworthiness which were before wanting, and we see the result. Now at the present moment every housekeeper knows that there is much good butter made in Ontario and in Peterborough County. They also know that there is much that is not good. Our butter exported to Great Britain cannot be depended upon, the general repute and the prices obtained for the whole are lowered, and Canadian butter, instead of ranking in the mother country the very highest in the market like Canadian cheese, takes almost the lowest place.

When it is so evident that an improvement is required, why should we not adopt the same plan as has proved efficacious in a similar case? Why should not factories do as much for Canadian butter as they have for Canadian cheese? They would remove the admitted evils; they would do away with the inferior product of ignorant or careless makers and packers; with the highest available skill they would give the best possible results; but above all they would ensure the needed regularity of quality and trustworthiness which would make "Canadian" a term not of reproach, but of commendation for butter as it is for cheese.

Why should not some of our enterprising farmers combine to establish creameries, butter factories, as they have cheese factories, and reap the same benefit?

The local market is of course by far the largest and the most remunerative for our farmers, but of their surplus dairy product by far the largest portion goes to Great Britain. A judicious effort to suit their tastes and wishes, would augment their demand and the price they are willing to pay as much in the case of butter as it has done with regard to cheese.

EGGS FOR EXAMPLES.

The annexationists with that dishonesty which seems to pervade the clique, calmly assume that those who are loyal to Canada have advanced some arguments in regard to eggs and that they have been refuted. The fact is that the annexationists, having founded various arguments on successive contradictory falsehoods about eggs, have had their inventions exposed and their conclusions demolished.

But if they wish to learn some lessons from the egg market we will point out one or two. As is now admitted by them the fact that the United States impose no duty on eggs has not prevented our exports from diminishing and the value falling, in the face of the increased product of the two countries, and so it would be with other things. What becomes of the supply of eggs augmented as it is both by the increased product and the diminished export? They are sold in larger numbers to our own people, who are engaged in manufactures or dependant on them, and as our farmers' wives know, this home market is more remunerative than the foreign one. As to the market of sixty million people, a market comprises producers as well as consumers, and from the example of eggs we may learn that even when the market is free we cannot force upon it more than is wanted, and as the sixty millions produce more eggs, they take less from us. As to most of the product of Canadian farms, the sixty thousand produce even more than they want and they have to export, so free trade would not make them buy from us unless it were to obtain a middle-man's profit between our farmers and their customers in Europe. After all there are some lessons to be drawn from eggs. Mr. Wiman having learnt that there is no duty on eggs, as he first stated, now says, what is also untrue, that the export has increased under free trade and the export of horses would do likewise. He has only found a mare's nest, and there are no eggs in that.

But if the anti-Canadian clique wish to employ eggs for arguments they can only use them with effect when rather ancient as they did in Morris to prevent free discussion.

SCANDINAVIAN THRIFT.

THE MEN WHO ARE CONQUERING THE FAR NORTHWEST.

A Scandinavian Settlement in Northwestern Minnesota Sixteen Years Ago. How American Enterprise Has Since Yielded to Stolid Determination.

Sixteen years ago I rode slowly through a Scandinavian settlement in northwestern Minnesota. To-day I have returned from a trip over almost the identical ground I then rode over. Then these people were poor and dirty. They lived in holes called dugouts. They owned but little property. They were strangers in the land and they were timid. The Chippewa Indians, then recently removed from Red Wing to White Earth, amused themselves by chasing, stick in hand, the Scandinavians around their farms and threatening to kill them. It was rare good sport for the rather cowardly Chippewa to find white men who were not expert with rifle and revolver, and who were afraid of fish eating Indians. The Americans who lived in the country previous to 1870 were rough, courageous men, who corrected an Indian but once; then he was buried by sorrowing relatives. So the Chippewa enjoyed the new breed of white men, who could not fight and would not swear, until they tired of the pleasures of the chase.

The dugouts in which the Scandinavians lived were generally excavated in the side of a hill which overlooked a small lake, and near at hand stood timber for fuel and shed building. Their plowed fields were very small. They impressed me as men who had been cowed and mentally injured by a life of hard, unremunerative toil and scanty diet. They were dirty and vermin infested. They drank sour milk and ate heavy bread. They were not meat eaters. Poverty stalked among them. He who owned a yoke of cattle, a plow, a wagon, a cow, and a few chickens was a man of wealth.

Scattered among these Scandinavians and living on adjoining claims were vigorous, courageous young Americans, who had been raised on Ohio, Indiana and Illinois farms, and who had been educated in our common schools. They sprang from prime stock. They were accustomed to our laws and ways of living and methods of thought. They were handy men with tools. They were resourceful. They worked hard and lived as well as they could. They, too, lived in dugouts, but, as a rule, they had a better start in life than their Scandinavian neighbors. It was patent to me in those days that the American youth were sure to succeed, and that the native Scandinavian would fail to make a living. That was a self evident proposition and easily comprehended by the dullest intellect.

HOW IT TURNED OUT.

How did it turn out? Today the larger portion of the Americans who attempted agriculture in 1871-2 on the northwestern plains are scattered from Lake Superior to Puget sound, from the Saskatchewan to the Rio Grande. They work in every mining camp lying in the Rocky and Salmon river mountains. They live in huts standing by lean and small placer mines. They pack heavy burdens on their backs as they prospect in the Vermilion Iron range. More than half of the Americans who then so hopefully undertook to create homes in Dakota and northwestern Minnesota mortgaged their farms and lost them, lost years of their lives, lost their hope and steadfastness of purpose, and they are today virtually wanderers who live from hand to mouth.

And the Scandinavians? They are, as a rule, highly prosperous. The dugouts were long since abandoned as places of residence, and in their stead are large, well built frame houses, which stand among shade trees and well kept gardens. Such houses as I looked into were well furnished. Sewing machines stood in almost every house. And the land which was wind swept and desolate sixteen years ago is today divided into fields by good, cattle proof fences, and heavy crops of wheat, oats and barley grow on the inclosed land. Cattle graze in fields or on the adjacent prairies, which is owned by land speculators, and frequently these small herds are tended by a light haired boy, who rides an Indian pony. In sheds stand valuable agricultural tools, which have been paid for. The work cattle were sold long ago, and in their stead are two or three teams of powerful horses. And meat is in the pot three times a day in the kitchens of these houses. These people have good credit at the trading points, and they seldom abuse it. They only of all the people who have pushed into the Northwest have, as a rule, made a success of life as lived under the hard conditions enforced by the climate, the land grant railroad corporations and the high price of the goods they consumed. They achieved this success by tireless industry, supplemented by rigid economy.

TODAY IT IS FALSE.

It has been said sneeringly and with lips curved with contempt, and so frequently as to be generally believed by Americans who live in the west, that "the Scandinavians sell all the agricultural produce that they raise which is marketable. They feed the best of the remainder to their pigs, and what the pigs refuse to eat they eat themselves." Fifteen, sixteen years ago, when these people were getting a start, that statement was but a slight exaggeration. To-day it is false in every particular. They live as well as their American neighbors, and they pay for the groceries which they eat; and that is a financial transaction which the average American farmer who tills land on the frontier shrinks from until he is screwed up to the paying point by the long headed merchant flirting chattel mortgages which bear his name in his face and talking savagely the while of proceedings against him the next time court meets.

The land owned by Scandinavians is, as a rule, unincumbered, or so lightly mortgaged that the payment of interest is not an oppressive burden. Some of the farms are mortgaged for from $300 to $500. These mortgages were laid to raise money to buy stock and could generally be paid at any time. I know of no Scandinavian who has mortgaged his acres to the utmost extent, as Americans very generally do, and I know no farmer of that people who speculates in the wheat pits of Chicago, as thousands of American farmers do.

The young Scandinavians of American birth, or those who came here when they were young, have lost the peculiar look characteristic of their parents. And, what is more important, they have lost the methods of thought employed by their people when first they arrived on our shores. With good and abundant food has come courage and intelligence, and cleanliness, and in many cases beauty. They are Americans in thought and feeling and action. No people who have come to our land have been more quickly assimilated than these.—Frank Wilkeson in New York Times.

CUT ON THE PLAINS.

Room! Room to turn round in, to breathe and be free,
And grow to be giant—to sail as at sea
With the speed of the wind on a steed with its mane
To the wind—without pathway or route or a rein!

Room! Room to be free where the white bordered Blows a kiss to a brother as boundless as he;
And to right and to west, to the north and the sun,
Blue skies and brown grasses are wielded as one,
And the buffalo comes like a cloud on the plain—
Pouring on like the tide of a storm driven main;
And the lodge of the hunter to friend or to foe
Offers rest, and unquestioned you come or you go!

My plains of America! Seas of wild land!
Fresh as land in the seas with a raiment of foam,
That has reached to the stranger the welcome of home,
I turn to you, lean to you, lift to you my hand!

TENDING THE "YOUNG 'UNS."

One of the Crucifixions of Boyhood Days—Hereditary Depravity.

One of the crucifixions of my boyhood days was in the fact that I had the dry nursing of all sorts of "young 'uns," as they were generally termed. Every farmer that I worked for seemed to have one of these specimens, aged from 10 to 18 months.

If any proof is lacking as to the cause of natural depravity, it could be found in the breed I had to care for. They were always querulous, squalling, rapacious, intolerable. They were cruel, for they invariably scratched the faces of those who attended them, clawed the breasts that fed them, throttled dogs that came within their reach, drew cats backward by the tail, smashed, tore, and defaced everything which they were permitted to touch. They were voracious as sharks, and predatory misers in the matter of property. Everything they had, everything they saw in the possession of others, belonged of right, in their estimate, to them. After getting through the vernacular as far as "a-goo, a-goo," their next step was "Mine! Mine!" Each of them was Jay Gould from the start, and wanted the earth.

Often when holding some squalling eruptive brat, which, with clenched fist, closed and streaming eyes, red and puffed features, legs and body as stiff as stone posts, yelled, struggled and fought without the slightest reason other than such as are to be found in natural diabolism, did I wonder why there is such a dislike of Herod the Great, who showed himself to be a ruler of consummate value, and whose only popular failure was the slaughter of the Bethlehemic babes.

I worked one summer for the wickedest man in the county, who lived on the outskirts of the hill country, who could neither read nor write, and who generally gave utterance to an oath or some atrocious blasphemy at every breath. He had an infant about 18 months old, which I had to trundle and coddle, and which I always believed was an incarnate devil. Long before it could say "da da" it could utter with vim the expression, "By Dod!" I remember even yet the little wretch as he sat in a high chair at the table, with a bullet head covered with red, close curling hair, beady gray eyes, thick lips, flushed cheeks, and with a chuckle of glee would reiterate "By Dod! By Dod!" It causes me no profound grief to say that the father, having moved out of the vicinity, was sent to the state's prison for grand larceny.—Polinto in Chicago Times.

Identity of Mutilated Money.

I am often asked whether this or that piece of mutilated money is redeemable. It is safe to say, unless the money's identity is entirely gone, that it is redeemable. In fact, one may say that money in the shape of ashes can be restored. It is a fact that after the Chicago fire ashes were redeemed. It came about in this way: It is customary in banks to do money up in packages, say of $10,000 each, and in the big fire of course hundreds and hundreds of these packages were reduced to ashes. But the shape of the package remained, and wherever the package could be sent on to Washington without crumbling the ashes, the money was sure to be replaced. It was done by nimble fingered women in the treasury department whose trained touch and sight are wonderfully acute.

It is well known that the ashes of the newspaper if dampened will show traces of the printing. So was it with the bills. These women would moisten the package of apparently useless ashes, and to their experienced eye the number and character of the bill would at once appear as if they had touched it with a magic wand. So thousands and thousands of dollars were redeemed by these patient women. A friend of mine, a country merchant, afraid of banks, placed a large sum of money in bills in a stone jar on a shelf in his store, where he thought it would be quite safe. When he went to look at it one day some time after it was a mass of fragments. Mice had got into the jar and chewed the bills into the minutest parts. Then they had mixed them all up, and altogether it was a fearful looking mess. He sent a cigar box full of it to me. I forwarded it to Washington, and what do you think! Out of the $1,145 originally in the pile a little over $1,000 was redeemed, the parts beyond recall being only the mere fibers of the bills. So the man lost only $100 by his foolishness. The reclamation of such money is done entirely by women, whose patience especially fits them for the monotonous work.—Banker President in Globe-Democrat.

The Heiress Hunter.

Nothing can be more contemptible than the life of a man who makes a show for a few years that he may marry an heiress. He lives a purely selfish existence; he is a mere cumberer of the ground. To be the accomplished man of society he may cultivate a few gifts and graces, but he has no true manhood. He may be a convenient man to ask to dinner, an eminent club favorite; he puts down a very handsome contribution to every ball list and every fashionable charity; he should send good bouquets, be well mounted at the hunt; he must be one of those colorless, civil, useless nonentities whom society loves; he must have no disagreeable family connections. He will then be asked where the heiresses go.

He must be seen at every tea, ball, reception; he must give an occasional theatre party; he must know how to be mean, and snub all the people who have been civil to him, only inviting those of the highest fashion who have snubbed him; he must be a pure and perfect snob. He will then be spoken of as a young man of the highest fashion and of excellent manners. He must have that air of coldblooded ingratitude which none but real snobs know, and a perfect blindness in seeing his friends of the past; he must do the opulent bachelor business for a while, and adopt the languid crutch and toothpick style; he must fill his rooms with bric-a-brac and Eastlake furniture, and give fancy orchestrion soirees. But if he wants an heiress who knows the value of her money, he must not appear fast or dissipated; he should at least seem very respectable.—Harper's Bazar.

Food of Our Childhood.

"Given your order, sir!" inquired a waiter at one of the down town lunch counters the other day of a customer. "The food of our childhood, please," was the rather mysterious and sententious reply. The next moment the gentleman was tearing a half loaf of bread into shreds and depositing the pieces in a huge bowl of milk. The charge for this is twelve cents, and the waiter explained that there was a pretty good run on the dish daily. A side issue, not nearly so often called for, is dubbed the "grub of our daddies," and consists of milk and mush.—Philadelphia Call.

THE HARNESS MAKER

Of Hunter Street, Peterborough,

Has decided to meet purchasers half-way. During this Fall and Winter he will sell HARNESS, of just as good a quality as heretofore, at prices which none can grumble at. To speak more plainly, the yield of an acre of land will go just as far in his shop as the yield of an acre did last year. This is no advertising-dodge, but a BONA FIDE OFFER. He would announce that he makes a specialty of

COLLARS

His make always fits the horse comfortably. Large contractors, as well as the farmers of this district, know this, and consequently he has received large orders from Mr. Beemer, of Quebec; Carl & Shields, of the Welland Canal; and McDermot & Ross, who had large contracts on the C. BOOTS and SHOES!

The establishing of a wholesale Boot and Shoe Factory in Peterborough, where Boots and Shoes are being made by hand on a large scale is of great advantage to every man, woman and child in the County. It enables them to buy hand-made solid leather goods, at wholesale prices, which is our retail price for Peterborough. The retail trade will not handle my goods only on conditions, I give up the retail trade which I am not disposed to do, therefore look out for bargains. Our goods are growing in favour, more so on account of the Eastern Manufacturers making Boots and Shoes out of paper with as little leather as possible, to meet the demands of unprincipled dealers.

TO THE FARMERS.—I have been making a patent long boot without side seams, not an ankle high boot, but a good long leg, made of the best veil kip, for the North-west Trade. I have about one hundred pairs on hand, that I will sell at $3.00 nett cash. This is as a good boot as has been sold in Peterborough for $4.50.

I have two hundred pairs of good solid leather, women's boots sellling at the low price of $1.25, our own make; also a full assortment of men's, women's, boy's and child's, from a cowhide boot to a French kid slipper of my own manufacture to be sold at wholesale prices, and boots that rip of my own make I will sew free of charge. Custom work make to measure at wholesale prices. Remember, there is no middle man's profits on my own manufacture that you buy from me. The trade supplied. Remember the place.

THE WEEKLY REVIEW

A REGULAR VISITOR AT THOUSANDS OF COUNTY HOMES.

A Newspaper Abreast with the Times—Sure, Enterprising, and Ably Conducted—Special Offer.

People are now getting to look upon the newspaper with a business eye, and they purchase their newspaper goods as they purchase dry goods or groceries—they buy where their money will go the farthest. If a farmer went to a grocery store and found that the proprietor was charging as much for brown sugar of the brownest hue as his neighbor was charging for white graulated it is quite likely that the farmer would get out of that shop without buying the brown sugar. Why then should farmers take the "brown" newspaper when they can get THE REVIEW for the same money?

The WEEKLY REVIEW is a large eight page journal of fifty-six columns and by far surpasses any of its county contemporaries in size; style and quantity of information conveyed to its readers. It is always replete with the latest news gathered and selected with care by an efficient staff for its own columns. The reports of events occurring in the county and town are reliable and interesting, while a corps of correspondence supply news from the different points of this and adjoining counties.

It invariably discusses the political issues of the day with acknowledged ability and fairness.

Its market reports are carefully revised weekly. It is an important matter to the people of the district tributary to Peterborough that they should have news upon which they can rely as to the fluctuations of the Peterborough market. This news is supplied by the REVIEW. Together with this, telegraphic reports are received from New York, Chicago and Liverpool for each issue and a review of the situation appears weekly.

An interesting serial story from the best authors is a feature of each Weekly. Besides this there are always a number of short stories.

The proprietors spare neither pains nor expense to render its visits valuable, instructive, interesting and amusing to its patrons, and during 1888 it will be made even more worthy of public patronage.

In order that everybody may afford to take the REVIEW the price of subscription has been placed at $1 from now till the end of 1888. If anyone wishes to give the REVIEW a trial it will be sent for 25 cents for three months.

BISMARCK

Is Striving to Keep Peace Between France and Germany.

But Gough, the great clothier, is waging a relentless war on long prices—he has not been awarded the contract of clothing the standard armies, but that greater any nobler army, the working men of our fair Canada appreciate his generous ambition to furnish them with reliable goods at wholesale prices. Other dealers wonder how Gough can undersell them; the explanation is easy. He is one of the largest dealers in Canada and pays cash for everything. He is thus in a position to take advantage of the markets and secure great snaps in the way of bargains. No man in his sober senses will deny that a good bankrupt stock bought at 40 or 50 cents on the dollar is not cheaper than the first cost to the manufacturer. Therefore, were Gough to say he would sell goods cheaper in many instances than even the large wholesale firms, he could not do it. I ask a fair thinking public if Gough has to stretch his conscience very much, then, when he states that the unfortunate dealer who is under the thumb of the wholesale house actually cannot buy as cheap as Gough can sell. A visit to his great clothing emporium, either in Toronto or Peterborough, will satisfy the most skeptical that this is the absolute truth. He has come to Peterborough to stay. Therefore, he knows that if he wishes the people to respect him he must first respect himself by never advertising insinuations, but solid facts. Mr. Gough is bound to preserve the splendid reputation he has already assumed for durable, stylish and well fitting garments at prices at least 25 per cent. below those of other dealers. Let no man, then, go ragged or shabby, no matter how poor he may be, but let him go straight to Gough, the public benefactor.

DEAD TWENTY-FIVE MINUTES.

A Tennessee Girl Who Wrote a Message After Returning to Life.

The Fayettsville, Tenn., Observer contains the following story:—About the first of February of the current year Miss Street informed her parents that on the 27th of March following, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, she would be taken violently ill; that she would grow worse until the following day at 9 o'clock p.m., at which time she would remain in a state of death for 25 minutes, and that during the period of suspended animation she would visit that "house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." She asked her father not to send for doctors, as human instrumentality could not prevent her journey to Paradise, and also told him not to be alarmed, declaring with implicit confidence that after enduring the sting of death for 25 minutes her mortal and immortal natures would reunite, and she would again become a living soul.

Of course the parents were uneasy about the idol of their fireside and began to think that her reason was abdicating its throne. On the arrival of the day on which she announced she would be taken ill they evinced great solicitude, inquiring hourly as to her condition. She answered cheerily and continued to admonish them not to be alarmed. The hands of the clock toiled around until 4 was finally reached, and to the girl's parents they never seemed to move so rapidly. While the timepiece was upon the stroke of the hour the young lady was prostrated with sickness and violent pains racked her body. Despite her entreaties her father sent for skilled physicians, who vainly administered their most potent remedies, and at 9 o'clock on the 28th day they pronounced life extinct. The sickness and death occurred as she had predicted, and in time so did the resuscitation. The father remembered the declaration that she would return to life and looked at the clock, and lo! the pendulum had ceased to vibrate and the old time-piece that had for years faithfully tolled off the hours had stopped while upon the stroke of 9. When the girl returned to consciousness the clock started of its own accord, finished striking the hour and has run since without interruption. By reference to the watch of one of the doctors it was found that she had been insensible—shall we say dead?—for twenty-five minutes.

After the return of animation her tongue was paralyzed and she indicated by signs that writing material was wanted, which was provided, and she wrote letters which she says were dictated by Christ, and the description previously referred to. The whole covers 19 pages of foolscap paper. She says she is commissioned to read her manuscript wherever she goes.

While in the home of the blest she was asked by a woman to write, after returning to earth, to her great granddaughter, Mrs. Annie B. Shelton, of Kinterbush, Sumter county, Alabama, and tell her how anxiously her great-granddame awaited her coming. Our informant is not positive as to the correctness of these names, but thinks that the old lady was Mrs. Annie Belmont, who said she had been dead 95 years. By writing to the address the girl gave it was learned that a woman of that name had died in that place in 1782, and that she had a great-granddaughter resident there. Miss Street says she will be told in 1889 the date of her death.

The statements as given above are established by impeachable witnesses. We attempt no explanation, but simply give the facts, and all doubting Thomases who want to are left free to cavil.

BORODINO AND GETTYSBURG.

Modern Battles in Which a Great Number of Men Were Killed.

It is not uninteresting to state what have been the bloodiest battles of the last hundred years, that is, to compute the percentage of loss to the numbers engaged. Within the alloted time the Napoleonic battles come first. The battle of Lodi, Bonaparte's first brilliant success, was simply the daring passage of a brigade, and does not enter into the computation. Arcola was the most sanguinary struggle of the Italian campaign. The forces engaged numbered about 70,000, and the loss was about 25,000, or about 35 per cent. At Rivoli there were 80,000 men engaged, and the loss was 40,000, but 20,000 of these consisted of Austrians who surrendered to Napoleon, so that the real loss was only 25 per cent.

After Bonaparte's return from Egypt he fought the battle of Marengo. In its results this was one of the most momentous engagements in history, but all accounts agree that it was one of the worst planned and worst fought of Bonaparte's victories. There were 60,000 men engaged, and the loss was 17,000, or about 28 per cent. At the battle of Austerlitz, which by many is considered Napoleon's most brilliant victory, the French and Austro-Russian armies numbered 210,000 men, and the loss was 40,000, or about 18 per cent. At Jena-Auerstadt there were 325,000 men engaged, and the loss was 40,000, or about 12 per cent. At Borodino there were 170,000 men in battle, and 80,000 were killed and wounded, amounting to more than 47 per cent. At Leipsic there were 300,000 men in the battle, which lasted three days, and the loss was 110,000, or 22 per cent. At Waterloo 140,000 men were engaged, and the loss was 40,000, or 24 per cent. In the Crimean war there were 125,000 men at the battle of Inkermann, and the casualties amounted to 25,000, or 20 per cent. At Magenta there were 225 000 men; the loss was 11 per cent., or about 25,000. At Solferino there were 250,000, and the loss was 40,000, or 16 per cent. At Sadowa the hostile forces numbered 425,000; and 17,000, or 16 per cent, were killed and wounded. At Gravelotte there were 450,000 men in the encounter, of whom 35,000, or about 8 per cent., were killed and wounded. At Shiloh the armies numbered 90,000, and the loss was 30,000, or one-third. At Fredericksburg there were 180,000; and the loss was 20,000, or 11 per cent. At Antietam there were 150,000, and the loss was 20,000, or about 13 per cent. At Chickamauga there were 150,000, and the loss was 30,000, or 20 per cent. At Chancellorsville there were 150,000, and the loss was 30,000, or 20 per cent. At Gettysburg there were 110,000, and the loss amounted to 37,000, or 33 per cent. Thus the figures show that Borodino was the bloodiest battle of modern times, with Gettysburg in the second place.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

On account of pressure of business in their new company, the Manufacturers Life of Toronto, of which Sir John A. Macdonald is President, they had not time to give us a 2 column add. Having written over half a million dollars of Life Insurance in 10 weeks, it's no wonder they are busy. They do a large Fire, Accident and Plate Glass business. Look out for their add in Weekly and Daily. Office over Alexander's dry goods store, George street, Peterborough.

Love's Secret.

What's the witching charm about her
That makes life seem dull without her?
Who can tell?
Surely other maids are fairer,
Other maids have beauty rarer,
Talk as well.

Still for me her conversation
Has the strangest fascination,
And her face
Day and night for ever haunts me;
While her figure slight enchants me
With its grace.

What's the reason I adore her,
Heed her whims, bow down before her?
(Little witch!)
Serve her in and out of season?
You could never guess she reason,—
She is rich!

The Ways of Thieves.

"Negroes have a certain way of stealing dogs that I never heard explained. They can steal the most vicious kind of brutes. I never believed that until a negro thief here named Tom Goabout stole a ferocious mastiff on a bet with the owner, who was boasting that nobody could get into his yard while the dog was there. A nigger thief will steal clothes all the time. If he fell into a room full of silverware, he might take something, but he'd hunt around and get clothes before he left. He wants women's clothes especially, and in one instance I remember a colored man was arrested at night with a stolen bustle under his coat tails. Another fellow, years ago, broke into a house and stole a pair of hoops, and when he was going down stairs they fell from under his arm, and he tripped on them and went headforemost to the bottom and was arrested. The safe burglar who was busy at his work and forgot himself and began whistling a jig and brought the cops on him was another sample of 'chump.'

"There was a story of a New York burglar who broke into a house one Christmas Eve and put his jimmy in a little girl's stocking, and left his candle on the mantel and left the house. I don't know how true it is, but I heard it. The musical burglar who broke into a musician's house and picked up a cornet, and couldn't resist the temptation to blow it once, and then had to jump through a window, was another funny fellow."—Globe-Democrat.

Physician for a Millionaire.

Since Phil Armour got his first twinge of rheumatic pain his physician has had a very rich thing of it. Every day for months, as regular as everybody else in the Armour employ, Dr. Horsey has called around at the La Salle street office to see his rich patient. He takes a seat and watches Armour at his work. It isn't his invariable custom to interrupt him at his work. He often leaves without having any interview at all. If he wants to have a talk they go into the "box" together, as the little private office in that establishment is called. This one patient is said to be worth $10,000 a year to the handsome doctor, not an extravagant figure, either, when it is remembered that he has dropped his general practice for a month or more at a time, and given his whole attention to this one big patient. When Armour is ailing he wants to get well in a great hurry. He does not want his doctor scattering. If a good round fee will get all his time, the fee is ready. He wants to get a doctor just as he'd get a superintendent for a packing house. He wants the doctor to charge a good fee, and, the fee being paid, there's the mischief to pay if the doctor doesn't do what he's set at work to do—just as there'd be if the packing house superintendent didn't do what he was hired for.—Chicago Herald.

New Form of Building Association.

Quite recently there has come into existence in this country a society which proposes to unite the life insurance feature with the co-operative practice of the building association. In brief, its objects are that members can purchase homes by making monthly or quarterly payments for a term of from five to twenty years, payments being graded according to the age of the person when becoming a member and the length of time the payments are to run. Should a member die before the full number of installments are paid the mortgage is canceled and the house becomes the property of the heirs, free and clear of all claims, in lieu of a fixed amount of insurance money. In the plan of this society there are no assessments upon surviving members, the fund for the cancellation of mortgages at members' death being created by the regular amount of money each member is paying for this insurance feature.

This society is thought by its originators to be an improvement upon the building association. Its plans are somewhat novel and quite different in many respects from the latter. But the objects to be gained are similar in both, and a consideration of one makes a comparison with the other necessary.

A TALK TO CHILDREN.

THE ONE THING THAT IS NEEDFUL IN LIFE.

Boy's Idea of What is Needful—Four Cardinal Points of Christianity, Knowledge, Faith, Love, Obedience

On Sunday evening the Charlotte street church was well attended by children of the Sunday school, the pastor, the Rev. I. Tovell, having agreed to preach a special sermon to them. The pastor explained th is before beginning his discourse, intimating that though his words would be specially directed so that the little people would understand, yet he hoped lessons helpful to all might be conveyed. It would be well, he said, for people to get good texts grounded into their memories. One, at least, was fixed in his mind so that he would never forget it, and that was the text for this evening's sermon. When he went to the Sunday school next Sunday he would ask the pupils there wnat it was. It was found in Luke x, 42:—

"But one thing is needful."

These were all simple words and easily remembered. All could remember that, and no doubt the boys and girls in church here were whispering: "Luke 10th chapter and 42nd verse, but one thing is needful," so that they wouldn't forget it. But what is that one thing that is needful? When he was a boy he thought it was money: get an education and use it to get money, buy a farm and use it to make money, learn a trade and use it to make money, learn a profession and use it to make money. And he would venture to say that there were people in this church to-night whose creed went no further than that. Once in a Sunday school he asked the question: "What is this one thing that is needful? and a practical boy stood up up and said, "Bread and butter, sir." (Smiles.) That boy would make his mark in the world. Later in life he, the preacher, thought education was the one thing needful; but he had got farther than that. There was something better than education. He would spell it for the little people: R-e-l-i-g-i-o-n. Not the religion of Mohammed, but the religion to Christ Jesus. In order to make his remarks easy of remembrance he would divide them into four headings. He once asked a little boy how many quarters he could divide an apple into, and Arty replied, eight. Then he told Arty to ask his pa. And Arty asked his pa and found out that he could only divide the apple into four quarters. But Arty never murmured, and by his silence concealed his ignorance from his father. And to-night he would present the practical features of Christianity in four parts.

First—Knowledge of Christ. Something must be known about Him before a person can believe in Him. What a wonderful knowledge it was! What a wonderful knowledge to know of His works and character! How kind He was! There was never a man, no matter how hard and harsh and rough, who was not some time or other susceptible to kindness. Kindness was the strongest power in human society. Christ was kind—a father in the highest and truest sense. Not a father who, coming home vexed with the annoyances of business life, casts off the prattling child when it came to play with him. Such fathers had little influence with their children when they grew up to manhood and womanhood. But Christ was a father full of kindness always. Then something must first be known of Christ, of His works, of His atonement, His resurrection, and His intercession for us.

Second—Faith in Christ. What was faith? He liked to illustrate faith by describing a child learning to walk. The child is stood up against the wall and the father moves away five yards. Then the child is told to come. He moves tentatively out and relapses to the wall again. Several times he does this till the father comes within a yard of him. Then the child steps out from the wall and throws himself into his father's arms. That was faith. He knew his father would not let him fall. Neither would our Father let us fall if we trusted in Him.

Third—Love of Christ. Religion was a wonderfully simple thing. Some people tried to make it mystical and profound, yet it was simple. There were great problems in theology, and questions might be raised which the profoundest philosopher could not solve. But to get right down into the essence of it, and a little child can understand it. Christ did not ask Peter if he understood clearly the deep lessons of theology, neither did he ask Peter if he knew how to apply the great truths of science. He simply said: Peter, lovest thou me?" A person might look at a honey comb and admire the beauty of the structure of it. And he might stand and wonder how it was constructed, and what marvellous instinct the bee had. Yet the honey in the comb was the principal thing, and love was the principal thing in religion. A man that believeth not in love was not humane, and love was the fundamental principle of Christianity.

Faith—obedience to Christ. A father says to his boy: "Johnny, you stay here in the store while I go down te market. I'll be gone just fifteen minutes, and if anybody comes in tell them I'll be back in that time. Now, Johnny, stay at your post. "Yes father." And the father hurries down street. Charlie comes around the corner and says, "Johnny, a game of marbles! Keeps! right back of the store! and they go off. "Knuckle down now. Keeps!" and they keep at it till the father comes back, to find the store full of people and no Johnny. The father calls his boy when the customers is served and says to him: My son, you told me this morning that you loved me, but your professions of love are useless unless it leads you to obey me." Was not that natural? Was it not common sense, and this was true to Christianity. The love of Christ should lead Christians to obedience to Christ's commands. Those who professed to love Christ and did not His bidding were a flower, after long, careful attention, put forth no bloom. The plant was set as fruitless and would it not be natural for the gardener to do the same with the plants he had watered and tended so long without a sign of bloom apparently?

Concluding, he made an appeal to the young present to form correct habits, for it would be a hard thing to do when age advanced upon them.

The Essential Feature.

Irate Poet—Look here, sir; what in blazes do you mean? I wrote, "I kissed her under the silent stars," and I'll be hanged if you haven't let it go in the proof, "I kissed her under the cellar stairs."

Calm Proofreader—Ah? Is that so? Yes, it does look like that, doesn't it? Well, my dear boy, you ought not to bother so much about these unimportant details. We got the main fact all right, didn't we?—Journal of Education.

Opened.

Messrs. Dawson Bros. have opened their new dry goods store, Erskine's old stand, carrying a complete line of new fall goods. The store is handsomely fitted up and the stock tastefully

HOW THEY WILL DRESS.

A Couple of the New Canton Uniforms Arrive.

The Captain of Canton Peterborough No. 10 has received a couple of the new uniforms to be purchased for the chevaliers of the canton.

Commencing at the headdress: the undress cap is neat and tasty. It is made of black silk with the rim of gold and purple. The chapeau, or drill head dress, is very handsome. Two long white ostrich feathers sweep from the front to the rear, these being covered by a luxuriant purple one. The shape of the chapeau is made of silk plush with end straps an inch and a quarter wide made of black silk ribbon. The tips of the chapeau are ornamented with bullion fringe and the sides bear emblems of the order, the wreath and crown, and cross and crook, standing on black velvet background.

The coat will be a single breasted black broadcloth frock, having an inch and a quarter standing collar. The shoulder knots are of corded gold, very rich in design and workmanship. Gilt buttons ornamented with cross and crown and wreath and crook form the fastening for the coat. A handsome cross belt, striped with gold and purple, carries the baldric, which folds within itself the gossomer cape.

The belt is similar in design but more ornamental. It is adorned with emblematic devices and is inscribed with the following mottoes: "Pax ant Bellum," "Justitia Umnersalis." The sword hangs from the belt. Its scabbard is of fine steel ornamented with gold. The sword blade is of the finest steel, and upon it will be emblazoned the name of the owner.

The trowsers will also be of black broadcloth.

The uniforms are exceedingly handsome and the appearance of Peterboorough Canton No. 10 in them will be sure to create a sensation.

CHINA HALL.

This Season's Supplies Drawn from European and American Markets.

At any time of the year China Hall, Peterborough, is a sight worth seeing, but particularly at the beginning of the fall or spring trade. At the present the whole place is ablaze with novelties from both the old world and the new. The long and wide wareroom on the corner of Hunter and Simcoe streets exhibits piles upon piles of goods in the exactest order—china and earthenware from Swansea, Wales; crockery from Staffordshire, England; dinner and tea sets and novelties from Limoges, France; toilet goods from Vienna, Austria; satin chinaware, vases and toilet goods from Bohemia, Germany; cups and saucers and fancy china from Berlin, Germany; lamps from Boston, Mass.; crockery from St. John's, New Brunswick; glassware from Montreal, Quebec, and Hamilton, Ontario; elaborate and beautiful silverware from Toronto and Hamilton, Ontario, and many other lines of goods.

Mr. McFarlane Wilson, the proprietor, not content with the large space occupied by China Hall, has succeeded, by constructing a subterranean showroom and another underground wareroom, in more than doubling the size of the establishment. The subterranean showroom is lighted with gas. It is used exclusively for showing off dinner and tea sets. The customers have the advantage of seeing first how a set will look on the table, for a whole range of tables down the centre of the showroom are spread and set. The wareroom which adjoins the showroom is the same size as the showroom. In it is stored a largn reserve stock.

China Hall, that is China Hall above ground, looks best by night. The iris hued china in countless forms gleams and shimmers under the bright rays from the electric lamps; thousands of crystal prisms hang glittering and sparkling like dew-drops in the morning sun; lamps of burnished brass are pendant from bright chains so numerous as to look like a freak of spider work. In fact the whole place is a mass of gorgeous, superb resplendence. Mr. Wilson's enterprise in bringing together such a comprehensive stock is worthy of commendation and no doubt the public will express its appraval in a satisfactory way.

The Soap Boxes in the Garret.

I received quite a valuable suggestion from a friend of mine up on the hill last week. There are ten in their family, and up in the garret stand as many wooden boxes, soap boxes, each with the name of its owner and the date of its beginning painted upon it. In this box each keeps anything private and it is never opened except by himself. How I should like to rummage them! The sentimental one would have locks of raven, gold and soft brown hair, rose buds, gloves, all the instruments of sweet torture, or relics of past conquests. The practical one would there store things not now available, but which might become so. Ned, she told me, keeps all newspapers containing any particular news, carefully marked. That's a good idea, too. What a history, years from now, when we scribblers have handed in our last "copy," and are quiet at last with only "Hic jacet" to be written, could be compiled from the words we have sent out, hot from their haste, in our daily race against time!

Louise has in hers every programme of everything she has ever attended with the gentleman's name who took her, and she has traveled much and seen more. Won't it be nice when that pink white skin of hers is brown and wrinkled; that mass of sunny hair dwindled to a little pug of faded hue, and that slight figure bent with life's storms, for her to sit of a winter evening looking over those very programmes! Her grandchildren will press about to hear of that night when Patti the divine; "Ah, children, you have no such singers now. I was a beauty then"—but we've all heard, we all know how she'll ramble on, while the little Louise wonders how grandma ever could have looked like her as she insists she did. Many thoughts those boxes have called up.—Pioneer Press.

A Liquor Made from Bananas.

The Indian Agriculturist calls attention to the fact that India abounds in bananas or plantains, and wonders that the fruit has never been employed in the distillation of a fermented liquor. The common prickly pear has been utilized for this purpose in Malaga, and with considerable advantage to the distillers; and it now appears that missionaries in the Congo region have discovered that a beverage made of bananas is a preventive of malarial fevers. A banana liquor company has recently been started in India for producing banana liquor in either an alcoholic or non-alcoholic form, and which can be used with equal advantage as an ordinary liquor or diluted with hot or cold or soda water. For the temperatures of northern regions, including England, it will probably be best esteemed in conjunction with brandy or other spirits.—Scientific American.

LITTLE LAKE CEMETERY

EXTENSIVE IMPROVRMENTS MADE THIS SEASON.

Two Hundred Lots Graded—Water Works Extended—Drains Laid—Trees Planted and Other Work Done.

It is a pleasure each year to visit the Little Lake Cemetery and notice the improvements that are made in it in various ways. Each summer Superintendent Kelly is busy in adding to the beauties of the beautiful place—a work he well knows how to do. This year his attention has, with the exception of the usual work of trimming, watering, etc., been given principally to the ground added to the cemetery last year. Six acres were purchased, which, with the ground that formerly formed the cemetery, make a burial place fifty acres in extent.

One of the first things that met the reporter's eye was a new boulevard on Haggart street, the western boundary of the cemetery. It is fourteen feet deep, and when completed, and covered with grass, it will be very beautiful. The boulevard is now completed about half the distance between Crescent street and the southern boundary of the cemetery.

A block in the new ground containing a hundred lots has been graded, in addition to what was graded last year. A margin of several feet has been left on each side of Ware avenue, a little lower than the level of the lots, in which trees have been planted. A border of sod has been placed around the block and the whole seeded. Another block of one hundred lots is being cleared and graded. Considerable earth will have to be removed, it being necessary in some places to cut it down two or three feet, and a number of stumps, as well as large stones, have been taken out, but care is taken to preserve trees. This block takes in the ground on which stood McGowan's old shanty, a building which for years stood at the boundary fence of the cemetery. This spot is one of the best parts of the whole cemetery.

The driveways or avenues have been levelled and cleaned up and are splendid drives. On each side of the avenues surface drains have been constructed of stones, the loose stones gathered on the ground being used. From near the fountain to the main entrance a wide drain similarly constructed has been laid, the stones being laid in Portland cement. Two thousand lineal feet of this drainage has been put in. A walk has been cut and graded from the main entrance along the boundary to the entrance gate at Ware street.

The addition of the new ground necessitated an extension of the waterworks system. It will be remembered that the power is furnished by a windmill. Over two thousand feet of water pipes have been laid and eighteen hydrants have been put in. The extension of the waterworks was a great boon, as the hot, dry weather was very trying on the trees and grass.

A large number of trees have been planted, including soft and hard maple, elm, spruce, black walnut, cut leaf birch, mountain ash, wire leaf maple and red cedar, as well as shrubs of different kinds. The trees have been set out in straight rows, each kind forming one row. In all five hundred trees have been planted, and they have all done well except a few cut leaf birch and red cedar. A cedar hedge has been planted on each side of the driveway leading from the main entrance.

Superintendent Kelly's house has received some attention this summer. Buttresses of stone and brick have been built at the north end and Mr. Kelly has painted the whole house, shingled the roof and otherwise improved the building. The buttresses were rendered necessary, he believes, by water washing down against the foundation and he has constructed drains, laid in cement, to carry it off.

NOTES.

The vault has been repaired and the front wall pointed.

A new chimney has been built on the Cemetery Chapel.

A number of hitching posts, ornamentally turned, placed in the boulevard, are convenient and rather add to the good appearance of the place.

Several willows have been planted by Mr. Kelly on Crescent street on the shore of the Little Lake. A row of willows planted along this street would, as can be seen by a glance at the willows in the cemetery, in a few years make it a beautiful drive.

The flower beds look fresh and bright yet, and show evidence of careful attention. A square of grass on the slope from the main entrance shows the letters "L L C." (Little Lake Cemetery) in flowers. The flowers for the beds were given by Mr. F. Mason and Mr. A. Blade.

Ware street, the next one south of Crescent street, has been graded to the cemetery. There is a large entrance gate at the end of this street.

The whole cemetery, although the leaves are changing color and falling, retains its summer beauty, the flowers and plants in the lots still being fresh, and the grass, shrubbery, drives and walks being as usual carefully attended to.

THE UNEARNED INCREMENT

Apart from the question of the correctness of Mr. George's theory that the unearned increment of the value of land should be public, not private property, how is it to be determined whether the increment is unearned or is the result of improvements by the occupant? If a settler buys two adjoining lots, puts up a farm house on one, a smaller house for his brother, to whom he pays wages, on the other, and cultivates both lots, the land is raised in value by the improvements, and we suppose the increment is earned. It, however, the two brothers have each taken one of the lots, each of them by his improvements will raise not only the value of his own lot, but of his neighbour's also. How is it to be determined what part of the increment is unearned and what part earned? Has the public any greater right in one case than in the other? And is not the mutual benefit given and received by two neighbours the same in principle if they are three or ten, or a hundred, or even a whole county? Will some admirer of the George theory please explain?

MIRAGE.

As shipwrecked mariner by waves o'erborne,
Chilled and benumbed by blast and lashing spray,
Slow sinking from the blessed light of day
Gives up the struggle, strength and life outworn;
Yet as he yields him helpless and forlorn,
Stern fate, remorseful, gives one parting ray
Of hope; the long sought headlands far and gray
Rise on his dying sight with light of morn;

So life, relenting, gives one moment grand
To him who walks bereavement's lonely beach;
The tender pressure of a gentle hand,
The ecstasy of voice and look and speech;
One rapturous glimpse of love's celestial land
Whose fading shores his feet may never reach.

THE BOYS OF ETON.

Children of Royalty and Rank—The Boys Who Are "Betters" of Everybody Else.

The college, as it is called—a huge school for boys—stands, as everybody knows, under the castle walls of Windsor, and the grounds stretch along the banks of the Thames, rivaling the royal Home park in exquisite beauty of verdure and softness of outline with their vistas of oaks and miles of sward. The boys of Eton are the children of the most important people of England. Men put their sons' names down for Eton as soon as they are born, as they do for the great clubs. The struggle for admission is prodigious, even among those who are entitled to such precedence (for rank counts at school as it does at court or anywhere else in England), and the rich parvenus pay enormous sums to place their boys in the company of those who will one day become dukes and earls.

These boys have a race on the Thames on the 4th of June, and all their noble and gentle relations go down to see them row. There are luncheons at the houses of the various masters, and the very great people indeed are invited by the provost. Then under the trees and on the lawns you may see the bearers of half the great names in England watching the race, holding the smaller boys by the hand or crowding around a royal personage to uncover or prostrate themselves, for royalty is held to take a special interest in this great school. The Eton boys are often admitted to make demonstrations of their loyalty in the very presence of the sovereign; and the 4th of June without the presence of some scion of the royal race would be incomplete indeed. The boys themselves, with their short jackets and high hats and broad collars—a costume no longer worn anywhere else—add to the effect of one of the prettiest scenes of the social year.

The same boys attract the same audiences at other times; for boys of the upper classes are important people in England. Those who are to be peers learn that fact very soon from the deference shown them, and all eldest sons feel their own consequence, while even the younger children of the nobility are "the betters" of everybody else. There are cricket matches between the boys of Eton and Harrow, the other of the great schools, which rivals Eton as Cambridge does Oxford, and presses it hard. Many pronounce Cambridge superior for scholarship to Oxford, and Harrow better for the boys than Eton; but Oxford and Eton have the stamp of superior caste. There is not a snob in the country who would hesitate a moment in sending his son; and the instincts of that sort of people are unerring. They may not attain social greatness themselves, or even approach it, but they know where to find it, as a dog does a truffle. They prefer Eton to Harrow. —Adam Badeau's Letter.

Showed His Ignorance.

It is very difficult for the man who is not a tailor to estimate the number of stitches that go to the making of a coat. "How easily you earn your bread and butter!" said a business man to a journalist. "I am in my office nine hours a day, while you sit down at your desk, dash off a few anecdotes or fancies, and get well paid for them."

"Did it ever occur to you that my work is of the sort that is never done?" asked the newspaper man; "or that I never take one step or glance which I don't attempt to utilize?"

"Well, no; there seems to be something spontaneous about your work. You do it when you happen to feel like it; there's no grind about it."

"Oh, indeed! isn't there? My friend, I never see a stranger without wondering if his face or form will work into a story; I never hear a conversation without separating the wheat from the chaff, to use as material; I never see anything lovely in nature without longing to put it in words for other eyes to enjoy, through the medium of a printed page."

"Dear me, you do make a grind of it! but I don't believe that first class geniuses do, you know. They just sit down and write what comes to 'em; they don't grub like that."

"There's a curious resemblance on certain points between geniuses and newspaper men," said the other, musingly. "For instance, I'm perfectly certain that if a literary genius were present at this conversation he would mentally take down your remarks as a valuable illustration of the obtuseness of the human animal. And then he would print it —just as I shall!"—Youth's Companion.

Aroma of an Asafetida Desert.

Eight or ten miles of fair wheeling across the plain, through the isolated village of Mohammedabad, and the trail loses itself among the rank, dead stalks of the asafetida plant that here characterizes the vegetation of the broad, level sweep of plain. The day is cloudy, and with no trail visible, my compass has to be brought into requisition; though oftimes finding it useful, it is the first time I have found this article to be really indispensable so far on the tour.

The atmosphere of an asafetida desert is among those things that can better be imagined than described; the aroma of the fetid gum is wafted to and fro and assails the nostrils in a manner quite the reverse of "Araby, the blest." The plant is a sturdy specimen among the annuals; its straight, upright stem is but three or four feet high, but often measuring four inches in diameter, and it not infrequently defies the blasts of the Khorassan winter and the upheaving thaws of spring, and preserves its upright position for a year after its death. The thick, dead stems and branching tops of last year's plants are seen by the thousands, sturdily holding their ground among the rank, young shoots of the new growth.—Thomas Stevens in Outing.

Sunday in London.

If London is the dullest city in Europe Sunday the country surrounding it and the river cannot be called quiet on that day. The greater part of the middle class people of London make it a point to get out of the city on some kind of a frolic every pleasant Sunday during the summer. Every place of amusement in London is closed Sunday, and extra price is charged at the Zoological gardens, and everything made as dismal as it is possible. To the very great number of London drunkards, however, a concession is made. After church is over in the morning every liquor saloon, or public, as they call them, is open until midnight. So by the time evening comes about the only persons to be seen on the streets are either drunk or well on the way to being so. This kind of a crowd naturally drives respectable people to the suburbs, and the favorite picnic places are Maidenhead and Richmond, both of which have good facilities for boating.—London Cor. Victory has Perched on the Banner of

PETERBOROUGH'S GREAT CHEAPSIDE.

And SHEPPARD, by common consent, will get $1,000 for being the Cheapest Clothier in Peterborough, having knocked the Wonderful Cheap Man completely out. "Business is business; dirt is dirt, and when it comes to throwing dirt, then count" the only original teddy out, and he will hand over that $1,000 like a little man, for the following reasons :—

SHEPPARD sells a full size Man's suit for $2.95, and better goods than a suit to fit a child about 9 years old sold by the Wonderful Cheap Man on Saturday for $3.00, but marked $3.50. This is how it was.—A lady purchased a child's suit on Saturday last, Sept. 17th, 1887, at the store of the Wonderful Cheap Man. It was marked thusly :—Lot 5375, Breast 27, Waist 26½ Age 9, Price $3.50. It was pure shoddy, being held together by cotton threads, and Sheppard is free to say that that was the dearest suit sold in the Town of Peterborough for the last two years. Full particulars are given because of the $1,000 involved, and, moreover, that this decides who is selling the Cheapest Clothing in Peterborough. SHEPPARD would have sold that lady a suit, pure wool, for that money, and worth two of the one she got.

$1,000 to Go to the Charitable Institutions of Peterborough.

I had first decided to give the agencies a chance of jumping up my rating that $1,000, but after considering the matter and finding that never in any case have I been asked for an endorser to my paper, and that no relative or any other persons have ever endorsed my paper to the extent of one cent, I have come to the conclusion my credit is as good as yours, and will ask you to hand over the $1,000 to the Charitable Institutions of Peterborough.

Now, Sir, there is a good story told, the truth of which can be vouched for, but for the honor of at least making an effort to keep up your self-styled name—The Terror of High Priced Clothiers—do not allow the same to be said of you in the case above. A man purchased a suit for $15.00 at the store of one of the largest advertisers in that section of country. It was guaranteed pure wool; but after examining it carefully at home he came to the conclusion that he had been dealing with some one sharper than himself. Finding a make of wool, differing some from anything he had ever seen, it dawned upon him that he had heard of wool of that kind, so the suit was returned. The merchant bet $25.00 that it was all wool, and the bet was accepted, the decision being left to a neighboring merchant. He found that the $15.00 suit was wool faced and shoddy back, pure unadulterated shoddy; but what of the $25.00 bet? Was it paid? Not much —muchly—as it were.

ON THE ROAD TO ANARCHY.

The Case For the Mitchellstown Police Smashed.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The case for the Mitchellstown police has been finally smashed by the evidence of the District Inspector, who declares that some of the men fired without orders, hints that a county inspector was in a panic, and blames him for having given the order without personally controlling the firing. He also shows his disapproval of the order to charge the crowd. Meanwhile Ireland is rapidly advancing on the road to anarchy. The land act does not work; evictions are only prevented by the action of the National League, which is still vigorous, even in the proclaimed districts, while English sympathy is on the increase. Troops of liberal men and women have gone over to Ireland to inspect evictions and speak at League meetings. The Unionist forces urge the Government to further activity. A specimen of the spirit prevailing in Unionist circles is given by the Times, which hints that the land movement in Wales is getting dangerous, and that similar measures should be applied to it as to Ireland.

LORD SALISBURY'S HEALTH.

Lord Salisbury's friends are eager to minimise the reports of his ill-health which are abroad, and declare that his stay at Royat has effected a perfect cure. This is untrue. Lord Salisbury suffers from heart disease and gets through the work of the Foreign Office with difficulty and neglects the general control of the ministry which belongs to the Premiership. The consequence is that his nephew, Mr. Balfour, who is an ambitious man, is the leading spirit in the Cabinet, while Lord Salisbury is practically effaced.

FOREST FIRES.

The Ottawa Valley in a Blaze—Narrow Escape of Hull City.

OTTAWA, Sept. 28.—Ottawa still continues in a cloud of smoke caused by the bush fires, and the sun has not been seen for several days except in a sort of eclipse. The fires on every side of the city are increasing and grave fears are entertained of an even greater disaster than swept over the Ottawa Valley in 1870. Indeed the damage already done in some sections is estimated as being even greater than that year.

Hull had a very narrow escape to-day, the bush fire creeping into the northern end of the city, and but for the new waterworks there is little doubt but that the City of Rocks would have been once more swept out of existence.

The firemen and citizens have been fighting the fire all day, and unless a strong wind should spring up the city is safe for the present.

Several small fires are burning in McKay's bush at the back of Rideau Hall, and the people of New Edinburgh are not sleeping comfortably in their beds to-night.

From every quarter come reports of fires and it may almost be said that the whole Ottawa Valley is more or less on fire wherever there is bush.

DESTRUCTION OF PROPERTY.

Rivers Overflow in Mexico—Swollen by Great Waterspout.

NEW LAREDA, Tex., Sept. 28.—Despatches have been received giving the details of great destruction of property in Guerro and Mier, Mexico, near the Rio Grande. Mier is built on the banks of the river and had two hundred houses destroyed and many completely washed away, while the town of Guerro, situated on the banks of the Taladio river, was inundated and about fifty houses either damaged or washed away. Both these rivers were swollen by a great waterspout which fell on Friday and did much damage to the Mexican National road.

LOST IN THE CHINA SEA.

Wreck of a Chinese Transport—Three Hundred Soldiers Drowned.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—A Chinese transport has been wrecked on one of the Pescadore Islands in the China Sea. Three hundred soldiers and the captain and crew, with the exception of one man, was drowned.

FIGHT IN TEXAS.

Encounter Between Negroes and Whites—Four Negroes Killed.

COLUMBIA, Tex., Sept. 28.—In the fight, Sunday night, in Matagorda county, between a mob of negroes and a posse of whites under Captain Bates, four negroes were killed, including Burton Hawkins, one of the leaders. It is not known how many were wounded. The whites lost two horses in the fight. Later information confirms the first report that the trouble arose over the death of Jerry Massena, a colored constable, who started out to arrest a white planter named Sanborn. It is thought that the sheriffs will arrest the leaders in the insurrection before the militia retires.

YAMASKA MOUNTAIN ABLAZE.

Serious Damage Threatened—The Recklessness of Smokers the Cause.

ABBOTSFORD, Que., Sept. 28.—Fire has broken out on Yamaska Mountain above the quarry and threatens serious mischief. Recklessness of smokers who were cutting a winter road is said to have been responsible for starting it. There are no available means of extinction, as there is no water to be had, and the soil being wholly vegetable, and dry as tinder after the long drought, cannot be utilized to smother the fire. Fifty-nine years ago the whole southwestern side of the mountain was swept by a fire which destroyed everything down to the bare rock. At that time the country around was covered with timber, and the blaze on the mountain was merely looked upon as a huge display of fireworks, but now the mountain is almost the only source of fuel wood, and an extensive fire there simply means widespread disaster. All the ordinary sources of water supply are failing, and the deepening of old wells and the digging of new ones has been the order of the day for some time past.

LABOR CONGRESS.

The Meeting at Hamilton of Canadian Delegates—Important Motions.

HAMILTON, Sept. 28.—The Labor Congress was called to order this morning at 8 o'clock. The following motions were carried, some of them calling for considerable discussion:—

Moved by D. J. O'Donoghue and J. T. Carey: That, in the opinion of this congress, every contract as between any of the Governments of Canada and contractors for public works should contain a clause declaring that no employe of any contractor, while employed upon the work so contracted for, shall be asked or compelled to work more than eight hours per day and five hours on Saturday, under a penalty of of forfeiture of contract. Carried.

Moved by R. Glockling and G. T. Beales: That the provincial Legislature be asked to transfer the allowance now enjoyed by universities and colleges to the public schools for the purpose of further promoting their efficiency and providing the pupils of such schools with books free of charge. Carried.

Moved by G. T. Beales and R. Glockling, —That in the opinion of this congress any insolvency act should contains provision giving labor a priority of claims for wages of sixty days at least. Carried.

Moved by A. W. Wright and R. Glockling, —That the present laws relating to patents, while they fail in many instances to secure to inventors a just reward, are the cause of the creation of many oppressive and dangerous monopolies. In the opinion of this congress the patent laws should be radically changed, and that in future, when a patent is granted, a royalty price should be fixed, upon payment of which to the inventor or his legal representative by any person, such person should be allowed to manufacture the patented article, the rights of the inventor being properly guarded by affixing a sufficient penalty to infringements of the patent without payment of the royalty. Carried.

Moved by James Clagtion and David Ireland: That in view of the rapid growth of the city and town populations, and the consequent huddling together of large numbers of working people in small and illventilated workshops, and under very imperfect sanitary arrangements, causing sickness and distress in many honest homes, therefore be it resolved that the congress call upon the Dominion and Local governments to pass a workshop regulation act, by which all the workshops of the Dominion shall be regularly and properly inspected by competent inspectors in whom the labor organizations of the country have confidence.—Carried.

Moved by J. Lovejoy and W. F. Gould: That in the opinion of this congress the working classes of this Dominion will never be properly represented in Parliament, or receive justice in the legislation of the country, until they are represented by men of their own class and members of this congress pledge themselves to use their utmost endeavors, wherever practicable, to bring out candidates for the Local and Dominion elections in the constituencies in which they reside.

Moved by J. Lovejoy and P. J. Gould: That the continued and systematic expenditure of large sums of public money in assisting and encouraging to this country supers, indigents and orphans from abroad, is a gross injustice to the people of Canada, and in particular to the working classes; therefore, be it resolved, that it is the imperative duty of the Governments to peremptorily abolish the existing immigration system, and due care should be exercised in preventing the introduction of such classes into Canada, whether they be sent under the authority of the Imperial Government or through any other channel.

The convention adjourned.

Fire in Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Sept. 28.—A large fire occurred here this morning. Five buildings, occupied by Pattier's barber shop, Mrs. Lahan's house, Trembley's shoemaker's shop, and three small hotels on Murray street, lower town, were burned. Loss about $15,000. The buildings were of wood and in a poor district.

FROM ALL OVER.

The Russian Government is about to repeal the law permitting foreigners to enlist in the army.

The semi-annual meeting of the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association was commenced in Toronto on Tuesday.

It is estimated that the area under corp in the North-West next season will be thirty per cent. greater than this year.

Lord Mayor Sullivan, of Dublin, has congratulated the people of Mitchellstown on their conduct in resisting the operations of the Crimes Act.

Right now is the time to use a good Blood Purifying Medicine. Lose no time in getting a bottle of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It will do you good. Sold by al druggists. 50c.

At a conference in Toronto on Tuesday between Premiers Mercier and Mowat the date for holding the Inter-Provincial Conference at Quebec was fixed for Thursday, October 20th.

At a special meeting of the Brantford City Council on Monday night the House of Refuge by-law was passed. The building will have accommodation for about sixty people.

A commission has been appointed by the Dominion Government to examine into and report upon the claims of Indians to reserve lands in Dundee township, Huntingdon county, held on lease by white settlers.

Only forty miles of track on the Sault Ste Marie short line now remains to be laid which is being done at the rate of a mile and a half a day. The line will be ready for operation by the end of October, and the Minneapolis and Sault Ste. Marie will complete the connection in November.

The Prince and His Nurse.

It is not generally known that the Prince of Wales regarded with deep affection his old nurse. Mrs. Mary Scarrett, whose death, at a very advanced age, I recorded two or three weeks back. He made a habit of going to see her at least twice a week, and would sit by her bedside quite a long time. On the last occasion, as he was about to leave, she called him back and begged him to stay a little while longer, calling him by the name of Bertie, as she used to do when he was a little boy. The Prince at once resumed his seat and sat there for some hours, until the old lady had fallen asleep. He then kissed her forehead, and, with tears in his eyes, left the room, never to see his valued friend again in life. A bunch of white flowers placed upon Mrs. Scarrett's coffin was gathered by the Prince from the conservatory at Marlborough House and tied with a ribbon by himself.—London Life.

Fire in Montreal.

MONTREAL, Sept. 28.—Another serious fire broke out in G. Barrington & Sons trunk factory, on St. Antoine street, about eight o'clock this evening. The flames were first seen bursting out of a new wing in rear of the main building, and as the material was of an inflammable nature the flames spread with wonderful rapidity into a portion of the main building. The firemen directed their efforts to save the main building, as the wing, stables, and outhouses were doomed. The horses were got out safely as well as the books from the office. The origin of the fire is a mystery, as when the men left at 6 o'clock everything appeared to be all right. The loss is estimated at about $40,000, covered by insurance.

Strike Settled.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 28.—The strike at the American iron works of Jones and Laughlin has ended favorably to the strikers, and work was resumed to-day in all departments.

HANLAN CHALLENGED.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Sept. 28.—Peter Kemp has challenged Hanlan to row on the championship course for £500. Christian Nelson has challenged Hanlan to row for £200.

FAILURE OF STANLEY'S MISSION.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The English press regards Emin Pasha's refusal to leave his province as a decisive failure of Mr. Stanley's mission. It is suggested that Mr. Stanley's best way to make his enterprise valuable is to explore the unknown country which lies west of Victoria Nyanza.

THE LANDLORD'S NEW METHOD.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The Irish landlords executive have hit upon a new method to check operations under the plan of campaign. They are attacking the banking deposits and company shares of non-paying tenants.

WILLING TO RESIGN.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Colonel Hughes Hallett has informed the committee of the Conservative party that he is willing to resign his seat in parliament. The committee will accept the offer.

THE FRENCHMEN AGGRESSORS.

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—It is stated that the Frenchmen, on Saturday, on the frontier were shot on German soil. This is proved blood stains on the ground. Two soldiers who accompanied Kauffmann aver that they saw the Frenchmen trespassing on German territory, and shouted to warn them. The Frenchmen paid no heed to their cries and attacked the Kauffmann party. The Germans then fired, all concerned being at the time on German soil.

THE YACHT RACE.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Bitter disappointment is felt here at the defeat of the Thistle. Reports were regularly telegraphed to the Stock Exchange, and on the strength of these an enormous quantity of money was laid on the Thistle. The race absorbed all other events.

EVICTIONS ABANDONED.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The proposed evictions on the Ponsonby estate have been abandoned, the landlord having conceded the tenant's demand for the benefits of the land act.

ON GERMAN TERRITORY.

FRANKFORT, Sept. 28.—The North German Gazette publishes a preliminary official report on the frontier incident that seems to prove that the whole affair occurred on German territory. The Gazette joins in the general regret over the sad affair, and says a judicial trial will show whether the German officials were at fault.

AN INDIAN STATESMAN'S ADVICE.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Sir Salar Jung has an important article in the Nineteenth Century. Sir Salar is Prime Minister of the Nizam of Hyderabad, who has just given £400,000 for the defence of the north-western frontier. Sir Salar Jung says it is the business of English statesmen to act and fight at the right moment, which moment appears to be the present. England's fifty millions of Mussuiman subjects will stand by her against the Cossack soldiery in the defence of Constantinopole.

Importation of Canadian Oil.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 28.—The Treasury Department has decided that there is no provision of law to authorize the importation of Canadian oil in bulk into the United States, for the purpose of being put into cans and exported in bond.

Port Arthur and Duluth Railway.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 28.—Contractor Ross, of the Port Arthur and Duluth railway, is in the city. About 120 men and 75 teams have been set to work, and grading operations are being actively begun. Twenty-five miles will be completed this season and the remainder will be finished by the first of August next.

Rope for the Anarchists.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 28.—Jacob Bupp, of Woods Run, this city, has written to Sheriff Matson, of Chicago, for the contract for making the ropes with which to hang the condemned Anarchists. Mr. Bupp has made the ropes used in every execution in this country since 1840, and nearly every one used in the state. He lives on Shady avenue, Eleventh ward, Allegheny, and is about 67 years old, but tall and straight as an arrow.

AN UNPATRIOTIC CANADIAN.

THERE has now been republished in an Opposition journal in Toronto the letter addressed to the London Economist, attacking the Dominion of Canada in connection with the disallowance of the Red River Valley railway. The writer skulks behind the pseudonym of "Canadian" to make his unpatriotic assault. If he is really a Canadian by birth or adoption, he must either be a disappointed politician ready to inflict any injury on his country in the hope of party advantage, or some speculator with whose selfish interests the great success of the C. P. R. has interfered. Otherwise it would be impossible to account for the tone of his miserable effusion, nearly every sentence of which contains some falsehood calculated to injure Canada and especially the Northwest, belittling and misrepresenting them in the eyes of the people of England.

It will be a short task to mention the one true statement in this disgraceful letter. The writer is evidently an educated man, and he rightly interprets Sir John Macdonald's declaration in the House as being that the Dominion Parliament could not interfere with the construction of such railroads by Manitoba. He has the advantage over the other opponents of the Dominion of Canada and advocates of the United States Northern Pacific, of understanding the English language, but there his superiority ends.

He accuses the Dominion of Canada and the C. P. R. of high-handed interference with "the legal constitutional rights of the Province of Manitoba." This falsehood he puts forth in spite of evidently knowing better, for he refers to the veto power and knows that its exercise has deprived the Provincial Act of any legal constitutional validity. His excuse that the veto power should be used only in cases of extreme emergency is mere dishonest special pleading, for obviously this is such an exceptional case, when by local legislation for sectional purposes there is an avowed attempt to cripple our great national interprovincial route which has cost us so much money, and to neutralize the Dominion policy of giving a preference to inter-provincial over foreign commerce. He confesses to this latter object by putting forth as a chief grievance that the people of Manitoba should not "be allowed to open up independent communications with the United states at her very door, instead of being compelled to transport everything she has to sell over a stretch of one thousand miles of railroad, and an inferior market in Old Canada." This is the old fallacy that the United States market is in the nearest town across the frontier and the Canadian market in Montreal or some other distant city. Both, being countries producing more than they consume, have to seek distant markets for their surplus. If Manitoba wheat were sent into Dakota or Minnesota the bulk of it would have to on to the Maritime Provinces or Liverpool, for the market for consumption is no nearer, in one country than the other. Wheat in Dakota is actually worth less than in Manitoba, and farm produce on an average fetches as high prices in Canada as in the United States. Yet this anonymous slanderer of his own country prates to Englishmen about our "inferior market." It is a vile insult to Canada.

The further pretence that the agitators are acting under an old Act not disallowed, is a still more dishonest subterfuge. This old measure is one regarding local works without the slightest reference to railways, and certainly not to a road to a foreign country. It is in no sense a local road but an international one, and as such by our constitution is a matter for Dominion jurisdiction. And if there were any doubt about the letter of the B. N. A. Act, it is just such a case as the veto was designed to meet. The Reform administration was equally opposed to such roads. The disallowance now pronounced, though an Executive act, was recommended by the chosen representatives of the people of Canada in the Parliament of the Dominion by an overwhelming majority. In England the road would never get through the Committee for another reason. There are already two railways up the Red River Valley from Winnipeg. If in England they proposed to run parallel roads a few miles from the Great Western or the Great Northern just to rob those companies of traffic they would be refused.

As to the Province building the road at its own cost, it is trying to borrow the money, and when it finds the burden too heavy it will come begging to the Dominion as usual to relieve it from its difficulties.

Then he talks of the railway monopoly deterring settlement in Manitoba. Why, the handful of settlers previously there welcomed the railway on any terms, as well they might, for it created the Province and raised Winnipeg from a paltry village to a city. The vast majority of the present population settled there because of the C. P. R. If settlement has been impeded it has not been by the great proof of such a marvellous enterprise in railway construction, but by greedy and discarded politicians, land speculators, and such slanderers as this renegade "Canadian." He talks of a "cast iron railway monopoly," when the freights in Manitoba and the Northwest are lower than they are in Dakota or indeed in any newly settled prairie country in the United States. Never before in the history of the world has a new agricultural settlement secured such advantages.

And because under such circumstances a handful of people are restive at being prevented under our constitution from obstructing illegally the general policy adopted by the whole country, he blathers in the face of the Mother Country of the Province being on the eve of rebellion unless it is allowed to rule the Dominion, talking with evident complacency of the use of force and the disruption of the Confederation. It is disgraceful thus to misrepresent the Province in order to deter people from the three Kingdoms from settling there, when in fact the agitators are confined almost wholly to Winnipeg and the immediate vicinity of the disallowed road, being composed of political adventurers, touts for foreign railways, land speculators and some merchants of the city who are angry with the C.P.R. for refusing to discriminate in their favour against the rest of the Province and the Northwest Territories. The honest settlers of the Province are not in favour of these schemers who have to employ rotten eggs to silence their remonstrances against the illegal and selfish movement.

The utter want of foundation for this unpatriotic talk about a crushing monopoly is shown by the recently published figures of the census of last year. In the five years since 4881 the population had increased 75 per cent, the cultivated land 300 per cent., the crop of wheat more than six-fold, barley, oats, butter and cheese nearly four-fold; rye, potatoes and hay more than doubled, and so on. Are these the figures of a new country ground into the dust and oppressed. And this progress has been made in the face of constant agitation even to the extent of rebellion by politicians rejected by the country, in the face of the unscrupulous efforts of rival railways and land companies abroad and their allies within the country such as "Canadian." Still more astonishing progress would have been made but for the virulent antagonism of these disloyal and selfish men.

Is it at all likely that such men as have the management of the C. P. R., men who have manifested their shrewdness, enterprise and wise liberality in all their transactions, would be so foolish as to check that settlement upon which alone they can rely for success? The idea is so absurd as to carry its own refutation with it.

And now a self-styled "Canadian," to serve some selfish purpose of his own, asks the English stockholders of the C. P. R., whose stock is now selling at little more than 50 cents in the dollar, to join in an agitation for the depreciation of their property in order to enrich United States railways and a few greedy Winnipeg men, at the cost of Canada and the shareholders of the C.P.R. The English stockholders will hardly be persuaded thus to play the game of the Northern Pacific.

We will not give further space for the exposure of the falsifications with which the whole letter teams. We have indicated some of the more important so that our readers having friends in the old country may know what misrepresentations are being made there, and may be able to undo the mischief in some measure. If this slanderer again attacks his country by such wicked means we hope he will not add insult to injury by calling himself a "Canadian." But for such Canadians our country would make even greater progress than that which has excited the admiration of the civilized world.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

Is sold all over the world. It is far superior to plain Cod Liver Oil, palatable and easily digested. Dr. Martin Miles Stanton, Bury Bucks, Loudon, England, says: "I have prescribed Scott's Emulsion, and taken it myself. It is palatable, efficient, and can be tolerated by anyone, especially where cod liver oil itself cannot be borne. Put upin 50c. and $1 size.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Victory has Perched on the Banner of PETERBOROUGH'S GREAT CHEAPSIDE.

And SHEPPARD, by common consent, will get $1,000 for being the Cheapest Clothier in Peterborough, having knocked the Wonderful Cheap Man completely out. "Business is business; dirt is dirt, and when it comes to throwing dirt, then count" the only original teddy out, and he will hand over that $1,000 like a little man, for the following reasons:—

SHEPPARD sells a full size Man's suit for $2.95, and better goods than a suit to fit a child about nine years old sold by the Wonderful Cheap Man on Saturday for $3.00; but marked $3.50. This is how it was.—A lady purchased a child's suit on Saturday last, Sept. 17th, 1887, at the store of the Wonderful Cheap Man. It was marked thusly:—Lot 5375, Breast 27, Waist 26½, Age 9, Price $3.50. It was pure shoddy, being held together by cotton threads, and Sheppard is free to say that that was the dearest suit sold in the Town of Peterborough for the last two years. Full particulars are given because of the $1,000 involved, and, further, that this decides who is selling the Cheapest Clothing in Peterborough. SHEPPARD would have sold that lady a suit, pure wool, for that money, and worth two of the one she got.

$1,000 to Go to the Charitable Institutions of Peterborough.

I had first decided to give the agencies a chance of jumping up my rating that $1,000, but after considering the matter and finding that never in any case have I been asked for an endorser to my paper, and that no relative or any other persons have ever endorsed my paper to the extent of one cent, I have come to the conclusion my credit is as good as yours, and will ask you to hand over the $1,000 to the Charitable Institutions of Peterborough.

Now, Sir, there is a good story told, the truth of which can be vouched for, but for the honor of at least making an effort to keep up your self-styled name—The Terror of High Priced Clothiers—do not allow the same to be said of you in the case above. A man purchased a suit for $15.00 at the store of one of the largest advertisers in that section of country. It was guaranteed pure wool; but after examining it carefully at home, he came to the conclusion that he had been dealing with some one sharper than himself. Finding a make of wool, differing some from anything he had ever seen, it dawned upon him that he had heard of wool of that kind, so the suit was returned. The merchant bet $25.00 that it was all wool, and the bet was accepted, the decision being left to a neighboring merchant. He found that the $15.00 suit was wool faced and shoddy back, pure unadulterated shoddy; but what of the $25.00 bet? was it paid? Not much—muchly—as it were.

CHAPTER II.

LOVE THE UNCONQUERED.

I have always kept as a holiday the 14th of August in every year since the year 1803. It is sacred to me for two memories—the first being that on this day I first saw my own gallant and true hearted Will.

It was about 4:30 in the afternoon. I was running down the crags by a way known only to myself, breast high in bracken, jumping from stone to stone, singing at the top of my voice, with flying hair and outstretched arms, when I suddenly came upon Dan Gulliver and a stranger.

"I saw," said Will, afterward, when he became my sweetheart—"I saw a tall girl of 16, who might have been 20, with blue eyes and an oval face—the sweetest face in the world. She carried a sun bonnet in her hand, and she wore a tight fitting frock."

"If I had known who was coming," I said, "I should have put on my Sunday frock."

"Your Sunday frock!" he cried, in his foolish way; "why, what could be more lovely than my woodland nymph, flying to meet us, up to her arms in the fern, bare headed, her hands filled with flowers, her eyes with smiles, and her pretty mouth with a song? Sunday frock! Leave Sunday frocks to city girls.

"See miss and madam lay their snares,
Painted faces,
Studied graces,
All for catching unawares
Flights of gamesome lovers."

But this talk came afterward.

When I met them in the path, as I finished my run down the slope, I stopped short, shamefaced, being unused to the sight of strangers.

"Pleasance," said Dan, "this young gentleman is coming to stay awhile at the farm; can you help to amuse him, think you?"

"I assure Miss Gulliver," said the gentleman, taking off his hat to me, "that I shall give as little trouble as possible."

"The boys," said Dan, "can sleep at the cottage. Do'ee now, Pleasance!"

This was the old man's way. I was to seem the mistress, who ought to have been the servant.

I turned, and led the way to the house in silence. Truth to say, I was not best pleased with the prospect of a strange man in the house. Like all wild things, I loved solitude. Dan carried a valise, and the young man carried a wooden case.

It was not till after we got home, and I had brushed my hair, and put on another frock, and come down stairs again, that I saw what manner of man our guest was.

No one must think that I was so presumptuous as to fall in love with him. What did I know about love? My heart leaped up, however, because I looked upon the most handsome and splendid man I had ever seen. To be sure I had seen but few. The gentlemen of Lyme Regis were mostly advanced in life, and more or less had bottle noses, by reason of much rum.

This young gentleman was about 22 years of age; he was tall and rather slight in figure; his eyes were brown, and from the very first I saw that they were frank, honest eyes; his hair was brown and curly; his cheeks were burned by the sun; his fingers, I noticed, were long and thin; they were, in fact, the fingers of a musician.

His wooden case was lying on the table. I asked him if he would have it taken up stairs.

"If I am allowed," he said, "I should like to keep this case down here. And perhaps Mr. Gulliver"——

"Call me Dan," said he; "I am used to it. And this is my adopted daughter, Pleasance Noel."

"Dan, then, and Miss Noel"——

"Call me Pleasance," I said, imitating Dan; in order to show my good breeding. "I am used to it."

"Pleasance, then. My name is William Campion. Perhaps you would let me play to you sometimes?"

In the case was a fiddle. This wonderful young man could play the fiddle! Now, of all the instruments of music which man has ever invented for drawing forth the soul of man, it has always seemed to me that the fiddle is the most efficacious. At the first stroke of the bow I jumped in my seat and clasped my hands. As he stood by the window and drew out the air softly and sweetly, my spirit hung upon the notes, and for the time I was in sweet heaven.

He only played one tune then. When he had finished it, he laid back the fiddle in its case—I noticed with what tenderness, as if he loved it.

"Did you like it, Pleasance?" he asked. "But I saw that you did."

Then I made tea, a luxury not of every day—Job and Jephthah, who did not like tea, and were modest, stayed in the farmyard among the pigs—and after tea Mr. Campion, Dan and I, all three, went down to the bay and talked about boats. First we went aboard the Dancing Polly, and Mr. Campion praised her lines, and then we looked at the Chace Mary; and when there was nothing more to be said about either of these two crafts we got into the dingy and went for a sail, I holding the tiller. At 8, after the sun had set, we got back again and went home. I remember that there was cold boiled hand of pork for supper, and that Job and Jephthah, who had polished up their faces with yellow soap till they shone like mirrors, came in bashfully and sat side by side, eating vast quantities of pig, and saying never a word.

Supper ended, Dan lit his pipe, mixed his brandy punch, and, after courteously pressing the tobacco and the spirits on his guest, invited him to play something.

I jumped in my chair again, when Mr. Campion laughed and drew his fiddle out of the case once more.

He played half a dozen tunes. Now, on the violin, Mr. Campion was a magician. For my own part, I was carried away into the seventh heaven from the very beginning. First, he played "Farewell and adieu to you, Spanish ladies," which inspired one with a fine feeling of national pride and respect for seafaring Britons. Next he played, "Oh, dear! what can the matter be?" a song just then quite new, at least to Dorsetshire folk. This made us just a little tearful, and put us in the right frame for "Early in the morning, just as the sun was rising." Then he played "Within a mile o' Edinburgh town;" the most delicious ditty I have ever heard, then or since. After that he played "Jack's the lad," the song which they have since made into the "College Hornpipe." It was then that Dan, who had been chiming in whenever he happened to know a word or two of the song, nodding his head, and beating time with his pipe, laid it down, and standing up, solemnly executed something distantly resembling a sailor's hornpipe on the floor. Will went on playing it, with a laugh in his eyes, faster and faster, till the enthusiasm spread to Jephthah and Job, who looked at each other guiltily, and then softly arose and retired to the adjacent farm yard, where I saw them in the moonlight gravely dancing opposite each other where the straw was driest. Then Will changed the tune, and played, singing the words himself in a lusty, tuneful baritone, "While the raging seas did roar." Dan caught the chorus and sang it with him. Heavens! what an evening we had! Then he sang "Hearts of oak." Job and Jephthah came back for this, and steadied each other, as the song enjoined, with sympathetic shoulder thwacks heavy enough to fell an ox.

Lastly my own turn came. The musician stopped, and his expression changed. He looked thoughtfully for a moment, and then, still with his eyes fixed upon me, began to play an air, the like of which I had never heard or dreamed of; for it made my heart to beat, my brain to reel, my eyes to swim. Dan resumed his pipe, and drank a whole glass of brandy punch; he did not care, apparently, for this kind of music; Job and Jephthah stole away noiselessly, and, I suppose, went to bed. I had a strange and delightful sense that this music was being played for myself alone; that the musician took this way of putting thoughts into my head which had never been there before. I felt a passionate yearning for something unknown. I was in some new place of light and beauty inconceivable; my spirits rose with a kind of rapture—I was out of the body, floating in the air; there were no words in which I could clothe this new sensation. I could have wept for very joy, but no tears came. Presently it seemed as if my feet were moving in cadence, and my whole frame undulating with the waves of melody. I could bear it no longer, and should have fallen, but that Dan caught me with a "Steady, pretty, steady! going to sleep with the music in your ears?"

I was not going to sleep, indeed. But Mr. Campion ceased playing, and told me that it was a German dance.

To be continued.

A Night in Constantinople.

The first thing that strikes one about Constantinople is the quantity of windows. The houses seem nothing but window frames. Where we should think a room well lighted with two or three windows, there will be six in a row and no space in the wall between. The second peculiarity, one for which the traveler is prepared, is the multitude of dogs. As one walks through Galata, the seaport of the European division of the city, the dogs are lying in the streets by the dozens. They are of a wolfish breed, and nocturnal in their habits. In the day time they lie and doze, never taking any notice of pedestrians, who are obliged to walk around them as best they may. At night they are said to wake up and be so savage as to render it dangerous to pass them. They have fierce fights with each other also, and hardly a night passes that one does not hear a violent howling and barking from the quarters where they mostly congregate.

One's slumbers are so often disturbed by alarms of fire. The old part of Constantinople is built entirely of wood, and fires are more frequent here than in any other known place. The Europeans consider the Turks as tremendous thieves and capable of all iniquity, and I suppose the Turkish police is insufficient or inefficient to protect the European quarter by night, for in Pera the owners of every two or three houses club together and hire a watchman, who all night long walks up and down a very limited beat, pounding with his stick upon the pavement—probably in order that if there should be a burglar in the neighborhood he may be warned of his adversary's approach and have time to escape. It is almost impossible to accustom one's self to this continuous thump, thump upon the stones. Light sleepers have a hard time of it in Constantinople.—Cor. Springfield Republican.

Electrical and Mesmeric Phenomena.

The experiments made by M. Mohlenbruck seem to show that in the mesmeric condition an electric current may have a powerful inductive action upon the human nerves. These experiments were made, as reported, with an apparatus consisting of a ring of iron wires wound with silk covered copper, the latter being placed in circuit with a microphone and a battery cell; the ring was about nine inches in diameter.

In the first experiment a watch was placed near the microphone and the ring placed upon the head of the mesmerized subject, who immediately began to beat time with the ticking of the watch; when the microphone contact was touched with a quill feather he placed his fingers in his ears, and on the microphone being removed to a distant apartment and the connection of the circuit completed, as before, a violin was played in the distant room, the patient showing the most distinct indications that he heard the music. The next experiment was obviously to speak to the microphone, "and to my great surprise," says M. Mohlenbruck, "the patient repeated the words." The last experiment was to send a continuous current through the circuit, which had the effect of causing the patient to throw his arms around in a circle in the vertical plane—the direction of motion being reversed with the reversal of the current—and when the patient was asked what he felt like, he said he was turning.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

Peaches

Are selling at Ostrom's fruit market at $1.00and $1.20.

A Prize.

Mr. Frank Perry has been lucky in drawing a $10 prize in the Toronto Art Association drawing. It is a pretty little water color piece entitled "A Scene in Kent."

Personal.

Mr. W. Rutherford, druggist, of Norwood, was in town on Wednesday.

Mr. J. Morrow, Deputy Inland Revenue Inspector, was in town on Wednesday on an official visit.

Football.

A game of football was to have been played on the P. A. A. A. grounds between the Frazerville and Peterborough clubs. A team was mustered and waited on the field till five o'clock for the visitors. The latter not appearing at that hour the home team had a practice match at Rugby.

Lively Business.

The Lindsay-Seldon Company's furniture factory is humming on fall orders. The travellers on the road have been successful in receiving large orders from leading wholesale firms. In some cases, however, they have not waited for the travellers, but have sent their orders voluntarily. It is a satisfaction to sell goods which recommend themselves.

EVERYTHING New, Rich and Rare in Millinery Goods will be on display at TURNBULL'S Millinery Opening.

Ten Nights In a Bar-Room.

The Syracuse Courier of Sept. 10th, 1887, says:—"This great moral drama was produced at the Wieting again last night, and its representation found great favor with the audience. The play has been reconstructed and greatly improved, and many interesting musical features added. The musical selections are rendered by the Brooklyn Church Choir quartet, and were much applauded by the audience."

Lacrosse.

The Riverside Lacrosse Club returned to town from Madoc this morning. They played at Madoc with the home team on Wednesday and were defeated by four steaights in an hour and a half. This is not surprising, as they could only muster seven men at the station on Wednesday morning, but rather than disappoint the Madoc's they went short handed. There was a big "gate" and the team was used well.

Orchestra.

The Peterborough Orchestra held their regular practice over Geo. A. Schofield & Co's. drug store on Wednesday evening. Waltzs, quadrilles, and lancers were gone through to clear the way for something more pretentious. Overtures will be indulged in next practice night. The instrumentation of the orchestra is as follows: Three first violins, R. Tate, J. Best and W. E. Lech; one second violin, T. Hawley; flute, V. Halliday; cornet, W. A. Sanderson; cello, K. G. Lech; bass viol, N. Walke; harp, A. Thomas; piccolo, J. Butcher, conductor.

Father Conway.

Father Conway's condition shows no change for the better. Senator Dr. Sullivan, Kingston, who was telegraphed for on Wednesday morning, arrived in the evening and made an examination. His words were after the examination: "I can do nothing; nature might." Dr. Sullivan is one of the cleverest physicians on the continent. He has been a professor in Queen's University for twenty-five years, and was chosen as a representative of Canada to attend the International Medical Council held in Washington a few weeks ago. He left for home on the eleven o'clock train, but will return on Saturday.

OBEDIENCE THE TEST.

The Address at the Mission in St. Luke's Church.

Another large congregation filled St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, on Wednesday evening, to attend the mission services being held by the Rev. E. P. Crawford, M. A., of Brockville.

The rev. gentleman does not appear to grow weary in his labours, as he was as fresh and vigorous as ever. After leading in the singing for half an hour prior to 8 o'clock, he began the mission services with the hymn "Thou didst leave Thy Heavenly Throne." His address was on "Obedience as the Test of Faith." As usual he chose several texts from the Bible bearing on the subject. He said there was heard these days a great deal of profession of following the Lord, but it was only in words, and when it came to the true test, doing His will, they failed. A great many nominal Christians claimed to be His, but in actions they denied Him. He said that God wanted more than talk, and He told them this in His Word. God was not arbitrary in regard to His laws, and it was better for men to obey them than not in this life and in that which is to come. God, seeing that man could not attain to perfect obedience, sent His Son, Jesus Christ, who came to do His will for man. He gave a number of illustrations showing how Christ had fulfilled the law, even from His childhood. By perfect obedience He bore the disobedience of all; and surely obedience was to be expected from those who followed Him now; but such was not the case. People would stand up and sing hymns to Him, and, yet deliberately disobey His commands. He showed the previous night that there was no condemnation to those who were in Christ by faith; but their obedience was the test whether it was true faith or not. Men very easily deceived themselves in this matter. While God's will was the same as their own all went well, but when it crossed theirs they would not abey, and often God's will went to the wall. 'After singing the hymn, "O Jesus I have promised," he resumed the subject by referring to the practice in the first days of the church, that when people professed faith in the Lord action immediately followed. He urged the people to be obedient children, especially in obeying the dying request of the Lord.

The services will be continued during the day and evenings till Sunday night, the subject to-night being "Salvation." A meeting for men only will be held on Sunday afternoon at four o'clock.

The Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, the rector, is present at all the services.

MANTLE Making an Art at Turnbull's. Everybody may expect to be surprised and pleased with the display of Ladies' and Children's Garments at TURNBULL'S Millinery Opening.

Salvation Army.

A meeting of the Salvation Army soldiers was held at the barracks on Wednesday night to take leave of Capt. Williamson, who was appointed to the Belleville station. There was a full house. A novel programme was set down, which consited in "Trying the Devil." The devil was arranged before the bar of justice and witnesses were called forth against him. It is needless to add that the devil was condemned. Captain Williamson left for his new change at 1.45 to day. He will be succeeded by Captain Woodgate, of Lippincot street, Toronto.

Personal.

Mr. A. E. Ames, accountenant in the Peterborough branch of the Ontario Bank here, has been promoted to the position of Manager of the branch at Mount Forest. Since entering upon his duties here his behaviour in the bank was such as to commend itself to fellow employees and patrons alike. His unvarying good nature and manliness have won the esteem of all he met in athletic contests, and his steady habits and his abilities have been recommended by the appointment he has received.

EVERYBODY cordially invited to look through TURNBULL'S Magnificent Stock of Millinery, Mantles, Dress Cloth and General Dry Goods on the 4th, 5th, and 6th of October.

Fog and Rain Prevent the Yacht Race To day.

By Telegraph to the Review.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29, 9.30 a. m.—Wind is blowing at 12 miles an hour. It is foggy; cannot see far.

SANDY POINT, 11 a. m.—Very poor prospects of a race between the Thistle and Volunteer to-day. The fog is growing denser. There is hardly any wind at all.

NEW YORK, 2 p. m.—Race postponed on account of the rain.

Honored.

Canton Peterborough, No. 16, held its regular weekly drill in the Charlotte street skating rink on Wednesday evening. A feature in the evening's exercises was Capt. McNeil's calling Chevalier Moore out of the ranks and announcing that he had received instructions from Col. Slatter to offer him the position of Banneret with rand of Lieutenant and special Aide-de-Camp to the Colonel of the 1st Regiment of Ontario P. M. He asked Chevalier Moore for a reply. The latter, in a neat speech, accepted the proffered position. He did not take it that it was his own merits brought the offer to him, but that it was made as an honor to the Peterborough Canton. He said that he recognized that the Colonel had paid the Canton a signal honor by appointing one of its members to such a distinguished position in the Regiment. The chevaliers of the Canton are all delighted with the appointment.

The Smoke.

The question "where is all this smoke coming from?" has been asked so often these last two days as almost to wear it out. One explanation can be given, but to some, of course, it might not be satisfactory. The explanation is as follows:—At about half past ten o'clock on Monday night, just after the council meeting was over, Councillor Moore and Councillor Davidson stood in the committee room. A happy thought seized both of them. Councillor Moore drew forth a cigar and Councillor Davidson brought out his pipe. At China Hall they separated, one going south and the other north, with a grey vapor gently ascending in the air as they walked along. Since then the town has been overhung with clouds of smoke.

Extension.

The Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Company are about to extend their works According to agreement, Mr. J. Stevenson is erecting an extension to the foundry of fifty feet in length. As soon as room is provided fifty more hands will be added to the staff.

ON the 4th, 5th, and 6th of October. look out for the New Belmont, Jockey Club, Murray Hill, and Volunteer Hats, at TURNBULL'S Millinery Opening.

DERVISHES OF CONSTANTINOPLE.

Scenes Which Are Likely to Affect the Nerves of the Spectator—At the Close.

These dervishes hold their "services" in a sort of square hall around which is a wooden gallery provided with a few benches for visitors. The dervishes themselves sat first in a row on the floor at one end of the hall, opposite them the emir or high priest. They were clothed in long cloaks and wore heavy felt turbans on their heads. At first both their gestures and voices are moderate. They simply sway toward the ground, intoning a species of litany. Now and then the voices rise into a shout, and the call upon Allah and the word "Bismillah" are distinguished among the unfamiliar Turkish sounds. This lasts some time, and one is beginning to wonder if this is all when it stops. However, they all rise, and now, as the Germans say, "es geht los." Each man contorts his body as best pleases him, some throwing it violently backward and forward, some twisting it from side to side, some turning their heads with such a velocity that the eyes almost start out of their sockets.

Soon the perspiration begins to stream from their faces; an attendant goes about and relieves first one and then another of his turban, which he kisses as he receives it, supplying in its place a white cotton skull cap, which the dervish draws on without desisting from his frantic motions, accompanied by incessant measured stamping on the floor, violent cries or almost unearthly groans like a sound from some pursued and exhausted animal. The nerves of the spectator become so affected at last that it seems as if his own head must begin to bob and his limbs to contort themselves. Every minute you think that the "ecstasy" into which these men have worked themselves must hurl one or the other of them in a fit upon the ground; you actually desire that something awful and worth so much effort may occur, and you feel disappointed when, at a given signal, they stop short and stand there perfectly quiet, wiping their faces as if it were merely a warm day. In former times, when a certain pitch of frenzy was attained they used to cut themselves with knives. This has now been forbidden by the sultan, although the instruments formerly in use still decorate the walls.

The emir himself took part in the latter part of the performances, and it is not necessary to be a dervish to participate in them. Various laymen howled and twisted with the others, and a certain Turkish officer has made himself quite famous with his strength of voice and suppleness of limb. I forgot to say that they are continually incited to fresh efforts by a professional "singer"—a Turkish youth who sat upon the floor and screamed at the top of his lungs. At the close of the performance persons afflicted with rheumatism or other similar diseases lie down and let the emir walk over them. Children also are laid upon the ground that he may step on them; one of these was a little girl not more than 3 years old. This trend is supposed to impart both healing and holiness. Very different from the howlers are their brothers, the dancing dervishes. These simply form themselves into two or three circles, and, with outstretched arms and air filled skirts, turn and turn, like so many tops, concluding with the same graceful composure with which they began.—Constantinople Cor. Springfield Republican.

Brigandage in Mexico.

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex., Sept. 28.—On Sept. 13 Juan Garcia Baprer, a rich ranchman, while a short distance from his home, situated between Las Teralls and La Gozalina, was surrounded by five desperadoes and robbed of $200. He was then taken into Mexico and there closely guarded. Barrer's captors compelled him to write to his family, notifying them that unless they raised and paid to an individual named by the letter the sum of $15,000 by Sept. 18 he would be shot. Barrer's son paid the sum demanded and the prisoner was released. He says there are forty men in the band.

A Bright Future.

"When I was twenty-one years of age," he said, "I thought if I wasn't rich at thirty I would be too old to enjoy wealth."

"How old are you now?"

"Seventy."

"And rich, of course?'

"No, I'm a poor man yet; but I've got a scheme in view that will make me as rich as mud before I'm eighty, and then I propose to take things easy and enjoy life."

"For contemplation he, and valor formed,
For softness she, and sweet attractive grace"
John Milton in his "Paradise Lost" thus distinguishes woman from man. Diseases fall to her lot that do not to man's, peculiar to her soft and more refined nature. A remedy adapted to the cure of her peculiar diseases is found in Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," for women. Thousands who have used it attest its great worth. 1d76

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING
EPPS'S COCOA
BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there was a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette."

TARIFF THEORIES.

THE only possible explanation of the unyielding attitute of the thorough going advocates of free trade is that they close their eyes to all facts that tell against them and their ears to all statements of the objects and theory of protectionists. The United States is in a strange difficulty, its excess of public revenue causing a vast accumulation in the Treasury vaults of cash which is thus withdrawn from circulation and the requirements of commerce. The Witness says this is all the fault of protection, which imposes taxes yielding so enormously as to cause the receipts to be embarrassing. It is inconceivable that our contemporary should be so utterly ignorant of the theory or effect of a protective tariff. Absolute protection, like absolute freetrade, would yield no customs revenue. It would impose no duties on imported raw materials, so there would be no revenue from them. It would impose absolutely prohibitive duties on manufactured goods, so not being imported there would be no revenue from them either. An absolutely protectionist, like an absolutely freetrade nation would have to raise its necessary public revenue by internal taxation direct or indirect. But neither theory is ever carried out absolutely. Great Britain, the only civilized country that is even nominally freetrade, obtains a larger portion of its revenue from customs duties than from any other source. Protectionist countries to obtain a revenue (and also sometimes a certain amount of competition) depart from the theory of protection by some duties on raw materials and by duties not prohibitive on manufactured goods. So far as they do either of these they depart from the protective theory for the sake of a revenue or for some other object, and to this extent they abandon protection.

The difficulty in the United States is not their excessive protection, but their relinquishment of protection in order to obtain a large revenue. Though incidentally protective to a large extent, their tariff is in the main a war tariff, framed to meet the heavy cost of a terrible war and its legacy of debt. Having answered its purpose of raising such an enormous revenue that all the debt now redeemable has been paid off, this war tariff, no longer needed for its intended and accomplished purpose, has become obstructive. It is not a difficulty caused by protection, but by a wide departure from the theory of protection in order to obtain an exceptional revenue. The remedy may be found in making the tariff more truly protective when it will produce less revenue. Of course it could be found also in making the tariff approach more nearly to freetrade, when it would likewise produce less revenue, but that would mean to invite foreign competition to the detriment of their own industries, a step which they resolutely refuse to take, though they are kind enough to recommend it to Canada.

INTERNATIONAL RAILWAYS.

Some of the Ontario allies of the Winnipeg agitators are arguing that it is not unconstitutional for a Province to charter a railway to an international boundary because work is being done on such a road chartered by Ontario from Port Arthur to run south westward towards Duluth. There is a wide difference between the two cases. The Red River Valley Road is expressly designed to divert our traffic from Canada to United States railways and ports, while the Port Arthur road would divert traffic from the United States to Canadian railways and perts. If the charter of the Port Arthur road is illegal and unconstitutional under the British North America Act, as we believe it is, individuals whose interests are prejudiced would have their remedy in our law courts, but there is no reason why the Dominion authorities should intervene to prevent something for the benefit of Canada. In the case of the Red River Valley Road private individuals have the same right to appeal to the courts, and in addition it is the duty of the Dominion authorities to put the law in force to prevent injury to Canada—it is thus to act for the country as a whole that they are placed in office. To avoid any doubt as to the letter of the law it is further their duty to use the power of veto expressly given to them in order to prevent the general policy of Canada from being counteracted through sectional motives. They are enforcing both the spirit of the law on the particular point and the general policy of the country as to which they are constitutionally the judges. And in their executive action they are supported by the voice of Parliament, that is of the people of Canada through their agents chosen for that purpose. The two cases are widely different and it is useless to attempt to confound them.

THE FISHERY DISPUTE.

United States Representatives on the Joint Commission.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The President has invited Hon. Wm. L. Putnam, of Maine, and Hon. Jas. B. Angell, of Michigan, to act with the Secretary of State in the negotiations for a settlement with Great Britain of the disputes growing out of the questions connected with the rights of our fishermen in the territorial waters of the Dominion of Canada and Newfoundland. Both of these gentlemen have accepted, and it is believed by Secretary Bayard that their fitness for their important duty will be recognized by the country. Mr. Putnam has been counsel for the United States for the last two years in cases arising under the law and treaty in connection with the fisheries dispute, and Mr. Angell is President of the University of Michigan, and has had experience in international transactions, having been one of the commissioners by whom the latest treaty with China was negotiated. Mr. Putnam is a Democrat and Mr. Angell a Republican.

The Secretary said that their selection was not only a recognition of the two political parties, but a geographical recognition. The interests of the Western States lying along the Canadian border were equally great with the interests of the New England States in securing a settlement of the difficulties with Canada.

From the information received here it is expected that Mr. Chamberlain will leave England about the end of October, and that the negotiators will meet in Washington about the middle of November.

THE SECOND HEAT.

The American Yacht Again Defeats the Thistle.

By Telegraph to the Review

SANDY HOOK, Sept. 30., 10.55.—The yachts are standing outside the bar on starboard tack. The Volunteer is gaining on the Thistle and getting to windward.

SANDY HOOK, 11.03 a. m.—The yachts started at about 10.33. Could not see them start. They have gone out of sight in the fog.

SANDY HOOK, 11.10 a.m.—The wind is east, north east, and is blowing at 24 miles an hour. It is foggy. It is raining lightly. The yachts cannot be seen.

SANDY HOOK, 11.20 a.m.—The wind is blowing north-east at 23 miles an hour. Volunteer and Thistle sailing a great race. Nip and tuck.

HIGHLANDS, 11.30 a.m.—The Thistle has gained on the Volunteer and seems to be leading slightly.

SANDY HOOK, 12 52. p. m.—The yachts are now about one mile south of the turning point. The Volunteer leads by over a mile

NEW YORK, 300 p. m.—The Volunteer turned stake off Long Branch at 2.25; the Thistle at 2.42.

NEW YORK, 3.00 p. m.—The Volunteer has won by a mile and a half.

By Associated Press.

New YORK, 3.10. p. m.—Thistle turned stake boat at 2.42, 2¼ miles behind.

ANOTHER RAILWAY HORROR.

An Express and Excursion Train Collide.

By Telegraph to the Review.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 30.—An express train on the Missouri Pacific railway, 19 miles out of this city, crashed into an excursion train, causing severe loss of life. It is estimated that twenty five people were killed. The cars and depot are burning and the wounded cannot be got out.

The Hangman's Ropemaker.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 28.—Jacob Bupp, of Woods Run, this city, has written to Sheriff Matson, of Chicago, for the contract for making the ropes with which to hang the condemned Anarchists. Mr. Bupp has made the ropes used in every execution in this country since 1840, and nearly every one used in the state. He lives on Shady avenue, Eleventh ward, Allegheny, and is about 67 years old, but tall and straight as an arrow.

Canadian Fisheries Discussed.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The last meeting of the cabinet prior to the president's departure for the west was held to-day in the White House. It is understood that the Canadian fisheries, the Alaska seal fisheries and the Indian troubles in Arizona were considered.

Fish, Fish.

White Fish, Trout, Lunge and Bass at Ostrom's.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

ENNISMORE.

ANOTHER COLD DIP.—On Saturday, Sept. 24th, at sunrise, the thermometer stood at 31 degrees, with some ice; on the 25th at 28 degrees, with ice in sheets thick as common window glass, and on the 26th down to 26 degrees, with ice considerably thicker.

A Waterspout's Work.

NEW LAREDA, Tex., Sept. 28.—Despatches have been received giving the details of great destruction of property in Guerro and Mier, Mexico, near the Rio Grande. Mier is built on the banks of the river and had two hundred houses destroyed and many completely washed away, while the town of Guerro, situated on the banks of the Taladio river, was inundated and about fifty houses either damaged or washed away. Both these rivers were swollen by a great waterspout which fell on Friday and did much damage to the Mexican National road.

A Gain for the Government.

OTTAWA, Sept. 28.—A private despatch received here to-night from Charlevoix says that Mr. Simon Cimon, the Government candidate, was elected to the House of Commons to-day by a majority of over 400. This is a Government gain, as the late member bolted on the Riel question, and last session was a strong supporter of the Opposition.

Unseated.

HALIFAX, Sept. 28.—Judge McDonald delivered his judgment declaring that the election of Mr. McLelan, elected for Colchester, N.S., was void on account of bribery by an agent. He declared that the personal charges against Mr. McLelan had not been sustained by the evidence.

Reform in Honolulu.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—Advices from Honolulu state that at the election held Sept. 12 all the members of the 60th house with perhaps the exception of two representatives in remote districts were elected on the platform of the Reform party supporting the new constitutional ministry.

To Be Carried Out.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—The order of the Court in the case of Jacob Sharp was settled by the general term of the Supreme Court to-day. It directs that the sentence imposed on Sharp be carried out.

A Mayor's Nest.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 29.—The Mayor of Argonia, Kan., yesterday gave birth to a fine boy. This is the first instance in the history of the world where the mayor of a city has made such a record. She was elected mayor last spring.

FRENCH IN ITALY.

PARIS, Sept. 29.—Gen. Ferron, French Minister of War, yesterday inspected the Corniche forts at Nice. He was entertained at a public banquet, and in an address he praised the patriotism of the inhabitants of Nice and promised that the garrison should be increased.

REFUGEES EXPELLED.

VIENNA, Sept. 29.—All the Bulgarian refugees have at the request of the Sofia Government been expelled from Roumania.

CULPABLE NEGLECT.

PARIS, Sept. 29.—The public prosecutor has ordered that an action be begun against the manager of the Paris Opera Comique, two assistants and the firemen, on the charge that their culpable neglect caused the destruction of the theatre and the loss of many lives.

THE BRITISH PREMIER.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—Lord Salisbury suffers from heart disease and gets through the work of the Foreign office with difficulty and neglects the general control of the ministry which belongs to the premiership. The consequence is that his nephew, Mr. Balfour, who is an ambitious man, is the leading spirit in the cabinet.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth It relieves the little suffer at once; it produces natural, quiet slee by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It smoothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, Relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

LATEST CABLE NEWS.

THE C. P. R. OCEAN SERVICE.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The Canadian Gazette states that the Canadian Pacific will build for the Pacific mail service three steamers with an average speed of fifteen knots, and capable of reaching eighteen knots. The total cost will probably be over half a million sterling, which amount, however, is fully covered by the subsidy.

FRENCH PRINCES.

PARIS, Sept. 29.—Several French princes have purchased estates in Cracow and intend to become Russian citizens and to enter the Russian army.

THE SWEDISH NIGHTINGALE.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—Jenny Lind is recovering from her illness.

THE POPE'S JUBILEE MEDALS.

ROME, Sept. 29.—The Jubilee receptions at the Vatican have begun. The Roman Congregation presented the Pope with an offering yesterday and received the Pope's blessing. The Roman police have seized the Pope's Jubilee medals, which are inscribed: "Pope Leo XIII, pontifex et rex." It is expected the Vatican will protest against the seizure and will point out that the law of guarantees recognized the Pope's right to the title of a sovereign.

MORE IRISH TRAGEDIES.

DUBLIN, Sept. 29.—A number of emergency men who were engaged in seizing cattle near Arklow, being resisted, fired a volley of revolver and rifle shots. John Kinsella, 60 years old, was killed, and several persons wounded.

A FRENCH VERSION.

PARIS, Sept. 29.—M. Lebigne, a banker at Nancy, who is the lessee of the ground where the shooting on the frontier occurred, and who was one of the party of sportsmen, says: "Our party kept the frontier line a few yards on the left. While decending a path we were absolutely exposed on the German side. When the first shot was fired I heard the hiss of a bullet overhead. Before I had recovered from my surprise a second shot killed the keeper and a third wounded Lieut. Wanger. I summoned the local authorities and we found blood pools on the French side. I requested a sergeant of gendarmes to mark a tree on the spot. I swear neither challenge nor cry was addressed to us. Had the Germans uttered a sound we must have heard them."

A NEW SECRETARY FOR IRELAND.

LONDON, Sept 29.—It is rumored that Colonel Sir West Ridgeway will succeed Sir Redvers Buller as permanent Secretary for Ireland.

AN UNLIKELY RUMOUR.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The papers here give currency to an extraordinary rumour to the effect that the Queen intends next year to visit India. The Queen has, on very good authority, frequently expressed the most earnest desire to see her great Oriental Empire, and the journey last winter of her favorite lady-in-waiting, the dowager Marchioness of Ely, to India, is believed to have been the preliminary of the royal visit. The prospect thereof will also explain the much-talked-of fact that the Queen is learning Hindustani.

SCHNAEBELE'S OFFENCE.

METZ, Sept. 29.—M. Schnaebele, jr., who was arrested on the 20th inst. by the German authorities while crossing the frontier and affixing a treasonable placard, bearing the tricolor upon a tree near the roadway, has been sentenced to three weeks' imprisonment and a fine of twenty marks. The youth expressed sorrow for his action. The court said it considered that Schnaebele at the time he committed the offence was conscious that it was of a punishable nature, but admitted that his age, sixteen, should be considered in extenuation, and decreed that the time he had already spent in prison should be credited to him against his sentence.

THE COUNT OF PARIS.

PARIS, Sept. 29.—M. Ferry, in a speech at Epinal this evening, said that the Republic regarded the manifesto of the Count of Paris with contemptuous indifference. The people did not fear pretenders. They made it a point of honour to leave their enemies full liberty of attack. The manifesto would doubtless furnish a pretext for attacking the Cabinet, and possibly some Republicans would avail themselves of the chance to desert the party. "If a crisis arises," he concluded, "it will be difficult to solve it. Therefore let us be prepared for all evils."

CHOLERA IN ITALY.

ROME, Sept. 24.—The cholera reports for the last 24 hours show 33 new cases and 25 deaths in Messina, and three new cases and two deaths in Catania.

A CAPTAIN'S FAITH.

EXPLANATORY NOTES BY REV. GEO. P. HAYES, D. D., LL. D.

Lesson I of the International Series (Fourth Quarter) for Sunday, Oct. 2. Text of the Lesson, Matt. viii, 5-13. Golden Text, Matt. viii, 8-10.

V. 5. A centurion at Capernaum—A very large number of the lessons of this quarter show events or utterances in the vicinity of Capernaum, which was during all this time Christ's home. A centurion in the Roman army corresponded to a captain in ours. His command was 100 men.

Vs. 6-9. The disease—Palsy is a disease which consists of loss of power over the muscles, and may be either complete, leaving the body helpless, or partial, leaving the muscles active but uncontrollable. There are some reasons for believing this case was of the latter kind, and probably what is now known as St. Vitus' dance. If so, then the "grievously tormented" will be appreciated by every one that has seen a case of this disease.

Christ's reply (v. 7) was a quick answer to the centurion's petition for help, and a full justification of the faith that led him to seek Christ's aid. V. 8 shows the conception the centurion had of Christ's power over disease. This case of the centurion was among the very earliest of Christ's manifestations of his power to do signs at a distance. The centurion's faith was shown in saying that the Saviour's coming was not needed.

Vs. 10, 11. The Gentiles—No doubt this centurion was a Gentile, and this is the first manifestation of the Gentile faith that was to be so largely called forth after the day of Pentecost. V. 11 has been abundantly fulfilled as a prophecy in the history of the church.

The expression "shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven" is the Oriental method of expressing a thorough home welcome. The whole transaction becomes a type of the future spread of his gospel among the Gentiles, and this centurion is the first fruit of that ingathering which has been accomplished in the Gentile world.

Vs. 12, 13. Rejection—The alternative of rejection is set forth in v. 12. The Gentiles of the east and west are set in contrast with the children of the kingdom, and the race is represented by one or the other of these. So also is each individual person. Those who will not accept Christ are to be cast out into the outer darkness. Oriental feasts were at night, with the house brilliantly lighted. The outer darkness is the exclusion from that light and plenty and comfort which reign within.

The Saviour now put the centurion's faith and the faith of the people to another test. He said, "Go thy way; and as thou hast believed, so be it unto thee." The conduct of each one was now to show how far he believed in the Savour's word. If the centurion's faith was as strong as he said, he would go home confident of the result.

Note 1. Military officers are generally supposed to be a heartless class. Here is one who had a tender regard for those under him. If employers and people of influence would have similar care for those within their power, the relations of affection would be as close as they are here.

2. Many pupils to whom this lesson will be taught, who have had Christian training from their youth, will illustrate v. 12 to their eternal disgrace and pain. And many children of heathen and vicious parents, to whom this lesson will be taught in our mission schools in this and other lands, will illustrate v. 11 to their everlasting honor and joy.

SUGGESTIVE APPLICATIONS.

V. 8. I am not worthy that thou shouldest come under my roof—People of authority and of wealth in these days approach the church, if they approach it at all, as if their presence was a favor. They seem to have a lurking idea that they are to be praised by a minister for condescending to attend when he preaches. Whether they actually go so far in thought as to suppose that they are conferring a favor upon the Almighty by using a part of the Sabbath in riding to church, and fanning themselves with an indifferent attention upon all the services, may be a question they would not like to answer to themselves. It becomes a kind of constitutional habit with them to patronize everything. They have a patronizing air toward all who are socially on a different level from themselves, and they carry this same air into religion and church work. The centurion, though a man of position and a representative of Roman authority, not only possessed more sense but more humility. He recognized the great favor he was seeking; he also had some proper appreciation of the dignity and the power of the person from whom he asked so great a favor. He did not belittle himself, but rather showed true greatness in his humility. There is a useful lesson here for all.

V. 13. As thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee—If the prayers of ordinary Christians were answered in this way now, about how many do you think would receive what they ask for? About how large a proportion of those who profess regularly and daily to ask blessings of the Lord really and truly have faith to believe that they will receive exactly what they ask for? If the answer in every case were to be, "According to thy faith" so be it done unto thee, how much would they really get? Now, the fact is that the answer which Jesus made on earth to the centurion is but an indication of the answer which he usually makes to all who seek him. The Christian gets not what he asks for, but according to the faith with which he asks.

HINTS FOR PRIMARY CLASSES.

The place—Capernaum, at the northwestern end of the sea of Galilee, where Jesus often went. His second miracle was performed on the son of a nobleman who lived in Capernaum. It was a military post and the home of Simon Peter, where Jesus cured Peter's wife. It was the home or headquarters to which Jesus often returned.

The persons—The centurion or captain of one hundred men, a Roman military officer; his servant, who was ill; and Jesus Christ, the great Physician.

The story—The fame of Jesus had become so great that many people flocked to hear him and to be healed of various diseases whenever he entered a city. Soon after coming to Capernaum this time, the Roman officer came to him to beg that he would heal his servant, who was very ill. Servants were often a part of the family in those days, and much beloved when found faithful. They remained a lifetime with the same family, so that their interests were identical. This officer came himself to see Jesus, instead of sending a messenger, which shows how great his personal interest was in him.

Although this officer held a position of rank and authority, he was very humble when speaking to Jesus. He must have known that Jesus was his Lord and no common physician. He meant, As I give orders to my men to do one thing and another and they obey me, so I know a word from you can in the same way command disease. He had probably heard how the nobleman's son was cured when Jesus was in Cana, and of other wonderful cures. He said, "Speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed." Jesus was surprised at his strong faith, and said, "I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel." None of the people of God had shown such confidence and belief in him as this Roman officer did.

Jesus Christ is always pleased with real trust and faith in him. Every one likes to be trusted, especially when doing good to others.

The good news—V. 11 contains a precious promise for the people of all lands, that many shall come from the east and west and shall sit down with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of heaven; but alas, the next verse tells us that the children of the kingdom shall be cast out. It is not enough to belong to a pious family or even to belong to the church; not enough to attend Sunday school and religious services. There must be true faith in Christ to secure a place in heaven, and this any one may possess, no matter in what land or what nation or what church. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved" (Acts xvi, 31). This is the rule and the promise for every one in America, Japan, India, China, in all the world.—Sunday School World.

THE WAR CLOUD BUSTED!

Victory has Perched on the Banner of PETERBOROUGH'S GREAT CHEAPSIDE.

And SHEPPARD, by common consent, will get $1,000 for being the Cheapest Clothier in Peterborough, having knocked the Wonderful Cheap Man completely out. "Business is business; dirt is dirt, and when it comes to throwing dirt, then count" the only original teddy out, and he will hand over that $1,000 like a little man, for the following reasons:—

SHEPPARD sells a full size Man's suit for $2.95, and better goods than a suit to fit a child about nine years old sold by the Wonderful Cheap Man on Saturday for $3.00; but marked $3.50. This is how it was.—A lady purchased a child's suit on Saturday last, Sept. 17th, 1887, at the store of the Wonderful Cheap Man. It was marked thusly:—Lot 5375, Breast 27, Waist 26½, Age 9, Price $3.50. It was pure shoddy, being held together by cotton threads, and Sheppard is free to say that that was the dearest suit sold in the Town of Peterborough for the last two years. Full particulars are given because of the $1,000 involved, and, further, that this decides who is selling the Cheapest Clothing in Peterborough. SHEPPARD would have sold that lady a suit, pure wool, for that money, and worth two of the one she got.

$1,000 to Go to the Charitable Institutions of Peterborough.

I had first decided to give the agencies a chance of jumping up my rating that $1,000, but after considering the matter and finding that never in any case have I been asked for an endorser to my paper, and that no relative or any other persons have ever endorsed my paper to the extent of one cent, I have come to the conclusion my credit is as good as yours, and will ask you to hand over the $1,000 to the Charitable Institutions of Peterborough.

Now, Sir, there is a good story told, the truth of which can be vouched for, but for the honor of at least making an effort to keep up your self-styled name—The Terror of High Priced Clothiers—do not allow the same to be said of you in the case above. A man purchased a suit for $15.00 at the store of one of the largest advertisers in that section of country. It was guaranteed pure wool; but after examining it carefully at home, he came to the conclusion that he had been dealing with some one sharper than himself. Finding a make of wool, differing some from anything he had ever seen, it dawned upon him that he had heard of wool of that kind, so the suit was returned. The merchant bet $25.00 that it was all wool, and the bet was accepted, the decision being left to a neighboring merchant. He found that the $15.00 suit was wool faced and shoddy back, pure unadulterated shoddy; but what of the $25.00 bet? was it paid? Not much—muchly—as it were.

ALL THE WORLD AT WAR.

By WALTER BESANT.

Author of "Shepherds All and Maidens Fair," "By Celia's Arbor," "The Golden Butterfly," etc., etc.

Nearly all that night I lay awake, wondering what new world was this into which I had got a glimpse. And when I slept it was to dream of strange, delicious things, clothed in shapes new and delightful.

It appeared next morning that Dan's idea of entertaining the guest was to hand him entirely over to me. All the others, to be sure, had work to do. He was easy to amuse when one got over the first shyness; and he was so good and thoughtful that the shyness very soon disappeared.

Surely, of all the delightful companions that any girl had mine was the most delightful. He was always happy; nothing ever ruffled his temper; he was satisfied with our simple way of life; he seemed to want nothing else than to go about all day long with me; he never tired of playing to us in the evening; he even encouraged my ignorant prattle, which must have seemed to him so silly, and preferred hearing me talk to telling me stories of the great world.

He came in August, he stayed with us all through September and October; he came when the corn was ripening; he stayed after the corn was got in, and even the cider apples gathered. I lived, for my part, in a fool's paradise, thinking it would last forever.

The beginning of trouble came from Joshua Meech.

We were so happy, Dan and I, with our new friend, that we hardly noticed the strange fact that Joshua, who had been wont to spend at least one evening in the week with us, had only visited us once since Mr. Campion came. And that evening on which our guest played he sat looking glum and ill tempered. One day in October, never dreaming that Mr. Campion was in any way associated with Joshua's ill temper, I took him across the fields to show him Joshua's mill. It certainly was the prettiest of all mills; not one of the great towers which spread out long arms, and seem as if they are going to catch you up in the air, and carry you round and round till you fly off and are killed—not at all like one of them, but a sweet and lovely water mill.

We found Joshua standing at the door; he was covered all over with flour, as becomes the sober, hard working miller, looking as if his thoughts never ran on anything more venturous than sacks of corn and the everlasting grunting of his waterwheel. When he saw us, however, his face clouded over, and, instead of coming to greet us, he retired within the mill.

I ran to the door and called him out. He came, scowling at Will, who was seated on a trunk of a tree.

"Are you going to stay long in these parts, young gentleman?" he asked.

There was something in his tone which Will resented.

"Perhaps I shall," he said, shortly.

"It depends, I suppose," said Joshua, "on how long you like to dangle about with a young girl. We don't like London ways in this part of the country."

Will flushed red.

"We will discuss this subject when the young lady is not present," he said.

"I shall be glad of an opportunity," said Joshua, slowly. "Why, there, that's spoke like a man. Maybe I can get round to Rousdon in the evening."

I ought to have known, but I did not, what this meant.

You see, it was a fighting time. If common men quarreled with each other, or with gentlemen, they had it out at once with fists or quarter staff. Gentlemen fought with pistols. Friends and seconds saw fair play.

Will, in fact, was going to fight Joshua Meech.

"What does he mean?" I asked, presently, when we had left our sulky Joshua, and were walking in the meadow beside the alder trees. "What does he mean by dangling with a young girl? I am the young girl, I suppose?"

"I suppose you are, Pleasance," he replied. "Sit down on this stile and I will tell you what he means."

I sat on the upper bar of the stile, Will on the second step, and he looked up in my face with those smiling, steadfast eyes of his, which always went straight to my heart.

"Joshua Meech means," he began, "that some men take a delight in stealing away girl's hearts, especially country girl's hearts, and then leaving them."

I did not quite understand.

"Don't open your pretty blue eyes too wide, Pleasance," he went on; "I will explain by an illustration. Now listen:

"Ever so long ago there was a young girl about 16 years of age—your age—living in the country by the seaside, with a jolly old sailor and his two sons, just as you have been living. She was a pretty girl—as pretty—as pretty—as you. She had the same blue eyes, the same sweet face, the same ruby lips, the same smile, and the same light brown curls, and I think she wore the same sort of straw hat."

"Oh, Mr. Campion!" For all of a sudden I found out—myself.

"There was a man who lived not far from her, a man who had a mill. I think he was a jealous, austere creature, but he was in love with this girl."

What did he mean?

"Then there came from London a young man who carried a fiddle and played it. He was quite a commonplace young man, who had no virtues except that he was fond of his fiddle. He came into the country intending to be quite alone, to sail and fish, and make music all to himself. He found, instead of solitude, a paradise, peopled with one Eve."

It sounded very pretty, if I could only understand it.

"This young man found her society so delightful that he stayed on. Presently he began to feel as if he did not care ever to go away again—unless—unless she would go away with him."

Then I understood that he had been making up a little story about himself and me, and I wondered what else he meant. I suppose I looked bewildered.

THE TURKISH TONGUE.

OTTOMAN WORDS THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE HAS BORROWED.

An Interesting Jumble of Philological Deductions Not Contemplated by Max Muller—A Queer List for the Curious to Look Over.

But it is pretty certain that there is a very close connection indeed between the Turks and the English. Was there not a Turkey company founded under Queen Elizabeth? Have not the English backed up the Turks, right or wrong, ever since? What is the meaning of British sympathy for the Bulgarians, but that these are first cousins of the Turks in blood, albeit Christians? If any more proof is wanted have we not the similarity of the Turkish and Turcoman to the English language to prove it? Philologists like Max Muller have warned the world against accidental and apparent verbal resemblances, but this is due only to their jealousy, their desire to keep things among themselves, their resolve to recognize no theories which they do not originate. Yet if this is a free country who are the philologists that they should monopolize any kind of business or intellectual exercise? So here is to prove that the English language is an offshoot of the Turkish tongue.

Do we not speak of St. Patrick, and is not patrik the Ottoman word for patriarch? and may be St. Patrick wasn't a patriarch! We speak of the eaves of a house, and ev is the Turkish for house. Vertigo is the feeling of falling into an abyss; varta is abyss in Turkish. We say ay when we mean to agree with a man; uy is agree. The Scots use the word ben for the inside of a house; beyn means among, and is not that as clear as could be wished? Bol means ample, hence bowl, sufficient for a drink; jewab, pronounced jawb, is answer, hence "jaw," to give one a piece of one's mind. Ruba is attire, and what else can robe come from? Berber is barber, and the best barbers were found in the east till America was invented. Batn is the abdomen; and surely batten, to feed till full, must have thus originated. Bile is safra, and saffron is the color of bile—nearly. Gem is a morsel, and is not a gem a morsel? Mr. Sullivan now and again puts up his darbies and gives his adversary darba, a blow. If there were no women in the world there would not be so much kissing; hence we note the identity of kiss with kis, a daughter. Busse is a kiss, and we know of the London girl who shocked a Boston lady by taking a 'bus right in the street.

AMONG IRISH WORDS.

Now let the Irish have a turn. Ulu in Turkish means dead, and what does the Irish keen begin with but Ulalone! Dere is valley, and every place called wholly or partly Derry in Ireland is in a valley. Bog is Turkish for deluge, and is not a bog a place where there was a deluge and where there is now turfan—another word for deluge—or turf? Kilisse is church, and do they not speak of Columbkill, or St. Columbia's, church? So in the Scotch, bittock is a moiety, as they say, "a mile and a bittock;" but bichook is Turkish for a half. Bit is end, and what is a bit but a piece off an end? Both Ireland and Scotland grow plenty of oats—as Dr. Johnson said, "food in Scotland for men, in England for horses," and ot is Turkish for forage. If all this is not enough there is more in stock. Mohammed prohibits intoxication; ich is drink, and hiccup—or cockney, 'icchup—the result of drink. The English accuse the Americans of corrupting the common language by using the imperative "git" for go, but the Turk says to a beggar git, because it is the imperative of gidelim, to go.

An Osmanli boy calls his grandfather dede, and an Osmanli uncle calls his son neve. When an Ottoman girl is chidden she holds down her head, bash, and is abashed; when she is wooed she does the same with her bash, and is bashful. When she gets married she probably has to do the cooking—that is, boiling or hashlan; hence, no doubt, hash; and how many American dyspeptics wish the Turks had kept the word and the thing at home! But if she becomes a good cook she is called ashji—that is, apparently, of the ashes, or one who works among ashes. It may be surmised that this is an empty guess or bosh, for bosh means empty, just as much means wax—that is, "close as wax"—and serin means cool, whence in warm countries "all serene" is similarly applied. Cach means escape, not, as might be supposed, arrest; but this is the way of the world in torturing meanings; and kedi or keti is a cat, not a kitten, and cawka is a fight, not an assembly of politicians. But doldur is a load, as when one is in the doldrums; kodja is an old man, or elder, not a codger, and kabagi is a guard, and not a cabbage. Turkish soldiers get but a portion even of their meager pay, hence pay means portion. Chok is much, or very, and do not we in the vulgarity of youth say chok full?

AN ADDITIONAL LIST.

When a boy is masticating candy, a man a plug, or a girl gum, they chine, that is, chew, because they move their chins. They may stand on the kuyi, or coast, of Coney Island, and never dream they are on a quay, and get into hal, or condition, thus becoming hale. They may go into the country and make hay for the haywanat, or cattle, not that any Turk bothers himself about such a thing, seeing the cattle can feed of themselves. They may dress in isscarlet or purple and go out in the merry month of May, so called because the sky is then mai, or light blue. The man may be a national guard and fall into rank—renk, the colors. When he comes home he may give his child a doll, or dol, which she will soon find to be "something filled." If on his return he tells a fish story his wife may talk Turkish to him and say tut, or even toot toot! that is, consider, have a care of your reputation for veracity. If he is a Roman Catholic or an Anglican he will have some regard for church law or canon law, kanun being Turkish for law, though the word was not adopted from the Turks by the councils of Nice or Chalcedon, near as those places are to Constantinople.

It may be hoped the student is now ver, or in accord, yea verily, that he has got nearly to the dib, or bottom, of the question, and has not merely dibbled in the fruitful soil; that he will not take diger, another view, and thus digress, but will aim at the merkez, or center, and thus make his mark as a philologer. But it is not well to have too much study at once, so it is time to chek, or pull up. And if Mr. Max Muller, or any gentleman of like views, who hold that inasmuch as English is an Aryan language and therefore can have nothing in common with a Turanian tongue, will only undertake to show that an American citizen's birthright should include a knowledge of Sanskrit, taught in the primary schools, then, and only then, can the theory of the descent of English from Turkish, amply illustrated above, be negatived by experts. There is one conclusive proof which has been deliberately kept to the last. The Turks call a siege or field gun "top"—because it is round! Skeptics can now sit down.—New York Times.

Vienna, at least, accords to women their right to do men's work. There they carry the hods and mix mortar.

William Byro Page's latest high jump was nine and a quarter inches above his own height.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

Is sold all over the world. It is far superior to plain Cod Liver Oil, palatable and easily digested. Dr. Martin Miles Stanton, Bury Bucks, Loudon, England, says: "I have prescribed Scott's Emulsion, and taken it myself. It is palatable, efficient, and can be tolerated by anyone, especially where cod liver oil itself cannot be borne. Put upin 50c. and $1 size.

SALVATION.

An Able Address at St. Luke's Mission, Ashburnham.

The interest still continues in the mission at St. Luke's Church. The address on Thursday evening was listened to with rapt attention, and will likely be long remembered by those present. The subject dealt with was "Salvation." After reading several selections from the Scriptures with reference to the subject, the speaker said that it might be supposed that this subject would be well understood by most people, especially as there was so much in the Word about it; but it was not the case. God's plan of salvation was not clearly understood. Men did not realize that they could lay hold on a present salvation, and be placed in a state of salvation by God. They should make sure of the simple foundation truths, before they tried to build themselves up. He would give an illustration of God's plan of salvation that might be helpful to them. He supposed himself to be a rich and benevolent man, who had a deep love for the human race and pitied them in their misery, crime and vice. In going through the slums of a large city, say London, pitying the sights that he saw, he was attracted by a little boy, whom he thought if washed and taught would be good looking and intelligent. He became deeply interested in the boy and loved him and would try and save him from the evil course that lay before him. He enquired and found that his parents were dead and that he lived with some evil people who adopted him and had some claim on him. He (the rich man) tried to come to terms with these people for him, and at last they consented for a large sum, taking advantage of his pity and eagerness to save the boy, and the bonds were drawn up, and for the want of ink the rich man drew his own blood to write it. He went to the boy and asked him to come home with him, and he would have him cleaned and washed, and splendid garments put on him and he would love him and be a father to him; and when he grew up and had been educated he would share his life, fortune and business with him. The boy did so, and the rich man's servants did all that had been promised him. He said that this was what God was doing for his children. He loved them He entreated them to come to Him. He paid a price for them that would redeem a world; yes, a universe. He bought them with His precious blood. They were not their own. He would wash them, robe them and make them His own sons and daughters. He applied the illustration to the different states in which a Christian might be, showing that the boy might run away, or be enticed back to his old evil associations again, and the love of the rich man in going after him and sending his servants to beseech him to return. He spoke of how blessed it would be if the boy would stop at home and imitate his father and grow up like him. He also spoke of the result of the boy refusing all the loving entreaties of the good man to return. He said that he could return, as he had been paid for by the good man who loved him. He said that if any soul did not get to Heaven it would be its own fault, as it had been invited to return home. He said the boy might stay away and remain in the evil haunts until he was grown up, and even become so corrupted that he would not care to be good: and the man, though he loved him, could not take him into his home, as he would spoil it and be out of place there, and at last the good man would have to tell him, sadly, that he would no longer own him, that there was no more hope, and that he must never enter the home again.

He enlarged on the subject in different ways, meeting objections that might be raised, and offering truths in a clear and impressive manner.

The subject to-night will be "Sanctification."

Shooting.

The Lindsay papers give the scores made by the Peterborough marksmen at the rifle match held at Lindsay on Friday last. In the Martini-Henry, Geo. Fitzgerald made 25, the highest score, and F. Hall made 21. In the Citizens' match W. H. Hill made 51, G. Fitzgerald made 46, and D. Cameron 44. The highest score was 59. In the Association match W. H. Hill made 56, D. Cameron 45, and G. Fitzgerald 41. The highest score was 56. In the Extra series W. H. Hill made 23, and G. Fitzgerald 22. The highest score was 24. The highest aggregate was made by Captain S. Hughes, 113, the next by Major Hughes, 112, and the next by W. H. Hill. 112

Personal.

Mrs. H. C Winch and Miss Chamberlen have returned home after a three months' trip through the Northwest. Their health has been much benefitted by the trip.

Mr. A. Kidd, Reeve of Dummer, has returned from Ottawa, where he has been egaged as judge at the Provincial Exhibition. He says that the exhibition was a very fine one throughout, though it seemed that the financial results were not satisfactory.

The Race.

There is a good deal of talk over the coming matched bicycle race between Cooper, of Belleville, and Greatrix, of Peterborough. If report be true, bets running into the hundreds have been made in Belleville on the result of the race. Greatrix is putting in steady practice, but is not working himself very hard.

OFF TO CHINA.

Two Young Men Leave For the Celestial Empire.

Mr. A. R. Saunders and Mr. Redfern, of Toronto' two active, energetic young men, left Peterborough this morning on their way to the Chinese Empire. When there they will engage in the mission work in one of the inland provinces.

On Thursday evening a meeting was held in the lecture hall of the Y. M. C. A. rooms, at which both of the young men made short speeches.

The Rev. I. Tovell occupied the chair. After singing and prayer the Chairman spoke of the great privilege it was for the gospel to be preached as it was in this country. The object of this meeting was to create a greater interest in Christian work. The two young men here were about to depart for China to labor in that dark land. If there was one thing more than another by which the Y. M. C. A. were gaining the admiration of the public, it was in this sending out of young men to the arduous mission work in distant places.

Mr. Saunders spoke of his connection with the Toronto Y. M. C. A. for a term of three years, and stated that nothing could have induced him to give up his work as under secretary but the voice of God calling him to the Chinese mission work. Some years ago the Rev. J. Hudson Taylor was engaged as a missionary in China under the auspices of an English society. A message came to him that the society could no longer bear the expense and that he would have to return home. So great, however, was the urgency of the work that he chose rather to remain there unsupported and to toil on. He became deeply solicitous for the welfare of the millions in the inland Provinces, who had never heard of Christianity, and set upon the herculean task of reaching the people, assisted by 18 missionaries. From that time the work had prospered. There were now 200 missionaries there, and this fall the number would be reinforced by 100 more active workers. This fact told of the steady progress that was being made and foreshadowed the ultimate result of the labor that was being done. The speaker quoted the words "God so loved the world," and said that this did not apply merely to England and America, but to China, Africa and the whole world. Even though great work had been done and was doing, China had still many dark places. One Province with twice the population of Canada, and two with as large populations as Canada, were not yet reached by the voice of the gospel.

Mr. Saunders' address was delivered in an earnest manner, showing that his heart and soul was in the work he was about to engage in.

Mr. Redfern sang a solo entitled "Go Ye Unto all the World," adding from Mark xvi. 15—and preach the Gospel to every creature." It was in obedience to this command, he said, that they were going to a far land that was in darkness. The work to do was overpowering, and required the strenuous efforts of all Christian people. There were now 1,400,000,000 of people on the earth at present, 800,000,000 of whom had never heard the Gospel. Two out of every three people that walked the earth to-night were without a knowledge of Christ. "Christians awake! soldiers arise!" he called to the people, and urged every Christian to work with his might to enlighten this appalling ignorance. He discussed Confucianism and Buddhism and their failure to meet the spiritual wants of the people. He said that Christian teachers were wanted there. People had been known to walk as far as 20 and 30 miles to hear the Gospel preached. He concluded with singing another solo and reading from 1 Corinthians 19 and 20.

The Rev. E. F. Torrance and the Rev. F. H. Wallace each spoke briefly.

New York Financial Editor—Yes, I can get in a few lines.

"Well, I've just consummated a stock deal."

"All right, I'll put it in. Did you make anything?"

"Yes, siree; I made $17 by the operation"

"Very well; I'll announce that Mr. Blank, the coming Napoleon of finance, cleared two millions yesterday by a shrewd deal."

"That's the idea. How much?"

Horses.

The Canadian Gazette is doubtful whether the scheme decided upon by the Imperial Government in regard to supplying horses for the army will be profitable. The course at present decided on is to register the number of horses required and contract for their delivery when the exigency requires it, the owners to be paid a fee annually and their horses to be purchased when delivered at an enhanced price. If the scheme fails, and the Gazette thinks its success is doubtful, it says that "it will become necessary to look outside the United Kingdom for an immediate supply, and in that case Canada must, if Canadians will only made full use of their present opportunity, become an immediate and probably a permanent source of supply."

EVERYBODY cordially invited to look through TURNBULL'S Magnificent Stock of Millinery, Mantles, Dress Cloth and General Dry Goods on the 4th, 5th, and 6th of October.

If the discoverer of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy had shared the senseless prejudices of a certain class of physicians he would have refused to print the good news, to proclaim to the world the glorious tidings that an infallible remedy for that most loathsome disease, catarrh, had been discovered. But he advertised liberally and the result has justified him in the course he pursued. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy never fails. All druggists.

FAIR AT LAKEFIELD.

SMITH, ENNISMORE AND LAKEFIELD ANNUAL EXHIBITION.

A Large Attendance at the Yearly Show —A Fine Exhibit of Horses—The Other Classes Well Represented.

The annual exhibition of the Smith, Ennismore and Lakefield Agricultural Society was held in Lakefield on Thursday and Friday, Sept. 29th and 30th. The exhibitsin the were entered on the first day and in the evening the hall was open the public. The attendance on that evening was large, the people turning out in large numbers to view the attractive display.

The exhibit of grain and roots was some what of a surprise. The dry, hot season would lead one to expect to see inferior qualities, but bright, large andplump wheat was shown and good samples of other grains. The display of roots also was good and fine samples of fruit of different kinds were shown. The ladies' work included many beautiful specimens of their handiwork, but the exhibit did not appear to be as large as it has been some years. Of home manufactures, such as blankets, flannel and carpets, there was a very good display. Among the most noticeable special articles in the hall was a beautiful case of stuffed birds, a case of minerals (principally from mines in this county) shells and curiosities, a book of ferns, grasses and leaves sown by Mrs. Traill, and some good painting. Mr. Thomas Gordon had three of his canoes on exhibition and Mr. J. W. Crosby, of Peterborough, displayed two Uxbridge rgans.

OUTSIDE DEPARTMENTS.

On the second day, Friday, the show was open in every department. All forenoon the animals, etc., and the people poured into the village and although rain threatened to fall the attendance was large, the number present being estimated at a thousand.

The most attractive feature was without doubt the horses. While they were being exhibited the course was thronged with people. There were very fine animals shown in the different classes of horses, and the number was so large and the competition so keen that the judges must have had difficulty in deciding as to the merits of the competitors.

There were some very fine cattle shown, both thoroughbreds and grade, but this department might be better filled. Judging from the fair the people in the vicinity of Lakefield give more attention to horses than to cattle. Still the show was a good one, and showed that pride was taken in having good stock.

There were ten pens of fine Berkshire hogs, first class animals. One, a pig eleven months old, owned by Mr. John Chasty, was so large for its age that it attracted considerable attention. There was also a very good show of sheep, and the poultry department was well filled, the competition being close in some classes.

Mr. Henry Owens, of Peterborough, showed samples of his excellent combined Model Lift and Force Pump. Mr. W. Forsyth, of Peterborough, had on the grounds two fanning mills of his own manufacture, the standard I.X.L. Two fanning mills of the Chatham make were also shown. Farm waggons were shown by Mr. J. H. McWilliams and Mr. David Smith, of Lakefield, and Mr. Smith also showed iron harrows and an open buggy.

During the afternoon the Lakefield brass band, under the leadership of Mr. G. Scrimger, furnished music. The band has made good progress since its organization and the music was excellent. One youthful member, whose head was about as high as the knee of his neighbor, played as heartily (and we were about to say as well) as any of the members.

A sprinkle of rain fell two or three times during the day.

The number of entries was 642, which was 31 less than the previous year.

There was a refreshment booth on the grovnd—an innovation at a Lakefield fair. Mr. D. Baptie was the caterer.

The President, Mr G. W. Fitzgerald, was most active in looking after fair matters, and the other officers and members of committees were attentive to their duties.

CHOLERA AT NEW YORK.

The Health Officer's Report Regarding the Alesia's Passengers.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Health Officer Smith makes the following report concerning the steamer Alesia's cholera patients:

"Francesco Covela, aged 64 years; Nep Zaccola, 62 years and Rosaria Bermudy, 21 years, were removed to-day from Hoffman Island to the quarantine hospital. Girardi Salvatore, aged 44, suffering from an injury caused by a box falling on his chest and stomach, has cholera diarrhœa and was sent to the hospital. All the other patients in the hospital are improving George Helvig, Dominic Morella, Feel. Carbonari, Rosa Adinolfi, aged 22; Michelo Tapbola and Maria Deinuchmio were discharged from the hospital and sent to Hospman Island.

The Churches.

The annual sermons on behalf of the Educational Society of the Methodist Church, will be preached to-morrow as follows: George street, Rev. N. Burwash, S.T. D., of Victoria University; 7 p.m., Rev. E. H. Dewart, D.D., Editor of the Christian Guardian. Charlotte street, 11 a.m., Rev Dr. Dewart; 7 p.m., Rev. Dr. urwash Collections and subscription on behalf of the society.

The services will be conducted in the Baptist Church to-morrow by Mr. R. R. McKay, of Toronto.

Anniversary services in the Mark Street Methodist Church will be held to-morrow. The sermons will be preached both morning and evening by the Rev. A. Browning, of Belleville. A children's meeting will be held at 5 p.m.

Almost a Suicide.

This morning at a little before five o,clock Mr. Smith, an employee of the Wm. Hamliton Manufacturing Co's. Works, while crossing the Ashburnham bridge, made a rather startling discovery. He found a woman apparently aged about 50 years with her feet tied together and a rope around her neck in the act of jumping into the river. He prevented this rash procedure and had her conveyed to the Grand Central Hotel. Her name was found to be Mrs. Thompson, and her residence on Harvey street. Her daughter and her son-in-law were apprized of what had happened. They took her from the hotel in a hack. No reason is assigned for the strange conduct of the woman.

Coming Events.

Mr. Bradburn is going to provide the people of Peterborough with some creditable performances during the coming fall and winter season. The dates arranged for up to the end of the year are as follows:—From Monday, October 2nd, for one week, by the Harry Lindley Comedy Company; on October 14th, by Mrs. Gen. Tom Thumb and Company; on Monday, October 17th, Tuesday 18th and Wednesday 19th, by the Clare Smith Dramatic Company; on Tuesday and Wednesday, 15th and 16th of November, by Joe. Murphy; on Saturday, November 19th, by Reah; and for a week, commencing December 26th, by the R. Baird Dramatic Company. Other dates will, of course, be filled in.

Conundrum Answered.

Because Wilson and Morrison's business in "The Manufacturers Life" for the last ten weeks has exceeded over half a million dollars, being more than the combined Insurance of all our competitors, the boom still continues, saying nothing of the large Fire Accident and Plate Glass business. "Moral," insure in the Manufacturers.

THE CROWN PRINCE.

BERLIN, Sept. 30.—The Crown Prince Frederick William has been greatly improved by his stay at Tobiach. His hoarseness has completely vanished.

STATUE OF LAFAYETTE.

PARIS, Sept. 30.—Messieurs Falguiere and Antoine Mercier, of Paris, are executing a statue of Lafayette for the United States Government. The statue will cost $50,000, and will be placed in a square at Washington.

THE SUEZ CANAL.

PARIS, Sept. 30.—The Temps says that M. Flourens, the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs, recently proposed to Lord Salisbury that an international commission on the Suez Canal be appointed, with power to determine the limits within which the construction of fortifications and the assembling of troops shall be forbidden. Lord Salisbury has not yet replied to the proposition, and it is believed that he is unwilling to accede to it.

THE ARMY MOBILIZATION.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 30.—The Graschdanin condemns the optimism of the French with reference to the mobilization of their troops. The paper points out defects in the recent manœuvres and says that the most successful operations were purely artificial If the Germans, it adds, admitted that the French mobilization was a success, it was simply to leave the French ignorant of their inferior military organization.

NEW CARDINALS.

ROME, Sept. 30.—At the December consistory the Pope will raise to the cardinalate Mgr. Richard, Archbishop of Paris; Mgr. acobini, and Mgr. Persico.

THE WHELEHAM MURDER.

Evidence Produced at the trial of the Moonlighters.

GALWAY, Sept. 30.—The inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the murder of Constable Wheleban by moonlighters was continued yesterday. The Government announced the withdrawal of the prosecution of Callinan, one of the prisoners who turned Queen's evidence The evidence showed that five constables had secreted themselves in Farmer Sexton's house. The prisoners came to the house and knocked twice on the door. Sexton asked, "Who's there?" The replied, "Police. Open the door." Sexton opened the door, whereupon three of the prisoners, two of whom were armed with rifles and one with a revolver, rushed in to attack Sexton. The police them emerged from their hiding place, and a desperate struggle ensued. The fight lasted fully twenty minutes, and both the policemen and the prisoners were severely injured. Finally the three men were overpowered and arrested. During the melee accomplices outside of the house murdered Constable Wheleban, who had been left on guard. At this point the inquiry was adjourned.

The Sheppard Case.

TORONTO, Sept. 30.—Mr. J. J. Maclaren, Q. C., appeared before Judge McDougall this morning on account of a writ made returnable for argument in the Sheppard warrant case. Counsel for Mr. Sheppard announced that he was not ready for want of testimony now being prepared at Montreal and which had not yet come. The case was then enlarged till next morning.

Indian Murderers.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 30.—A half-breed and his son were brought to Edmonton yesterday by Mounted Police, charged with the murder of the wife of one prisoner and the stepmother of the other. The woman had become insane and inciting to cannibalism and murder. According to Indian custom it is feared the relatives killed her.

Fourteen Lives Lost.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Sept. 30.—The water-logged schooner, seen near the banks after the storm of August 26, was the Ocean Friend, owned by Duff & Bulmer, of Carbonear. The crew, fourteen men, were lost, leaving ten widows and twenty-four children.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1887.

THE MEANING INDISPUTABLE.

We are glad to find that the Kingston Whig has at last come round to our view and sees that the construction we placed on on Sir John Macdonald's language about railway disallowance is "indisputable." It thus, not very gracefully, abandons its own contention. It says under the heading "Language is plain":—

"Do we understand the Peterborough REVIEW to say that Sir John Macdonald did not declare that the Dominion Parliament could not check Manitoba? What is the meaning of the following language, which we have already quoted?

"'In order to give them a chance we have provided that the Dominion Parliament—mind you, the Dominion Parliament; we cannot check any other Parliament, we cannot check Ontario, we cannot check Manitoba—shall, for the first ten years after the construction of the road, give their own road, into which they are putting so much money and so much land, a fair chance of existence.'

"This was the assurance of the Premier when he made his famous speech in support of the Canada Pacific syndicate contract. Its meaning is indisputable, except by papers of the REVIEW stamp, and for the party's sake it I prepared to dispute anything."

Of course the meaning is indisputable, and means as we have always contended, and as the Whig now sees, that Sir John declared that the Dominion Parliament could not check Manitoba. Therefore we have combatted, with this final success, the misrepresentation put forth by the Whig and other Reform journals that Sir John declared the Dominion Government could not check Manitoba. On this perversion of his language they proceeded to build the theory that the words he did not use contained a promise subsequently broken by him. Because the meaning of Sir John's words was indisputable they changed the words, or omitted the context on which the words depended.

Now that it is settled that the power to check Manitoba does not reside in the Parliament of Canada and that Sir John correctly said so, the ground is cleared for the fair discussion of the question whether the Executive of Canada acted judiciously in checking Manitoba by the use of the veto power given by our constitution.

This of course may be a matter of opinion. The Administration entrusted by the people of Canada with the authority in such matters thought it judicious as was shown by their recommendation to the Governor-General. The representatives chosen by the people of Canada to serve in Parliament thought it judicious as was shown by their vote in the House of Commons supporting the policy. The majority of the people of Canada thought it judicious as shown by them in the constitutional way by the acts of their chosen representatives in the Executive and Legislature, against which they have uttered no protest.

If a minority of the people of Canada think it injudicious, they have a right to advocate their view, but they should not do so by means of misrepresentation.

IT is announced by the Toronto press that the Hon. Wm. Macdougall has been in the city attending a meeting of the Great Northwestern Telegraph Company of which he is solicitor. This is the monopoly of which Mr. Wiman is the ringleader, having gobbled up competing companies by the usual Wall street methods. Here we have another insight into the "Spontaneity" of Mr. Wiman's agitation. Of course the speculating president did not pull a wire to bring the solicitor to his aid in his campaign against Canada.

THE agitators for Commercial Annexation admit that the attendance at the recent Clinton meeting was disappointingly small. The chairman, speakers and movers of resolutions were Grit members of Parliament, salt manufacturers wishing to shut out free British salt, physicians and a professor of history. There were no farmers among these leaders and very few in the audience. Yet this is heralded as an endorsement of the movement by the farmers of Huron.

IN one of his speeches advocating Commercial Annexation Mr. Goldwin Smith says that the future of our farmers "was not as bright as it might be because of competition with India." Now the Indian competition with our farmers is for wheat in the British market. Mr. Smith fails to explain how our farmers can better this by still exporting their surplus wheat to Liverpool through the United States which will want a middle man's profits.

THE press of Great Britain express satisfaction at the subsidy granted to the C.P.R. mail steamers, and regret that a fortnightly instead of a monthly service was not provided. Well, we can be patient. The shortening of time and greater regularity in carrying the mails will be sure to lead to a very speedy augmentation of the subsidy to secure more frequent mails.

IN avoiding the arguments in Mr. Clarke's letter against Commercial Annexation the Toronto Mail devotes considerable space to criticism of Mr. Clarke's statistics. Whether Mr. Clarke's figures are absolutely accurate or not, it is certain that the Mail has enormously underestimated the indebtedness of the States. The falsification is so great that it must be intentional.

Right now is the time to use a good Blood Purifying Medicine. Lose no time in getting a bottle of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It will do you good. Sold by al druggists. 50c.

THE WAR CLOUD BUSTED!

Victory has Perched on the Banner of PETERBOROUGH'S GREAT CHEAPSIDE.

And SHEPPARD, by common consent, will get $1,000 for being the Cheapest Clothier in Peterborough, having knocked the Wonderful Cheap Man completely out. "Business is business; dirt is dirt, and when it comes to throwing dirt, then count" the only original teddy out, and he will hand over that $1,000 like a little man, for the following reasons:—

SHEPPARD sells a full size Man's suit for $2.95, and better goods than a suit to fit a child about nine years old sold by the Wonderful Cheap Man on Saturday for $3.00; but marked $3.50. This is how it was.—A lady purchased a child's suit on Saturday last, Sept. 17th, 1887, at the store of the Wonderful Cheap Man. It was marked thusly:—Lot 5375, Breast 27, Waist 26½, Age 9, Price $3.50. It was pure shoddy, being held together by cotton threads, and Sheppard is free to say that that was the dearest suit sold in the Town of Peterborough for the last two years. Full particulars are given because of the $1,000 involved, and, further, that this decides who is selling the Cheapest Clothing in Peterborough. SHEPPARD would have sold that lady a suit, pure wool, for that money, and worth two of the one she got.

$1,000 to Go to the Charitable Institutions of Peterborough.

I had first decided to give the agencies a chance of jumping up my rating that $1,000, but after considering the matter and finding that never in any case have I been asked for an endorser to my paper, and that no relative or any other persons have ever endorsed my paper to the extent of one cent, I have come to the conclusion my credit is as good as yours, and will ask you to hand over the $1,000 to the Charitable Institutions of Peterborough.

Now, Sir, there is a good story told, the truth of which can be vouched for, but for the honor of at least making an effort to keep up your self-styled name—The Terror of High Priced Clothiers—do not allow the same to be said of you in the case above. A man purchased a suit for $15.00 at the store of one of the largest advertisers in that section of country. It was guaranteed pure wool; but after examining it carefully at home, he came to the conclusion that he had been dealing with some one sharper than himself. Finding a make of wool, differing some from anything he had ever seen, it dawned upon him that he had heard of wool of that kind, so the suit was returned. The merchant bet $25 00 that it was all wool, and the bet was accepted, the decision being left to a neighboring merchant. He found that the $15.00 suit was wool faced and shoddy back, pure unadulterated shoddy; but what of the $25.00 bet? was it paid? Not much—muchly—as it were.

Sheppard is making Wonderful Strides in Securing Marvellous Bargains in Dry Good, Clothing, Hats and Caps.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. ALL THE WORLD AT WAR.

By WALTER BESANT.

Author of "Shepherds All and Maidens Fair," "By Celia's Arbor," "The Golden Butterfly," etc., etc.

"My dear, my dear, do you not understand me?" he caught both my hands and pressed them to his lips. "Do you not understand me? I want you to promise to be my wife."

"Your wife, Mr. Campion? but you are a gentleman."

"Listen, little innocent; would you like me to go away?"

I shook my head, and the tears came into my eyes.

"Do you like being with me?"

"Yes," I answered, quite frankly, because there was nothing to conceal; "I like being with you very much."

"How should you feel if you knew that you would never see me again?"

I shuddered.

"I must go away, unless you bid me stay. You can only do that by promising to marry me."

"But what will Dan say?"

"Dan will agree. Say, am I to stay?"

I gave him one hand, but he took both.

"Stay, Mr. Campion, if you please."

Then he took me to his arms and held me tight, and kissed me again and again on the lips, till I tore myself from him, abashed and confused.

"Now you are all my own," he said, "and I am yours. We are pledged to each other. I will you exactly what we will do"—he had his whole plan complete in his head. "We will go up to London. You shall live with John Huntspill, my partner. You shall learn the things which you have to learn; and then, when you are externally to all the world what you are now to my eyes alone, I will take you to my mother, and say to her, 'Mother, this young lady from Dorsetshire is going to be my wife.'"

"Your mother!" My heart sank a little.

"Yes. By the way," he added, with a laugh, "she is very particular about family and rank; what shall we say?"

"My father's rank was ship's carpenter," I said, simply.

He laughed. "We will tell her the exact truth, and ask her if she would find a lovelier girl among the bluest blood. I forgot to tell you that my mother is blind."

Then, holding my hand in his, he began to tell me all about himself and his mother.

He was an only child. His father was a city merchant, whom the king knighted during his year as lord mayor. He was Sir Godfrey Campion. His mother was a widow. She lived in the city, he told me, in the square of Great St. Simon Apostle. He would be himself, in two years, by his father's will, nominally the senior partner in the house of Campion & Co., of London, Bristol and Jamaica. But John Huntspill would do the work.

"I should like to tell you another thing, dear," he said. "My mother and I parted in anger. She—one must not think ill of one's mother—but she does not remember that I am nearly twenty-three years of age. We quarreled on account of my violin. She thinks a fiddle only fit for an Italian musician, for a bear leader, or for sailors ashore. Above all, she thinks it unsuited to the head of a city house. Perhaps it is, but then you see I never wanted to play the fiddle in the office. And then—well—then—there was a scene one evening. My dear mother has a high spirit; and when she came in comparing her son—the fiddle scraping son—with his late father, Sir Godfrey Campion, and when that son declared that the comparison was not fair, and one thing led to another, why—there is nothing strange in the fact that the son resolved to take his fiddle into the country for awhile. That is how I came here."

"Yes," I said, trying, in my ignorant, country way to realize what all this meant—the lord mayor, knighthood and the rest.

"Was your father an admiral?" I asked at length. He stared for a moment and then burst out laughing. Of course he always laughed at everything. Years afterward I asked him how it was he did not lose patience with so much ignorance.

"Lose patience?" he asked, in his silly, delightful way, "it all helped to make me love you the more madly."

Now, it was not such very great ignorance after all, because I had heard of admirals who were knighted. It was natural for me to think that all men who were called sir were admirals

There is one thing which no woman can ever understand—what it is in her, and her alone, that makes a man fall down and worship her. I was the most simple and ignorant of country girls and he was a gentleman. Yet he risked the happiness of his whole life on the chance that I should become what he imagined me to be already. My heart sinks still with a sort of humiliation to think how unworthy of that true and loyal gentleman I was. You will see presently of what things I was capable.

We went home at length, hand in hand, across the fields. Will said nothing to Dan, and we had our tea just as usual, only that I was silent.

In the evening Will went out, accompanied by the two boys. I had quite forgotten about Joshua and wondered a little at his leaving me.

It was dark when they came back. Will had his left hand tied round with a pocket handkerchief, his right eye was black and he had got a gash across his cheek. He had been fighting Joshua Meech, and he had left, as I afterward learned, that hero senseless on the ground.

Jephthah—or was it Job?—announced the battle and its results. "He be give Joshua a drubbing," he said, with a cheerful chuckle.

Now, no one in that house bore Joshua any grudge, and yet at the news we all congratulated ourselves and the victor. I am almost ashamed now to think that Will was more glorious in my eyes than ever.

There could be no fiddling that evening, and Dan had a double ration of brandy punch.

A fight in those days was a mere episode in a man's life. It might occur at any moment. Everybody fought, and a gentleman learned boxing as a part of his education.

But I was anxious that there should be no bad blood, and the next day I went over to the mill to see Joshua.

His face was a good deal more battered than Will's. It was evident that he had taken punishment manfully. He asked me to go into his own room for a talk.

"It is your politeness, I suppose," I began, "that makes you fight a strange gentleman?"

"What's a fight?" he replied. "That's nothing neither to him nor to me. He's a well plucked one, he is, as ever handled a pair of fists. Which makes it worse."

"What is worse, Joshua?"

"Now, no more fooling, Pleasance. You listen to me. No good comes of young gentlemen dangling with young girls. Besides, I won't have it. He's got to go."

"You won't have it?"

"No," he said, banging his hand on the table. "I won't have it. There! You've got to be my wife."

"I've got—to—be—your wife?"

"Of course you have. I've told Dan long ago. Why, I've been saving up for it these ten years. Next Easter Sunday I mean to marry you."

I only stared.

"Don't think, Pleasance, that a man can't love a girl because he hasn't got his mouth stuffed with fine words. Gar! it makes one sick to think of it. I've loved you since you were a child. And he shall go."

"He shall not go, Joshua," I said. "And I will never, never marry you. Remember that."

"He shall go," he said firmly. "One way or the other, he shall go. Don't make me desperate, Pleasance. He shall go. Now you know what to expect, behave accordingly."

I sprang to my feet and rushed out of the cottage. The man's set lips and steady eyes frightened me.

I told Will; but he laughed at my fears. What was Joshua to him? At the most, there could only be another fight.

Joshua came no more to the farm, and I did not see him again till the trouble came upon me and mine.

And now I must leave the pleasant time, when every day brought some new happiness and some fresh brightness with it, and come to the story of that trouble.

It was partly my own fault.

One day—we had been sailing to Ladram bay and back in the little boat; we had just beached her, and were sitting on the pebbles hand in hand.

"What does Dan do," asked Will, "with two boats?"

"The Chace Mary is the fishing boat," I replied; "the Dancing Polly is for the runs to France."

"The what?" cried Will.

"The runs over for the brandy, you know. Why, she is the fastest boat that ever crossed the channel."

Will listened with a bewildered face. Presently he laughed.

"So Dan is a smuggler, is he? Crafty old man!"

"Why," I said, with pride, "everybody knows that Dan is the boldest smuggler along the coast. They've given up trying to catch him now."

"Oh! And Job and Jephthah?"

"They go, too, of course."

"And—and the jealous amoroso, Don Joshua, does he go, too?"

"Yes, he goes, too. They all four go."

Will whistled.

"Shade of my sainted father!" he said, "was it for this that you brought your son up in pious hatred to the illicit traffic which interfered with your own gains?"

I did not understand one word of what he said.

"I will explain," he said. "My father made his fortune and mine chiefly by rum. Rum is a rival to brandy. Great numbers of the happy children of Ham—who, as my mother believes, are by divine ordinance subject to the children of Japhet—toil in Jamaica for the house of Campion & Co. We provide the British public with red roses, speckled noses, bottle noses, gout and chalk stones in the hands. That is our work in the world. We flog slaves in order that Britons may get drunk on health giving rum. And we pay duty. What are we to think of a man who runs over brandy, which may be sold cheaper than rum, and is more wholesome? How do you think I have been trained to regard such a man? And now to feel that I have not only been staying in such a man's house, but that I am engaged to his adopted daughter, and that daughter the sweetest girl in the world! Lady Campion, what will you say to it?"

TURNBULL'S Millinery Opening days are Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, the 4th, 5th and 6th of Oct.

Getting Worse.

A change for the worse took place in Father Conway's condition during the last twenty-four hours. To-day he has so far lost consciousness as not to recognize the attending physicians or even the priests of the household.

MANTLE Making an Art at Turnbull's. Everybody may expect to be surprised and pleased with the display of Ladies' and Children's Garments at TURNBULL'S Millinery Opening.

An Error.

In our exhibition number the name of the lady mentioned in Miss Griffin's advertisement as having charge of the millinery department should have read "Miss Thorne," instead of "Miss Thomas," as appeared in print.

Hose.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee is at present flooded with correspondence from hose firms. It was decided only on Monday night to procure the hose, and almost from that hour the epistles came rolling in.

Paintin' Her Red.

The committee appointed at the last meeting of the Town Council to resolve upon the best method of advertising the town as a manufacturing and industrial centre, will meet in the Town Buildings on Monday night.

Now Open.

Chamberlain's oyster parlor is now open for the season. Oysters will be served at all hours in styles to suit the tastes of our patrons. After this week shell oysters will be kept constantly on hand. Porter-house steaks, chops, etc., prepared on the shortest notice. d69-tf

The Gun Club.

EVERYBODY cordially invited to look through TURNBULL'S Magnificent Stock of Millinery, Mantles, Dress Cloth and General Dry Goods on the 4th, 5th, and 6th of October.

The Yachts.

Some excellent views of the race between the Volunteer and Thistle are exhibited in the window of Mr. R. W. Muncaster's jewellery store. They were taken by Mr. R. M. Roy, who occupied a place on the judge's boat during the progress of the race. Besides views of the race, Mr. Roy secured a very fine photograph of both of the rival yachts, the Priscilla and the Puritan.

Handsome Prizes.

During the meet in Stoney Lake of the Northern Division of the A. C. A. Judge Dartnell of Whitby, generously offered a prize for boys under 14 for paddling in double canoes. A. G. Leferre and A. F. Tate, both of Lakefield won in good style from a number of competitors Judge Dartnell has now sent to Commodore Rogers the prizes, which are two handsome silver tankards with the names and date inscribed on them. They will be on view for a few days in the window of Mr. McClelland's jewellery store.

EVERYTHING New, Rich and Rare in Millinery Goods will be on display at TURNBULL'S Millinery Opening.

Janitor vs. Boys.

Janitor Tighe, of the Collegiate Institute and Central School, had two boys before the court this morning charged with doing wilful injury to property. He wanted to haul them up for discharging firearms, but it was found that the local solons did not consider that an offence when drawing up the code. The janitor then had them arraigned on the injury to property charge. He said that these boys had a rifle and were doing target practice in the school grounds. He frequently heard the bullets whistling close to his ear. It "scarred" him, he said. He had remonstrated with the boys, but of no avail, till one of the bullets broke a window glass. The boys said that they were firing blank cartridges. The Magistrate talked to the boys, telling them of the fatal results that might happen by indulging in this dangerous play. As they had agreed to replace the glass he would dismiss them with a warning.

IT is enough, simply, to tell the public that Miss Mahoney has been doing her best to make TURNBULL'S Millinery Opening a Grand Success. Remember the days are Oct. the 4th, 5th and 6th.

The Mission at St. Lukes.'

St. Luke's Church was filled again on Friday evening at the mission services. The Rev. E. P. Crawford, as usual, conducted the exercises. The address was on "Sanctification." He gave a clear and masterly exposition of this process, saying that it was not only the purpose of God to save men from sin and satan, but also to make them holy and pure. Heaven was the place for only those who were pure in heart. A bad man would be out of place there; in fact he could not stand it. It was said that Christ's righteousness was imputed to us, and so it was, but that would not be enough. It would be like taking a filthy and ragged beggar and putting the finest silk gown on him. Outwardly he might be all right, but you would know that inside he was filthy still. God wanted men to be holy, and it was His will that they should be so. He made use of illustrations that all could understand, in fact he seems to have the gift of simplifying things that would otherwise be difficult. The mission will close on Sunday evening, on which day there will be the usual Sunday services, including the meeting for men only in the afternoon at 4 o'clock. The subject of the address to night will be 'Perseverance."

Personal.

Mr. Johnston Carey is about to retire from the retail boot and shoe trade to go into manufacturing for the wholesale trade. Mr. Carey has been catering for this trade for some time past. He will now launch out into a bolder enterprise.

Mr. John Bertram has made arrangements to leave Peterborough, having made a satisfactory disposal of his residence. Mr. Bertram is the head of the wholesale hardware firm of Bertram & Co., 76 Wellington Street, Toronto, and principal member in the retail hardware firm of J. and A. Bertram, 114 Younge Street, Toronto. He has also a large interest in a lumbering enterprise at Cullen's, Inlet, which is managed in Toronto. Mr. Bertram finds it necessary to move to Toronto.

Benefit.

If people will only look at J. J. Sheehy's window and enquire the prices of the mantle cloths that are there, they will save about 25 per cent. doing so. d79

BURNED TO DEATH.

The Terrible Death of a Little Girl in Lakefield.

A little girl named May Ann Watson, aged 6 years and three months, met her death in a very painful way on Thursday afternoon in Lakefield. She lived with Mr. Jas. Jackman, of Bishop street. Between eleven an twelve o'clock in the forenoon she was returning home from school accompanied by a small boy. The children had to pass a burning stump on the way and they stopped to play, poking up the fire with a stick. In doing so the little girl's CLOTHES CAUGHT FIRE.

The fire took hold of her dress and almost immediately she was enveloped in flames. The little thing, frightened and suffering, started to run home, her small companion being unable to help her. A neighbor woman, who lived nearer the school house, hurried to her and picked her up, as she had fallen. The flames was extinguished and she was taken into the neighbor's house. Afterwards she was removed home. Her in a terrible manner from her neck down, her legs were scorched and the back of her neck was burned. Her face had escaped the flames. A message was sent to the office of Drs. Caldwell & Fraser when the accident happened, and Dr. Fraser answered the summons, but her injuries were so severe that she could not survive. The little sufferer lived till about three or four o'clock in the afternoon, when she expired. Her sufferings during that time were not so great as might be feared, but her restlessnes showed that she was in pain. Her body was laid to rest in the Hillside Cemetery.

BODY WAS BURNED

NIZAM'S GREAT OFFER.

The Alleged True Inwardness of his Proposal—Looked Upon Askance.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The Offer of the exceptionally able and accomplished Indian prince, the Nizam of Hyderabad, to give a lump sum of $2,000,000 towards the strengthening of the defences of the frontier of North West India, is looked upon askance by astute financiers and variously criticised by the general public. In financial circles it is unqualifiedly asserted that the seemingly gratuitous, and no doubt, opportune tender of the large sum placed at the disposal of the Indian Government is given in furtherance of a scheme to advance the price of Indian railway shares, and in other ways influence the stock market in favor of Indian enterprise in which the Nizam and his intimates are interested. It has transpired that the publication of the announcement that the donation had been offered was made prematurely, and the publicity given to the fact at this time has greatly prejudiced financiers against the Nizam, who, it is known, has been a sufferer from entanglements with London bankers for more that a year past. It will be extremely difficult for the Nizam and his allies to remove the general impression that the offer is anything more than a colossal stock jobbing scheme, and by some it is suggested that the expectations of its promoters was to pay the money which the Government was authorized to draw out of the profits of the transactions on the Stock Exchange, which it was presumed could be made on the strength of the Indian prince's action.

THE YACHT RACES.

What the New York Press Says of the Volunteer's Victories.

NEW YORK, October 1.—The Herald says:—"Yesterdays race was one of the fairest and squarest of the contests, and if Scotland would like to try again next year, she will find that our hospitality is by no means exhausted. We have seen so much of General Paine's enterprise that it would not at all surprise us if he were to build a yacht even faster than the Volunteer, while we very much question if a yacht speedier than the Thistle can be turned out from the Clyde, at least not until our Scotch friends learn a lesson or two from American yacht designers."

The Sun says:—"There is no dodging the significance of the result of the races between the Volunteer and Thistle. The sloop model, shoal and broad, as compared with the cutter, and depending on a centre board to hold her up to the wind instead of a deep keel, is the better model for speed in all rounding races."

LONDON, October 1.—All the morning papers have comments on the yacht race, and adknowledge that the Thistle was fairly beaten.

MORE SEALERS SEIZED.

Three Schooners, with Over Five Thousand Skins, Taken by the Bear.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 2.—The United States revenue cutter Bear arrived from Alaska last night. She arrived at Ounalaska from St. Michael on Aug. 24, and gave Frank Fuller, the murderer of Archbishop Seghers, into the custody of the United States marshal. On the same date the Bear seized the British sealing schooner Ada with 1,900 skins and the American schooner Alle J. Algee, with 1,600 skins. A few days later the American schooner Handy, with 1,700 skins, was seized. All of the vessels were turned over to the United States Marshal at Ounalaska. The Bear reports that the catch of the whaling fleet up to Aug. 5, was seventy-four whales. James B. Vincent was among the passengers on the Bear. He is the only survivor of the thirty-six men on the whaling bark Napoleon, which was wrecked on the ice in the Arctic in May, 1885.

PAPER MILLS.

About half a dozen teams have been employed drawing straw to the Campbellford paper mills for tha manufacture of building paper. It has been purchased from the farmers in all parts of the township.

LACROSSE MATCH.

The Hastings and Madoc lacrosse clubs met at Stirling on Sept. 23rd, the result of much talk and a bet between residents of the two villages. Hastings won by three straight games, in 20, 6 and 4 minutes.

SMOKE ON THE WATER.

The steamer Cruiser, of Lakefield, was unable to go up the lakes one day last week on account of the smoke. On Sturgeon Lake the smoke was so dense on Wednesday that the Esturion was from the morning till 3.30 p. m. reaching Lindsay from Bobcaygeon.

COLLIDED.

On Monday Mr. McDonald was driving into Lindsay and when near Dunsford his horse ran away, colliding with a double-seated rig occupied by four people. M. Cook was hurt, but not seriously, and Mr. and Mrs. Connelly became fastened in the wreck, but were extracted.

A BRAKEMAN HURT.

Louis Badgerow, a G. T. R. brakeman, while coupling cars at Goodwood on Saturday, fell and was shoved along in front of the car wheel. The brake clamp saved him from being cut in two, but he was severely injured, his leg being crushed.

THE BLAST HUNG FIRE.

Mr. Thomas Brummall, North Harvey, drilled a hole in a well he was sinking and put in a blast. It did not explode, and while he was picking it out it went off, with the drill in it. The drill has not been seen since Mr. Brummall's hand and wrist were badly torn.

PILING ON THE AGONY.

Cobourg tax rate is 21 mills. On all taxes not paid on Nov. 15th four per cent is charged. On those not paid on Dec. 15th six per cent additional is charged, and after Jan. 1st one per cent a month is added for each month they are unpaid after that date.

SMELTING WORKS.

Mr. James McLaren proposes to build smelting works at Trenton. He offers to guarantee $200,000 of stock, the citizens to take $50,000 and the town to grant exemption from taxes. Twenty-five acres of ground would be required, and the works would employ 400 men. At a meeting of the Trenton Board of Trade the proposition was endorsed and $35,000 stock subscribed.

BOBCAYGEON LOCKS.

The Independent says:—"Whatever may be the faults or shortcomings of the Dominion Government in other directions, it must be admitted that it has done its duty by the Bobcaygeon locks. The Government spares no trouble or expense to keep them in thorough repair. This week we have had the diving apparatus here, and Mr. William Kennedy has spent a portion of his valuable time down on the river bottom, having his air carefully pumped down to him by the lock-master. He found many leaks, and those leaks will now be repaired."

THE FOOT RACE.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—I see by the programmes of our Central Exhibition that one of the attractions will be a foot race for a hundred yards, and, strange to say, the entries are limited to Millar and Bird. Why exclude such men as Archie Moore and Abe Rose, or for that matter, any one else who sees fit to enter and pays his entrance money? While I do not object to the management going into the sporting business, there certainly should be no favouritism shown. Let there be a fair field to all, which alone will be satisfactory to the patronizing public. Avoid the appearance of hippodroming.

CHOLERA AT NEW YORK

Several Deaths Among the Patients on Swinburne Island.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—At the office of the Quarantine Commission to day three deaths were reported from cholera at Swinburne Island. Five new cases have been taken to the island since the last report. There are now seventeen cases on the island and most of them are getting on favorably despite the bad weather.

Killed In A Quarrel.

BRACEBRIDGE, Oct. 1.—To-day while Chas O'Brien, who runs a threshing machine, was engaged in the barn of Mrs. Donnelly, about nine miles from here, Samuel Taylor, who owned a rival machine, entered the barn, when an altercation arose between the two men. Taylor called O'Brien a liar, when the latter struck him twice and he fell into the arms of some workmen dead. O'Brien gave himself up. Samuel Taylor was an old resident of the Township of Macaulay and had been a Councillor for several years. He leaves a large family.

Purely Private.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Michael Davitt to-day denied that he had come here, as supposed, to heal the wound alleged to have been inflicted by his friend, Editor O'Brien, during his stay in this city. He was here merely on private business and would leave the city to-day. Where he was going he was not prepared to state.

Extinct Volcano.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 1.—A portion of Mount Lamentation has been found to be an extinct volcano. A delegation of scientists from all parts of the State are expected to visit the place to-day, and it is thought their report will be highly interesting and important.

PARIS, Oct. 1.—General Boulanger arrived at Lyons yesterday and met with an enthusiastic reception. A great crowd surrounded his hotel, shouting "Vive Boulanger!" "Vive Republique!"

HARVEY.

From a Correspondent.

TEA MEETING.—A tea-meeting and concert in connection with the Presbyterian church in Harvey, was held in the church on Wednesday evening, Sept. 28th. A tea that reflects great credit on the ladies was served at 4 p.m. The chair was taken by Mr. Stratton, M.P.P., at 7 p.m. After a very pointed, pithy and highly appreciated address on the "Use and Abuse of Church Socials," by that gentleman, the evening's entertainment began. The band from Chemong Village, and the choir, under the leadership of Mr. Weherim, did excellent service. Readings were given in manner that called forth the delight and admiration of all, by Messrs. Stone and Hix, and the Misses Bowman, Bond, Douglas and Montgomery. A most instructive and eloquent address, that filled the house with rapturous laughter, was given by the Rev. John McEwen, of Lakefield. Mr. Fitzpatrick, student missionary from Queen's College, also gave an address that was highly appreciated. The Rev. A. L. Adam was expected to have been present, but to the great regret of the audience was unavoidably absent. Mrs. McMartin, in her usual liberality, presented the congregation with the sum of $31 and a very handsome silk quilt, which was there disposed of as follows: Two young ladies, Miss Reid and Miss Bond, were nominated as candidates for the said quilt, and they, accompanied by two young gentlemen, Mr. Renwick and Mr. Reid, canvassed the audience and in ten minutes Miss Reid had received $19 and Miss Bond $17 Miss Reid very kindly handed the quilt over again to the people of Harvey to be disposed of at their next social. The proceeds of the evening amounted to $107.05. The gathering dispersed at 9.30 p.m., all "satisfied" and "gratified" that they had spent so pleasant and profitable an evening together.

POLICE COURT.

DISORDERLY.

MONDAY, Oct. 2.—Geo. Noble was charged by P. C. Pidgeon with having acted in a disorderly manner on the public streets.

The defendant pleaded guilty.

MAYOR STEVENSON, who occupied the Magistrate's chair, imposed a fine of $2 and costs.

INTERFERING.

P. C. McGinty had a young man before the Court on a charge of interfering with the police in discharge of duty. It appeared from the evidence given that he did not interfere. The case was dismissed.

THE TREATY OF 1818.

One of the arguments used by the New England fishermen and their friends in their efforts to obtain the right of access to our territory for the purpose of fishing or as a convenient base for their operations, is that the treaty of 1818 was made so long ago that it is now out of date and should therefore be modified.

We must allow that there is some force in this contention. Affairs move fast in the world in these days and especially affairs in this new world. It will happen, then, that agreements between nations as between individualls may by lapse of time fail to meet the requirements of the new position of affairs and that some modification may be beneficial to both parties. Such is a common experience in human affairs, and it is quite possible that the treaty of 1818 may come within this category.

If, therefore, our neighbors propose to us to reconsider the bargain between us with a view to seeing if it cannot be modified with advantage, we would be churlish to return a curt refusal to discuss the subject. Should, however, the treaty of 1818 be brought forward for reconsideration and readjustment, in short for the adoption of a new agreement it must be re-opened in its entirety. We cannot fairly be asked to modify one portion that may be irksome to the other party to the agreement, without being accorded the right of simultaneously considering any portion that may be unfavourable to ourselves. Now the treaty of 1818 accords valuable privileges to the people of the United States—it waives in their favour some of our territorial rights. If the treaty is to be re-considered at the request of those with whom we made it, we must also be allowed to ask whether we are now receiving any compensating privilege of equal value with those we grant. By the treaty we give to the people of the United States free access to our territory, the enjoyment of our property and other valuable privileges, which the law of nations by no means requires us to grant. If the treaty is set aside we fall back upon our rights as defined by international law, and any concession modifying its effect should be met by a concession of equal value on the other side. Thus a new bargain could be made with the usual national rights as a basis and a mutual agreement as to any special modifications equally advantageous as a whole to both sides. This can be the only basis, for any theory as to common rights, dating back to the time when Canada and New England were subject to the same crown, would, if admitted and pushed to its logical conclusion, give us rather extensive rights on this continent. Such claims cannot be altogether one-sided.

Our neighbours urge that the treaty of 1818 is out of date and should be no longer binding upon them. Are they prepared to admit that it should be no longer binding upon us? Perhaps they have never considered the question from our side.

We would also suggest that if there is to be a re-consideration of treaties, the Ashburton treaty might also be brought up for amendment. For reasons upon which we will not now enter, that treaty is quite as fairly open to revision as the treaty of 1818.

The advocates of Commercial Annexation dare not openly oppose the strong objection in Canada to "discrimination" against the Mother Country and the rest of the British Empire in favour of foreigners. So they endeavour to create confusion in people's minds by an unwarrantable misuse of the word. They say the former reciprocity arrangement also discriminated against Great Britain and that the National Policy likewise discriminates. Both statements are unfounded. Reciprocity did not discriminate, for articles placed on our free list were free for all the world. The N. P. does not discriminate, for it imposes the same duty on goods imported from any part of the world. To call protection "discrimination" is to coin a new use for that word, in order to make two things that are utterly dissimilar appear similar to the unreflecting.

That the Dominion of Canada has a right to veto is generally acknowledged as it must be, since it is plainly given by our constitution. The differences of opinion in regard to its exercise seems to arise from one fundamental error of the Reformers. They assume that the Opposition, not the constitutional advisers of the Crown, should control the action of the Executive; that the minority of the members of Parliament and of the people of Canada, not the majority, should be the judges. Even if this view is the right one, it cannot prevail without a change in our constitution.

Not having quite made up its mind to give unhesitating support to Commercial Annexation the Toronto Globe suggests as an alternative that Canadians should adopt reetrade and become a band of smugglers† into the United States. Any thing that would degrade Canada seems to suit the Globe.

GOUGH

THE WONDERFUL CHEAP MAN,

Can sell Clothing Cheaper than the Immaginary Clothiers can buy them otherwise, his $1,000 challenge would be accepted. It is an old game for a competitor who cannot compete to cry shoddy, poor fellows, they must get up some excuse, but Gough has lots of confidence in the public's judgment, therefore I say to intending buyers, look them all through and then come to Gough and if you are not convinced that he has ten times more goods, 50 per cent. better goods and at prices at least 25 per cent. lower than the cheapest of them, he will give you a suit or an overcoat for nothing.

I can give you an Overcoat to fit any sized man from - - - - $3.00 up to $18.00.
I can give you a man's Suit from - - - - - - $2 75 up to $18.00.
I can give you a good heavy Guernsey Shirt or Drawers for - - - 25 cents.
I can give you a splendid all-wool Shirt or Drawers for - - - - 45 cents.
I can give you five pairs of Men's all-wool home-made Socks for - - - $1.00.

In a word I can give you anything in Gentlemen's wear at less in many instances than first cost of manufacture. I have just received another bankrupt stock amounting to $10,000, bought at 61½ Cents on the Dollar.

If a merchant buys a bankrupt stock of gold watches at 50c. on the dollar it don't make the watches brass, and when Gough buys a bankrupt stock at 61½c. on the dollar, it don't make his goods shoddy. Therefore use your own senses, take no man's word and when you want a good Suit of Clothes or an Overcoat, dont buy until you at least see the magnificent stock kept by

Hence, no family should be without a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which has proved itself, in thousands of cases, the best Emergency Medicine ever discovered. It gives prompt relief and prepares the way for a thorough cure, which is certain to be effected by its continued use.

S. H. Latimer, M. D., Mt. Vernon, Ga., says: "I have found Ayer's Cherry Pectoral a perfect cure for Croup in all cases. I have known the worst cases relieved in a very short time by its use; and I advise all families to use it in sudden emergencies, for coughs, croup, &c."

A. J. Eidson, M. D., Middletown, Tenn., says: "I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral with the best effect in my practice. This wonderful preparation once saved my life. I had a constant cough, night sweats, was greatly reduced in flesh, and given up by my physician. One bottle and a half of the Pectoral cured me."

"I cannot say enough in praise of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral," writes E. Bragdon, of Palestine, Texas, "believing as I do that, but for its use, I should long since have died."

CHAPTER III.

A LUCKY RUN.

From the moment Will heard about the smuggling he began to get restless. He would follow Dan down to the beach and talk while he looked after the boats.

I knew that he was pumping Dan's adventures out of him—a process by no means difficult. Dan's anecdotes were chiefly of narrow escapes—not from revenue cutters or privateers so much as from sea fogs. Once in a thick fog he nearly put straight into Bridport harbor, there being at the time only a light breeze from the southeast, and a revenue cutter armed and manned lying within the two piers, ready to give him and his cargo a warm welcome. Another time he had to heave overboard the whole of his cargo almost under the very nose of his pursuers. He knew the whole of the French coast, from Dunkerque to St. Malo, and was known in every port. He would drop along the shore, hugging the land, so as to look as much as possible like a fishing smack, till he arrived at his destination; when, you may be sure, he took very little time to load and go away again. Or there were tales of heavy seas and stiff sou'westers. Dan was 60 years of age or thereabouts at this time, and his memory carried him back for half a century of smuggling. His father before him, and his grandfather before him, had been yeomen of Rousdon; like himself, and, like himself, mainly dependent on the illicit trade.

Now, there was hardly anything more likely to excite the imagination of a town bred youth than a tale of a successful and hazardous run. The romance, such as it was, of highwaymen was over. There were still plenty of them, and they were always hanged when they were caught, so that they were not without some glory. But, considered as heroes, they had had their day. The degenerate successors of Claude Duval were either desperate murderers, like the Blacks of Waltham, or they were poor, commonplace, ragged footpads. But the smuggler—the man who encountered the dangers of war, of storm and of the revenue officers—was still a hero. So that Dan leaped at once, in the estimation of Will, from a good natured, cheerful old sailor to the level of a sea king; and this despite the young man's early training and prejudice.

Then came evenings in which after the violin had discoursed, we sat round the fire and talked of nothing else but old trips and their results. Countless were the questions put by Will—questions as to the French coast, the French people, their ways, and their manners; as to the boat, and the navigation of the Channel; as to the danger and the delight of running fifteen knots an hour, everything made snug and taut, carrying all canvas, with heavy seas washing over the gallant little craft. I never thought what might happen. I had lived so long in an atmosphere of carelessness to danger that I had quite ceased to believe in any danger. And when Will begged Dan to take him, too, when he made another run, I laughed and clapped my hands to think how he would enjoy it.

Dan made difficulties. He said it was not a young gentleman's work; that his lady mother might get to hear of it; that things might happen; that he would never be easy in his mind afterward if anything did happen. Finally, over-persuaded by the eagerness of the young man, he acceded to his request.

We were then in the cold evenings, about the middle of October, and in the last few days of a waning moon. The weather was fine and open, with a steady southwesterly breeze springing up most nights toward sunset, and lasting till late the next morning. Dan went over to the mill to consult with Joshua, who readily resigned his place to Will, on the condition of his not losing his place in the profits, should the venture be successful. I took this kindly of Joshua. I thought he must have passed into a better frame of mind, although he had not been once to the house since the day he threatened me.

Everything being arranged and the weather favorable, they went on board at 8 in the morning. I was in the dingy, carrying things backward and forward for them, and when Dan was satisfied that nothing had been forgotten I dropped into the little boat and sat in it watching the Dancing Polly slip out of the bay and glide into the darkness, while Will leaned over the taffrail and waved a farewell to me.

It was nothing unusual for me to sleep alone in the house. There was no danger of robbers in so secluded a spot as Rousdon, and there was always a sense of protection in the fact of old Isaac Agus and his wife sleeping in the cottage hard by. I had no fears for myself. Only, somehow, things were different now. I had left off thinking of myself and thought all day and night of Will. That night, for the first time, I was timid. I thought of the little boat sailing across the black Channel to the enemy's coast. I conjured up the dangers. Bonaparte might catch them. He was at Boulogne then, preparing for the invasion of England with every ship, craft, boat of any kind which he could collect together. The Dancing Polly might be captured by a privateer; they might be arrested on the French coast; they might be wrecked. I thought of every danger except the one most likely to happen—that they might meet their difficulties on the return voyage. For the first time in my life I was afraid, and while I sat before the fire conjuring up the ghosts of possible disasters I heard a step outside, the latch was lifted, and Joshua Meech showed himself at the door.

I thought he had been drinking. His eyes were haggard and bloodshot—those eyes of his which were too close together and too small; his face was distorted and his fingers worked nervously together.

The Gzowski Cup.

The corrected time of the shifting ordnance competition for the Gzowski Cup is published and shows that the Ottawa battery won it this year. The cup was held last year by the Durham battery, and had they won it this time they would have owned it. When the Durham battery returned from Kingston in June they felt certain that they had succeeded, but the corrected time places Ottawa ahead by the exceedingly short time of one-fifth of a second. The Durham battery, being second, won a $20 prize.

Dr. Dewart's Hymns.

The first hymn given out by the Rev. Dr. Dewart in the George Street Church on Sunday evening, and sung by the congregation, is one that was written by Dr. Dewart himself. He is a writer of religious poetry as well as a prose author. Several of his poetical productions are in the Methodist hymn book, the one sung on Sunday evening being No. 927, "O thou who hast, in every age," etc. It is a prayer for teachers and was very suitable for the occasion. There are five hymns in the book intended especially for educational meetings, one written by Watts, one by Bryant, one by Tennyson, and two by Dr. Dewart.

THAT R. J. KIDD has a larger stock of the BEST ready-made Boots in Peterborough is beyond a doubt.

EDUCATIONAL SERMONS

PREACHED IN THE GEORGE AND CHARLOTTE STREET CHURCHES

By the Rev. Dr. Burwash, of Cobourg, and the Rev. E. H. Dewart, of Toronto.

On Sunday the annual educational sermons were preached in the George and Charlotte Street Methodist Churches.

The Rev. Dr. Burwash of Victoria University, preached in the George Street Church in the morning, and the Rev. Dr. Dewart preached in the Charlotte Street Church in the morning.

At the George Street Church in the evening the Rev. E. H. Dewart, D.D., of Toronto, editor of the Christian Guardian, occupied the pulpit. He took for his text 2nd Thess., iii., 13:—"But ye, brethren, be not weary in well doing." The thought, he said, that struck one most forcibly on reading these words was that there was something in human service that was called by Divine authority "well doing." Some good people believed in disparaging human effort, but it was a mistake. They were God's creatures and reflected His wisdom. What men performed they did by the combined natural and gracious ability God had given them and the glory belonged to Him. They could not read the Word of God attentively without learning that he carries on his work by the agency of those quickened by His Spirit and saved by His grace. "Ye are my witnesses." They honored God when they said that Christianity had brought forth types of nobleness that could not have existed without God's aid—men and women who risked their lives to visit and minister to the poor and afflicted. The object of life was to develop their powers that they might be mightier and more suitable instruments for God to use. Some of the men who had done most for the world had little wealth. If they lived Godly lives and left the world better than they found it, they would be called up to a place among the first born sons of light. The apostle called attention to a common and dangerous tendency, a tendency to grow weary in well-doing. There were several reasons for this tendency. One was the law of natural reaction. A second was their natural unfitness for God's work; not having enough of the spirit of the Master. A third was opposition—resistance in the material in which they worked and outside opposition. A fourth reason arose out of their impatience for results. They wanted to walk by sight and not by faith. They should not get weary because their work was in obscure fields, for they did not know where they could best serve God. They should not be drones, but should do some work for God and humanity that would make the world better. To become weary in the work of life was to fail, and if they failed they would drag down others by their selfish example. Some people had erroneous ideas of church work and would confine it in narrow limits. They were like those who found fault with the Saviour for healing the sick on the Sabbath. The church was not a mere machine running in fixed grooves. He liked to think of it as a flexible agency, moved by the spirit of God, reaching out a hand to the different departments of human work. What was the object of education? To that question different answers would be given. Their religious and spiritual faculties must be trained. The work of teachers was not only opening the gateways of rich knowledge, but also preparing and training men and women to act a part on the battle field of the future. The ministers, legislators, teachers and leaders of the future were receiving their education and their character was being formed in the educational institutions of the present time. How fatal it would be if they were sent out not duly qualified for their work! These times specially demand sound intellectual culture in harmony with sound religious training. There was intense activity that needed wise guiding. There were heresies, agnosticism, materialism, formalism, etc., forms of folly alluring men, and it was necessary that they should be able to reply intelligently and fairly to any objections brought forward. Ministers needed learning and intelligence as well as piety, that they might have a wise comprehension of the prevalent heresies and scepticism, so they could adopt their sermons to the thought of the times. Some people said that they did not want educated ministers, but they forgot that they had their Bible as a heritage from learned men of the past who had translated it. They needed a trained laity to qualify them for positions in the church and state, and that they might share the positions where those who held them largely moulded the character of the nation and people. The character of the ministry of the future was a matter of profound interest to the people. The church with the best trained and educated ministry would take the lead and do the best work. The preacher referred to the founders of Victoria College, and said that they would be recreant sons of such sires if they refused to do their part. A man says he never had a college education and that he got along all right, but he forgot that he lives in the very light of a civilization that owed much to such institutions. The poor or those in moderate circumstances needed those institutions more than the rich, for the rich could procure teachers anyway or could send their sons abroad to be educated, which would make higher education a class privilege. He urged them to aid liberally the educational interests of the Church. There was a crisis in their educational work. They had undertaken an enterprise that would benefit their college and it depended on the people whether it would be carried out. Speaking of what they owed to the Church, he referred to the time when Methodist missionaries made their way back into Dummer over rough roads or no roads at all, and how they benefitted him spiritually and awakened in him a thirst for knowledge. No doubt many had been similarly benefitted. When they would be dying anything they had done to assist institutions that benefitted humanity and aided in God's work would give them more satisfaction than anything they had done for selfish gratification.

Dr. Burwash was to have preached in the Charlotte Street Church in the evening, but in the afternoon he was suddenly taken ill. The Rev. H. H. Wallace, M.A., B.D., preached the sermon.

TURNBULL'S Millinery Opening days are Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, the 4th, 5th and 6th of Oct.

THE HUM.

Industrial Notes — Factories Being Extended.

The Peter Hamilton Agricultural Works are to be considerably enlarged. The amount of work done in the machine shop demands larger space, and in order to accomplish this the adjoining black mith shop it to be "annexed." The blacksmith shop will be thrown back to the moulding shop and a new moulding shop will be built. The foundations are now laid and the work will be carried on at once. The new building will have a fourteen foot wall, and is 62x40. Another building is to be erected just south of the new moulding shop, to be used as a pattern and store house. It will be 31x40. When the new buildings are finished the Hamilton works will have nearly as much frontage on Water street as they have on Georgeet street. These works, under prudent management, have been constantly extending, and it now looks as if the whole block will be soon covered.

The Lock Manufacturing Company's addition, 50x60 feet, is progressing satisfactorily. The foundations are laid and the superstructure will be gone on with without delay.

The new furniture factory being built for Lindsay-Sheldon Furniture Company is going up gradually. The stone-work, which gave considerable trouble, is now completed. The new factory has a fine location, next to the river and close to the railway track. It will be 40x80 feet and four stories high.

The "$40,000 By-law Committee" and the "Advertising Committee," in connection with the Town Council, will meet this evening.

A gentleman was in town on Saturday with a view to establishing saw works here.

Personal.

Mr. H. S. Crewe, Inspector of the registration of Vital-Statistics for the Province of Ontario, was in town on Saturday.

Senator Dr. Sullivan, of Kingston, arrived in town on Saturday evening, and registered at the Oriental. He was called on by a number of prominent men. On Sunday he went to Eunismore to pay a visit to Father Kielty.

Engineer English of the Fire Department is at present disabled with rheumatism, contracted by getting a wetting at the fire on the night of the civic holiday.

Mr. Ed. W. Cox, of Toronto, spent Sunday in town. He went back on the early train this morning.

Mr. A. B. Craig, the popular clerk at the Rossin House, Toronto, was in town on Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. Geo. B. Sproule has been taken very ill. His friends anxiously look for his early recovery.

Mr. Parker, of Peterborough, will be the solo organist at a praise service in the Church of the Ascension, Toronto, on Wednesday evening.

Church Notes.

The anniversary sermons in connection with the Mark Street Methodist Church were preached on Sunday by the Rev. A. Browning, of Belleville. In the afternoon a children's meeting was held. This evening tea will be served till 8 o'clock in the Town Hall, Ashburnham. The Rev. Mr. Browning will then deliver his popular lecture on "An Hour with Miners, Indians and Chinamen."

A public meeting will be held to-morrow evening at 8 o'clock, in the George Street Church, in connection with the College Federation movement. It will be addressed by the Rev. Dr. Potts and the Rev. Dr. Dewart. The chair will be taken by his Worship the Mayor. There will be a collection to defray expenses.

Baptised.

A real estate agent and a farmer were standing in front of a George street store this forenoon engrossed in an apparently interesting conversation. The awning in front of the store was up, and had been up all night. Of course the enterprising clerk did not know that it contained about two or three gallons of water. He pulled the ropes and down came the awning." The conversation was brought to a sudden stop by the shower bath.

Had a Good Day.

The Bobcaygeon Independent says:—"Mr. William Snowden, of Peterborough, was here, on Monday, and had a day's sport with some friends. They shot 13 partridges and caught five maskalonge, the heaviest weighing 16 lbs. They also assisted in putting out a fire which threatened a farmer's barn. They likewise broke the screw of the coal oil yacht. Altogether they had a first class day."

Ordained.

We learn from the Calgary Tribune that the newly consecrated Bishop of Saskatchewan held his first ordination at that town on Sept. 25th. The Rev. R. Hilton, of Macleod, formerly of Peterborough, was advanced to the priesthood. Before the ordination Mr. Hilton read the morning prayers and at the evening service he read the second lesson.

Omission.

Mr. J. J. McBain has presented a prize of $5 for the best two bushel lot of barley shown at the Central Exhibition. His name does not appear on the prize list.

Stock for Glasgow.

Mr. Fred Winch on Saturday shipped a car load of prime steers twenty-three in all, averaging in weight twelve hundred a piece, for the Glasgow market.

St. John's Vestry.

A special meeting of the vestry of St. John's Church will be held in the school house this evening at 8 o'clock.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there was a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—"Civil Service Gazette."
